Betteſworth. They were in the Ground called Mr. Sylveſter's Rents.

Mr Serj. Gapper. Are there many Hedges on the Side of the River where the Deceaſed was?

Betteſworth. There were a pretty many Willows, but any Body might ſee through them.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. What did you ſee?

Betteſworth. I ſaw Joſeph Redding and Mr. Anneſley come over the Hedge.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. What Hedge?

Betteſworth. The Hedge that parted Mr. Sylveſter's Ground from Mr. Redding's Ground; I do not know whether one of them did not come over the Stile; then they both ran after Eggleſtone and his Son; young Redding came up firſt.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Did he lay hold of Eggleſtone?

Betteſworth. Whether he laid his Hand upon his Collar, or what, I cannot tell; but the Boy ran away.

Q. Who was it laid hold of the Shoulder or Collar of the Deceaſed?

Betteſworth. Redding; I ſaw his Hand upon the Shoulder or Collar of the Deceaſed, but I cannot ſay poſitively whether he had him by the Shoulder or Collar.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. How long was it after that, that Anneſley came up?

Betteſworth. The Boy was gone but a little way from his Father, and when Mr. Anneſley came up to his Father, he came back again.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. How near was he to his Father when this Accident happened?

Betteſworth. I cannot ſay how near he was to his Father, I believe two or three Yards off.——Anneſley and Redding came up almoſt together, but Anneſley came up after him, the Gun went off after he came up: I ſaw the Smoke and heard the Fire.

Mr. Serj. Gap. As you were 169 Yards off, how came you to come up?

Bet. The Boy called to us, and ſaid his Father was killed.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Who came along with you?

Bet. John Bowles, and John Fiſher, we came to the River juſt againſt the Place where Mr. Eggleſtone lay, and we could not get over there without being up thus high; (putting his Hand to his Middle) but we went over in a ſhallower Place a little farther.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Were Anneſley and Redding there when you came over?

Bet. No, they ran away before that.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Was Eggleſtone dead or alive when you came up?

Bet. He was not dead, but he could not ſpeak. I deſired the Boy to go for a Surgeon, and he went away directly.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Who came firſt to the River?---Bet. I do not know.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Did you all three come away together?

Bet. Yes, I was coming rather before the Boy cried out, for I ſaw the Man drop, I could not ſee the Boy for a good while, for he was in the River, and he cut the Net from his Father's Arm, as he ſays, I did not ſee that; but I ſaw the Boy come croſs the River, and when I came up, I ſaw that the Net was brought croſs the River.

Mr. Serj. Gap. How did Eggleſtone lie?

Bet. He lay upon his Face; I lifted up his Head, he groaned pretty much, but he could not ſpeak: I ſent the Boy for a Surgeon, but no Surgeon came.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Was you at the apprehending of the Priſoner?

Bet. Yes, I was

Mr. Serj. Gap. What Place was it that the Priſoner was in when he was taken?

Bet. It was a Sort of a Waſh-houſe, a Back-houſe: He was in a Place where they throw up Hoops and Iron, and any Sort of old Lumber; I ſaw him lie upon his Face.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Who took him down?

Bet. I do not know.

Mr. Serj. Gap. What did they do with him then?

Bet. They carried him to the Round-houſe at Staines.

Court. When you came to the Place where you ſay he had hid himſelf, did he come down of his own Accord?---Bet. Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Brown. When you heard the Gun go off, whoſe Hand was it in?

Bet. Mr. Anneſley's.

Mr. Brown. Do you know the Poſition of the Gun when it went off?

Bet. No, I do not.

Mr. Brown. Did you obſerve any Struggle between Anneſley, Redding, and the Deceaſed?

Bet. No other than their ſtriving to take the Net away.

Q. Do you remember any thing that paſſed in the Round-Houſe?——Did the Priſoner ſay any thing there?

Bet. Yes, the Priſoner ſaid he deſired to be killed out of the Way, for being acceſſary to ſuch an innocent Man's Death.

Mr. Brown. What did he tell you beſides?

Bet. He ſaid he would have gone Home for more Men, but Joſeph Redding would not let him.

Mr. Brown. What did he want more Men for?

Bet. To take away the Net.

Q. What Anſwer did he ſay Redding made him to that?

Bet. I believe it was, that he ſaid we can do it well enough.

[The Proſecutor's Counſel having done with this Witneſs, he was croſs-examined as follows.]

Q. Did you ſee Mr. Anneſley and Redding before they came up to the Deceaſed?---Bet. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you obſerve Mr. Anneſley making any Uſe of his Gun before he came up?---Bet. I ſaw him offer to ſhoot at a Crow.

Court. How long was that before this Accident happened?

Bet. I believe about half an Hour.

Q. Was the Crow flying or ſitting?---Bet. Flying.

Q. Did you obſerve whether he did ſhoot at the Crow?

Bet. Not then, he did not.

Q. How far was you off then?

Bet. About as far, I think, as when I ſaw the Man killed.

Q. What was the Poſition of the Gun when you ſaw him come up running?

Bet. It was in this Manner, [holds it as if the Gun was with the Muzzle hanging a little ſlanting towards the Ground.]

Mr. Brown. You ſay you ſaw Anneſley and Redding in the other Ground, before they came into that Ground which belongs to Sylveſter——what were they doing there; were they ſtanding, ſitting, or what?

Bet. They were ſitting or lying under the Hedge, I cannot tell which.

Q. For what Purpoſe do you imagine they were ſitting or lying there?

Bet. I cannot ſay that, I may imagine they came to take the Net away, I cannot imagine any thing elſe.

Q. Did you ſee the Boy go into the River?

Bet. Yes, and it was juſt after his Father was ſhot.

[John Fiſher ſworn.]

Mr. Brown. Do you know the Priſoners at the Bar?

Fiſher. I know Mr. Redding.

Q. Do you believe this to be the Perſon who was along with Mr. Redding at the Time that Mr. Eggleſtone was killed?——Look at Mr. Anneſley's Face, and ſee whether that is the Man.

Fiſher. I ſee Mr. Anneſley, but I cannot ſay that he is the Man; I ſaw two Men lie under the Hedge a conſiderable Time, and ſaw a Piece in one of their Hands.

Mr. Brown. In which Ground were they?

Fiſher. I believe in Mr. Redding's Ground.

Mr. Brown. In what Ground was Eggleſtone?

Fiſher. He was in Sylveſter's Ground. Betteſworth called to me, and ſaid, There is Redding running after Eggleſtone, and Redding laid hold of Eggleſtone, the Deceaſed, and then came up the other with a Piece; I cannot ſay whether he touched him or no.

Court. In what Manner did Redding lay hold of him?

Fiſher. I cannot ſay, I was at ſuch a Diſtance; but I thought he laid hold of his Shoulder.

Mr. Brown. Did Eggleſtone make away from him?

Fiſher. Yes; for he knew he was out of the Bounds that he ought to have been fiſhing in; and there was a Sort of a Struggle to take away the Net; and I thought that Redding and the other Perſon did both ſnatch at the Net, and then the Gun went off.

Mr. Brown. In whoſe Hand was the Gun?

Fiſher. Not in Redding's Hand, but in the Hand of the other Perſon.

Mr. Brown. Was not you attentive at that Time, to ſee in what Manner he carried the Gun?

Fiſher. It may be this Way, or this Way, I cannot ſay whether he had the Gun againſt his Shoulder or no.

Mr. Brown. How near was he to the Deceaſed?

Fiſher. Very nigh, I believe not above the Length of a Gun.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Did you ſee John Eggleſtone by, when you firſt came up?---Fiſher. He was near the River.

Mr. Brown. Did you hear the Boy cry out?

Fiſher. Yes, he ſaid his Father was killed;——he ſaw me, and called me by my Name, and ſaid, My Father is killed, and I came directly croſs the River.

Mr. Brown. What then became of Anneſley and the other?

Fiſher. They ran away; we hallooed after them, but I did not think the Man was ſhot, tho' I ſaw the Smoak and Fire of the Gun.

Q. Who went over the River firſt?

Fiſher. We were all three together almoſt. I cannot tell who was over firſt, but I believe I was.

Q. What was ſaid to the Boy then?

Fiſher. Nothing; only to go and get a Surgeon.

Q. Who bid him go?

Fiſher. Somebody did, I did not. I believe it was Betteſworth, and the Boy run away directly.

Q. Was there any Surgeon brought there?---Fiſher. No.

Q. Who came there afterwards?

Fiſher. Mr. Sylveſter; he ſaw the Deceaſed lying upon the Ground, but he was not there when the Murder was committed.

Q. Was you in the Houſe when he was taken?---Fiſher. No.

Q. Was you with him before the Juſtice of Peace?

Fiſher. I was examined, but I was not preſent when the other Witneſſes were examined.

Mr. Brown. What Diſtance was there between you and the Deceaſed when the Gun went off?

Fiſher. One Hundred and Sixty-nine Yards.

Q. Do you include the Breadth of the River?---Fiſher. Yes, I do.

[Croſs-examined.]

Q. You ſay you think that both Redding and Anneſley ſnatch'd at the Net?

Fiſher. I think they did.

Q. Do you think it was poſſible for you to hear what paſſed between them?

Fiſher. I could not hear one Word.

Q. I would aſk you, whether young Eggleſtone, before he was examined by Sir Thomas Reynell, did not ſay to you he believed the Gun did go off by Accident?

Fiſher. He ſaid he believed it was not done wilfully. I was called into a Room with Cheſter and Lane: He had Money offered him, in my hearing, by John Lane; he offered him 100*l.* a Year.——Mr. Anneſley ſaid, He could not give him 100*l.* but he would give him 50*l.* for he had others to do for: Then, ſaid the Boy, I do not care to ſell my Father's Blood; but I will do as my Friends direct me; I believe he was in Liquor.

Q. What did you ſay to him?

Fiſher. I ſaid, Your Father is dead; the Money will do you good; do not ſwear any thing againſt him, if you think it was done accidentally; he ſaid, The Money will do me good if I had it; and then ſaid, I believe the Gentleman did not do it wilfully.

Q. Had you not ſome Converſation together after his Examination before the Juſtice?

Fiſher. I aſked him, after he was examined, what he had done; and how he could ſwear againſt him, when he had ſaid ſo and ſo to me; ſaid he, I did not know what I ſaid.

Q. That he did not know what he ſaid, to who?

Fiſher. I aſked him, how he could ſwear againſt him when he knew what he ſaid to me; ſaid he, I do not know any Thing of the Matter; he did not remember what he had ſaid to me.

Q. Do you know Mr. Williams the Clergyman?---Fiſher. Yes.

Q. Did not you make a Declaration of this to him?

Fiſher. Yes; and I told him what I now ſay, I mean what paſſed between us at the Time he went before the Juſtice: I ſaid to Mr. Williams, that Eggleſtone told me he really believed that the Gentleman did not do it wilfully.

Q. Repeat all that you ſaid to Mr. Williams.

Fiſher. That the Boy ſaid to me, Mr. Anneſley had offered him 50*l.* a-Year, that the Money would do him good if he had it, and that he believed the Gentleman did not do it wilfully.

Mr. Brown. Did not he ſay it was wilfully done, as you were going along to the Juſtice's?

Fiſher. All the Way he went, he ſaid he believed he did it wilfully, but after the Priſoner had been talking with him, he ſaid he believed it was not done wilfully.

[Samuel Sylveſter ſworn.]

Mr. Serj. Gap. Did you ſee the Deceaſed after he was dead?

Sylveſter. He lay dead on the Ground that I rent near the River Side, I think about the Middle of the Ground.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Do you know how he came by his Death?

Sylveſter. I was going up to look after my Ground, to ſee if there was any Cattle in it, or any thing amiſs.——I called at the Cock, and drank two Pints of Beer, and when I came within two hundred Yards, or thereabouts, of my Ground, I met three Men, who told me old Eggleſtone was killed; I did not believe it; they then pointed to my Ground, and ſaid, There he lies; I ſaw ſeveral People there, upon which I thought there was ſomething more than common, and ſo I went up, and ſaw Tom Eggleſtone lie dead in my Ground.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Do you know where the Priſoner Anneſley was taken?

Sylvester. He was taken in a back Building belonging to Mr. Redding's Houſe; I was ſearching the Rooms myſelf, and heard the People ſay, Here he is; and I ſaw Mr. Anneſley, who is the Gentleman there, come down out of the Place.

Mr. Brown. What Sort of a Place was it he was found in?

Syl. It was a Place to put odd Things in:—It was not boarded up to the Top.

Q. Did he come down voluntarily, or was he pulled down?

Syl. I do not know whether they pulled him down, or helped him down.

Mr. Brown. Did you hear him ſay any Thing at that Time?

Syl. I did not hear him ſay any Thing; I believe he was in a Fit, for he trembled and fell down behind the Door.

Mr. Brown. Did you ſee him at the Round-Houſe?

Syl. No, I did not, for I was gone to ſearch after the other Priſoner, Redding.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Was you at Lalcham before the Juſtice?

Syl. Yes, I was.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Had not the Boy been drinking, and did he not ſleep before he went in to the Juſtice?

Syl. I believe he did, for about three Quarters of an Hour; I do believe he had been in Liquor, but he was refreſhed afterwards.

[Upon the Croſs-Examination.]

Q. Have you not received Money to pay the Witneſſes for attending here on this Cauſe the laſt Seſſions, and from whom?

Syl. Yes, I paid ſome of them, I think it was by Mr. Giffard's Direction, who ſubpœna'd me up; I aſked him who was to pay me; he ſaid, I ſhould be paid Half a Crown a Day for my Time, which was as much as he thought I could earn at my Buſineſs.

Q. What Buſineſs is this Giffard * of?

Syl. He is a Stranger to me.

Q. Do you know who he ſaid he was employed by?

Syl. He ſaid he was concerned for the King.

Q. Did you ſend Notice of this Accident to any Body as ſoon as the Man was killed?---Syl. No.

Q. Do you know Mr. Williams?

Syl. Yes, I know him, but I never was in his Company upon this Occaſion.

Q. What Buſineſs does young Eggleſtone follow?

Syl. I cannot ſay what Buſineſs he follows, I believe he draws Beer now.

Q. How long have you known him?

Syl. I have known him five or ſix Years.

Q. What Buſineſs was he bred to?

Syl. Sometimes he would be out at Service, and ſometimes he would be with his Father in the Buſineſs of a Carpenter.

Q. Where does he draw Beer now?

Syl. I think it is at Mr. Williams's, at the White-Horſe, in Piccadilly. But this is not the Williams I was ſpeaking of before.

Q. Have you never been in Company with this Gentleman, and had ſome Converſation with him about this Affair?

Syl. I have been at the Gentleman's Houſe in Piccadilly ſince this Buſineſs has been in hand, but never before; and I have been in Company with the Gentleman there, but never had any Talk with him about this Trial.

Q. Was not this Williams down before the Juſtice?--Syl. I do not know.

Q. Did you ever ſee him at Staines?

Syl. I ſaw him in the Town of Staines, I believe, about a Week after the Accident happened.

Q. Have you ſeen the Boy, Eggleſtone, there ſince?

Syl. I never ſaw him at Staines afterwards.

Q. What, he has lived with Williams ever ſince?---Syl. I cannot tell.

Q. I aſk you whether you have not ſeen him at Williams's Houſe every Time you have been there?---Syl. Yes, I believe I did.

Mr. Serj. Gapper then ſaid, they would reſt it here; and having obſerved upon the Evidence, concluded with ſaying, he hoped it had fully made out the Charge againſt the Priſoners; that the Ground where the Man was killed being the Property of Sylveſter, the Priſoners were Treſpaſſers by coming into it, and therefore anſwerable for the Conſequences. That as to Mr. Annesley, there was not only implied, but expreſs Malice proved upon him, for that after he had killed the Father, he was for beating out the Son's Brains, only becauſe they would not let him and the other Priſoner run away with their Net.

Court. Mr. Annesley, you are indicted in a very unhappy Caſe, what have you to ſay for yourſelf?

Mr. Annesley. My Lord, I am very unable to make a proper Defence, having by the Cruelty of thoſe, whoſe Duty it was to protect me, been deprived of the Advantages of an Education I was entituled to by my Birth.

All I know of the melancholy Accident in Queſtion is, that on the unfortunate Day mentioned in the Indictment, I went out with my Gun, in Company with my innocent Fellow-Priſoner, to ſhoot Sparrows, as I uſually did. As we were going along, Mr. Redding, who is Game-Keeper to the Lord of the Manour, ſaw ſome People a-poaching within the Royalty, upon which he propoſed to go and ſeize their Nets. I followed him, the Deceaſed threw the Net into the River, and the Boy jumped in to pull it acroſs, to prevent which I ſtooped to lay hold of one of the Ropes that trailed upon the Ground, and at the ſame Inſtant, the fatal Inſtrument I had in my other Hand, hanging by my Side, went off without my Knowledge, and to my great Grief as well as Surprize. My Behaviour, immediately after the Accident, was, I hope, inconſiſtent with a Temper that could murder a Man I had never ſeen before, without one Word of Provocation.

Whatever may be the Determination of your Lordſhip and the Jury, great as the Misfortunes of my Life have been, I ſhall always conſider this unfortunate Accident as the greateſt of them all.

Court. Mr. Redding, what have you to ſay for yourſelf?

Joſeph Redding. My Lord, I am Game-Keeper to Sir John Dolben, Lord of the Manour of Yeoveney. On the firſt of May laſt, in the Afternoon, Mr. Annesley and I went out a-walking; we ſaw a Crow, and Mr. Annesley made an Offer to ſhoot at her, but I called to him not to fire, for that ſhe was too far off: Soon after I ſaw Eggleſtone and his Son fiſhing with a Caſting-Net, upon which I ſaid to Mr. Annesley, I would go and endeavour to take their Net away, as it was my Duty to do; accordingly I went up to the Deceaſed, and demanded the Net, which he refuſed to deliver to me, and threw it into the River, one End of the String being about his Arm; I then laid hold of the String, and pulled, whilſt the Boy endeavoured to draw it croſs the River, and preſently I heard the Gun go off (my Back being towards Mr. Annesley), and ſaw the Man fall down.—I ſaid to Mr. Annesley, I hoped he had not ſhot the Man; he ſaid No, but turning up the Flap of his Coat, we ſaw he was ſhot; upon which Mr. Annesley cried out, What ſhall I do! and expreſſed ſo much Concern, that I am ſure it was quite an accidental Thing.

Mr. Hume Campbell, of Counſel for the Priſoners, ſaid, that although he knew by the Courſe of the Court at the Old-Bailey, he was not at Liberty to obſerve upon the Proſecutor's Evidence, yet he apprehended, that for the Eaſe of the Court, he might juſt open the Nature of the Defence, without making any Obſervations upon it.

That the Defence which the Priſoners inſiſted upon was, that the Gun went off merely by Accident; that Redding was Game-Keeper to Sir John Dolben, Lord of the Manour of Yeoveney, and had a proper and legal Deputation for ſeizing of Nets and other Engines, for deſtroying of Game. That the Deceaſed and his Son were poaching with a Caſting-Net within the Manour; that Mr. Annesley went in Aid of the Game-Keeper; and therefore the Priſoners being about a lawful Act, were not ſo much as Treſpaſſers, and the Death that was the accidental Conſequence of that Act, would, in Point of Law, make Mr. Annesley guilty only of Chance-Medley.

[Mr. Thomas Staples ſworn.]

Q. Do you know the Manour of Yeoveney?

Mr. Staples. Yes: I am Deputy to my Father, who is Steward to Sir John Dolben, as Lord of the Manour under the Dean and Chapter of Weſtminſter.

Mr. Serj. Gap. How do you know this to be a Manour?

Mr. Staples. I have the Grant of the Manour from the Dean and Chapter in my Pocket.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Are there any Copy-Holders?

Mr. Staples. Yes, I have admitted ſome Copy-Holders; I know it to be a Manour, becauſe I have held one Court there for my Father, and have ſeen him hold ſeveral.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Is there any Manſion-Houſe belonging to this Manour?

Mr. Staples. There is a Manſion-houſe belonging to it, which I think is the Houſe that Mr. Redding lives in.

Mr. Serj. Gap. What Court was it you held there?

Mr. Staples. A Court Baron.

[Mr. Thomas Burlingſon ſworn.]

Q. Mr. Burlingſon, look upon this Deputation. Are you a ſubſcribing Witneſs to it? If you are, did you ſee this executed, and by whom?

Mr. Bur. Yes, Sir, that is my Name; I ſaw Sir John Dolben execute it; this is his Hand and Seal.

Court. Was it executed at the Time it bears Date?

Mr. Bur. Yes; I believe on the very Day.

[Mr. James Edmonds ſworn.]

Q. Mr. Edmonds, look upon that Endorſement, do you know whoſe Hand that is?

Mr. Edmonds. My Lord, I went to the Clerk of the Peace for the County of Middleſex, and heard him acknowledge this to be his Hand, and that it was entered according to the Act of Parliament.

Mr. Serj. Gap. Did you ſee any Entry of it?

Mr. Edmonds. He ſaid it was entered, and acknowledged this to be his Hand, and told me that was ſufficient.

Q. My Lord, we pray the Deputation may be read; we will ſend for the Clerk of the Peace to bring the Book itſelf where it is entered.

The Clerk reads. Signed J. Dolben, dated the 2d of July, 1741.

'KNOW all Men by theſe Preſents, that I Sir John Dolben, of Teingdon al. Finden in the County of Northampton, Baronet and Doctor of Divinity, Lord of the Manour of Yeoveney, in the Pariſh of Staines, in the County of Middleſex; by Virtue of the ſeveral Acts of Parliament lately made, for the Preſervation of the Game, have made, nominated, authorized, conſtituted, and appointed, and by theſe Preſents do make, nominate, authorize, conſtitute, and appoint, Joſeph Redding, the Younger, of Yeoveney aforeſaid, in the ſaid Pariſh of Staines and County of Middleſex, Huſbandman, to be my Game-Keeper of and within my Manour of Yeoveney aforeſaid, of all and all Manner of Game, of what Kind or Nature ſoever, which now is, or hereafter ſhall be, upon or within the Bounds, Limits, or Precincts of the ſame, with full Power and Authority, according to the Directions of the Statute in that Caſe made and provided, to kill any Hares, Partridges, Pheaſants, Fiſh, or other Game whatſoever, upon or within my ſaid Manour, and the Bounds, Limits, and Precincts of the ſame: And alſo to take and ſeize all ſuch Guns, Grey-Hounds, Setting-Dogs, and other Dogs, Hare-pipes, Snares, Low-Bells, Ferrets, Tramels, Hays, Tunnels, or other Nets or Engines, for the taking, killing, or deſtroying of Hares, Partridges, Pheaſants, Fiſh, or other Game, within my ſaid Manour, and the Precincts thereof, that ſhall be kept or uſed by any Perſon or Perſons, not legally qualified to do the ſame: And further to act and do all and every Thing and Things which belongs to the Office of a Game-Keeper, purſuant to the Directions of the ſaid Act of Parliament. And laſtly, I do direct that the Name of the ſaid Joſeph Redding be entered as ſuch Game Keeper of my ſaid Manour, with the Clerk of the Peace for the ſaid County of Middleſex, purſuant or according to the Act or Acts of Parliament in that Caſe made and provided. In Witneſs whereof, I have hereunto ſet my Hand and Seal, the ſecond Day of July, in the Year of our Lord 1741. J. DOLBEN.'

Sealed and Delivered, being firſt duly ſtamped, in the Preſence of
JAMES AFFLICK,
THO. BURLINGSON.

Middleſex. Theſe are to certify, that the Name of the within mentioned Joſeph Redding is this Day entered in my Office, purſuant to the Statute in ſuch Caſe made and provided. Dated this 29th Day of January, 1741.

P. WALTER, Clerk of the Peace, Middleſex.

[Joſeph

* He makes a conſiderable Figure in the next Trial but one.

[Joseph Redding the Elder sworn.]

Q. Do you know the Place where this unhappy Case happened?

Redding. Yes.

Q. Give an Account of what you know.

Red. I was in the next Field, called Chantry Mead. This, where the Accident happened, is called the Hare Mead.

Q. What Manour is it in?

Red. It is in Yeovney Manour, which belongs to Sir John Dolben.

Q. Where were you when this happened?

Red. I was in Chantry Mead.

Q. How far were you off then?

Red. As near as I can guess, it is about forty Pole.

Q. What did you observe there?

Red. I saw my Son and Mr. Annesley coming up.—I did not know who they were till they came up.

Q. Did you see them immediately after the Accident happened?

Red. Yes, presently.

Q. How did they behave upon this Occasion?

Red. They were so trouoled they could hardly wag or speak: My Son said he was afraid the Man was killed; and he said to Mr. Annesley, How did you do it? Mr. Annesley said, I did not think of the Gun's going off.

Q. You say you saw them coming up; did you observe them when the Accident happened?

Red. Yes, I looked at them all the while.

Q. How was the Gun carried when it went off?

Red. Just as I may hold this Sword. [Holding it in his Right Hand, hanging down near the Pocket a few Inches from his Body, almost upon a Level.] He had it in one Hand, as I have the Sword now.

Q. Did he express himself concerned?

Red. He was so concerned, that he did not run ten Pole before he fell down, and beat himself thus upon the Belly, and said, What have I done?

Q. Did you ever hear of any Quarrel between him and this Man?

Red Never.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. [on the Cross-Examination.] Where did you stand when the Accident happened?---Redding. In Chantry Mead.

Q. Is there not a Hedge between Chantry Mead and Hare Mead?

Red. Yes, I believe there is.

Q. How could you see through the Hedge?

Red. It is a new Hedge not above a Yard high, and I could see any Thing that was doing there as clear as I can see you.

Q. Was Annesley with his Face or his Back towards you?

Red. He was Side-ways to me.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Why Chantry Mead is North of Hare Mead; then his Face could not be towards you?

Red. No, I say his Side was towards me.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. You were speaking as to this being a Manour; how do you know it to be a Manour?

Red. Because there have been Courts kept there.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. By whom?---Redding. By Sir John Dolben.

Q. What is Sylvester?---Redding. He occupies this Ground: I lett the Farm to Sanders, and Sanders letts it to him.

Q. On which Side of Hare Mead does the River lie? Is it East, West, North, or South?---Redding. It is about South.

Q. Does not this River belong to another Person?---Redding. No.

Q. Has not Sir John granted the Fishery to any Body?

Red. I rent the Fishery; the Fishery belongs to me.

Q. Do you depute your Son to look after this?

Red. No, Sir John Dolben deputes him.

Q. How came Sir John Dolben to appoint your Son to be Game-keeper?

Red. Because they robbed me daily.

Q. Have you assigned that Fishery to any Body?

Red. No, I have not.

Q. Who owns the Land on the other Side?

Red. I believe my Lord Dunmore is the Landlord.

Q. Was you standing up when the Gun went off, or sitting?

Red. I was standing up.

[William Duffell sworn.]

Q. Do you know John Eggleston, the Son of Thomas Eggleston?

Duf. Yes.

Q. Have you ever had any Conversation with him about this Matter?

Duf. Yes: On this Occasion he was at my House; I desired him to tell the Truth: He said he would; and then told me, that as he and his Father were fishing, they saw the Prisoner, Redding, coming up; that he desired his Father to give him the Net, and he would run away with it, but his Father would not let him; that then Redding came up and demanded the Net; that Thomas Eggleston said he should not have it, and then threw the Net into the River; and in the mean time the other Gentleman came up, and shot him; that John Eggleston jumped into the River, and cut the Line of the Net, to pull it out on the other Side; and that when the Gun went off, and his Father dropped down, Mr. Redding said to the other Gentleman, Lord, Sir, what have you done! and then they both run home. Mr. Abraham Eggleston, who was present, asked him, if he saw Mr. Annesley pull the Trigger of the Gun; and John Eggleston answered, that he could not tell. I asked him, if there was any Quarrel or Words that had passed between them, and he said No.—I said it was very surprising to me, that this Gentleman should come and shoot his Father, and nothing more pass between them: I then asked him, in what manner he held the Gun; he had a Stick in his Hand, and shewed in what manner the Gun was held in his Hand, thus (in his Right-hand, the Arm hanging down near the Pocket, some Inches from his Body, and near upon a Level; which was the same Manner that old Redding said the Gun was held). I asked, if he thought he did it wilfully; he said he could not tell.

Q. How long was this Discourse after this Accident happened?

Duf. About four Hours.

Q. Did you ever see this John Eggleston before, for he says he knows nothing of you?

Duf. I have known him these eight Years, and he has been frequently at my House.

Q. What Character has he?---Duffell. I cannot say much in his Behalf; his Father could not manage him at all.

Q. What Business did he follow?

Duf. His Father was a Carpenter, and he worked with him.

Q. When did he leave Staines?

Duf. Soon after this Accident happened.

Q. Where has he been ever since?

Duf. I have seen him at the White Horse in Piccadilly; and I heard at Staines that he was sent for to London.

Q. Did the Man at the White Horse come down for him to Staines?

Duf. I did not see him there.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. You say he was at your House; who gave you Directions about advising him to speak the Truth?

Duf. Nobody: Mr. Abraham Eggleston advised him the same Thing.

Q. Who was there?

Duf. Nobody but Mr. Abraham Eggleston and myself; I was desired to go and see how the Man came to be killed, and John Eggleston came to me about Eight o'Clock.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. You say he could not say it was wilfully done; so he did not say it was accidentally done.

Duf. No, he did not say it was.

Mr. Brown. Do you apprehend he had hold of the Gun by the Barrel, near the Lock?

Duf. I understood by Eggleston's manner of holding the Stick, that he meant that Mr. Annesley had hold of the Gun about the Middle of the Barrel.

[John Dalton sworn.]

Q. What Discourse had you with young Eggleston?

Dalton. On the Sunday, when the Prisoner at the Bar was carried to Laleham, to be examined, I went there: The Company dined at the Grey Hound at Laleham; I staid and drank half a Pint of Wine there, and immediately afterwards John Eggleston came to the Door, and called me out of the Room, and said he wanted to speak with me. When I came out, he said he wanted to ask my Advice concerning this Accident: I said, I wonder you should ask my Advice, when you have Relations to advise with; he said, I thought fit to ask you, as you are my Master. While we were talking, Samuel Sylvester came out, and said I was persuading the Boy to sell his Father's Blood: The Boy said, What do you mean, you Fool you? My Master is persuading me to no such Thing. I then asked him, whether he thought it was accidentally done or not; he said, he believed it was accidental, rather than any other thing. I said to him, Well, if you think so, you will be examined when you come before Sir Thomas Reynell, I desire you would not forswear yourself, but be very careful what you say.

Q. What Character has the Boy?

Dalton. He was very irregular, and used to lie out.

Q. How do you know that?---Dalton. He was my Servant.

Q. What Trade are you?---Dalton. I am a Butcher.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. You say he has a bad Character; do you think he would forswear himself?

Dalton. I can say nothing to that.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. When was it you had this Discourse with him?

Dalton. On the Sunday, at the Grey Hound at Laleham.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Was there any Talk of Money then?

Dalton. Yes, the Boy said he had been offered Money.

Q. But you say, he said he would not sell his Father's Blood?

Dalton. No; I said Samuel Sylvester came and said I was persuading him to sell his Father's Blood; and the Boy said, My Master did not persuade me to any such Thing.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Are you sure that this is true?

Dalton. Yes, I am; I think I am in my Senses.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. What did you say to him afterwards?

Dalton. I told him, he had lost his Father, and had no Friend to take care of him, and he knew best what he had to do.

Q. Did not you say it was better to take Money, than hang the Man?

Dalton. No; I said, I thought, by what he told me, that the Man was in no danger of being hanged; and therefore he had better take Money than endeavour to hang a Man, that he thought did not do it designedly.

(Mr. Higgs, belonging to the Clerk of the Peace, being sworn, produced the Book wherein all the Game-keepers of all the Manours in the County of Middlesex are entered; (Reads) Sir John Dolben, of Northamptonshire, Baronet, to Joseph Redding the Younger, dated 2 July, 1741. Entered 29 January, 1741.)

[Mr. Richard Chester sworn.]

Q. Give us an Account of what you know of this Matter.

Chester. I drove the Chaise from my own House to the Red Lyon at Brentford, and then to the Grey Hound at Laleham; I went up to young Eggleston, and asked him, how this unfortunate Thing happened; whether it was done designedly, or happened by Accident.

Q. Where was this?

Chester. This was at Laleham: He said he believed it was accidental; for he did not believe any Gentleman in cool Blood would do any such Thing wilfully.

Q. Do you know any Thing with respect to the Net?

Chester. I think he said Mr. Annesley was stooping to the Net, in order to take it, and the Gun went off.

Q. Did he say any Thing how Mr. Annesley held the Gun?

Chester. I had the Chaise-whip in my Hand, and desired him to shew me how Mr. Annesley held the Gun; he took the Whip in his Hand, and held it so, (which was much the same Position as Redding and Duffell said he held it in) I think it was rather nearer the Handle than the Middle of the Whip that he held it.

Mr. Brown. Did you see the Wound? Where was the Wound?

Chester. I understood it was somewhere about the Hip.

Mr. Brown. I ask you, whether you think he could have shot him in the Hip, if he had held the Gun that Way?

Chester,

Chester. I think he could not have shot him there, if he had held it any other Way.

Mr. Brown. Pray do you know of any Money being offered by any Person in your Presence to young Eggleston?——Chester. No.

Mr. Broun. Nor any Reward of any Sort?

Chester. No.—My Lord, I had forgot to mention one Thing. After this, Eggleston spoke to Mr. Annesley the Prisoner, and shook Hands with him; and Eggleston said, he was very sorry for what had happened; but said, he did not think he did it designedly; and then drank a Glass of Wine to him.

Court. Did they shake Hands, or drink the Wine first?

Chester. Both at the same Time, as near as could be.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Did you see this?——Chester. I did see it.

Mr. Brown. I ask you, whether the Prisoner at the Bar is not married to your Daughter-in-Law?

Chester. My Lord, if your Lordship thinks I ought to answer this Question, I will.

Court. The Relation is very small; but if they insist on their Question, you must answer it.

Chester. The Prisoner is married to my Daughter-in-Law.

Q. They ask this Question in hopes of its being of Service to them in another Affair, for it cannot be of any in this; though I hope he has got a very good Wife.

(John Paterson sworn.)

Q. Mr. Paterson, I think you did attend the Coroner's Inquest upon this Occasion; please to give an Account how Eggleston behaved then, and what he said.

Mr. Paterson. My Lord, I will; but first beg Leave to make an Apology for appearing as a Witness on behalf of the unhappy Gentleman, for whom I am concerned as an Attorney: I do it because in an Affair of so great Consequence to him, I think he has a Right to my Evidence; and I do it with less Scruple, as I am his Attorney without Fee or Reward. My Lord, on the 4th of May I went to Staines, to attend the Coroner's Jury; though, as I had not Time to enquire into the Fact, and prepare for Mr. Annesley's Defence, I could do him but little Service, more than by cross-examining the Witnesses for the Crown, and making Observations on their Evidence; one of the Witnesses was John Eggleston, who has been examined here.——

Court. As to any Thing in his Behaviour, you may give Evidence; but not of any Thing that was reduced into Writing.

Mr. Paterson. I can only speak as to what he said before the Coroner; and I admit the Depositions, taken at that Time, were reduced into Writing by the Coroner or his Clerk.

[Mr. King, the Coroner, sworn, who produced his Minutes of the Depositions made before him.]

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Were these drawn up when Eggleston was examined, or afterwards?

Mr. King. They were not drawn up afterwards; they were drawn up at the same Time.

Q. Read them as far as they relate to John Eggleston.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Did Eggleston sign his Deposition?

Mr. King. He did not.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. As this Gentleman is Coroner, what he has taken down ought to be signed by the Deponent; and if it is not, I humbly apprehend it cannot be read.

Counsel for the Prisoner. The Gentlemen may chuse whether they will have the Minutes read, or whether we shall give parole Evidence, to prove what Eggleston said at that Time.

[The Counsel for the Prosecutor preferring the Minutes, they were read, and are as follows:]

May 4, 1742.

[Depositions relating to the Death of Thomas Eggleston, who was shot in the Parish of Staines, in the County of Middlesex.]

John Eggleston, Son of the Deceased, living at Staines, saith, That on Saturday, the 1st of May, he and his Father went a-fishing in one Sylvester's Grounds; and says, that one Joseph Redding came up, and laid hold of his Father, and demanded his Net; upon which his Father said he should not have it; then the Prisoner, James Annesley, came up, and said, Damn your Blood, surrender your Net, or you are a dead Man; and, upon his Refusal, the Prisoner held up his Piece to his Shoulder, and presented his Piece to the said Eggleston, near to the middle Part of his Body, on his Left Side, and shot the said Eggleston, who died presently after. Says, the Gun was cocked before he came, and that the Piece went off before his Father's Refusal to deliver the Net. He says, the Deceased clapped his Hand to his Side, and said, You Rogue, you have shot me, I am a dead Man. That after the Discharge of the Piece, his Father dropped instantly. Says, that when he saw his Father shot, he took his Knife and cut the String of the Net, and jumped into the River; upon which the Prisoner said, He has got the Net, and went to strike at him with the Butt End of the Gun; and said, Let us go on the other Side of the River, and fetch it. Says, That Redding had hold of the Deceased by the Collar, when the Piece went off. Says, he was not offered any Money by any Body.

Counsel for the Prisoner. This is the 4th of May, and he now says, that on the 2d of May he was offered Money at Laleham.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Are these all the Minutes that you took?

Mr. King. My Clerk was there; these were all that he mentioned that he took: If I may say any Thing more from my Memory, I will do it.

Q. Then we will go upon the parole Evidence.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. When an Officer has taken Things down in Writing, it is of dangerous Consequence to admit parole Evidence to be given of the same Things.

Q. We do not insist upon it.

(The Reverend Mr. Eusebius Williams sworn.)

Q. Sir, do you know John Fisher?——Williams. Yes.

Q. Had you any Talk with him about Eggleston's being killed?

Williams. I happened to be at Laleham, and heard the Depositions that were made before Sir Thomas Reynell: Fisher said, if he was examined before the Justice, he would declare what Eggleston had said to him.

Q. What was that?

Williams. Fisher told me, that Eggleston said he did not believe the Gentleman killed his Father designedly; but that it was an Accident.

Q. Do you know how this young Man Eggleston came from Staines to London, and who has had the Keeping of him since?

Williams. I know nothing but by Hear-say.

Q. Was you never at the White Horse in Piccadilly?

Williams. I never was there since this Accident.

[Mr. Bethune called.]

Mr. Serj. Gapper. My Lord, this is another Person that is brought to contradict the Evidence of Eggleston, in what he said with respect to the Position of the Gun.

Prisoner's Counsel. Eggleston said the Gun was pointed downward. Now we shall shew you, from the Nature of the Wound, that it was morally impossible it should be so; for the Wound is slanting upwards.

[James Bethune sworn.]

Q. Sir, you are, I think, a Surgeon at Brentford: Did you see the Body of this Eggleston that was killed at Staines?

Mr. Bethune. On Sunday, after the Accident, my Lord, I happened to be at Laleham, and Sir Thomas Reynell gave me Leave to come in and hear the Depositions: I was afterwards sent for by Mr. Perkins, a Surgeon at Staines, to attend at the opening of the Body before the Coroner; there were several of the Coroner's Jury in the Room. I found the Wound on the Left Side, about an Inch and an Half below the Ridge of the Hip-bone: The Wound I apprehend to be about an Inch and an Half wide; I found it went into the Cavity of the Belly.

Q. Did the Wound go upwards or downwards into the Belly?

Bethune. When I found it went into the Cavity of the Belly, I remembered in what Manner Eggleston held the Gun when he was before Sir Thomas Reynell, to shew how Mr. Annesley held it when he fired: I remember very well he held it to his Shoulder, slanting downwards; I attempted to put my Probe into the Wound, in the same Direction as he described the Gun; but there was no Passage for it in that Position; it would not go in downwards: Then I put it in, in this Manner, cross the Belly, and it went in without Obstruction, and then upwards, and it went in with the same Ease, in this Manner. I observed several large Blisters, full of black Serum on the Right Side, opposite to the Place where the Shot went in; the Blisters, which were on the opposite Side, were three or four Inches higher than where the Wound was—the Wound was on the Left Side, and the Blisters on the Right: When I found this was so plain to me, I desired it might be as plain to the Jury, and every one there, as it was to myself, because this was a Matter of Fact, and not of Judgment; and I desired the Foreman to come and put the Probe in, and try; he did so, and found the Wound as I have described it; I was the more careful in this, because I had observed the Evidence that the Boy gave on the Sunday, and there was some Variation between that and the Nature of the Wound; therefore I desired them to take the more Notice of it; and said, Gentlemen, I shall have Occasion to speak to this by and bye, and therefore I hope you would mind what I say to you.

Q. What do you think those Blisters on the other Side were occasioned by?

Bethune. I apprehend they were occasioned by the Force of the Powder; and that if the Shot had gone through, it must have come out three or four Inches higher on the other Side than it went in.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. According to your Account, could he, holding the Muzzle of the Gun upwards, have made this Wound?

Bethune. He could not have made it with the Muzzle downward.

Q. Did you observe how the Wound was upon the Bone, and whether there were any Shot remaining in the Wound?

Bethune. No, Sir; but I found some Shot in the Cavity of the Belly.

Mr. Brown. Now the Question is, Whether the Shot, coming upon this Bone, might not be thrown upwards?

Bethune. No; for the Shot went through the Bone, so that the Gun must have been held obliquely, pointing upwards: The Shot could not have gone through in that Direction, if the Muzzle of the Gun had pointed downwards. This is not Matter of Judgment, but I have given you Demonstration of it.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. You say the Wound went from the Left Side to the Right, and that if the Muzzle of the Gun was downwards, the Wound would be in the same Manner?

Bethune. Certainly, Sir; if the Muzzle of the Gun is held downward, the Shot cannot go upward.

Foreman of the Jury. He makes it appear, that the Prisoner could not hold the Gun to his Shoulder, but that it was held horizontally; and that it was impossible for him to wound him in the Manner the Boy has described, if the Muzzle of the Gun had been pointed downward.

Bethune. I beg Leave to speak a few Words more to your Lordship. While I was giving in this Evidence before the Coroner and his Jury, if your Lordship remembers, I said I had shewed them how the Wound was; therefore I desired them to consider, how consistent it was with the Evidence that Mr. Eggleston had given: I believe I proved it to the Coroner's Jury, and others that were there, that it was impossible it could be done in that Manner, if the Gun was held, as he said, to his Shoulder; upon that he comes up again, and, says he, The Gentleman stooped when he did it.

Counsel for the Prisoner. This shews how he departed from what he had said; for he said first, that Mr. Annesley stood upright when he fired; and then that he stooped, in order to make his Evidence correspond with the Wound.

[John Perkins, Surgeon, sworn.]

Q. Did you see the Body of Thomas Egglestone?

Mr. Perkins. I opened the Body on the 4th of May, and, on Inspection, I found one Wound about an Inch and an Half Diameter; on the lower Part of the Left Side, it passed through the Spine of the Os Ilium about an Inch and an Half below the Ridge of the Hip-bone: I put in my Probe seven or eight Inches, by which, and likewise upon Inspection, I found it run horizontal, a little upon the ascending. I put my two Fingers into the Cavity of the Bone, and shewed the Jury how it was; and observed on the contrary Side four or five Blisters, which I think to be occasioned by the Force of the Powder from the other Side; but the Shot did not go through the Skin.

Court. I ask you, whether these Blisters were higher or lower than the Wound?

Perkins

Perkins. Four or five Inches higher, my Lord.

Mr. Brown. Do you think theſe Bliſters were occaſioned by the Shot?

Perkins. I apprehend they were, becauſe there were no other Bliſters on any other Part of the Body.

[Mr. King the Coroner called again.]

Q. Was any Application made to you, at any Time, to ſend Mr. Annesley a Priſoner to Newgate?

Mr. King. Yes, I think it was Mr. Giffard; he came along with another Gentleman, whoſe Name, I think, is Carrington.

Q. What, Captain Carrington?

King. I believe it was: I ſaid, I think the Gentleman is ſecure enough (there was a Lord mentioned, but I cannot remember that he was named: Mr. Giffard wiſely kept him from ſaying who it was); I thought it was too ſevere to ſend him to Newgate; and ſaid, that Sir Thomas Reynell was the Juſtice of Peace who committed him, and he had taken ſufficient Care about it.

[Paul Keating ſworn.]

Q. Do you know any thing of Eggleſtone?

Keating. Yes.

Q. Where did you come acquainted with him?

Keating. At the White Horſe in Piccadilly.

Q. What Countryman are you?

Keating I came from Ireland on board a Merchantman from Waterford: I was recommended to the Earl of Angleſea, to ſay what I know as a Witneſs about the Eſtate.

Q. How came you to the White Horſe?

Keating. There was one Lawler, that came over in the ſame Ship. When I came to Town, I went and inquired for him at the Earl of Angleſea's, and he ſent me to the White Horſe in Piccadilly to live, and there I came acquainted with Eggleſtone.

Q. After your Acquaintance, do you remember any Converſation with him, about what he was to have for ſwearing in this Cauſe?

Keating. I do, my Lord, remember mighty well; a little Time after he came to the Inn, he and I got acquainted together, and went out a-walking to ſee the Town, and particularly on a Sunday Morning; the Sunday after he came to Piccadilly.

Q. What Month was that in?

Keating. In the Month of May: I believe it was the ſecond Sunday in May. As we were walking abroad, I aſked him how he came to live there; ſays he, I am here at the Expence of the Earl of Angleſea.

Court. This is not proper: If you can call any body to contradict Eggleſtone you may; but this is reflecting upon a noble Perſon's Character.

Q. Did he tell you how he came to be at that Inn?

Keating. He told me, that Mr. Williams, who keeps the White Horſe, brought him from Staines; and that he ſhould be very well provided for, if he would proſecute the Gentleman who is now in Cuſtody for this Murder; and he deſired I might contrive ſome way that he might get the Money ſecured, and I wrote two or three Drafts of Notes for 200 l. and he took Copies of them.

Q. How came he to take Copies of them?

Keating. Becauſe I did not care my Hand ſhould be known. I have a Copy of one of them in my Pocket, [Reads.]

I Promiſe to pay to Mr. Thomas Eggleſtone [that is his elder Brother] or his Order, at or upon the 10*th Day of* June next, the Sum of 200 l. Sterling, for Value received from his deceaſed Father and him in Carpenters Work, &c. Witneſs my Hand this 10*th Day of* May, 1742.

This was to be ſigned either by Williams, or my Lord Angleſea.

Q. Do you know of any Diſcourſe with Patrick Lawler?

Keating. Yes; he is my Lord Angleſea's Servant.

Court. What Lawler ſaid is not Evidence, unleſs to contradict him, and he has not been examined.

Q. Have you ever ſeen the Earl of Angleſea at the White Horſe?

Keating. He is there often.

Q. What, has the Earl of Angleſea any Thing to do there?

Keating. His Coach and Horſes are kept there.

Q. How long have they ſtood there?

Keating. They ſtand there conſtantly.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. What was that Note for?

Keating. It is only a Copy of what I wrote for Eggleſtone; for, as I told the Court before, I did not care that my Hand ſhould be ſeen in any ſuch Thing as Bribery and Corruption.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. Where was this Note ſigned?

Keating, I cannot ſay whether it was ſigned or not; he told me it was to be ſigned.

Q. Did not you put this into Eggleſtone's Head?

Keating. No, upon my Oath, I did not.

Mr. Brown. Did not you receive Money to go ſomewhere, and you and he went and ſpent the Money?

Keating. I received a Crown to go to Woolwich.

Q. How came you not to go to Woolwich?

Keating. I had not a mind to go.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. So you had a mind to make Eggleſtone drunk with this Crown?——Keating. That is a different Caſe.

Q. Did not you treat him?——Keating. Yes, I did.

Q. What Reaſon had you to treat him?

Keating. Becauſe he had no Money of his own.

Mr. Serj. Gapper. So you had a Crown to go to Woolwich, and did not go?——Keating. I did not go, indeed.

The Evidence for the Priſoners being gone through,

Court. If the Jury ſhould be of Opinion that the Gun went off by Accident, the Homicide muſt, in Point of Law, be either Manſlaughter, or Chance-Medley: I ſhould be glad, in that Caſe, to make it Chance-Medley; but, in order to that, it muſt appear, that what Mr. Annesley was doing was perfectly lawful, otherwiſe he will be guilty of Manſlaughter.

The other Priſoner, Redding, had certainly, by virtue of his Deputation, and by force of the Acts of Parliament made for the Preſervation of the Game, Authority to ſeize the Deceaſed, who was clearly acting in Violation of thoſe Laws. But it is doubtful whether the Authority of a Game-Keeper, being perſonal, the other Priſoner acted lawfully in aſſiſting him.

The Subſtance of the Arguments by the Counſel for the Priſoners (viz. Mr. Hume Campbell, Mr. Serj. Hayward, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Wyrley, and Mr. Smith) was as follows.

My Lord, although a Game-Keeper's Authority be perſonal, we ſubmit to your Lordſhip, that, as the Deceaſed was confeſſedly doing an unlawful Act, Mr. Annesley's catching at the String of the Net, which the Deceaſed had thrown away, and which might be only to prevent its falling into the Water, was not ſuch a Treſpaſs in him, as will alter the Nature of the Conſequence, and make that Manſlaughter, which appears to have been, in fact, a moſt unfortunate Accident.

We humbly apprehend, My Lord, that it is not neceſſary, that the Act Mr. Annesley was about, when the Accident happened, ſhould be ſtrictly legal; if it was an Act of an indifferent Nature, not an unlawful one, we hope it will be ſufficient to excuſe him from the Guilt of Manſlaughter.

If a Man throws a Stone into a Place of publick Reſort, and kills another, that will be Manſlaughter, becauſe the Act itſelf was unlawful, ſuppoſing that diſmal Conſequence had not followed it.

But if a Man is playing at Bowls, and undeſignedly kills another, there, as the firſt Act was of an indifferent Nature, the Law will not impute the Accident conſequential to it as a Crime.

As to Mr. Annesley's entering the Cloſe that belonged to Sylveſter, whatever it might be with regard to him, it was an Act of an indifferent Nature with reſpect to the Deceaſed, who claimed no Property in the Ground, and conſequently had no more Right to be there than Mr. Annesley, unleſs you will ſuppoſe him to have had the Owner's Conſent, which, as it was not proved, may and ought, with equal Juſtice, to be ſuppoſed in Favour of the Priſoner.

The young Man's Evidence being put out of the Caſe (and conſidering the Manner in which he contradicted himſelf, and has been contradicted by others, what he ſays, we apprehend, ought to ſtand for nothing), Mr. Annesley's Act appears to be no more than ſtooping to prevent the String of the Net from falling into the River; in doing of which, ſuppoſe a Piſtol had gone off in his Pocket, would it not be the hardeſt Caſe in the World, to ſay that this Accident ſhould make him guilty of Manſlaughter?

But allowing it neceſſary that the Act Mr. Anneſley was doing muſt be lawful, we hope to ſhew your Lordſhip, that Mr. Annesley's Interpoſition in this Caſe was ſo.

There are two Acts of Parliament relating to the Game applicable to this Caſe; the one made in the 22d and 23d Years of Charles II. Chap. 25. and the other in the 4th and 5th Years of William and Mary, Chap. 23.

The firſt recites, that divers diſorderly Perſons, laying aſide their lawful Trades, betake themſelves to the ſtealing of Conies, Hares, Pheaſants, Partridges, and other Game, with Nets and other Engines.

For Remedy whereof it enacts, That all Lords of Manours may, by Writing under their Hands and Seals, authorize one or more Game-Keeper or Game-Keepers, within their Manours; who, being ſo authorized, may ſeize ſuch Nets, or other Engines, as ſhall be uſed by any Perſon or Perſons prohibited to keep or uſe the ſame.

Then it recites, that divers idle, diſorderly, and mean People do betake themſelves to the ſtealing of Fiſh out of Ponds, and other ſeveral Waters and Rivers, to the great Damage of the Owners thereof.

Therefore it enacts, That if any Perſon or Perſons ſhall uſe a Caſting-Net in any River, &c. without the Conſent of the Lord or Owner of the ſaid Water; and being thereof convicted before any Juſtice of the Peace, ſhall give the Owner ſuch Satisfaction (not exceeding treble Damages) as the Juſtice ſhall appoint, or be committed to the Houſe of Correction. And that it ſhall be lawful for the Juſtice to deſtroy all ſuch Nets, or other Engines, wherewith ſuch Offenders ſhall be taken or apprehended

The other Act of Parliament recites, That divers good and neceſſary Laws had been made for Preſervation of the Game; notwithſtanding which, or for want of the due Execution thereof, the Game had been very much deſtroyed by many idle Perſons, who afterwards betake themſelves to Robberies, Burglaries, or other like Offences, and neglect their lawful Employments.

For Remedy whereof it enacts, That no Perſon or Perſons ſhall have or keep any Net or Engine for taking of Fiſh, except the Owner or Occupier of a River or Fiſhery. And that it ſhall be lawful for ſuch Owner or Occupier, and all and every other Perſon or Perſons, by him or them or that Purpoſe appointed, to ſeize, detain, and keep, to his and their own Uſe and Uſes, every Net or Engine which they ſhall find uſed, or in the Cuſtody or Poſſeſſion of any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, fiſhing in any River without the Conſent of the Owner or Occupier.

Now the Queſtion which your Lordſhip puts upon us to argue, is, Whether a Perſon duly authorized under theſe Acts of Parliament, being reſiſted in the Execution of his Office, can legally call any other Perſon to his Aſſiſtance?

Your Lordſhip will conſider we are arguing in favour of Life, and therefore will conſtrue theſe Laws in the moſt beneficial Manner for the Priſoner, and the rather, becauſe ſuch Conſtruction will tend to put the Laws themſelves in force, which were intended for ſecuring Men in their Property from the Violation of idle and diſorderly Perſons.

Theſe Acts ſuppoſe the Offenders to be deſperate People; for it deſcribes them to be ſuch as afterwards betake themſelves to Robberies and Burglaries; and likewiſe ſuppoſes (what is alſo true in fact) that they go in Numbers to deſtroy the Game.

That Circumſtance ſeems to imply, that a Game-Keeper, or other Perſon duly appointed, may, in ſuch Caſes, call in other Perſons to his Aſſiſtance.

To conſtrue the Law otherwiſe, would render it ineffectual; for it is abſurd to ſuppoſe, that every Lord of a Manour, or Owner of a Fiſhery, ſhould appoint as many Game-Keepers as there may be Perſons inclined to invade his Property. This would entirely tend to defeat the Security intended by the Law, and therefore can never be agreeable to the Meaning of the Legiſlators.

As theſe are late Acts of Parliament, it cannot be expected that we ſhould produce Caſes directly in Point, and Reſolutions of the Judges, on the Conſtruction of thoſe Acts in this Queſtion.

But ſuppoſe, upon ſome of the Acts of Parliament made againſt Smugglers, an Officer of the Revenue, or at the Common-Law a Conſtable, being being reſiſted in the Execution of his Office, calls in other Perſons in the Neighbourhood to his Aſſiſtance, and Miſchief or Death enſues; might not thoſe Perſons avail themſelves of the Authority veſted in the Officer or Conſtable, ſo as to be juſtified in what they do, for the manifeſt Support and Execution of the Law?

A Man has undoubtedly a Right to drive away Cattle, which he finds Damage faiſant in his Ground. Suppoſe then he ſhould deſire a Stranger to aſſiſt him, could the Owner of the Cattle maintain an Action againſt the Stranger for the Treſpaſs, in driving his Cattle?

Suppoſe, in the preſent Caſe, the Deceaſed had not unfortunately been killed, and had brought an Action againſt the Priſoners for an Aſſault, might not the Defendants (one of which was Game-Keeper) have pleaded ſpecially, and juſtified under the Act of Parliament? And ſurely, whatever in Pleading would have been a Juſtification in ſuch a Caſe as this, will be a ſufficient Excuſe.

But we apprehend, that, in all Caſes where the Law makes Offences puniſhable by Juſtices of the Peace, whoever ſees a Perſon committing ſuch an Offence, has a Right, without any ſpecial Authority, to take him up, and carry him, together with the Inſtrument of his Offence, before a Juſtice, in order to his Conviction; and that whatever is neceſſary for this Purpoſe is lawful.

If this was not Law, Offenders would, in moſt Caſes, eſcape with Impunity; for, obſerving themſelves to be diſcovered, they would hardly ſtay till the Obſerver could reſort to a proper Authority; and, being mean and unknown Perſons, might never afterwards be found.

Even the young Man, who was ſo very forward in giving his Evidence, admits that his Father and he were actually fiſhing, that is, committing an Offence againſt theſe Acts of Parliament; that Redding, who had a legal Authority, came up firſt to the Deceaſed, and demanded the Net; that the Deceaſed refuſed to deliver it; and that, whilſt they were ſtruggling for the Net, Mr. Annesley came up and ſnatched at it.

Upon the Whole, we hope Mr. Annesley was well warranted to go to Redding's Aſſiſtance; and that the unhappy Accident, that fell out at that Time, ſhall not be imputed to him as a Crime, but conſtrued to be no more than Chance-Medley.

The Subſtance of the Arguments by the Counſel for the Proſecutor, viz. Mr. Serj. Gapper, Mr. Serj. Wynne, Mr. Brown, and Mr. Johnſon, was as follows:

My Lord, the Counſel for the Priſoners have undertaken to juſtify under two Acts of Parliament.

As to the 22d and 23d of Charles II. we beg Leave to obſerve, that the Clauſe impowering Lords of Manours to appoint Game-Keepers, with Authority to ſeize Nets, does not extend to Fiſheries. The Clauſe which relates to Fiſhing, only directs that the Offenders ſhall be puniſhed, upon Conviction, before a Juſtice of Peace; but does not impower any one to ſeize either them or their Nets. The regular Way, undoubtedly, is to lay a Complaint before a Juſtice of the Peace, who is to grant his Warrant for apprehending the Offender, and then, upon Conviction, he may deſtroy the Net. Beſides, it was ſworn by old Redding, that this was his Fiſhery; if ſo, Sir John Dolben had no Authority at all to appoint a Game-Keeper to take care of it, and, conſequently, even the Deputation itſelf is void.

But if it was not void, yet ſtill the Power is perſonal, and cannot be delegated to another, and therefore cannot ſerve to excuſe Mr. Annesley, who appears to have acted officiouſly, without being called upon by any Body.

As to the other Act of Parliament, the 4th and 5th of William and Mary, that no ways relates to Game-Keepers; but only impowers the Owners or Occupiers of Fiſheries, or Perſons by them for that Purpoſe appointed, to ſeize the Nets; ſo that this Power is confined to old Redding himſelf, and it does not appear he has appointed either of the Priſoners; and therefore, as they had no Authority at all, they were Treſpaſſers, and muſt anſwer for the Conſequences.

As to the liberal Conſtruction of the Acts of Parliament, which the Gentlemen contend for, we ſay, that, at the Common Law, every Man had a Right to fiſh in Rivers; and conſequently thoſe Statutes are an Abridgment of the Common Law, and therefore to be ſtrictly conſtrued. By the ſame Rule of Conſtruction, which they inſiſt upon, any Man may claim a Right to come every Day, and ſearch another's Houſe for Nets and Engines for deſtroying of Game. But what Murders, beſides other Inconveniences, muſt be the Conſequence of ſuch an unlimited Power, we leave all the World to judge.

We admit that this is a new Caſe, and therefore the Caſes put of a Conſtable, whoſe Office is as ancient as any in the Kingdom, are by no means parallel. We inſiſt, therefore, that the Priſoners, at leaſt Mr. Annesley, having been Wrong-doers, muſt anſwer for the Conſequence, which being the Death of one of his Majeſty's Subjects, make them guilty of Manſlaughter, ſuppoſing the Gun went off by Accident.

Then Mr. Hume Campbell ſaid in Reply:

My Lord, I beg Leave to trouble you with a few Words, on Behalf of the unhappy Gentleman who ſtands charged before you with a Crime which affects his Life.

If that Conſequence was the Motive for the Charge, he may rely upon the Juſtice of this Court as his Security; to your Juſtice he has ſurrendered himſelf, and equally truſts in that and his Innocence.

In arguing the Point now before the Court, I may take it for granted, that the Gun went off by Accident, without Mr. Annesley's knowing it; and only conſider, whether his interpoſing to aſſiſt Redding was or was not lawful.

My Lord, I take it for a general Rule, that all Perſons, on Requeſt, not only may, but are bound by their Duty and Allegiance, to aſſiſt legal Officers in the Execution of their Duty.

I ſhall not repeat any of the Evidence; the Court will remember, that a Requeſt of the Game-Keeper's, or what amounts to ſuch, has been proved.

I mentioned the Caſe of a Conſtable, which the Gentlemen of the other Side endeavour to diſtinguiſh from that of a Game-Keeper, by ſaying, that his Power is great, and that his Office is very ancient. I admit both theſe Poſitions; but inſiſt, that his Power does not ariſe from the Antiquity, but from the Legality of his Office.

A Game-Keeper is a legal Officer, particularly appointed under the Acts of Parliament for the Preſervation of the Game: He is for that Purpoſe fully impowered to put the Laws, relating to the Game, in Execution; Nobody can legally reſiſt him, and conſequently the Deceaſed and his Son were doubly criminal; firſt, in breaking the Law, and then in reſiſting the legal Officer, who came to put that Law in force.

What did Mr. Annesley do in this Caſe? He ſtooped to take up the Net, which the Deceaſed had unlawfully thrown into the Water, to prevent the Game-Keeper from ſeizing it.

Eggleſtone had abandoned it; and will any one maintain, that when a Treſpaſſer throws away the Inſtrument of his Crime, it is unlawful in another Perſon to take it up? Nay, the Aſſiſtant of him to whom the Statute gives it?

They ſay a Man may as well go every Day into People's Houſes, under Pretence of ſearching for Nets, &c. No, they cannot do that by Law; every Man's Houſe is his Caſtle; and the Law has provided, that he ſhall not be moleſted there without a ſpecial Authority. Nor is there the ſame Reaſon for that, as there is for ſeizing Offenders in the actual Commiſſion of the Offence. The very Caſe they put, implies the Offender may be found and come at by the ordinary Forms; but in the other, he may not be known, and will hardly ſtay till you apply for a Warrant to apprehend him.

So that the Neceſſity of the Thing makes that reaſonable and lawful in the one Caſe, which, for Want of that Neceſſity, is not ſo in the other.

That a ſpecial Authority, my Lord, is not neceſſary in all Caſes, will hardly be diſputed; a Conſtable, if the Law is broke in his Preſence, may, by Virtue of his general Power, take Cognizance of the Offence, and arreſt the Offender.

In the preſent Caſe, the Game-Keeper, who is a legal Officer, and in Nature of a Conſtable for this particular Purpoſe, ſaw the Deceaſed a-fiſhing, and conſequently had a Right, without any ſpecial Warrant, to ſeize him, and when reſiſted, to call Mr. Anneſley to his Aſſiſtance.

It is ſaid, the Acts of Parliament are an Abridgment of the Common Law, and therefore ſhould be conſtrued ſtrictly. My Lord, no Man, by the Common Law, had a Right to fiſh in another's Property. It was an Offence at the Common Law; it is Malum in ſe; and the Statutes, that have been mentioned, only make that Offence puniſhable by a Juſtice of Peace; as they tend therefore to ſecure the Property which a Man had at the Common Law, they are an Addition to the Common Law, fixing a Puniſhment for the Breach of Law; and therefore to be ſo conſtrued, as will beſt anſwer ſo ſalutary an End.

If it is a new Caſe, as the Gentlemen ſeem to lay a Streſs upon it, let us conſider what will be the Conſequence of your Lordſhip's Determination, if it ſhould be againſt us.

The Law, my Lord, I apprehend, will become vain and idle; for if Offenders get together in any Number, it will be impoſſible for a Game-Keeper to reſtrain them.

Nay, my Lord, the Law itſelf will become a Snare to all who have not the Act of Parliament in their Pocket, to tell them they muſt not interfere; for ſuppoſe a Perſon, legally appointed under an Act of Parliament, going to do his Duty, is reſiſted, can it be imagined that his Fellow-Servant, his Neighbour, or his Friend, would not think himſelf juſtified, nay bound to aſſiſt him, when he ſees his Authority thus trampled upon?

At moſt, my Lord, it could be only an imprudent Act in Mr. Anneſley to interpoſe; but we hope your Lordſhip will not conſtrue it to be ſuch an unlawful Act as will make him a Treſpaſſer, and ſo guilty of Manſlaughter.

Your Lordſhip will pleaſe to obſerve, that it depends intirely on the Credit of Eggleſtone, whether this Gentleman did any Thing or not. Before your Lordſhip directs the Jury as to this, it is my Duty to acquaint your Lordſhip, that there is an Indictment on the Coroner's Inqueſt, and likewiſe an Indictment on the Black Act, againſt the Priſoner Mr. Anneſley.

Court. That is for ſhooting maliciouſly: But there is no Evidence tending that Way.

Mr. Serj. Gap. My Lord, we deſire to call ſome Evidence to ſupport the Character of John Eggleſtone.

Q. For what? We have called no Witneſs to impeach it.

Court. Have you not examined every Witneſs that has appeared to the Boy's Character? If you could have called more, it is to be ſuppoſed you would have done it.

[John Gardner ſworn.]

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Do you know this young Eggleſtone?---Gard. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. How long have you known him?

Gard. Seven or eight Years.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. What is he, as to his Honeſty and Veracity?

Gard. He is like other Boys, ſometimes good, ſometimes indifferent.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. I do not mean as to a little Unluckineſs: But do you think, from his general Behaviour, that he would forſwear himſelf?

Gard. No, I do not think that he would.

[Thomas Sylveſter ſworn.]

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Do you know this Eggleſtone?

Syl. Yes, I have known him about three Years; he lived by me at a Butcher's.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. What was he, as to his Character and Behaviour?

Syl. He was ſometimes idle, and given to Play.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Do you think he would forſwear himſelf?

Syl. No, I do not think he would.

[Samuel Sylveſter called.]

Mr. Serj. Wynne. How long have you known this Boy?

Samuel Syl. I have known this Boy a good while.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. What is his general Character; do you think he would forſwear himſelf?---Samuel Syl. I have had no Converſation with him, ſo I do not know what he is.

[William Palmer ſworn.]

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Do you know young Eggleſtone?---Palmer. Yes.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. How long have you known him?

Palmer. I have known him as long as I have known any Perſon of his Age: He came of very honeſt Parents.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Do you think he would forſwear himſelf?

Palmer. I do not think he would forſwear himſelf.

Q. Upon your Oath, do you not think he is much addicted to Lying?

Palmer. Why, that is not taking a falſe Oath.

[Patrick Lawler ſworn.]

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Do you know Paul Keating?

Lawler. I have known him ever ſince the 18th of March laſt.

Q. What is his general Character?

Lawler. I do not know his general Character; but I know he has behaved very bad of late.

Q. Did you never offer him any Money to keep out of the Way, and not appear at this Trial?

Lawler. No, not I; but he ſaid he would give them a Rowland for their Oliver.

Q. Do you know what he meant by that?

Lawler. No; only that he ſaid if my Lord Angleſea did not give him Money, he would turn Evidence on the other Side.

Q. What did you think he meant, when he ſaid, if my Lord Angleſea did not give him Money, he would turn Evidence on the other Side? Why ſurely my Lord is not concerned in this Proſecution! But pray, Sir, you have given a bad Account of Mr. Keating, how came you and he acquainted?

Lawler. This Keating and I came over together from Ireland in the ſame Ship; he told me, there were ſome Evidences on board that were coming over to ſwear away my Lord Angleſea's Eſtate: Said he, there are three Women and two Men, and I have diſcovered the whole Thing, how they are bribed to come here; and if I come to London, ſaid he, I will give my Lord Angleſea an Account of it.

Q. Pray, Sir, tell us what became of Keating when he came to Town?

Lawler. Soon after he arrived he found me out, and ſo I told Mr. Jans I thought he might depend upon this Man, becauſe I had ſeen him in Briſtol; ſaid I, I ſpeak to you about this Man out of Charity; for he is very poor: Then ſays Mr. Jans, Let him go to the White-Horſe in Piccadilly; and then he wanted Cloaths and Money; and, ſays he, If they do not give me Cloaths and Money, I will ſwear that the Earl of Angleſea was to give a Note to young Eggleſtone to ſwear upon this Trial.

Q. What do you think he meant by his giving a Rowland for an Oliver? Whether it reſpected this Cauſe, or related to my Lord Angleſea's Eſtate?

Lawler. I cannot tell what he meant.

Then the Court proceeded to ſum up the Evidence as follows:

Gentlemen of the Jury, the Priſoners at the Bar, James Anneſley and Joſeph Redding, ſtand indicted for the wilful Murder of Thomas Eggleſtone, by giving him one Wound on the Left-ſide of the Belly, in the Pariſh of Staines, of which he inſtantly died: The Indictment ſets forth, that Anneſley fired the Gun, and gave the Wound, and that Redding was aſſiſting and abetting him in the doing of it: And they ſtand a ſecond time indicted on the Coroner's Inqueſt for the ſame Murder; and there is another Indictment againſt the Priſoner Anneſley, for feloniouſly, wilfully, and maliciouſly ſhooting this Man, againſt the Statute of the Ninth of King George the Firſt. The firſt Evidence that is called by the Proſecutor is John Eggleſtone; he ſays his Father and he went a-fiſhing up the River, till they came to Samuel Sylveſter's Ground; that they had a Net, and the String of the Net was about his Father's Arm; that when they got about the Middle of the Field, they ſaw the Priſoners coming up; that Redding came up firſt, and went to lay hold of the Net, and his Father threw the Net into the River, about two Yards from him; and that Annesley then came up and ſaid, Damn your Blood, deliver your Net, or you are a dead Man, and fired directly: and that he ſhot him near the Bottom of the Belly on the Left-ſide; that his Father ſaid, You Rogue, what have you done? I am a dead Man; that he, the Witneſs, took a Knife out of his Pocket, to cut the String of the Net from his Father's Arm, and leaped into the River, and dragged the Net to the other Side of the River; and that Annesley ſaid, The Rogue has got his Net, let us go on the other Side; that he ſaw Betteſworth, Fiſher, and Bowles, on the other Side of the River, and told them he believed his Father was dead; that they came over the River, and adviſed him to get a Surgeon; upon which he went to one Charles Cole, but he did not come: that then he went for Ruſſel the Conſtable, to ſearch for the Priſoners, and ſays they found the Priſoner Annesley in a Place about five or ſix Foot above the Floor, in an Out-houſe, upon ſome Rubbiſh; that they carried him to the Round-Houſe; that he ſtaid there all Night, and the next Day they carried him to Hounslow: He ſays the Gun was cocked, but he cannot tell when he cocked it: He ſays Sir Thomas Reynell came into Hounslow while they were there; and that by his Order they went to the Grey-Hound at Laleham; and that one Lane, Cheſter's Son-in-Law, offered him 100*l.* a Year; that Mr. Annesley ſaid he had not 100*l.* a Year; to give him, for he had more to provide for; but he might have 50*l.* a Year, if he would not come againſt him: He ſaid he had no Converſation with one Duffell, but that he had with Dalton; he ſays, he has ſometimes dined at Williams's Table; and that he did not tell Paul Keating he was to have 200*l.*

The next Witneſs that is produced is John Betteſworth: He ſays, that Eggleſtone and his Son were in Sylveſter's Ground, on the other Side of the River, and he ſaw the Priſoners come out of Redding's Ground into Sylveſter's, and when they were in the Middle of the Ground they ran after them: He ſays, Joſeph Redding was too nimble for Eggleſtone's Father; but whether he had him by the Collar, he cannot ſay: He ſays, that the Gun went off ſoon after Mr. Anneſley came up to old Eggleſtone: He ſays, he ſaw the Smoke and Fire of the Gun; and came up ſoon after Eggleſtone's Father was ſhot. He ſays, he and Fiſher, and Bowles, croſſed the Water; and that Anneſley and Redding ran away; that Eggleſtone was not quite dead when he came over, but was not able to ſpeak; and ſays, he ſaw the Net on the other Side of the River: He ſays, there was a Place in a Waſh-houſe, about ſix Foot from the Ground, and there they found Mr. Anneſley; that it is a Place where they put Hoops, and other Rubbiſh: He ſays, that when Mr. Annesley was taken, he ſaid, he wiſhed to be killed, for being inſtrumental in the taking away an innocent Man's Life. That about half an Hour before this Accident happened, he ſaw Mr. Annesley offer to ſhoot at a Crow.

John Fiſher is called next; he ſays, he ſaw young Redding in the Ground with another Man; but cannot ſay that Annesley is the Man; and that he ſaw there, two Men running after Eggleſtone and his Son; that Redding laid his Hand, he thinks, on Eggleſtone's Shoulder; and there was a Sort of a Scuffle between them; and he that carried the Gun carried it in a Form to ſhoot; and he that carried the Gun was very near Eggleſtone when the Gun went off: and he ſays, he ſaw Joſeph Redding, and the other Man, go away; and he ſays, he was at this Time 169 Yards off. It ſeems the Ground has been meaſured, and that is the Reaſon they are ſo particular in it: he ſays, Eggleſtone had Money offered him in his hearing; he would have had a Hundred a Year; but Mr. Annesley ſaid, he could not give him an Hundred a Year, for he had other People to do for: But he would give him Fifty; and that Eggleſtone afterwards ſaid, he would not ſell his Father's Blood; and he ſaid, that Eggleſtone afterwards told him, he believed the Gentleman did not do it wilfully; but that the Boy, being afterwards aſked how he could ſwear againſt the Gentleman, when he had ſaid he believed he did not do it wilfully; he ſaid, he did not remember any thing of what he had ſaid to him; and he ſays he has been in the ſame Story ever ſince the Accident happened, excepting that one Time.

The next Witneſs, Gentlemen, is Samuel Sylveſter; and he ſays, when Mr. Annesley came out of that Place where he was found, he trembled very much: he ſays, he rents this Land of one Sanders, who took it of Redding's Father: he ſays, Eggleſtone uſed to work ſometimes with his Father in the Buſineſs of a Carpenter, but that he has lived ſome time at the White Horſe, in Piccadilly.

This is the Subſtance of the Evidence for the Proſecutor.

The Priſoner Mr. Annesley, in his own Defence, ſays, that he is very ſorry for the Accident that has happened; that theſe Perſons were poaching in the Manour that belongs to Sir John Dolben; that they did go up to them, but that you cannot ſuppoſe he had any Spite againſt a Man he never ſaw in his Life; he ſays that he had a Gun in his Hand, and that the Gun went off by Accident. The other Priſoner Redding ſays, he is Game-keeper to Sir John Dolben; that he ſaw theſe Men fiſhing, and went to take the Net; that he heard the Gun go off, and ſaw the Man fall down, and then he ſaid to Mr. Annesley, Lord bleſs me, I hope you have not killed the Man! and that it was done accidentally.

To prove their Caſe, they called the following Witneſſes. The firſt is, Mr. Staples; he ſays, this is Sir John Dolben's Manour, and that he has held Courts there.

The next Witneſs, Gentlemen, was Thomas Burlingſon, and he proves a Deputation of the ſecond of July 1741, from Sir John Dolben to Joſeph Redding the younger, and thereby he is appointed his Game-keeper, to ſeize the Nets, &c. of any Perſon who ſhall deſtroy any Game, or Fiſh, in his Manour; and in the Book which is kept for the Entry of theſe Things for the County of Middleſex, it appears that the Entry was made the 29th of January 1741, which was before the committing of this Fact.

Then Redding, the Father of Joſeph Redding, is called, and he ſays, the Fiſhery belongs to Sir John Dolben, who is Lord of the Manour; that he lett the Ground called Hare Mead to Sanders; and that the ſame is now in the Poſſeſſion of Sylveſter. That he himſelf was in Chantry Mead (which is next to the Hare Mead) when this Accident happened: That when he came up to them, his Son ſaid, he was afraid the Man was killed, and aſked Annesley how he came to do it? To which Annesley anſwered, He did not think of the Gun's going off; he ſays, they ſeemed very much troubled and concerned: being aſked the Poſition of the Gun when it went off, he ſays, Mr. Annesley held the Gun in one Hand, and that it hung down by his Side.

The next Witneſs, Gentlemen, is William Duffell; and he ſays, that ſome Hours after the Accident happened, John Eggleſtone came into his Houſe; and the Man that brought him to his Houſe, deſired him to ſpeak the Truth; and the Account the Boy gave at that Time was, that Redding came up to his Father, and demanded the Net, and that his Father ſaid he ſhould not have it, and threw it into the River; that then Mr. Annesley came up, and the Gun went off, and his Father was ſhot. He ſays, that Abraham Eggleſtone particularly aſked the Boy whether he ſaw Mr. Annesley pull the Trigger of the Gun? and that he ſaid he could not tell; that then he aſked him if there were any Words between them? and he ſaid, No; that then this Witneſs ſaid, it was a ſtrange Thing that Mr. Annesley ſhould ſhoot his Father, and have no Words with him: That being aſked in what manner the Gun was held, Eggleſtone, with a Stick which he had in his Hand, ſhewed them in what Manner Mr. Annesley held the Gun: He ſays the Stick was in his Hand, hanging down by his Side. He ſays, that Eggleſtone then was aſked, if he thought Annesley did it wilfully, and that he ſaid he could not tell. Being aſked as to the Boy's Character; he ſays he has but an indifferent Character, that he cannot ſpeak in the Praiſe of him, and has heard his Father often complain of him.

The next Evidence is John Dalton; and he ſays, that the next Day after the Accident, he went to Laleham, and there Eggleſtone told him, he believed it was an Accident, and not done deſignedly. He ſays the Boy has but an indifferent Character, but believes he would not forſwear himſelf.

The next Witneſs is Richard Cheſter, and he ſays, that he aſked the Boy at Laleham, whether it was accidental or wilful; and that he ſaid he believed it was an Accident; for he did not believe any Gentleman, in cool Blood, would deſignedly ſhoot another; he ſays he had a Whip in his Hand, and deſired Eggleſtone to ſhew him how Mr. Annesley held the Gun; that he took the Whip in his Hand, and ſhewed him; that he held it in his Hand, hanging down by his Side; and he ſays he ſaw Eggleſtone ſpeak to Mr. Annesley; that he ſhook Hands with him, and drank a Glaſs of Wine, and ſaid he did not think he did it deſignedly.

Mr. Paterſon was then called to prove what the Boy ſaid before the Coroner; but his Examination being taken down in writing, I did not think proper to allow of Parole Evidence.

Then Mr. King the Coroner was called; and he produced the Minutes of the Depoſitions, taken the 4th of May at Laleham, before the Inqueſt. The Minutes have been read, by which it appears that Eggleſtone depoſed, that as his Father and he were fiſhing in Sylveſter's Ground, Redding came up, and laid hold of his Father, and demanded his Net, which his Father refuſed; that then Annesley came up and ſaid, "Damn your Blood, ſurrender your Net, or you are a dead Man;" that he held up his Piece againſt his Shoulder, and ſhot him directly: And his Father ſaid, "You Rogue, you have ſhot me, I am a dead Man." And, Gentlemen, his Depoſition before the Coroner likewiſe ſays, that when he ſaw his Father was ſhot, he took his Knife, and cut the String of the Net; and that that then Mr. Anneſley went to ſtrike him on the Head, with the Butt End of the Gun. And he ſwears in his Depoſition, that he was not offered any Money by any Body. Then they produced Mr. Euſebius Williams, and he ſays, John Fiſher told him, that John Eggleſtone had ſaid he did not believe Mr. Anneſley killed his Father wilfully, but that it was done by Accident.

Then James Bethune, a Surgeon, is produced, and he ſays he ſaw the Body; that he examined and probed the Wound; and he ſays it was an Inch and an half below the Ridge of the Hip-bone, and an Inch and an half wide; and that when he put his Inſtrument downwards, it would not go in; but it would go in when the Probe was put upwards, or croſs the Belly.

The next Witneſs is John Perkins, a Surgeon: he ſays he opened the Body the 4th of May, to be inſpected by the Coroner's Inqueſt; and there was a Wound an Inch and a half Diameter. He put in his Probe ſeven or eight Inches, and found the Wound a little horizontal, about an Inch and an half below the Hip-bone; he ſays there were Bliſters on the other Side of the Body, and they were four or five Inches higher than the Wound. Mr. King ſays, that Mr. Giffard, who is the Sollicitor in this Proſecution, made Application to him to commit Mr. Anneſley to Newgate; but he thought that was too ſevere, as Sir Thomas Reynell was a Juſtice of the Peace, and had taken ſufficient Care of him.

Paul Keating ſays, he became acquainted with Eggleſtone at the White Horſe in Piccadilly, which is kept by one Williams; and that he, at Eggleſtone's Deſire, drew a Note of 200 l. for him, and that the Boy, Eggleſtone, took a Copy of it.

Gentlemen, this is the Evidence given in Behalf of the Priſoners; and there has been Evidence given to ſupport the Character of John Eggleſtone.

John Gardener, he ſays he has known him ſeven or eight Years,---that he is like other Boys, ſometimes good, and ſometimes indifferent, but he does not think he would forſwear himſelf.

Sylveſter was called again, to Eggleſtone's Character; he ſays he has known him about three Years, that he was ſometimes given to play, but believes he would not forſwear himſelf.

William Palmer ſays he has known him from a Child, and does not think he would forſwear himſelf.

Patrick Lawler ſays, he has known Paul Keating ſince the 18th of March; that becauſe he could not be ſupplied with Cloaths, as he expected, he was to ſwear, that the Earl of Angleſea was to give a Note to young Eggleſtone.

This is the State of the Evidence on both Sides.

Now, Gentlemen, you are to conſider, whether the Fact is Murder, Manſlaughter, or Chance-Medley: Murder, Gentlemen, in Point of Law, is, when a Perſon kills another with expreſs Malice and Deſign, or with implied Malice, as when it is without any Offence or Provocation; but if there is a ſudden Fray, and in that Fray and Heat of Blood, a Perſon is killed, that is Manſlaughter; now there are ſeveral Things in the Courſe of the Evidence proper to come under your Conſideration; you will obſerve that Eggleſtone ſwears Mr. Anneſley ſaid, "Damn your Blood, deliver your Net, or you are a dead Man," and that immediately the Gun went off, and the Man was ſhot; if he let the Gun off deſignedly, if this was the Caſe, though on a ſudden, he can be guilty of no leſs than Manſlaughter; but then you will conſider what different Things the Boy has ſaid; he has declared ſeveral Times, he did not believe he did it deſignedly; and according to what the Surgeons ſay, it is not probable to me, that this Wound could be given in the Situation he ſays Mr. Anneſley was in; for the Wound goes upwards; and if he held his Gun as the Boy has ſaid, the Wound could not have been as it is: Beſides that, he is expreſsly contradicted in the Fact itſelf by old Redding, who ſwears he ſaw the Gun go off, and that it was hanging by Mr. Anneſley's Side. Gentlemen, as I ſaid before, the Queſtion you are to conſider of, is, whether this is Manſlaughter, or Chance-Medley in Mr. Anneſley; for as to Redding, he muſt certainly be acquitted; and as to Murder, I cannot think there is any Evidence to make Mr. Anneſley guilty of that; but as there was ſome hot Blood, there may be Reaſon to conſider, whether it is not Manſlaughter: On the other hand, if Mr. Anneſley was carrying his Gun by his Side, and it went off accidentally, then it will be Chance-Medley.

[Then the Jury having conſidered of their Verdicts, without going out of Court.]

Clerk of the Arraigns. Gentlemen of the Jury, are you agreed in your Verdicts?---Jury. Yes.

Clerk. Who ſhall ſay for you?---Jury. Our Foreman.

Clerk. James Anneſley, hold up your Hand.---Joſeph Redding, hold up your Hand.---Gentlemen of the Jury, look upon the Priſoners. How ſay you, is James Anneſley guilty of the Felony and Murder, whereof he ſtands indicted, or not guilty?

Foreman of the Jury. Not guilty of Murder, but guilty of Chance-Medley.

Clerk. How ſay you, is Joſeph Redding guilty of the ſame Felony and Murder, whereof he ſtands indicted, or not guilty?

Foreman of the Jury. Not guilty of the Murder, but guilty of Chance-Medley.

Clerk. How ſay you, is the ſaid James Anneſley guilty of the Felony and Murder, wherewith he ſtands charged upon the Coroner's Inquiſition, or not guilty?

Foreman of the Jury. Not guilty of the Murder, but guilty of Chance-Medley.

Clerk. How ſay you, is the ſaid Joſeph Redding guilty of the ſame Felony and Murder, wherewith he ſtands charged upon the Coroner's Inquiſition, or not guilty?

Foreman of the Jury. Not guilty of the Murder, but guilty of Chance-Medley.

Clerk. How ſay you, is the ſaid James Anneſley guilty of wilfully ſhooting at Thomas Eggleſtone, againſt the Form of the Statute, or not guilty?

Foreman of the Jury. Not guilty.

Clerk. Gentlemen of the Jury, hearken to your Verdicts, as the Court has recorded them. You ſay that James Anneſley is not guilty of the Felony and Murder whereof he ſtands indicted, but is guilty of Chance-Medley.

You ſay that Joſeph Redding is not guilty of the ſame Felony and Murder whereof he ſtands indicted, but is guilty of Chance-Medley.

You ſay the ſame upon the Coroner's Inquiſition.

You alſo ſay that the ſaid James Anneſley is not guilty of malicioufly ſhooting at Thomas Eggleſtone, againſt the Form of the Statute. And ſo you ſay All.

XXV. The Trial of the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Anglesea, Francis Annesley, Eſq. and John Jans, Gent. for an Aſſault on the Honourable James Annesley, Daniel Mac Kercher, and Hugh Kennedy, Eſquires, and William Goostry, Gent. before the Honourable Richard Mounteney, Eſq. ſecond Baron of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer, and St. George Caulfield, Eſq. his Majeſty's Attorney-General, Juſtices of Aſſize for the Leinſter Circuit, on Friday, Aug. 3d, 1744, at Athy, in the County of Kildare in *Ireland.

The Court being ſet at Eleven o'Clock, the Jury were called over, and anſwered to their Names; of whom the following Twelve were ſworn, to try the Iſſue joined between the Parties.

John Digby, Eſq.	Mr. George Bradford.	Mr. Edward Harman.
Henry Dickſon, Eſq.	Mr. William Leban.	Mr. James Tyrrell.
John Bagot, Eſq.	Mr. John Berry.	Mr. Thomas Tyrrell.
Mr. Thomas Sherlock.	Mr. Samuel Mills.	Mr. Edward Ward.

ANGUS BYRNE, one of the Perſons indicted for the Aſſault, is called into Court, and appears.

Clerk of the Crown. You ſtand indicted, for aſſaulting William Gooſtry, Gent. on the 16th of September laſt, do you ſubmit or traverſe?

Angus Byrne. I do ſubmit.

Clerk. You likewiſe ſtand indicted for aſſaulting Hugh Kennedy, Eſq. do you ſubmit or traverſe?---Angus Byrne. I ſubmit.

Clerk. You likewiſe ſtand indicted for aſſaulting Daniel Mac Kercher, Eſq. do you ſubmit or traverſe?---Angus Byrne. Submit.

Clerk. You likewiſe ſtand indicted for aſſaulting James Anneſley, Eſq. do you ſubmit or traverſe?---Angus Byrne. Submit.

Court. The Gentlemen of the Jury muſt have Pen, Ink and Paper.

Clerk of the Crown reads the Indictment, which is as follows:

County of Kildare. } THE Jurors for our Lord the King, upon their Oath ſay and preſent, that Francis Anneſley of Ballyſax, in the County of Kildare, Eſq. the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Angleſea, Joſeph Lawſon, late of the City of Dublin, in the County of the City of Dublin, Yeoman, John Jans, late of the ſame, in the ſaid County of the ſaid City, Gent. Anguiſh, otherwiſe called Angus Byrne, late of the ſame, in the ſaid County of the ſaid City, Yeoman, and Michael Lacy, late of the ſame in the ſaid County of the ſaid City, Yeoman; on the 16th Day of September, in the 16th Year of the Reign of our Lord George the ſecond by the Grace of God, of Great-Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth, with Force and Arms, that is to ſay, with Swords, Sticks, and ſo forth, at the Curraugh in the ſaid County of Kildare, in and upon one William Gooſtry, a true and faithful Subject of our ſaid Lord the King, in the Peace of God, and of our ſaid Lord the King, then and there being, did make an Aſſault, and him then and there did beat, wound, and ill treat, ſo that his Life was greatly deſpaired of, and other Wrongs to him then and there did, contrary to the Peace of our ſaid Lord the King, his Crown and Dignity.

The like for aſſaulting the Honourable James Anneſley, Eſq.

The like for aſſaulting Daniel Mac Kercher, Eſq.

The like for aſſaulting Hugh Kennedy, Eſq.

Mr. Diſney. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Angleſea, Francis Anneſley, Eſq. and Mr. John Jans, do ſtand indicted on the 16th of September, 17 of Geo. II. for an Aſſault by them made, at the Curraugh of Kildare, in and upon the Honourable James Anneſley, which Indictment ſets forth, that on him then and there, they did make an Aſſault, and likewiſe on Daniel Mac Kercher, Eſq. Hugh Kennedy, Eſq. and Mr. William Gooſtry. I hope we ſhall be able to give ſuch Evidence, as will clearly prove the Allegations of the Indictments, and that your Lordſhip will direct the Jury to find for the Proſecutors.

Mr. Harward. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, I am of Counſel this Day for the Proſecutors, Mr. Anneſley, Mr. Mac Kercher, Mr. Gooſtry, and Mr. Kennedy, and the Nature of this Caſe and Proſecution will appear to your Lordſhip and to the Jury, as I apprehend, in this Light; for I ſhall ſtate it from what I preſume to be true, and will appear to be ſo from the Examinations that are given in againſt

* Though this Trial was not 'till Auguſt 1744, after the Trial in Ejectment, (in Ireland) between Mr. Anneſley and the Earl of Angleſea, which began November 1743, (for Part of the Angleſea Eſtate) yet as THIS ASSAULT was in September 1743, previous to that Trial, we inſert it here, as proper to follow Mr. Anneſley's Trial, (in England) for the Murder, and precede the other Trial in Ejectment.

the Traversers by those Gentlemen. And though this, my Lord, upon the Face of the Record, appears to be but an ordinary and common Assault, yet, if these Examinations are true, it will appear, that, had not the Hand of Providence very signally interposed in Preservation of their Lives, instead of a common and sudden Affray, it would have been a Crime of another Nature, it would have been a Crime of the deepest Dye, for which the Traversers must have stood a Trial for their Lives. I do not mean, my Lord, when I say it would be a Crime of another Nature, by that to bring it home as such to all the Traversers; no, I believe there may be one of them who had not such a wicked Intention; but as to others, it will appear to be a concerted, premeditated Assault, not to be satisfied by Bloodshed and Battery, but to pursue the Prosecutor, Mr. Annesley, to Death. If these Examinations are true, this is but one of the many Attempts that Lord Anglesea——

Mr. Spring. My Lord, I must submit it to your Lordship's Judgment, how proper this Gentleman is at this Time in this very elaborate and affecting Harangue. The Offence for which the Traversers are indicted is an Assault, which arose from an ordinary and common Quarrel at a public Meeting; but this Gentleman tells your Lordship that there was an Intention in the Traversers, or some of them, to commit what they are not now charged with, something of another Nature, which he makes a Crime of the deepest Dye. Pray, my Lord, how does this appear? Or, what Right has he upon the present Occasion, to assert any such Thing? There is no Indictment for such an Intention, nor any Foundation for such an Assertion; and therefore I humbly pray your Lordship will order that Gentleman, in conducting this Prosecution, to confine himself to his Duty, and direct him to open Evidence that is proper, and no more.

Mr. Harward. My Lord, I am very unfortunate, to be so often taken down by Gentlemen of great Experience and Knowledge, and must apply for your Interposition, else I shall not know how to proceed.

Court. Go on, Mr. Harward.

Mr. Harward. I was going on, as I apprehended I had a Right to do, and as I have observed to be the constant Practice in all Cases of this Kind, not to confine myself to the bare Assault, but to shew it in all its concomitant Circumstances, that the whole Truth of the Fact may appear to the Court; and the Reason why Experience justifies every body to do this is, because the Fine which the Court is to impose is discretionary, and will be greater or less in proportion to the Nature of the Offence; and therefore every thing is proper to be laid before the Court, that may be an Ingredient in their Consideration for the imposing that Fine. I say, then, my Lord, that this Assault, when it comes to be considered upon its Circumstances, will not appear to be the Effect of a sudden Passion, but to have proceeded from an implacable Enmity, that has pursued this unfortunate Client of mine from his Age of nine or ten Years old to this Day. I choose rather to read, as to this, the very Words of the Examinations in my Hand, than to trust to my own Representation of the former Attempts on his Life——

Mr. Spring. My Lord, I must call upon that Gentleman again to confine himself to the Fact and the Circumstances relative thereto, and hope, if he continues to offer any Thing so extremely improper, your Lordship will take notice of it, and direct him not to proceed.

Court. I think you go too far back, Mr. Harward.

Mr. Harward. My Lord, to be sure I am in your Lordship's Judgment, and therefore it is, when I understand it, I shall pursue it.

Court. It is extremely proper to mention the Circumstances attending this Fact, and the Nature of the Case, for the Reason you mention, that it may have a due Consideration in the Sense of the Court.

Mr. Harward. I desire to know, my Lord, whether I have a Right to lay any Circumstances before the Court and the Jury, to let them see whether this Assault was a premeditated Thing or not.

Court. Go on, Sir.

Mr. Harward. Now, my Lord, I can shew, out of these Examinations, that it was a premeditated Thing; for this Assault happened to be committed on the 16th. The first Day of the Meeting of Gentlemen on the Curragh of Kildare, to see the Diversion of the Races, was on the 14th of September; on the 14th and 15th there was no actual Assault committed; but there was a Behaviour, there was Language given, that was introductory, and pointed out most plainly what the Consequence would be, that in reality happened the third Day. I would be in your Lordship's Judgment, whether or no these two preceding Days are not connected with the following ones.

Court. Extremely proper.

Mr. Harward. Why then, I submit to your Lordship's Directions, and I shall not take the Liberty of mentioning of any of the former Attempts, or Injuries of the highest Nature, that my Client has suffered——

Mr. Spring. My Lord, this is for no other Purpose but to inflame the Minds of the Jury, and to captivate the Populace. There is no Injury, no Attempt of any Kind, real or pretended, but that on the 16th, that is to be considered by the Jury.

Court. The Jury will be told, by and bye, that the single Point they are to consider is the Fact of the Assault only. Go on, Mr. Harward.

Mr. Harward. I did mention that I would not enter into a Narrative of the former Attempts, but confine myself to the Passages of this Day. This Gentleman, as Son and Heir to the late Lord Altham (I hope the Counsel will give me the Liberty of telling who he is)——

Mr. Spring. There is no Occasion for that neither, at this Time.

Court. Go on, Sir, in stating the Case.

Mr. Harward. I say then, that Mr. Annesley, along with these other Gentlemen (some of them Men of Profession), came into this Kingdom in the latter End of last Summer, in order to assert and sue for that, which he apprehended to be his Right, the Anglesea Estate in this Kingdom: Mr. Annesley had brought an Ejectment for Recovery of Part of it, lying in the County of Meath, which was then depending; and Lord Anglesea had Notice of this, and knew the Errand these Gentlemen came of, to assist Mr. Annesley in his Affairs. He met them on the 14th at the Curragh; and the first Thing (for I shall mention the Facts in order of Time, as they happened, from the first to the third Day of the Races), the first Person that my Lord did the Honour to take notice of, was Mr. MacKercher. My Lord stood in a Circle of the Gentlemen of this Country, and of many of his own Attendants brought from another Country; and seeing this Gentleman, Mr. MacKercher, who came to attend Mr. Annesley's Affairs, the first Thing that he was pleased to do was, to point to Mr. MacKercher, and say, See yonder that Rogue, that Scoundrel, and that Villain MacKercher: It is not above a Month ago, though he is now dressed up like a Gentleman, since I saw those very laced Cloaths hanging in Monmouth-street, in London. Mr. MacKercher (who is a Gentleman, and will appear in the Course of this Trial to have Resolution of another Kind) took no Sort of Notice of this publick Insult, as it was not his Business to venture the Conduct and Success of his Friend's Affairs in a rash, hot Quarrel, but very prudently passed it calmly and quietly by. That Day, my Lord, nothing more, that was remarkable, did happen: This was upon a Wednesday, I think the 14th. On the 16th, as these Gentlemen, for whom I am Counsel, were all in a Knot, they and their few Friends kept close together upon this Curragh, which is of great Extent, many Miles over; but no Place whatever could serve my Lord Anglesea's Coachman, but to ride through and through them, to endeavour to trample down these Gentlemen and their Horses with his Coach-and-Six, and hunted them wherever they moved; and whenever he came near Mr. Annesley, this Coachman (you will guess easily by whose Directions) used to cry out, There he is, there's the Sh e-boy, black your Ball; and some other opprobrious Language I can't now recollect. And by this repeated Insult of driving these Gentlemen wantonly from Place to Place, and calling out to them in that opprobrious Manner, this Man was determined, with his Coach and Six, to be upon the Back of them, wherever they removed to avoid him. My Lord, he is indicted also, but does not appear, though he still is the Coachman of Lord Anglesea; his Name is Joseph Lawson. My Clients, my Lord, observing this Behaviour, like prudent Men, they began to be more than ordinary upon their Guard, and to fear the worst. As they were but few, and Strangers in the Kingdom, they thought that sticking together would be the only Means left in their Power to preserve them: But all Precautions were in vain. My Lord observing, that neither abusive Language, Words which must have pierced to the Heart of the meanest Vassal, nor the Coachman's driving his Coach at them, could have raised these Gentlemen's Tempers to take any Notice of it, another Expedient occurred to my Lord, to put his Purposes in execution. Mr. MacKercher, upon these repeated Abuses of himself, and of Mr. Annesley, having waited upon Lord Anglesea, with all the Address and Good-Manners imaginable, told him (without making the least mention of what happened to himself the Day before) That he was come to acquaint his Lordship with the Rudeness of a Coachman of his to a Gentleman in the Field, and hoped his Lordship would do in it what became a Nobleman and Gentleman. Lord Anglesea asked, Who the Gentleman was? He is told, Mr. Annesley. Upon that, my Lord, instead of having any Feeling whatsoever for the Transgression of this Coachman of his, A Gentleman, Sir, says he, a blackguard Shoe-boy! I won't turn off my Coachman for any Abuse either to him or to you; and you are a Rogue and a Villain, and he is a Bastard, the Son of Juggy Landy, by my Brother. With this, one of the Traversers, Mr. Francis Annesley, a Relation to my Lord, without any Provocation, gave Mr. MacKercher a Stroke over the Head with his Whip. Then my Lord began to insult him in a higher and louder Tone, and made a Proclamation to the Company, getting up and resting himself on his Stirrups, that his Voice should reach them all, that this Mr. Annesley was a Bastard. I do, says he, declare before you all, that that Fellow is no Gentleman, but a Bastard of Juggy Landy's, a Kitchen-maid; and continued his Abuse of Mr. MacKercher with the most scurrilous Language. As soon as Mr. Francis Annesley saw that his Relation's Blood was a little up, he repeated the Blow, and with the Butt-End of his Whip struck Mr. MacKercher on the Forehead, which stunned him in some Measure. This Blow was followed by some others; but however, Mr. MacKercher did not consider his own Safety, but turned about to take care of that which concerned him more than any Misfortune that could have attended himself; and there having laid his Eye upon Mr. Annesley, Mr. Goostry, and Mr. Kennedy, desired them to make the best of their Way off, or they would be murdered, and that he would follow; but before these Gentlemen could turn their Horses to gallop off, Mr. Francis Annesley was too nimble for them, and made a Stroke at Mr. Goostry, which cut him to the Skull; and he, with many other Persons, repeated these Blows, until there was scarce a Part of him which did not feel the Weight of Mr. Annesley's Arm: He was stunned and knocked down by the first Blow, and continued under Cure of his Wound for a Month after. Mr. Kennedy, another of these Gentlemen, without the least Provocation, endeavouring to shift for himself, was most unmercifully beat by the Traversers, assisted by several other Persons unknown; and when stunned and knocked down, my Lord laid on him, until some of the People of the Country cried out to him, For shame, for shame, for shame, don't kill him. Mr. Jans, my Lord's Agent, I had like to have forgot, had not the least Hand in this Affray, but punctually observed his Lord's Orders, who cried out, Knock them down, kill the Villains. When they had thus levelled down Mr. Annesley's Friends, who were his Guard, my Lord then thought it the proper Time to look out for him, and called out, Where is the Dog, where is the Son of a Whore? kill him. Mr. Annesley, according to the Intimation given him by Mr. MacKercher, that he was to be murdered, set Spurs to his Horse, and got out of the Croud; but a Servant of my Lord Anglesea's, upon my Lord's Inquiry where Mr. James Annesley was, said he had galloped off. As soon as Lord Anglesea heard that Mr. Annesley had galloped away, who had no Hand in this Affray, or ever exchanged one Word with my Lord, I say, as soon as Lord Anglesea discovered that he had got safe out of the Croud, and that his Friends lay in the Condition I have now mentioned, he cried out to his Friends and Servants, Follow the Rogue, pursue the Rascal, tear him Limb from Limb, and all that will support him. He directed them, my Lord, to destroy not only him, but any who should have Humanity to endeavour to protect him. Then this noble Lord's Influence over this Croud will appear to be so absolute, that, to the Number of Forty or Fifty of them pursued this helpless Gentleman. He had a Horse, happily for him, of great Speed, and he made as good Use of it; he soon outstripped Mr. MacKercher, who followed him, and so got out of the Field, with this numerous Train of People, some with Sticks, some with Staves, others armed with Pistols and Hangers, pursuing of them both. Mr. MacKercher

Mac Kercher was neareſt to them, and overtaken by them; but however it will appear, that he was not intended to be the Victim of this Rabble that did purſue. I don't ſay that any of the Traverſers did purſue, but I ſay of this Rabble that did purſue, as they underſtood Mr. Mac Kercher not to be the devoted Head, though they overtook him, and he was the only Man that could have given the Lord Angleſea the leaſt Offence, they paſſed him by, but made all the Speed after Mr. Annesley they poſſibly could; and indeed, when he got into a Road that was leading to a neighbouring Town or Village, to Newbridge, where he lay the Night before, to ſeek for Protection, this enraged and furious Mob, thus armed and purſuing, came ſo cloſe, as that he thought it would be ſafer, or at leaſt more decent, to die with his Face toward them, than to be deſtroyed, behind his Back. He was called out to by ſome People, that had nothing to do with the Affair, that there were People with Piſtols at his Back, ready to ſhoot him; upon this, he turned his Horſe, and in the Turn the Horſe's hind Feet fell into the Ditch, and the Horſe fell upon this unfortunate Gentleman in the Ditch, and bruiſed him in a very terrible Manner. Whilſt he lay ſpeechleſs in this deplorable Condition, up came this Mob; and had it not been that one Mr. Archbold, who is a Gentleman of great Humanity, and well deſerves the Influence he has in that Country, interpoſed and reſcued him, half dead already in the Ditch, from their Violence, there had been a ſpeedy End put to all this Gentleman's Right and Pretence to the Annesley Eſtate, by an End being put to his Life. My Lord, we will ſhew your Lordſhip the Condition that this unfortunate Gentleman was in; how he lay in the Ditch till he was taken away ſpeechleſs and ſenſeleſs to Newbridge, in a Chaiſe, being not able to ride or ſtand, and his Life deſpaired of for ſome Months.

Now, my Lord, I have only one other principal Fact, concerning this Matter, to trouble you with, which I am inſtructed to charge Lord Angleſea with in the moſt expreſs Terms; and that is, when the Mob had returned from the Purſuit into the Field where Lord Angleſea was, ſome of them ſeeing him impatient to know what was done, they cried out to him, By G——d, my Lord, he is killed, he is dead. I cannot, without Violence to myſelf, mention what is ſaid to have dropped from that Lord upon the Occaſion, and would be pleaſed I could miſtruſt the Truth of it; but I am inſtructed to ſay he could not conceal the Emotions of Joy which he felt on theſe glad Tidings, but cried out, I am glad of it, then all is well. So, my Lord, this that was intended to be the moſt tragical Scene, and came within a Hair's Breadth of it, I ſay, by the Interpoſition of Providence, falls out to be this Day but a finable Offence; therefore I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhip any further with the Circumſtances of this Fact; they will come out more emphatically upon the Teſtimony of the Gentlemen, who have had more Reaſon to have felt them than I have. We ſhall examine but a few out of many Witneſſes, and ſhall endeavour to lay this Matter before your Lordſhip, without taking up more of your Time than an Offence of this publick Nature can deſerve from a Court of Juſtice.

Mr. Mac Manus. My Lord, as the Caſe has been ſtated to you, I ſhall trouble your Lordſhip but with a few Words; which are, that as the Circumſtances of this Aſſault will be a great Aggravation of the Crime, ſo will they increaſe the Puniſhment: And this, my Lord, will, in Evidence, appear to you to be an Offence of as rude, angry, and revengeful a Nature, as ever appeared in a Court of Juſtice. We have the Happineſs to have alive at this Day the Gentlemen thus aſſaulted, to ſhew your Lordſhip and the Jury the Danger and Violence of this Aſſault. I ſhall call one of the Gentlemen—Mr. Mac Kercher, who will tell you in what Manner and by whom he was aſſaulted, and (what will ſtill more heighten this Offence) the Quality and Dignity of the Offenders, the Time and Place where committed. My Lord, the Curragh of Kildare was the Place where this Aſſault was made; the Time when it was given, when thouſands of Perſons were aſſembled at a public Horſe-Race; one of the Offenders, a noble Peer of this Kingdom; and another of them in the Commiſſion of the Peace; and the Manner of it, which he will tell you, will appear to you to be without any the leaſt Provocation. This, Gentlemen of the Jury, will very particularly and very fully appear to you, from the Evidence which we ſhall lay before you.

Mr. Morgan. Here are four Perſons, my Lord, concerned in the four ſeveral Indictments now depending, and they are all included in each Indictment; but, I hope, if it appears that any one or more of them is not affected by the Evidence that ſhall be given on Behalf of the Crown upon any one particular Indictment, ſuch Perſon or Perſons ſhall be allowed to give Teſtimony on Behalf of ſuch of the Traverſers as ſhall be affected by the Evidence given on Behalf of the Crown on ſuch particular Indictment. Suppoſe, for the Purpoſe, it ſhould appear, upon the Indictment for the Aſſault upon Mr. Mac Kercher, that one or more of the Gentlemen mentioned in that Indictment is not guilty of the Charge laid in that Indictment, it would be againſt Reaſon that ſuch innocent Perſon ſhould not be admitted as a competent Witneſs on that Indictment, and highly injurious to ſuch of the Traverſers (as may be affected by the Evidence on Behalf of the Crown) not to have the Benefit of that Perſon's Teſtimony, who, by the Evidence on Behalf of the Crown, has no Guilt imputed to him on that particular Indictment; and may, perhaps, be able to give as good an Account of the Matters charged in that Indictment as any Witneſs on Behalf of the Crown can pretend to give. For this Reaſon, and in as much as theſe ſeveral Indictments are but mere Accuſations, I humbly conceive, that, after the Evidence for the Crown is given, the Jury ſhould be ſent out to conſider of their Verdict, as to ſuch of the Traverſers ſeparately, as we apprehend ſhall not be affected by the Evidence given on Behalf of the Crown on any one particular Indictment, and if they are acquitted, that we may be at Liberty to examine them as Witneſſes for the other Traverſers on that Indictment.

Court. This will be almoſt an Impoſſibility; it will be an impracticable Thing, as this Caſe is ſtated by Mr. Harward, to keep the Indictments ſeparate; but, however, I don't ſee that the going on with them all together will affect you in this Point.

Mr. Morgan. If the Gentlemen concerned for the Crown ſhall not, in the Courſe of their Examination, particularize the Indictment to which they produce this or the other Witneſs, but examine each Witneſs to all the Indictments generally; from thence a Neceſſity ariſes, on our Part, to take Notice what Witneſs or Witneſſes ſpoke to this or that Indictment, and to what Perſon or Perſons mentioned in this or that Indictment; for otherwiſe, according to this Scheme of including four Perſons in four ſeveral Indictments, a Man may loſe the Benefit of the Teſtimony of his moſt material Witneſſes, nothing more being neceſſary to be done to ſtrip him of that Benefit, than to have his Witneſſes included in the ſame Indictment with himſelf, be they never ſo innocent of the Charge contained therein; the Conſequences of which muſt be very fatal, if the Law has not preſcribed ſome Method, whereby ſuch Witneſſes, notwithſtanding ſuch Indictment, are to be at liberty to be examined; and I muſt beg Leave to rely upon it, that ſuch Method is known in Law, and is what I have before mentioned.

I ſay therefore, my Lord, if this Proſecution is to be managed and proceeded upon in that Manner, though any one or more of theſe Traverſers ſhould be guiltleſs as to three of the Indictments, yet he or they can't be examined for any of the other Traverſers upon all or any of thoſe three Indictments; becauſe all the Traverſers being upon their Trial upon the four Indictments at one and the ſame Time, and the Examination on Behalf of the Crown being applied to all the four generally, ſuch guiltleſs Perſon as to three of the Indictments, being guilty as to the fourth, cannot be examined upon any of them, becauſe by that means he may poſſibly ſet about ſwearing himſelf off of the Charge of the fourth Indictment, which perhaps by the Evidence on Behalf of the Crown might be brought Home to him. Suppoſe, for the Purpoſe, that Mr. Jans is innocent as to the Aſſault upon Mr. Mac Kercher, yet your Lordſhip will not ſuffer him to be examined upon that Indictment, becauſe there is another Indictment upon which he is on his Trial at the ſame Time, and upon which he may poſſibly be found guilty.

Court. You won't be under any Difficulty at all by proceeding upon all the Indictments together; for ſuppoſe now, Mr. Jans ſhall be affected with Evidence given upon two of theſe Indictments, but with none upon the third; why then I ſhall tell the Jury, that to ſuch an Indictment, and ſuch an one, they are to receive Evidence againſt Mr. Jans, and to ſuch not.

Mr. Harward. I apprehend this Courſe that we are proceeding in is the proper one, that the Court may be thoroughly ſatisfied of the Nature of the Fact.

1. Daniel Mac Kercher, Eſq.

Mr. Malone. I deſire, my Lord, that the Traverſer, who has now ſubmitted to the Indictments, may go out of Court, whilſt the other Witneſſes are examining.

Angus Byrne is ordered to withdraw.

Mr. Mac Manus. Q. Mr. Mac Kercher, were you aſſaulted at the Races of the Curragh by any and what Perſons—and in what Manner? Tell the whole Affair.

Mr. MacKercher. As well as my Memory can ſuggeſt, after ſo great a Diſtance of Time, I will. Upon the 14th, the firſt Day of the Races, Mr. Annesley——

Court. Q. Of what Month?

A. Of September, my Lord—Mr. Annesley, ſeveral other Gentlemen, and I, came to the Curragh, for the Diverſion of the Place.

Mr. Mac Manus. What, Mr. Annesley?---A. Mr. James Annesley.

D. Go on, Sir.

A. We had not been long there, when paſſing by a Tent where the noble Peer, who is one of the Traverſers, ſtood with ſome other People—Raiſe your Voice.

My Lord, we had not been long upon the Race-Ground, when Lord Angleſea, who was ſtanding at a Tent with ſeveral other People, called out to me in particular, (pointing to me) That Mac Kercher, though he appears here like a Gentleman, is an arrant Scoundrel; and the Coat you ſee upon his Back, I ſaw not above a Month ago in Monmouth-ſtreet. As I looked on this of too low a Nature to deſerve Reſentment, and as I came there with a firm Reſolution not only of keeping the Peace myſelf, but had recommended it to all along with me, I took no Manner of Notice of this Inſult. After the Diverſion was over, we retired to Newbridge; and on the Friday, the laſt Day of the Races, we returned again to the Curragh, with the ſame View as before, of ſeeing the Diverſion of the Place only; we arrived there as the firſt Courſe was at an End; we were no ſooner deſcried by Lord Angleſea's Coachman, than he immediately drove his Coach-and-Six full butt at us.

Q. At whom, Sir?

A. At Mr. Annesley, the other Gentlemen of our Company, and myſelf.——This he repeated three or four different Times, which we as often avoided; at length, when he found we could not be provoked by that Behaviour, he began in a groſs and inſolent Manner to inſult Mr. Annesley.

Q. Who did?

A. The Coachman.---Calling him Shoe-Black, Shoe-Boy; when he found that Mr. Annesley did not ſeem to take any Notice of it---he repeated the Inſult, and at length pointed out to him, There he is, the Shoe-Boy.

Q. Who did he point to, Sir?

A. To Mr. Annesley, my Lord.---Though I thought this a very great Inſolence, and ſcarce to be bore, yet I would not reſent it upon the Fellow, as he was a Servant; but thought it more adviſeable to complain to Lord Angleſea, to the noble Peer his Maſter, and expected proper Redreſs from him. Accordingly I went to look for him, and it was ſome Time before I found him. At length I was told, that he was at the Winning-Poſt, in the Middle of a great Circle of Gentlemen, and others, who had aſſembled there in relation to ſome Diſputes that had happened about the Horſes. I came up in the civilleſt Manner I could, and ſaid, My Lord, I beg Leave to ſpeak with your Lordſhip aſide; I was unwilling to expoſe the Fact before the Crowd, and for that Reaſon I called him aſide, to acquaint him of it in a proper Manner; whether he miſapprehended me or no, I can't tell; but he replied, This is no Time nor Place; you ſee I have no Piſtols before me. I told him, for what I have to ſay to your Lordſhip, every Time and Place is proper; I come only with a Complaint againſt one of your Servants, who has inſulted a Gentleman; and I ſhould be glad to know, my Lord, whether it be by your Orders or Approbation he behaveth ſo. My Lord aſked me, who the Gentleman was that was inſulted. I pointed out to Mr. Annesley, who ſtood behind out of the Circle, and out of the Croud, and ſaid, That is the Gentleman, my Lord. To which he replied, He a Gentleman! a Shoe-Boy, by G---d, a Blackguard and a Thief. One or two who ſtood by the noble Lord, upon that, ſaid, What, my Lord, will you turn off your Servant for that Scoundrel? I have omitted ſomething, my Lord, I beg Pardon; I likewiſe ſaid,

As the Affront was very publick, it is proper the Satisfaction should also be so, therefore—it is expected that you should strip your Servant, and turn him off in the Field.

Mr. Baron Mountney here lets the Jury know what Mr. MacKercher had hitherto said; and then says, Repeat that again, that the Jury may hear the very Words.

Mr. MacKercher. I said, That as the Affront was very publick, that it was expected his Lordship should give adequate Satisfaction, which was, that he should strip the Servant of his Livery, and turn him off on the Ground; or Words to that Effect.

Mr. Harward. Are you positive that you explained yourself in such a Manner that he could not mistake you?—A. I am satisfied I did.

Court. Q. And after this it was some Gentlemen said, What, will you turn off your Servant for that Scoundrel?

A. It was after this that some Gentlemen interfering, said that.

Mr. MacManus. Q. Do you know who said that?

A. I can't be positive, but I think it was the same Person that struck me afterwards; I think it was Francis Annesley.

Q. Are you sure it was he?

A. I say, Sir, I can't be positive.——Lord Anglesea then said, No, by G—d, I won't; and you are a Villain, a Scoundrel, and a Thief; and a great deal more of the like decent Sort of Language he gave me.

Court. Q. Whom did my Lord apply to when he said that?

A. To me. You are a Villain, a Scoundrel, and a Thief; as near as I can recollect, those are the very Words. With that I believe I might say, in Return, That his Lordship lied, and that he durst not single himself out and tell me so. Whereupon five or six Persons, whom I don't know (but Mr. Jans was one of them) called out, My Lord, you shan't go fight such a Scoundrel; here are Abundance of People to go out with him. My Lord, I don't know whether it was precisely at that Point of Time or not, when a Gentleman came and struck me on the Head; but I think it was.

Mr. MacManus. Q. Who was that Gentleman?

A. It was Mr. Francis Annesley, of Ballysax.

Q. Do you see him in Court?

A. That is the Gentleman.

Court. Q. With what did he strike you?

A. With the Butt End of a Whip; which Stroke occasioned a Contusion; and there was a little Bit of the Skin broke, which occasioned a Bleeding.

Q. What further passed, Sir?

A. I returned the Blow, my Lord, with the Lash End of my Whip. I had a Case of Pistols before me, but would not make use of them in the Crowd. Then Lord Anglesea, finding himself so well supported, raised himself up in his Stirrups, accosted the Populace, and all that were present there, and poured out a great deal of scurrilous Language against Mr. Annesley.

D. Go on, Sir.

A. Declared, That he was not his Brother's lawful Son, but a Bastard of Juggy Landy's, and a Shoe-Black. When I perceived Lord Anglesea attended by so great a Crowd, who seemed all to side with him, I began to be apprehensive that there might be some Danger of a Design against Mr. Annesley, and thereon I called to Mr. Goostry and Mr. Kennedy, who were two of our Company, to come away. I myself turned about my Horse immediately, and went in Quest of Mr. Annesley. I had no sooner turned my Horse, but I heard Lord Anglesea (for I know his Voice very well) call out distinctly, There is one of the Villains, knock him down.

Mr. MacManus. Q. Did you see my Lord Anglesea when he said so?

A. I did not; but I know his Voice perfectly well.

Q. Are you positive you know his Voice?——A. I am positive I know his Voice, if one Voice can be distinguished from another.

Q. What were the Words?

A. There is one of the Villains, knock him down.

Q. Did you hear him name any Person's Name?

A. I heard him name Mr. Goostry, and say, that That Goostry is one of the greatest Villains, knock him down. And I apprehend that it was then that Mr. Goostry was struck, though I did not see it.——I went in Quest of Mr. Annesley, and when I found him carried him a little aside from the Crowd. We had not been there half a Minute, when one of my Servants and a Gentleman or two, Strangers to me, came up to us, and with great Emotion and Concern said, For God's Sake get away, get you gone as fast as you can, there is a Design to murder you all.

Q. Who were they that said so?

A. There was a Groom belonging to us; but I don't know the others.

Mr. Bagot. Was it the Groom or the Gentlemen that desired you to get away?

A. The Groom came first, and desired us to go off; I did not give Credit to what he said, being resolved to wait there till our Company joined us; but immediately there came up two Gentlemen, and said, For God's Sake, Gentlemen, get away as fast as you can, for there is a Design to murder you.

Court. Who was with you at this Time?

A. Mr. Annesley only.—The two Gentlemen varied in their Expression a little; for the one said, Go off, for there is a Design to murder Mr. Annesley and you; and the other said, For God's Sake go off, for you will all be murdered. Upon which I desired Mr. Annesley to put Spurs to his Horse, and we galloped away at a gentle Canter. We had not gone above fifty or sixty Yards, when we perceived People moving after us, which made us whip and spur our Horses; but Mr. Annesley was mounted on a Horse that had more Speed than mine, and he made a great deal of Way before me. There was a Gentleman passing by, one Mr. Hacket, mounted upon a good Horse, and I desired him to keep close to Mr. Annesley. After we had passed over the Sod, the Curragh Ground, and had entered into the Road, a Lane leading to Newbridge, a good Way up the Lane, there I found Mr. Annesley lying in a Ditch.

Q. Whereabouts was that?

A. A good Way up the Lane, leading from the Curragh to Newbridge, speechless and senseless, and, as I imagined, dead, my Lord. I found him with several People about him, to the Number of Nine or Ten.

Q. Do you know those Persons?

A. Why really there are two that I can now recollect; one Mr. Archbold, quite a Stranger to me at that Time, and a Gentleman, who is an Attorney in Dublin; I think his Name is Keravan, or Cochran.

D. Go on, Sir, if you please.

A. There was a Surgeon called for.

Q. Do you know who the Surgeon was?

A. That Gentleman, Mr. Hacket, who I had spoke to, and who had passed me.—I don't know whether he had Lancets himself, or borrowed Lancets, but he attempted to bleed Mr. Annesley, and he could get no Blood. In this Condition Mr. Annesley continued for about three Quarters of an Hour, to the best of my Judgment; and there being no Carriage, nor he able to get on Horseback, I rode directly to the Inn, to order the Coach which had brought us from Dublin; but before the Coach was ready, he was brought to the Door of the Inn in a Chaise. I don't know whether I ought to go any further, or to relate what passed the next Day, which had still a darker and more wicked Complexion.

Court. Go on, Sir.

Mr. Morgan. I hope your Lordship will think, that as these Indictments are Indictments for Assaults committed upon the 16th of September, any Thing that happened after that Day is not proper to be given in Evidence, and more especially as they are not laid with a Continuando, and therefore submit it to you, whether it should not be given in Direction to the Gentlemen of the other Side not to travel into the Transactions of any subsequent Day. I think every Fact before that Day relative to the Fact laid in the Indictments is proper to go to the Jury; but any distinct Transactions of the following Day, no way relative to such Fact, are not proper to go to them, and therefore ought not to be admitted as Evidence, and more especially as the Traversers can't be supposed to be prepared in any Defence thereto, not being charged with any Thing but what was previous to the 17th. I apprehend that Mr. MacKercher is just about giving an Account of what happened on the 17th, which I conceive is no way material or relative to these Indictments, and therefore hope that the Evidence only that he can give to the very Facts laid in the Indictments will be admitted, and looked upon as proper Evidence, and no other permitted by your Lordship to go before the Jury.

Court. I hope you won't unnecessarily lose Time about Matters that are obvious, and need no Debate. To be sure, any thing not relative to the Fact is improper to be given in Evidence, or to come into the Consideration of the Jury; but any thing relative to the Fact, which can help to explain it, whether before or after it happened, is extremely material for the Consideration of the Court and the Jury. This Case, or Cases of the like Nature, I have heard practised a hundred and a hundred times; for I did, for three or four Years together, constantly attend in a Place where such Cases as this were carried on, and I found it always the Practice for every thing tending to shew and explain the Fact, whether it happened before or after the Committal of it, to be allowed as proper Evidence.

Mr. Spring. My Lord, I own it is very proper for every thing to be given in Evidence relative to the Fact; but nothing can relate to, or be the Occasion of this Fact, but what happened before it was committed; and therefore it is highly improper to take in any supplemental Transaction of the following Day, no way relative to the Fact for which the Traversers stand indicted, and which can only serve to inflame the Minds of People. I think it enough for us to have prepared ourselves for any Actions that happened before the 16th, and not be called upon to answer for any Thing that occurred after Indictments were laid, and no way relative to it. This has been the constant Practice, and I think it to be as clear as any thing in the whole Course of the Proceedings of the Law.

The Counsel for the Traversers were over-ruled in their Objection.

Mr. Malone. I desire, since Mr. MacKercher is permitted to proceed, that he may be confined to the Transactions of the next Day, which are relative to the Fact only.

Court. I shall take care to confine him to such Evidence as is proper. Go on, Sir.

Mr. MacKercher. We went early to Bed, with a Design to get up in the Morning betimes, and return to Dublin; but before we could get out of our Beds in the Morning, we were alarmed by the Landlord of the House and his Servants, who acquainted us, that the Ways were beset all round the House with a great Number of People with all Sorts of Weapons; and that he apprehended it was with a wicked Design against the Life of Mr. Annesley, and the other Gentlemen; that some of them, he knew, belonged to Lord Anglesea, and others to Mr. Francis Annesley.

Court. What was that Man's Name?

A. Burchell.—We got out of our Beds, and expecting the worst, put ourselves in a Posture of Defence.

D. Go on, Sir.

A. This alarmed us a good Deal, my Lord, and we got out of Bed, and put ourselves in a Posture of Defence. The same Advices were repeated over and over again to us.

Q. By the same Persons, or by others?

A. By the same and other Persons.—Several Gentlemen that lodged in the same House that Night, who were not of our Company, were very much alarmed, got their Horses, and rode away.

Q. Do you know who they were?

A. I don't know, my Lord: Mr. Hacket and one Mr. Carrick stayed; perhaps they can give you some Account of them.—We were likewise told, before we could venture down Stairs, that the Passage was occupied by three, four, or more of Lord Anglesea's People, armed in a very extraordinary Manner.

Q. From whom had you that Information?

A. From the Landlord, from Burchell.—My Lord, as our Company was not very numerous, and consequently not able to defend ourselves long against such a Multitude, we fell upon a Stratagem, which was, to make the Landlord whisper among them, That we expected a Troop of Horse from Dublin. In a short Time after he acquainted us, that he had whispered it about, and he believed it would have the desired Effect, for some of them were frightened. I then ventured down Stairs; I no sooner came down, but I was seized upon by one Michael Lacy (attended by a Constable), who is a principal Agent of Lord Anglesea's, as I am informed. I asked the Constable at whose Instance I was arrested; Lacy answered me, it was at my Lord Anglesea's, and produced a Warrant from one Mr. Benjamin Fish, a Justice of Peace of that Part of the Country. I told Lacy, that my Lord Anglesea had no Occasion to bring all this Croud together with Arms to seize upon Gentlemen, who were always ready to submit to the King's Orders wherever they appeared, unless he had some wicked Design to execute under that Colour. However, I desired him to walk up Stairs, that I would follow him, and give Bail.

Q. What

Q. What was the Warrant for?

A. For an Aſſault. Lord Angleſea had ſworn Examinations againſt me, Mr. Gooſtry, and Mr. Kennedy, for an Aſſault the preceding Day upon the Curragh, wherein he had ſworn that he was in Fear and Danger of his Life, as I was told.

D. Go on, Sir.

A. Lacy walked up Stairs, and I ſhewed him Mr. Gooſtry and Mr. Kennedy, the other Gentlemen that were charged with the Aſſault; they likewiſe ſubmitted. We breakfaſted, and ordered the Coach to be got ready to carry us before a Juſtice of Peace, to give Bail; they ſtruggled hard to have us go back towards the Curragh to give Bail; but we told them, that, as we were going forward to Dublin, it was more reaſonable we ſhould give Bail to a Juſtice on the Way; in which we prevailed, and went into the Coach.

Q. Who went into the Coach?

A. Mr. Kennedy, and I, and Mr. Carrick, one of the Gentlemen that was to be our Bail. We would not ſo much as carry a Sword, or any Sort of Weapon, as we looked upon ourſelves to be in the Condition of Priſoners, and reſpected the Laws. Mr. Anneſley rode with Piſtols, as he was not charged with any Aſſault; Mr. Gooſtry, the Servants, and Mr. Hacket, rode along with him. We had not gone far from Newbridge, in our way towards Naas, when the Coach was ſtopped, and Mr. Gooſtry came up and alarmed us.

Q. Who ſtopped the Coach?

A. Mr. Gooſtry----and told us, that there was a Man there that was going to ſhoot Mr. Annesley, and deſired we would take him into the Coach. I forgot to acquaint your Lordſhip, that Lacy followed us likewiſe, armed with Piſtols.

Q. On Horſeback?——A. On Horſeback.

D. Go on, Sir.

A. When we were about half-way, we were met by ſeveral People from Naas, who had been informed of our Danger, and came to our Aſſiſtance; and in this Order we went to Naas, with all this Croud attending us.

Q. How many met you from Naas?

A. There were, I believe, about fourteen or fifteen People.—We ſent for the Magiſtrate of the Place, one Mr. Bonner (who is now here in this Town), told him what had happened, and deſired that one Angus Byrne, who at that Time called himſelf a Servant to Lord Angleſea, and carried a rifled-barrelled Piece, might be examined for what Purpoſe he carried it. Before the Magiſtrate would proceed to Examination, he would ſee whether the Piece was loaded or not. It was a Screw Barrel; the Barrel was unſcrewed in the Preſence of the Magiſtrate, as I was told by Mr. Hacket and Mr. Carrick, who unſcrewed it, and they extracted eight Bullets. Then Angus Byrne was called into the Room, where there were nine or ten Gentlemen preſent, and examined. He was aſked, Whoſe Gun that was? He anſwered, It is my Lord Angleſea's. What were you to do with this Gun? I was deſired to purſue Mr. Lacy's Directions. What Directions had Mr. Lacy? To that he anſwered in general, In caſe there had been a Reſcue; without explaining himſelf any further. Then he was aſked, In caſe of a Reſcue, what was he to do with this Gun, loaded as it was with eight Bullets? Lacy upon that came up, and told him, Sir, anſwer no more Queſtions, you are not obliged to anſwer. Then Lacy, pretending to be Lord Angleſea's Servant, and claiming the Gun as Lord Angleſea's, the Gun (indeed contrary to my Opinion) was delivered to him by the Advice of another Gentleman who was preſent. Mr. Bonner, not thinking himſelf ſufficiently authorized to take Bail in a Caſe of ſo high a Nature where a Peer was concerned, referred us to Mr. John Bourke, a Gentleman in that Neighbourhood; from whence, after Bail given, we proceeded to Dublin. I have narrated the principal Facts, as near as I could recollect them, my Lord, and have nothing further that is material.

Mr. Harward. Mr. Mac Kercher, If I don't miſtake it, you have mentioned that you were apprehenſive; I think, upon the Information of a Servant, and two Gentlemen that you don't know, who came up to you upon the Curragh, to tell you to get away as well as you could; that you might be killed; you ſay, you were apprehenſive that you and your Friends there would be murdered; what I deſire is this, that you will ſatisfy the Court and the Jury, what your Reaſons were for apprehending there was that Deſign?

A. Why really, Sir, I had ſeveral Intimations long before that Time, of Lord Angleſea's Deſigns, of which I could give many Inſtances, were it proper, on this Occaſion; and I ſaw him that Day ſupported by a great Number of People, who bore no agreeable Countenances to Mr. Annesley, or any of our Company; theſe I thought Grounds ſufficient for my Apprehenſions.

Q. You gave an Account of a rifled barrelled Gun the next Day; were there any other Arms when thoſe People came to apprehend you, and who had them?

A. Yes, Sir, I perceived one Man, that belonged to Lord Angleſea, with a Piſtol on each Side of his Breaſt. He was one of his Servants, as I perceived by the Livery.

Croſs Examination.

Mr. Spring. You were pleaſed to ſay, that on the 14th, the firſt Day of the Curragh Races, you were inſulted by Lord Angleſea?

A. Mr. Mac Kercher. Yes.

Q. Did not you go the firſt Day attended by a great Number of Gentlemen and Servants, all armed? The firſt Day, Sir?

A. I believe there were about three of the Gentlemen armed, and two Servants.

Q. Were they armed with Piſtols and Back-ſwords, or with Piſtols, Blunderbuſſes, and Carbines?

A. I can't recollect whether there were any Blunderbuſs, or not.

Q. Were the Servants armed?---A. They were, and always were when we travelled in England, as well as there.

Q. Is it the Cuſtom to go to Races armed?

A. I don't know that it is the Cuſtom. Any Gentleman that pleaſes may carry Arms, if he will; I have known it the Cuſtom in Scotland for Gentlemen to ride with Furniture and Piſtols; and I ſaw ſome at the Curragh that Day.

Q. Is it the Cuſtom in England or Ireland?---A. I believe not of late the general Uſage; but any body may, if they pleaſe, ride in Furniture.

Q. You ſaid juſt now, Sir, that you were inſulted the firſt Day?

A. I did ſo.

Q. Can you take upon you to ſay, that it was Lord Angleſea called out, and gave you the opprobrious Language you mentioned?---A. I can take it upon me poſitively to ſay it was he, becauſe I ſaw him and heard him.

Q. You ſaw him and heard him?---A. I did.

Q. Pray, Sir, had not you Reaſon from thence to conclude, that if you went thither, you ſhould meet with the ſame Treatment the next Day?

A. I own, I might have Reaſon from Lord Angleſea's Behaviour, and Attempts before that Time, to apprehend every Thing that's evil; and it was for that Reaſon that we always went very well armed.

Q. You went therefore apprehenſive of ill Treatment?

A. No, Sir, I did not ſay I was apprehenſive of ill Treatment there more than at any other Place, becauſe I looked upon us not only to be under the Protection of the Law, but alſo ſecurer, where all the Gentlemen of a Country were aſſembled, who would not ſuffer us to be inſulted.

Q. But I would know, had not you Reaſon to expect the like Treatment again?---A. I had all the Reaſon in the World to expect it from Lord Angleſea; but was determined to keep out of his Way, if poſſible.

Q. You'll recollect the Preparations you made the Night before, for any poſſible Event that might happen?

A. We made no extraordinary Preparations.

Q. Were there no freſh Chargings?---A. We always charge our Carbines, if we have any, and Piſtols every Morning, when we ride.

Q. Were not your Servants Blunderbuſſes charged?

A. I know not that they had any.

Q. Pray, Sir, recollect the Directions you gave for their loading their Arms.

A. By your enſnaring Queſtion, you ſeem to take for granted that I gave particular Directions; but I gave no particular Directions.

Q. Did you give any general Directions?

A. I always gave general Directions for having our Arms loaded, and in good Order, every Morning.

Q. Did any of your Company load any of thoſe Arms?

A. I don't recollect that they did.

Q. Did not you load ſome of thoſe Arms yourſelf?

A. I loaded none; I leave that to the Servants to be done every Morning.

Q. What! to load every Morning?---A. Not to load, but prime; to ſee that the Arms are tight, and in good Order.

Q. You ſay, that Friday you met my Lord Angleſea's Coachman; explain, did he drive round you, or at you?

A. He made ſeveral Puſhes at us directly, ſo that if we had not avoided him, he muſt have run over us, and have done us Miſchief. He made ſeveral Puſhes at our Company within the Rails, which obliged us, in order to avoid him, to go without the Rails; and he followed us without the Rails, and made ſeveral Puſhes at us there alſo.

Q. How far was Lord Angleſea from this Place?

A. I don't know where he was at that Time. I went in queſt of him afterwards, and was a good while before I could find him, and in the end found him at the Winning-Poſt.

Q. How far was that from the Place where you were inſulted by the Coachman?——A. He purſued us all over the Place.

Q. What Place?

A. The Place where the Company reſort, by the Winning-Poſt; the other Side of the Winning-Poſt from Burchell's.

Q. But he could not drive at you, without driving at others at the ſame Time?----A. He drove at our Company directly, and followed us when we avoided him.

Q. You looked upon this Treatment as an Affront, and without Queſtion reſented it in ſuch a Manner as Men of Honour would, not on the Servant, but on the Maſter, and went to look for Lord Angleſea, to get Satisfaction in the way uſual among Men of Honour?

A. Quite the contrary, Sir; I went with a Reſolution to keep the Peace.

Q. Had you no Directions from Mr. Annesley to go to call Lord Angleſea to Account?---A. I had no Directions.

Q. Then you did it of your own Head, I ſuppoſe?---A. I did.

Q. I ſay, you went to find out Lord Angleſea either by Directions, or of your own Head?---A. If you will let me know your Meaning, if you will ſpeak ſo as to be underſtood, I ſhall give you an adequate Anſwer.

Q. Did you go up to Lord Angleſea of yourſelf?

A. I went of myſelf, Sir.

Q. Did not you know that my Lord Angleſea had not only at that Time inſiſted that Mr. Anneſley was the Baſtard Son of Juggy Landy, but knew your Errand into this Kingdom?

A. What if I did? what is that to the preſent Purpoſe?

Q. Anſwer the Queſtion, Sir; Did not you believe that?

A. I heard he had; I believed it.

Q. Could you, Sir, then expect from Lord Angleſea in Reaſon, any kind of Apology, or Satisfaction, or Correction of his Servant, for ſaying of Mr. Annesley what Lord Angleſea himſelf always inſiſted he was?

A. I did, and ought to have expected it; and much more in the Caſe of Mr. Annesley than of any other, if my Lord Angleſea had acted properly.

Q. You were his Champion, I ſuppoſe, and muſt have Satisfaction for the Affront done him?

A. I did not turn Champion for him; a Man turns Champion for another that goes to fight his Battles; I did not go for that Purpoſe, but in order to avoid a Breach of the Peace.

Q. Could you expect that Lord Angleſea could ſubmit to turning off his Servant for ſaying That, that he himſelf had ſaid to all the World?

A. I have repeated it two or three Times, that I did, and had Reaſon to expect it, if Lord Angleſea had acted as a reaſonable Man, and a Man of Honour.

Q. But you knew Lord Angleſea ſaid, he was the Son of a Kitchen-Maid, could you then expect from him, conſiſtently with his conſtant and repeated Declarations, that Lord Angleſea ſhould ſtrip his Coachman for an Affront offered to ſuch a Perſon?

A. What Lord Angleſea ſaid proves nothing, nor is it any Way pertinent to the preſent Purpoſe. I thought it not only conſiſtent, but what Lord Angleſea of all Men in the World ſhould have done. Nor did what Lord Angleſea thought or ſaid, give his Servant or himſelf a Right to inſult Mr. Annesley in ſo publick a Manner.

Q. Did you imagine it reaſonable for any Perſon to ſtrip his Coachman at ſuch a Time and Place, and turn him out of his Box?

A. I

A. I looked upon it to be as gentle a Chastisement as the Nature of the Case admitted of.

Q. Must my Lord Anglesea have driven his Coach home himself?

A. I saw Lord Anglesea on Horseback.

Q. Was not your Intention, in case he refused, to tell him he must fight Mr. Annesley or you?

A. No really; I had no such Intention.

Q. Was it not to provoke him to a Quarrel?

A. I do say it was not.

Q. Yet you expected, when you went to make a Demand of this Kind, that he would have complied with this Request of your's?

A. If I had been of that Disposition, I should have done it the first Day.

Q. You mentioned the Words Public Satisfaction; had you no other View than to receive it by his stripping his Servant?

A. Sir, I have told you three or four Times I had not.

Q. Did not you strike my Lord Anglesea that Day?—A. I did not.

Q. Did not you break his Head, Sir?

A. I did not, Sir; I heard Lord Anglesea swore I did.

Q. Did you see any body else strike him?

A. I did not; nor do I believe he was struck that Day.

Q. Did not you come up in a very violent Manner, and force your Way through a Croud to come at him?

A. I believe I might, I believe I did press through the Croud.

Q. Did not you apprehend that Lord Anglesea knew you were the Friend of Mr. Annesley?——A. I am persuaded he did.

Q. Did you not, upon some Conversation between Lord Anglesea and you, raise your Hand?

A. Why really I do not know whether I did or not; for it is pretty common and habitual with me when I speak to raise my Hand in this Manner.

Q. And you do not know whether it was raised or not?

A. I believe there is no Man that is obliged to stand like a Statue when he speaks.

Q. Did not you say that James Annesley was Earl of Anglesea, and you an Impostor?——A. I did not name the Earl of Anglesea that day.

Q. You did not tell him that he was an Impostor?——A. I did not.

Q. Did you turn your Whip in your Hand?

A. I do not know how I held my Whip.

Q. I ask you, Sir, whether during that Conversation with Lord Anglesea, whether with or without Provocation, you did not tell him that he was an Impostor?

A. I now recollect; I remember very well, when he called Mr. Annesley a Shoe-black, a Bastard, and a Thief; I told him, he lied, he was no Bastard, he was the lawful Son of Lord Altham, that before two Months went about, it would appear to the World to be so; and in that I have the Satisfaction to think I have spoke prophetically.

Mr. Spring. You are somewhat too early, you must wait further for the Completion of your Prophecy.

A. And you, Sir, are too hasty in forming Conclusions.

Q. Pray, Sir, you remember the next Day to have seen Michael Lacy?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Did not you thank that Lacy for his Civility to you?

A. Why really I believe I did; I believe I might thank him for executing the Warrant peaceably, for I was persuaded, from the Apparatus I saw there, his Orders were otherwise; but even in that I cannot help saying that I was obliged to temporize so far.

Q. Did not you thank him at Naas?

A. No, not at all, it was at Burchell's, for putting the Warrant in execution as he did peaceably, for we expected worse Usage.

Q. Do you recollect that you desired my Lord to turn aside with you?

A. I believe it was the first Word I said to him.

Q. Did not you say after, that he dared not?

A. After he had called me a Scoundrel, a Thief, and Villain, I told him, he lied, and he durst not for the Soul of him single himself out and tell me so.

Q. Was not that before you was struck, Sir?

A. I believe it was before. I cannot well remember, but I think it was.

Q. In what Manner was Lord Anglesea armed? What Arms had he?

A. I saw none about him.

Q. Did not you see his Pistols?——A. I saw none.

Q. How was Mr. Francis Annesley armed?

A. I did not observe him so particularly; I know he was armed with a Whip, which I felt the Weight of.

Q. Did you see any of Lord Anglesea's Company armed?

A. I saw some People armed that were of his Side, that were about him, and who seemed to take Part with him.

Q. Are you sure they were of his Company?

A. I concluded they were, as most of them seemed to side with him.

Q. You mentioned something you apprehended from their Countenances that you withdrew yourself from thence, from Mischief; describe those terrible Faces?

A. By their Countenances, I apprehended some Mischief might happen; but I am not so good a Painter as to humour you in drawing the Attitudes they were in.

Q. Who were the Persons who pursued Mr. Annesley and you?

A. I can't tell you particularly who they were, being a Stranger; I know there were a great many.

Q. Did you know none of them?

A. There were two Gentlemen I knew, whose Names I am sorry you force me to mention, for I did not intend it, Sir Kildare Borrowes and Mr. Warren that pursued Mr. Annesley.

Q. Don't you believe that they pursued out of Curiosity?

A. I don't know their Intent; but I know I was treated rudely by one of them.

Q. Well! but you can't point out any of Lord Anglesea's Retinue or Servants that pursued you at this Time?

A. I can't, except Mr. Jans; he was one of the Company; I was a Stranger, and did not know the rest.

Q. Was he one of the Pursuers?

A. I don't know; I did not observe him; he might be there for aught I know.

Q. Did you observe Mr. Lacy there?

A. I did not observe him, yet he might be there for what I know.

Q. But you concluded they were his People, because they pursued you?

A. I concluded so, and do so still.

Q. Mr. Archbold too, I suppose, was one of the Pursuers?

A. I don't know whether he was, or not. I found him where Mr. Annesley lay, and might, for aught I know, have come the contrary Way, from Newbridge.

Q. When you came up to where Mr. Annesley was, you found some People attending him, did any body strike him?

A. I did not see any strike him, nor would I tamely have seen it.

Q. Did you see any Servant of Lord Anglesea's in Livery there?

A. I did not see any of his Livery there, but I have been told since they were there.

Q. You know Angus Byrne?—A. I do.

Q. How long have you been acquainted with him?

A. I have been acquainted with him ever since that Affair of the Curragh happened.

Q. Did not you invite him into your Service?——A. I did not.

Q. And he is not your Servant?——A. He is not.

Q. Was not he in England with you?

A. He was in England, but not a Servant.

Q. How did he live there?

A. He lived upon my Bounty there, but not a Servant.

Q. Did not you invite him into England?

A. I never invited him there, but received him when he came.

Q. Did not you bring him over again?——A. I did.

Q. Did not you give him some Advice about submitting to the Indictments?——A. I did not.

Q. Did he never complain to you that Lord Anglesea had used him ill?

A. He never did.

Q. Did not he tell you that Lord Anglesea had sent him to Gaol?

A. He did not; he only told me that Lord Anglesea owed him his Wages.

Q. Had you ever Angus Byrne at your House on College-Green?

A. Yes, Sir, since we came last into this Kingdom.

Q. He was there?——A. He was.

Q. Did you never threaten to send him to Gaol, if he did not do as he was directed?

A. I gave him no Directions; but did at first, immediately after the Assault, and before he made his Declaration, threaten to send him to Gaol.

Q. What do you mean by his Declaration?

A. A Declaration that he made in Dublin, when he first turned Evidence for the Crown.

Q. Did you take any Declaration in Writing from him?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you know whether Mr. Livingstone did or not?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did he take down in Writing, in your Presence, any Thing this Man had to swear?—A. I do not know that he did.

Q. Do not you believe he did?

A. I cannot frame any Belief about it.

Q. Is Mr. Livingstone an Agent of Mr. Annesley's?

A. He is a Friend of his, but no Agent.

Q. Is he not an Assistant in his Affairs?

A. He has a Share of the Trouble of his Affairs.

Q. Did not he take in Writing what that Man had to say? Recollect.

A. I cannot recollect he did.

Q. Were these People, that you call Servants of Lord Anglesea, that surrounded the House, in the Livery or not?

A. I understood Lacy to be his Servant and chief Agent, but I saw none in his Livery, save one.

Q. Did you see any in his Livery on the Curragh?

A. I saw one in a Livery, that I took to be his Livery.

Q. Did Burchell tell you that any of Mr. Francis Annesley's Servants were at the Inn in Arms?

A. I do not recollect whether they were Servants or not, he said his People were in and about it.

Court. Is it your Belief or Opinion, that if you had not made the Application to Lord Anglesea, whether this Pursuit, and every Thing that happened after, would have happened?

A. I could then frame no Judgment about it, my Lord; I have since, indeed, in my own Mind, from what I have seen, been thoroughly persuaded that something of that Nature would have happened; and that the Provocations given us, were intended on set Purpose to draw us in.

Q. You are asked to your present Opinion?

A. I am of Opinion now that it would have happened some Way or other, I was not then.

Mr. Spring concludes from thence that Mr. MacKercher solicited it.

Court. The Jury desire to know whether your Pistols, when you were upon the Curragh, were charged and primed, or not?

A. I believe they were.

Q. Whether when you and my Lord were discoursing together you put your Hand to your Pistols?

A. I do not remember I did, and I am positive I did not.

2. Hugh Kennedy, Esquire.

Mr. Callaghan. Where were you upon the 16th of September last?

Mr. Kennedy. Upon the Curragh of Kildare.

Q. Inform the Court and the Jury of the Transactions of that Day; tell what happened to Mr. Annesley, Mr. MacKercher, and yourself.

A. When we came first upon the Curragh, we were told there was a rising Ground upon the other Side of the Field, from which we might better see the Diversion; accordingly we made towards it; in our Way we were insulted by the Coachman of my Lord Anglesea, who drove at us, pointing to Mr. Annesley, and calling him Shoe-black. Mr. MacKercher perceived him sooner than I did; he asked me if I had seen him? I told him I had. Immediately after that we perceived him making up to us with his Coach, which he drove again at us, and repeated it several Times. Perceiving he continued still to drive at us, Mr. MacKercher then said, he would see where Lord Anglesea was, to complain of the Abuse of his Coachman: Accordingly, dingly, we went in ſearch of him, and were for ſome time before we could find him. We found him at the Winning-Poſt, where Mr. MacKercher went up, and in the mildeſt Manner poſſible told him, he wanted to ſpeak to his Lordſhip. All the Words they had together I cannot diſtinctly repeat; but thus much I heard, that when Mr. MacKercher told him he wanted to ſpeak to him, he ſaid, It was not a proper Place. Mr. MacKercher told him, Every Place was proper for what he had to ſay to his Lordſhip, which was, to complain of the Inſolence of his Coachman, and to deſire he would give Satisfaction for the Affront he had given a Gentleman on the Field. Lord Angleſea aſked, What Gentleman was affronted? Mr. MacKercher pointed to Mr. Anneſley, and told him that Gentleman. Upon which Words aroſe between them, which I cannot diſtinctly repeat at this time; but in conſequence of thoſe Words, ſoon after I ſaw Mr. Francis Anneſley of Ballyſax ſtrike Mr. MacKercher over the Head, ſo that the Blood came. Lord Angleſea, quickly after that happened, raiſed himſelf in his Stirrups, and made uſe of the Language already repeated, That Mr. Anneſley was not his Brother's lawful Son, but the Baſtard of Juggy Landy, a Shoe-Black, and to that Effect. Soon after which Mr. MacKercher deſired Mr. Gooſtry and me to retire; as ſoon as we heard him deſire that, we turned our Horſes to follow him. Immediately on the Turn of my Horſe, Lord Angleſea ſtruck me a violent Blow on the Head, ſo as to ſtun me.

Court. With what?---A. With the Handle of his Whip, my Lord.

Q. During what Part of the Tranſaction was this?

A. Immediately after the Language that paſſed between him and Mr. MacKercher.

Q. Did he ſay any thing before he ſtruck you?

A. I believe he might ſay, There is one of the Villains.

Q. Did he name any Man?

A. I believe Mr. Gooſtry, There is that Villain Gooſtry, or to that Effect.

Q. Was it at the ſame time that he ſtruck you that he ſaid thoſe Words?

A. A very ſhort time before I was ſtruck he ſaid thoſe Words.

D. Deſcribe the Stroke you got.

A. The Stroke I got was on the back Part of my Head with the Butt End of his Whip.

Q. Did it do you any Hurt?

A. It ſtunned me to that Degree that I almoſt fell upon my Horſe's Neck.

Q. What was the Conſequence of that Stroke?

A. There was a very great Effuſion of Blood followed.

Q. What enſued upon that?

A. Immediately after that Blow, it was followed by a Number more from other People which knocked me down on my Horſe, ſo that I ſhould have fallen to the Ground, if I had not been ſupported by the People on each Side of me.

Q. Who gave thoſe Blows?

A. I cannot tell, my Lord, I was knocked down in a good Meaſure, by the Blow Lord Angleſea gave me.

Mr. Callaghan. Tell what you remember happened after you recovered yourſelf.

A. As ſoon as I recovered and ſat ſtrait on my Horſe again, Lord Angleſea came from the Company he was with, and ſtruck me ſeven or eight Times running over the Head.

Court. With what?—A. With his Whip.

Q. Which End of his Whip?

A. It was the Laſh End the laſt Time he ſtruck, but he repeated his Blows ſo long that the People cried out Shame, ſaying, 'Tis a Shame to abuſe a Gentleman ſo, or to that Effect; and ſoon after that he had done, and I rode off the Sod.

Mr. Callaghan. Was there any Converſation between my Lord Angleſea and you before you got that Stroke from him?

A. I never ſpoke to Lord Angleſea in my Life, Sir.

Q. Had he ſpoke to you before he gave you the Blow?

A. I do not know that he did.

Q. Did you give him any Provocation to ſtrike?

A. I gave him no Provocation at all.

Q. I think you ſaid you ſaw Mr. Francis Anneſley ſtrike Somebody; who was it he ſtruck?—A. I did, I ſaw him ſtrike Mr. MacKercher.

Q. With what, Sir?—A. With the Butt End of his Whip.

Q. Was that Stroke a moderate Stroke, or given with ſuch Violence as carried an Intent of doing Miſchief?---A. His Forehead immediately ſwelled pretty big, and a little Blood came from it.

Q. Before Mr. Anneſley gave the Stroke, did you ſee Mr. MacKercher give him any Provocation to ſtrike him?---A. I ſaw no Provocation that Mr. MacKercher gave, for I believe he did not ſpeak to him at all.

Q. Do you believe that Mr. MacKercher could have given him Provocation without your ſeeing it?---A. I think not, for I was pretty near him, and muſt have obſerved it, if any had been given.

Q. Tell what paſſed after the People cried Shame, and you got off the Sod.

A. My Finger was almoſt broke by one of the Blows, and that occaſioned my Whip to fall from my Hand.

Court. Explain yourſelf, Sir.

A. Immediately after my Lord Angleſea ſtruck me, I was ſtruck by a Number of other People whom I did not know, and among them I got this Wound on my Finger, which occaſioned me to loſe my Whip.

Mr. Callaghan. What became of you after this?

A. As ſoon as I could, I rode down the Hill in queſt of Mr. Anneſley and Mr. MacKercher; I found Mr. MacKercher juſt by where Mr. Anneſley lay; I did not ſtay to ſpeak to him, but went on to Mr. Anneſley, whom I found fallen in the Ditch, lying ſenſeleſs, ſpeechleſs, and pale.

Court. What Number of People were about him in the Ditch?

A. Ten or a Dozen.

Q. Did they appear to be Friends, or any of the People you apprehended he was in Danger from?

A. I cannot ſay who they were, or what their Intention might be, I was a Stranger, and could not diſtinguiſh.

Q. Was it at that Time in the Power of any body to do him Miſchief?

A. He had been ſo long in the Ditch when I came up, that they had got a Surgeon to bleed him.

Q. But do you think it was in the Power of thoſe People to hurt him?

A. I believe they might if they had a mind, had not Mr. MacKercher, and others of Mr. Anneſley's Friends come up.

Mr. MacManus to Mr. Kennedy.

Mr. Kennedy. Where did you leave Mr. Gooſtry?---A. I left him, I believe, upon the Curragh; I cannot ſay, I did not ſee him after I was ſtruck.

Q. Was he aſſaulted by any one?

A. He was wounded at the inſtant of Time I was.

Q. Did you ſee any Body ſtrike him?---A. I cannot ſay diſtinctly that I did, but he was wounded about the ſame Time.

Q. After you took Mr. Anneſley to Newbridge that Night, did you obſerve any thing on the Saturday after?

A. Yes, we were alarmed very early that Morning before we were up; the Landlord and others coming to tell us that the Houſe was beſet by a Number of People, who, they ſaid, they believed had evil Intentions; upon which we got up, and did the beſt we could to make our Defence in caſe they attacked us. This continued for ſome Time, till at laſt Mr. MacKercher went down Stairs, to ſee if what we had been told was true; when he found it according to the Information he had received from the People of the Houſe, that there was a Number of People armed about the Houſe. Mr. MacKercher returned very ſuddenly, and with him one Lacy and a Conſtable, and told us, that there was an Action brought againſt him at the Suit of Lord Angleſea——

Mr. Callaghan. What do you mean by an Action?

A. A Warrant granted by a Juſtice of Peace.---The Perſon then told me he had the ſame againſt me and Mr. Gooſtry. What for, Sir? we aſked him: He told us, on my Lord Angleſea's Affidavit that he was aſſaulted by us, and put in Fear of his Life.

Q. When Mr. MacKercher, and Lacy, and the Conſtable came up with the Warrant, what happened then?

A. Lacy told me and Mr. Gooſtry that he had a Warrant againſt us.

Q. And what did you do upon that?

A. We ſubmitted directly. Soon after we had breakfaſted, we diſarmed ourſelves, and went into the Coach, and were carried to Naas.

Q. Who went into the Coach?

A. Mr. MacKercher, Mr. Carrick, and myſelf.

Q. Did Mr. Anneſley go into the Coach on the Road?---A. He did.

Q. How came that?---A. Mr. Gooſtry called out to us to take him in, for it was not ſafe for him to be there.

Q. Did Mr. Gooſtry give any Reaſon for his ſaying that?

A. He gave it as a Reaſon for taking him into the Coach, that it was not ſafe for him to ride, for that one of thoſe Fellows was going to ſhoot him.

Q. When you came to Naas, what happened then?

A. We ſent for the Sovereign of Naas to give in Bail, and there this Mr. Lacy, who came along with us, followed us into the Room, when this Perſon that appeared here, Byrne, was queſtioned in regard to his Gun.

Q. What kind of a Gun was it?

A. The Gun was a ſcrew-barrell'd Gun, ſuch as Game-keepers uſe.

Q. Who queſtioned him about it?

A. He was queſtioned by Mr. MacKercher what he was to do with it. He anſwered, to follow Lacy's Directions; and ſoon after Lacy ſtopp'd him, and bid him anſwer no more Queſtions.

Q. Was that Gun charged?

A. The Gun was unſcrewed before us in the Room, and from it taken eight Bullets.

Q. In your Preſence?---A. I was preſent.

Q. Did any body claim that Gun back again?---A. Yes, Sir.

Q. How many Bullets were there?

A. There were eight, Sir, ſaid by all the Gentlemen in the Room. I did not count them, but I believe there was that Number.

Q. By whom was the Gun claimed?---A. By Lacy, as Lord Angleſea's.

Q. Had Mr. Lacy any Arms?

A. I cannot ſay as to that; I do not remember; I think he had.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Morgan. Pray, Sir, was you at the Curragh the 14th of September?

Mr. Kennedy. I was, Sir.

Q. Did you ſee Lord Angleſea there?---A. I did.

Q. Was he in a Coach, or on Horſeback?

A. I think he was in a Tent.

Q. On the 14th?---A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Recollect yourſelf whether you ſaw him in a Coach at any Time that Day?---A. I did not, to the beſt of my Memory.

Q. Do you know his Coach?---A. I can't ſay I did then.

Q. Why then, how can you take upon you to ſay that the Coach-and-Six which haunted you was his?

A. I had particular Reaſon to know it then, from hearing from the Coach-box the Man's Inſults to Mr. Anneſley.

Q. On the 16th you knew it, but not on the 14th?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. Did you ſee Lord Angleſea more than once on the 14th?

A. But once.

Q. Recollect whether you ſaw his Coach driving more than once on the 14th?---A. I did not ſee it more than once.

Q. Now I aſk you whether any Violence, or Attempt of Violence was made on the 14th?---A. There was none that I was privy to.

Q. How long, how many Hours was you on the Curragh?

A. I can't be preciſe as to the Time.

Q. Was you one Hour?---A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was you two?---A. Yes, I believe we were there or thereabouts.

Q. Where did you lie the Night before the 14th, on Tueſday Night?

A. In Dublin, Sir.

Q. What Hour did you come to the Curragh on the 14th?

A. I can't call to mind exactly.

Q. Where do you ſay you were the Night before the 14th?

A. We came from Dublin to the New-Inn the 14th.

Q. Did you lie at the New-Inn the Night before you went to the Curragh?

A. We did not.

Q. Did you inquire, or any of your Friends inquire, whether my Lord Angleſea was to be at the Curragh or not?

A. I do not remember that the Question was put by any of us.

Q. Did you converse with any Body in relation to his being at the Curragh?——A. I remember none.

Q. Had you at any Time after any Conversation about him?

A. Yes, undoubtedly, having so many Remembrances of him with our Blows and broken Heads.

Q. Had you any particular Conversation of him between the 14th and 16th?---A. We had not that I remember.

Mr. Spring. Q. Now, Sir, I would ask you, whether any Body prevented Mr. Mac Kercher's going up to my Lord Anglesea, when he came to the Croud where my Lord stood?

A. I can't say I saw any body prevent him.

Q. Do you know one Chatman?---A. No really, I don't.

Q. How near was you to Mr. Mac Kercher when he had the Conversation with my Lord Anglesea?---A. Not so far as I am now from you.

Q. I ask you, Sir, whether the Words that pass'd between them were not loud Words?

A. They were not loud of Mr. Mac Kercher's Side, because his Words were intended for nothing but to be peaceable and quiet; the Words became louder afterwards; Lord Anglesea was particularly loud enough.

Q. I ask whether Mr. Mac Kercher did not challenge my Lord to fight?

A. Mr. Mac Kercher's Words I can't distinctly repeat.

Q. Well, but I ask whether he did not challenge my Lord to fight?

A. After many Insults that Mr. Mac Kercher had met with, I believe he might say, That he dared not single himself out, and tell him so.

Q. But did he not challenge him in direct Words?

A. I do not apprehend he made use of any Words that imported a Challenge to Lord Anglesea.

Q. You say you heard part of the Words that passed, did you hear Mr. Mac Kercher give my Lord the Lye before he was struck?

A. I really cannot say whether it was before or after; I rather believe it was before he was struck. I cannot say positively, but it was after my Lord had given him abusive Language.

Q. You mentioned your going to Newbridge after you had received your Abuse?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. Now I ask you, Whether you saw any, and what Number of People riding to Newbridge, as if in Pursuit of any Body?

A. When I came to the Place where Mr. Annesley was lying, I saw Forty or Fifty People, Horse-men and Foot, who I suppose had pursued.

Q. Did Mr. Mac Kercher and you ride to the Place where Mr. Annesley lay, together?——A. We did not.

Q. How far distant might you be?

A. I did not see Mr. Mac Kercher till I came up to where Mr. Annesley was, and the Distance between Mr. Mac Kercher and Mr. Annesley was about the Length of this Court, or better.

Q. Did you see any and what Number of People pass by you, that seem'd to be in pursuit of any Body?

A. I cannot say; a good many People rode past, but I could not tell with what Intent.

Q. What did you apprehend they rode for?---A. I really do not know.

Q. Now do you imagine they, or any of them, were riding in pursuit of Mr. Annesley?

A. I do not know. I rather believe they were the Pursuers, otherwise what should make them go after him?

Q. You said at first that you saw some Forty or Fifty People, on Horseback and Foot, round the Place where Mr. Annesley was; who do you imagine they were, Friends or Enemies?

A. For aught I know they might be the Pursuers, I cannot say.

Q. Did you see any one of them offer Violence?---A. I did not then.

Q. Did you see any Body lay hold of him, other than in a friendly Manner to assist him?---A. I cannot say I did.

Q. Did you inquire of Mr. Annesley if any Body had hurt him?

A. Mr. Annesley was not capable of speaking.

Q. But when he came to himself, did you ask him how he came by any Hurt?---A. I did.

Q. What did he then tell you was the Occasion of that Hurt?---A. The principal Occasion was the Fall of his Horse into the Ditch upon him.

Q. And what occasioned his Horse to fall into the Ditch?

A. The Occasion of his Horse's falling was that of his being close pursued; and when he perceived that, he pulled the Horse back, in order to defend himself, and he fell into the Ditch upon him.

Q. Before Mr. Mac Kercher and you went up towards my Lord Anglesea, to complain of the Coachman, were you cautioned not to do it, for fear of entangling yourselves in a Quarrel?

A. I cannot say that I had any particular Caution from any Body.

Q. Did you hear any such Caution given to Mr. Mac Kercher?

A. When I came down the Hill, I was advised by some People to go off the Ground, or else I should be murdered.

Q. I ask again, did you or Mr. Mac Kercher receive any Caution not to go to Lord Anglesea?---A. No, I did not; nor do I know that he did.

Q. Do you know one Abraham Robinson?---A. I do.

Q. Recollect whether he caution'd you or Mr. Mac Kercher not to go?

A. He gave me none.

Q. Did he Mr. Mac Kercher?

A. I know not, I did not hear him say any thing to him.

Q. Now then I ask you, whether at any Time during this Affray you struck any Body, and who?---A. I know not, indeed, Sir.

Q. But did you strike any Body?

A. The Blow I received made me uncapable of striking any Body?

Q. Did you strike any, and what Person before you received that Stroke?

A. I cannot say, in the Hurry particularly, whether I did or no: I know this, I never altered the Position of my Whip: If I happened to hit any Body, it was with the Lash of my Whip.

Q. How can you be particular concerning what Mr. Mac Kercher did, and cannot recollect what you did yourself?

A. That was some Time before the Confusion happened, so that I could better judge then than afterwards.

Q. Was not the Time that Mr. Francis Annesley struck Mr. Mac Kercher a Time of Hurry and Confusion?

A. There was no Hurry and Confusion till that Blow, which occasioned it all.

Q. Did you, or did you not, strike any Body, before you were struck yourself?

A. I cannot really say; but after my Friend was struck, perhaps I might.

Q. Do you not believe you struck, before you were struck?

A. Yes, I believe I might, when I saw Mr. Mac Kercher struck.

Q. Who was it you did strike?---A. Why, Sir, I cannot tell.

Q. Did not you strike Lord Anglesea?---A. I did not.

Q. Can you be certain you did not?

A. I am positive I could not, for he was rather behind me than otherwise.

Q. You say, you believe after your Friend was struck you did strike; can you recollect who you struck?

A. Why really I cannot positively say, I struck one of those who struck Mr. Mac Kercher.

Q. And yet you are positive you did not strike Lord Anglesea?

A. I can be positive I did not strike Lord Anglesea before he struck me.

Q. Endeavour to recollect who it was you struck?

A. I cannot recollect who the Person was I did strike, for in a Minute's Time we were all in Confusion. I am sure it was not Lord Anglesea I struck, I knew him.

Q. Might you not have struck Lord Anglesea then, as well as another?

A. It was impossible, for he was behind, and his Blow prevented me from striking any Body.

Q. Did not you strike Mr. Francis Annesley?

A. I cannot tell; more probably him than another, as he struck Mr. Mac Kercher.

Q. You know Mr. Goostry?---A. I do, Sir.

Q. Did you see him strike any Body?---A. I believe I did.

Q. Who?

A. I believe I saw him strike Mr. Francis Annesley, after he had struck Mr. Mac Kercher.

Q. Are you positive it was not before?---A. No; it was not before.

Q. Had Mr. Goostry received any Blow before that?

A. He received a violent Blow, and I cannot say whether before or after.

Q. Did you see any of Lord Anglesea's Servants upon the Ground that Day?---A. I think I did.

Q. Do you know his Livery?

A. I cannot be positive as to that, I know what is deemed his Livery.

Q. How were your Servants armed that Day?

A. As they are when we travel.

Q. How is that?---A. One or two of them had Pistols before them.

Q. Do you believe they all had?

A. I really cannot say positively whether they all had or not.

Q. You can say whether you believe they had or not?

A. I believe they had not all.

Q. Had any of them a Blunderbuss?---A. Not that I know of.

Q. A Musquet or a Gun?---A. No.

Q. Had not every one of them Back-Swords?

A. I cannot call to mind; I believe not.

Q. Do you travel with Back-Swords?---A. No.

Q. Tell how the Servants were armed.

A. They were armed so far as to have Pistols before them, but I believe they had no Blunderbuss nor Back-Swords; to the best of my Memory and Belief they had not.

Jury by the Court. Did you see Mr. James Annesley ride off the Curragh? Was he in your View?

A. He was in my View when Mr. Mac Kercher called to Mr. Goostry and me to come away, he was just by us, but he was quickly lost to me, because on my coming away I received the Blow that stunn'd me.

Q. What might be the Space of Time between his going off the Ground and his lying in the Ditch?---A. About ten Minutes.

Q. Can you tell what was the Space of Ground from the Place you saw him in the Ditch?--A. A Quarter of a Mile.

Q. What Time might a Man ride that in?

A. A Man might gallop it in five or six Minutes,

Mr. Malone to Mr. Mac Kercher.

Q. After those Words of the Coachman that you went to complain of, was you, or was you not advised not to go to Lord Anglesea?

Mr. Mac Kercher. I believe I might.

Q. By whom?

A. Who the Person was I cannot really recollect; but my particular Reasons for going, notwithstanding that Caution, was, that I saw the Insult was continued, and not to be discontinued, unless my Lord Anglesea gave Directions to his Coachman to desist.

Q. Was there any new Insult offered after you received the Caution?

A. Yes, while I was in search of Lord Anglesea.

Q. What Distance was you from Lord Anglesea when you received the Caution?

A. I do not know where Lord Anglesea was at that Time that I was in quest of him.

Q. But at what Distance did you find Lord Anglesea from the Place where you were cautioned not to go to him?

A. I cannot tell that; I had occasion to traverse the Ground several Times after I had received that Caution before I could find him.

Court to Mr. Kennedy.

Q. Did you see any Persons pursue Mr. Annesley?

Mr. Kennedy. I cannot say I did see any Persons pursue him, for soon after I received my Blow.

Q. Did you see any People riding that Way?

A. I saw a great many People galloping down the Hill, which they told me was after Mr. Annesley.

Q. Did you ride in Arms that Day?

A. I had no Arms that Day, I rode a hunting Saddle.

3. John Kirwan.

Mr. Morton. Where were you on the 16th of September last?

Mr. Kirwan. I was upon the Curragh.

Q. Whereabouts on the Curragh?

A. A

A. A good Piece this Side of the Winning-Poſt.
Q. What Winning-Poſt?---A. On the Curragh.
Q. What Part of the Curragh?——A. Upon the high Ground.
Q. Tell what you obſerved to paſs there that Day.
A. What I obſerved was my Lord Angleſea was talking to the Gentlemen about him.
Q. Do you know any of the Gentlemen?
A. I do not know their Names.
Q. What did you hear my Lord Angleſea ſay?
A. I heard him telling, That this young Gentleman was only a Baſtard got by the Kitchen-Maid. And with that two or three came up and told him that he was gone off the Sod, and with that he bade them follow him, and tear him Limb from Limb, and every one that takes his Part.
Q. Who did he ſay this to?—A. I took one of them to be his Servant.
Q. Why ſo?——A. Becauſe he wore his Livery.
Q. Are you ſure he was his Servant?
A. I could not ſwear that he was his Servant, but I took him to be ſo. But he came back and told him that he was killed. That's well enough, ſays my Lord.
Q. Go on, and tell your Story.
A. That's all that I heard, and I have no Benefit to tell any more than what I ſaw, and it is againſt my Will that I came here at all,—for I had no Mind to meddle, but I was brought to it.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Malone. Where do you live?——Mr. Kirwan. I live at Newbridge.
Q. What do you follow?——A. I follow Dealing.

Q. Tell how much?—A. Only three Acres.
Q. What Rent do you pay?—A. Three Pounds a Year.
Q. Do you owe any Rent?——A. I owe no Rent.
Q. What Day was it you were at the Curragh?
A. It was the 16th of September I was at the Curragh, as I underſtand.
Q. How come you to underſtand it to be the 16th?
A. Becauſe I took Notice of it.
Q. Can you write?----A. I cannot write.
Q. Did you make any Memorandum of it?
A. I made no Memorandum of it then.
Q. How do you know then it was the 16th?
A. Becauſe I am ſure of it. Are not you ſure that you have that Paper in your Hand?
Q. Suppoſe I am, that is nothing to the Purpoſe; upon your Oath, Sir, what Day of the Week was the 21ſt of September?
A. I do not know that.
Q. Were you at the Curragh the 14th?----A. I was.
Q. Was you on the 15th?----A. The 15th and 16th too.
Q. Did you ſee the Horſes run?----A. I did.
Q. How many were there?
A. Four, and ſometimes three; that's nothing to the Purpoſe, Sir.
Q. Yes, but it is, Sir; I aſk you how many Horſes ran that Day?
A. I do not know, I remember that there were many running.
Q. But I aſk you how many?
A. I do not know, but I believe there was three.
Q. What Colour were they?---A. Some of them were bay.
Q. Was there any white Horſe ran?----A. No.
Q. Any grey Horſe?----A. No.
Q. Did you make any Betts?
A. I made no Bett, I drank my Belly-full.
Q. Had you drank your Belly-full that Morning?
A. I did not drink much that Morning.
Q. What Time of the Day was it that you heard Lord Angleſea ſay thoſe Words?
A. I had not my Watch about me; about the Time we drive the Cows home.
Q. What Time is that? About duſkiſh?----A. Thereabouts, Sir.
Q. How long before it was duſkiſh?----A. I cannot tell.
Q. Was it two Hours?
A. Indeed, Sir, I had not my Watch about me.
Q. Have you a Watch, Sir?----A. No, Sir.
Q. What Time of the Day was it that you heard my Lord Angleſea ſay he was a Baſtard?----A. I cannot tell.
Q. But you muſt tell; Recollect.
A. About the Time of the Cows driving home.
Q. Did you ſtay upon the Sod after that?---A. I did, a good while.
Q. Was there any Race after?
A. No, no Horſes ran, not as far as I can underſtand.
Q. What did you do after that?
A. I went into a Tent to take a Glaſs of Ale after.
Q. Do you know Lord Angleſea's Livery?---A. Yes.
Q. What Colour is it?—A. He gives red.
Q. Red! Why Man, he that you ſaw in red might have been a Soldier for what you know?
A. I do not know but the Man that I ſaw was a Soldier, but he had his Livery on him.
Q. Was the Man that you took for his Servant dreſſed in red?
A. I did not take him to be his Servant then, but I took him to wear his Livery.
Q. You ſaid he wore my Lord's Livery?----A. I did.
Q. Did you at that Time underſtand that he was his Servant?
A. I took him to be his Servant.
Q. Why?---A. Becauſe he wore his Livery.
Q. What Livery?---A. Facing with red.
Q. What Colour was the Outſide?
A. Blue, Sir, and was faced with red; and this was red. [Pointing to his Veſt.]
Q. Red Inſide? What the Lining?
A. No, the Facing. [Pointing at the ſame Time to the Cuff of the Sleeve and the Veſt.]
Q. Was there any Lace upon the Livery?
A. I believe there was; I did not take ſharp Notice.
Q. Had you ever ſeen any of his Servants before?
A. I ſaw ſeveral of his Servants before.
Q. Are you ſure you know his Livery?
A. I know his Livery pretty well.
Q. Had you ſeen that Man before that Time that you took to be his Servant?
A. I do not know whether I ſaw that Man's Face before that Day.
Q. You live at Newbridge?---A. I do.
Q. Does any Gentleman there keep a Servant in blue Livery?
A. I cannot tell whether there be or not.
Q. Did you at that Time underſtand the Man to be a Servant to Lord Angleſea?
A. I took him to be his Servant, becauſe he wore his Livery.
Q. What Cloaths did my Lord wear that Day?
A. My Lord wore brown that Day, a brown Coat.
Q. What Sort of Hat had he?----A. He had a laced Hat.
Q. Had he Lace upon his brown Coat?---A. I do not remember.
Q. I aſk you if he had Lace on his Coat?
A. I do not know; I believe he had.
Q. What Sort of Lace?
A. I do not know whether Silver or Gold Lace.
Q. Was he in his Coach, or on Horſeback?
A. He was on Horſeback, riding a bay Mare.
Q. Do you know any of the Company that was about him?
A. I cannot tell any Man that was about him.
Q. Do not you live near that Place?
A. I live within a Mile or two of it.
Q. And yet you did not know any of the Gentlemen?
A. I did not know one of them.
Q. Can you name any one Man that was preſent when my Lord made that Declaration?---A. I cannot, I did not take Notice.
Q. Did my Lord ever ſpeak to you before that Time?---A. He did.
Q. Did he ever eat or drink with you?
A. I never drank or eat with him, he would not be ſo great with the like of me.
Q. Do you know Mr. Francis Annesley of Ballyſax?
A. I did hear of him.
Q. Do you know him.---A. I know him.
Q. Was you ever at his Houſe?---A. I was at his Houſe.
Q. Do you know his Servants?---A. I do not.
Q. Nor his Livery?---A. No.
Q. Do you know Mr. Steel?---A. I do.
Q. How far does he live from you?
A. He lives about three Miles from where I live.
Q. Was you ever at his Houſe?---A. I was.
Q. Do you know his Livery?---A. No.
Q. Nor Mr. Francis Annesley's Livery?---A. No.
Q. Can you name the Livery of any Man that lives near you?
A. I cannot, Sir.

4. Mr. John Archbold.

Mr. Callaghan. Where was you on the 16th of September laſt?
Mr. Archbold. At the Race of the Curragh.
Q. Did you ſee any Thing particular that happened that Day between Lord Angleſea and any other Gentlemen?---A. I did.
Q. Give an Account of it; tell your own Story?
A. I will, Sir. I was drinking, my Lord, in a Tent, on the 16th of September at the Curragh, and I heard ſome People cry out, Knock that Son of a Whore Kennedy down. With that I thought it was a Friend of mine that had been at the Curragh that Day, that was in danger; upon which I immediately got on Horſeback, and ſaw Mr. Jans and Lord Angleſea beating this Mr. Kennedy, and Kennedy had his Head down in this Manner, and they were ſleaking him, beating him, my Lord, very ſeverely: And ſeeing this, I went up to Jans, and laid my Hand upon his Arm, and ſaid, I wonder you would be guilty of beating a Man in this inhuman Manner, and whatever the Fact is you beat him for, he cries out, I have nothing to ſay to it; that ought to ſatisfy you. I myſelf did not underſtand what the Quarrel was about; but after I had ſpoke to Jans, he went to my Lord Angleſea, and he ſaid, My Lord, it is not worth your while to beat him, let him alone. With that my Lord deſiſted, and I went to Mr. Kennedy, and told him, You had better get off in the beſt Manner you can, for you'll be murdered if you ſtay here. Mr. Kennedy ſaid, he could not go for his Friends, he could not leave them. With that the Mob ſaid, Mr. Annesley is gone off the Field: And with that Lord Angleſea ſaid, Follow the Son of a Whore, and knock his Brains out. With that the People rode off after him, and we rode after the Crowd from the Place where we ſtood, towards the Turnpike-Road to Newbridge; and by the Time I came up, Mr. Annesley was fallen into the Ditch with his Horſe, and ſome Gentlemen came up, and were for ſtriking him as he lay there; and I ſaid, I believe he is dead already, and there is no need to kill him again. And with that I alighted, cherished him, and opened his Stock, and the Surgeon came to bleed him, but could get no Blood; and I got a Chair, and ſent him to Newbridge, and within an Hour or two after I went to ſee him.
Q. Did you think, when you ſaw him in the Ditch, that he was dead?
A. I did believe he was ſo hurt, that he would not recover in a good while.
Q. Did you hear any Directions given by Lord Angleſea to any Perſons?
A. I only heard him ſay what I have ſaid already.
Q. Repeat that again.
A. When the Mob cried out Mr. Annesley's gone off; my Lord Angleſea ſaid, Follow the Son of a Whore, and knock his Brains out.
Q. Did any Body purſue upon that?
A. I cannot ſay whether it was upon his ſaying it or no that they follow'd him, but there was a great many People follow'd him upon his ſaying ſo.
Q. Do you know who thoſe Gentlemen were that would have ſtruck him, if you had not prevented them?---A. I do.
Q. Who? Name them.---A. Mr. William Warren of Grangebegg.
Q. Did any body ſtrike him?
A. No, not one; I believe I prevented that pretty much.
Q. Do you believe any body would have ſtruck him, if you had not been there?

A. Upon my Word, I believe some would have struck, if I had not prevented it; for Mr. Warren was alighting in order to strike him; and I told him, Do not strike him, for he is killed already, I believe; and you are a Gentleman of Fortune and Figure in this Country, and not proper to be seen in such a Riot as this.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Green. Did you see any other People pursue Mr. Annesley besides Mr. Warren?—A. I saw several.

Q. Did you see any in Lord Anglesea's Livery?

A. I cannot tell; I did not take Notice whether any in Livery pursued him, or not.

Q. Did you stand by him for any time after you came to the Ditch?

A. I did, till I put him into the Chair.

Q. Did you see any of Lord Anglesea's Servants there?

A. I did not observe if any Servant of Lord Anglesea's was present, or not.

Q. Recollect who you found at the Ditch.

A. I found Sir Kildare Borrowes, Mr. William Warren there; and so was Dillon Ash---and a good many Acquaintance.

Q. How soon after his Fall into the Ditch did you come up?

A. He was some time down, I believe, for the Horse had got up before I came.

Q. Did you see Mr. Annesley soon after this at Newbridge?

A. I turned back at that Time when I put him in the Chair, and saw the other Heat at the Curragh, and after that went to Newbridge.

Q. Had he no Bruise, or Cut, or Stroke with a Whip, that you perceived?---A. He had not, that I perceived; nor did I look.

Q. Was he in his Senses when you put him into the Chair?

A. He was not.

Q. Did he tell you then, that he got ever a Stroke from any body?

A. He did not tell me that he got ever a Stroke. How could he tell me then, when he was senseless?

Q. There was a Heat, you say, after he fell?

A. There was, Sir; I went back to see the Heat.

Mr. Digby. Did you see any body pursue him before he fell down?

A. When I came up he was in the Ditch; there were a great many running that Way.

Q. Did you know any of them?---A. I knew Mr. William Warren, and Sir Kildare Borrowes, and spoke to Mr. Warren not to strike him.

Q. Did you see Mr. William Warren's Horse run away with him that Day?---A. I did not observe his Horse run away with him.

Mr. Malone. Do you think the People you saw there intended to do him any Harm?---A. God knows whether they intended him Harm, or no.

Q. Do you believe all the People you saw there were bent to do him Mischief?

A. I believe there were several, among such a Concourse of People, that did not: Sure, if they were all bent to murder him, he would have lost his Life indeed!

Court. You said, that you heard Lord Anglesea say, Follow the Son of a Whore, and knock out his Brains?---A. Yes, I did.

Q. Give your Opinion, whether any Pursuit happened in consequence of those Words?

A. My Opinion of the Matter is this, that I saw them pursue him as soon as Lord Anglesea spoke; but I do not know whether they followed him out of Curiosity, or by my Lord Anglesea's Means; how can I know their Intention?

Mr. Spring. Was it not usual for a Crowd to follow him wherever he appeared?

A. Why, I cannot tell; I never saw him till the Race-day before.

Q. Was he not followed to whatever Part of the Ground he went the first Day?

A. I only saw him come on the Ground from the Turnpike-Road with his Servants, and I was shewed him there, and do not think I saw him after, that Day.

Q. When you came up, did you see Mr. Warren attempt to hurt Mr. Annesley?

A. Mr. Warren was alighting when I came up, and said some Words that made me think he meant to hurt him in that Manner; and what Reason should I have to speak to him, to beg he would not hurt him, if he did not attempt it?

Q. What was it he did say, that made you imagine he intended to hurt him?

A. I think that he called out to Sir Kildare Borrowes; I was in such a Hurry of Spirits, that I cannot tell well what happened, but I think, by the Words Mr. Warren said, they were something tending to hurt Mr. Annesley; upon which I begged of him not to alight; and he did not, nor did not strike.

Q. Did you observe Lord Anglesea's Dress that Day? Had he a plain or a laced Coat on?

A. I cannot tell you; I do not remember whether it was a plain or a laced Coat, but I know he was on Horseback, and Jans went up to him, and bid him give over beating Mr. Kennedy.

Q. Did you ever see Lord Anglesea before?

A. I have seen him very often.

Q. Are you acquainted with him?---A. I know him by Eye-sight, but have not the Honour of being acquainted with his Lordship.

Q. At the Time you heard Lord Anglesea make use of the Words you mention, how far was you from him?---A. No farther than I am from you.

Q. Was there not a great Crowd about him?

A. The Crowd was dispersed pretty much upon Mr. Annesley's going off.

Q. Can you judge whether they followed Mr. Annesley thro' Curiosity, or at my Lord's Instigation?

A. I could not judge whether through Curiosity, or at his Instigation; they followed as soon as he ordered them.

Q. You said, that the Crowd went away and followed Mr. Annesley?

A. I do not say all; but a great many followed him.

Q. Do not you believe they attended him out of Curiosity?

A. I told you before, that I could not tell whether out of Curiosity, or at my Lord's Instigation.

Q. Did you know any other Person present to have heard those Words?

A. I did not stay to look about me, but rode off directly.

Q. But do you know any body that was there present?

A. I do not know any body that was by, for I did not stay to examine who was by.

Q. When you came up to him in the Ditch, would any Gentleman have done him Hurt, but for your Interposition?

A. If I had not thought Mr. Warren had a Design to do him Hurt, I should not have said the Words I said to him.

5. Mr. William Hacket.

Mr. Morton. Where were you on the 14th and 16th of September last?

Mr. Hacket. On the 14th I was in Dublin, and the 16th I was at the Curragh.

Q. Do you know what happened the 16th between Mr. Mac Kercher, Mr. Annesley, and my Lord Anglesea?

A. I was in a Tent drinking a Bottle of Wine with some Gentlemen, and a Boy came in and said, The young Earl was killed. Immediately on hearing that, I ran out, got my Horse, and followed them. There was a cry out, He's gone that Way, pursue him, pursue him! Upon which I followed as fast as I could, and came up to Mr. Mac Kercher, and said, Why don't you go on faster, Sir? He said, My Horse has no Speed. Pray, Sir, do you follow Mr. Annesley, and keep close to him till I come up, for he will be murdered. Upon that I followed as fast as possible, but he was fallen in the Ditch, and many about him before I got to him. I saw he was very much hurt, upon which I attempted to bleed him; he was quite senseless and speechless, and though I made two Punctures in his Arm, he would not bleed, and after that he was sent off to Newbridge.

Q. Was he recovered before he was sent to Newbridge?

A. He was not recovered.

Q. Did he say any Thing?---A. He did not speak a Word.

Q. When did you see him after this?—A. I saw him that Night after.

Q. In what Condition did you find him then?

A. He had recovered his Senses.

Q. Did you stay any Time with him?—A. I lay there that Night.

Q. Do you remember any thing remarkable to have happened further?

A. The next Morning I got up early, and went out to look at my Horse. And Mr. Mac Kercher was apprehensive of some Danger, and said over-Night they would go away very early. I went into the House again after I had seen my Horse, and a Boy came in and said, The House was surrounded, and that the Gentlemen in the House were way-laid. I told Mr. Mac Kercher what the Boy said, upon which he and some more went down Stairs to see if it was true, and then they were assured of it.

Q. How do you know that?

A. I went out with them to the Ditch of the Garden to see if we could perceive any People, and then we saw them plainly. We came in again, and then the Landlord told them the same Thing.

Q. What followed after this?

A. Some time after that, Mr. Mac Kercher was taken up on a Warrant by one Lacy and a Constable, and they came up Stairs together, and then he took Mr. Goostry and Mr. Kennedy. Then we got ready, and were going to Naas to give in Bail there; and when we were a good Way from Newbridge, one Angus Byrne came up in full Gallop with a Gun in his Hand; Mr. Annesley was then on one Side of me, and Mr. Goostry on the other; and he laid his Gun upon his Thigh when he came up, and he immediately turned about and gave his Whip to a Countryman, came close to me, and laid his Hand upon the Cock of the Gun. I cannot say positively I heard it snap, but he made a Noise as if he cocked the Gun.

Court. How was the Gun directed?

A. The Muzzle was directed towards Mr. Annesley, cross the Pommel of the Saddle.

Q. Did you perceive him touch the Cock of the Gun?

A. I saw him put his Thumb upon the Top of it.

Q. Can you say that he cocked it?

A. I cannot be positive; I did not see it cocked, but I heard it snap: upon which I made Mr. Annesley alight; I called out to the Coach to stop and take him in, and Mr. Goostry came up to us.

Q. What kind of a Noise was it you heard?

A. It was the Sound of a Gun cocking.

Q. Did Mr. Annesley alight and go into the Coach?—A. He did.

Q. Who advised him to go into the Coach?

A. I did, and I believe Mr. Goostry did.

Q. Why so?—A. Because I thought that the Man intended to shoot him.

Mr. Mac Manus. You said Byrne gave his Whip away?---A. I did.

Q. With what Intention did he do that?---A. I cannot say.

Q. Was it in order to be the more ready to shoot?

A. I suppose it must be so, Sir; it looks as if it was.

Q. Did you say any thing when he gave away his Whip?

A. Not a Word.

Q. In what Manner did he give it away?

A. He rode up in a Hurry, gave his Whip to the Man, and turned back immediately.

Q. What further happened after this?

A. After that we met some People on the Road, who came from Naas to meet us, and they conducted us to Naas.

Q. What became of Byrne?

A. He turned back immediately after Mr. Annesley got into the Coach.

Q. How soon after this Man had given away the Whip, and put his Hand to the Gun, did Mr. Annesley go into the Coach?---A. Immediately.

Q. Did you see him take his Whip again?---A. I did not.

Q. Did he go with you to Naas?

A. He came up to us again, and went there with us.

Q. What happened after you got to Naas?

A. When we were going to give in Bail for the Gentlemen; Byrne came in and laid down the Gun upon a Bed in the Room where the Gentleman that took the Gentlemen in Custody from the Constable was; I think he was Sovereign of Naas. I went in, Mr. Carrick and that Gentleman was there, and we were desirous to see if the Gun was loaded; and it being a Screw-barrelled Gun, immediately I unscrewed it, and took out eight Bullets.

Court. Who unloaded the Gun?

A. I unloaded it myself; unscrewed it, and took out the Shot.

Q. What kind of Shot.——A. Large Swan-Shot.

Q. How many of them?

A. There were eight; I brought them in to the Gentlemen.

Q. How big were they?---A. They were very large.

Q. How large? Deſcribe them.

A. They were thus big. [The Witneſs deſcribes them to be as big as the tip End of his little Finger.]

Mr. Baget. Were they caſt in a Mould, or were they rough and uneven?

A. They were quite round.

Mr. MacManus. Tell what happened after that.

A. Then the Sovereign took the Gun, and Byrne was examined with what Intent he carried the Gun, and whoſe it was? He ſaid, It belonged to my Lord Angleſea, and he was to follow the Directions of Mr. Lacy, in order, if there was any Reſcue intended, to prevent it. They then aſked him what he was to do with it in caſe of a Reſcue? He was going to anſwer, when Lacy ſtopped him, and ſaid, You have anſwered it already, and anſwer no more Queſtions.

Q. Had Lacy any Arms?

A. When the Men from Naas were coming up, Lacy took out a Piſtol upon the Road, and I ſaid to him, Sir, Mr. MacKercher told you before we came out, that we expected a Guard from Dublin or Naas, and you need not fear any Reſcue.

Q. What kind of a Piſtol was it?---A. It was a Pocket Piſtol.

Mr. Bagot. Did you obſerve Lord Angleſea's Coach driving at any Perſon on the Curragh?---A. Really, Sir, I did not mind, I was in a Tent drinking a Glaſs of Wine.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Morgan. You ſay when you heard this Noiſe of the Gun, that the Muzzle was preſented to Mr. Anneſley?---A. Yes, the Gun lay upon the Pommel of the Saddle with the Muzzle towards him.

Q. Which Side of you was Byrne on?---A. The Left.

Q. And where was Mr. Anneſley?---A. On the Right.

Q. You rode then between Mr. Anneſley and Byrne, when Byrne came up?

A. I did.

Q. At the Time you heard this Noiſe of the Cocking, would not the Gun have ſhot you, or your Horſe, if it had gone off?

A. I believe it poſſible it might.

Q. Deſcribe the Poſition of yourſelf.

A. I had Mr. Anneſley on the right Hand, and Byrne drove upon the left Side of me, and I got cloſe to Mr. Anneſley.

Q. In which Hand had Byrne the Gun?

A. He had the Gun in his left Hand, and the Bridle in his right.

Q. You ſaid it was pointed to Mr. Anneſley?

A. It was lying on the Pommel of the Saddle, acroſs the Horſe's Neck, with the Mouth towards him.

Q. Could he have ſhot him before he got into the Coach, if he had had a mind?

A. To be ſure he might, if he pleaſed; but it would not have been poſſible for him to have eſcaped if he had ſhot.

Q. If the Gun had gone off, muſt it have ſhot Mr. Anneſley?

A. If it had gone off inſtantly as he came up, it might have ſhot me.

Q. What happened after Byrne came up?

A. Mr. Anneſley alighted, and Mr. Gooſtry came up, we called to the Coach to ſtop, and he went in, and then Byrne turned about and went back again.

Q. Do not you believe that Byrne carried that Gun to prevent a Reſcue, and for no other Purpoſe?---A. How can I tell?

Q. What do you believe?---A. I proteſt, I cannot tell what to believe.

Q. Had the Gentlemen any Arms in the Coach?---A. They had not.

Q. How many Servants attended Mr. MacKercher and his Company at Naas?---A. I know there was the Groom, and a Footman, and I really cannot recollect any more.

Q. Were there not five?---A. I cannot recollect any more.

Q. Were the Servants armed there?---A. I know the Groom was.

Q. What did the People that came from Naas ſay when they came up?

A. I cannot tell; ſome went on one Side of the Coach, ſome on the other, ſome on Horſeback, and ſome on Foot.

Q. Did not you hear it rumoured by them, that we will attempt a Reſcue?---A. I did not.

Q. Did not you hear them cautioned not to attempt a Reſcue?

A. I did not indeed.

Q. Lacy took out a Piſtol, you ſay?

A. He had a Piſtol in his Hand when the Men came up.

Q. Did the Men ſay any thing to him about his having his Piſtol in his Hand?---A. They did not.

Q. Did Lacy give any Reaſon for having that Piſtol in his Hand?

A. He gave me no Reaſon for it.

Q. Did you hear him give a Reaſon to any Body?

A. I did not hear him give any Reaſon.

Q. Did not you hear him ſay that he took it out to prevent a Reſcue?

A. I did not.

Q. What did you ſay to him?

A. I told him Mr. MacKercher ſaid, before we came out, that we expected People from Naas, and that there will be no Reſcue.

Q. What did he ſay when you told him there would be no Reſcue?

A. He made me no Anſwer to that.

Court. Before Byrne came up with the Gun, how were you and Mr. Anneſley riding?

A. Mr. Anneſley was firſt, a little Diſtance before me; immediately upon Byrne's coming up and giving the Whip to the Man, I got up to Mr. Anneſley.

Q. Was Byrne nearer than you to Mr. Anneſley at any Time?

A. I was nearer all the Time.

Q. How near was Byrne to you?—A. He was within a Yard of me.

Q. If the Gun had gone off, could it have ſhot Mr. Annesley or you?

A. It might as well have ſhot him as me; I believe it poſſible it might have ſhot me.

Q. On what Side of Mr. Annesley was you?

A. I was on the left Hand Side of him after I joined him.

Q. In what Poſition had Byrne the Gun at his coming up?

A. It was upon his Thigh, and immediately upon his coming up he laid it acroſs the Pommel of the Saddle.

Mr. Spring. At the Time that the Gun was pointed towards you, where was Byrne's Right Hand?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Did not you ſay that his Right Hand was upon the Bridle?

A. At his coming up he had the Gun upon his Thigh in the left Hand, and the Whip and Reins in the other Hand; he gave his Whip away, and then held the Gun acroſs the Pommel with his left Hand.

Q. In what Poſition was the Gun at his coming up?

A. The Gun was pointed up into the Air at his coming up.

Q. Was the Bridle in his Right Hand then?---A. It muſt have been in the Right Hand, becauſe the Gun was in the Left.

Q. Was the Time Byrne came up any conſiderable Time before you met the People coming from Naas?---A. Yes, it was.

Q. How long?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was it ten Minutes?---A. Yes, it was, and more.

Q. A Quarter of an Hour?---A. I cannot tell exactly.

Q. What was it Byrne did after he came up?

A. He immediately gave the Whip away, and came up cloſe to us, and immediately upon Mr. Annesley's alighting and going into the Coach, he turned back.

Q. Did you ever ſee Byrne before?

A. I never ſaw him in my Life before.

Q. Did he ſay any thing to you?---A. He did not ſpeak to me.

Q. Did he know you at that Time?---A. He did not appear to know me.

Q. Did you know him?

A. I did not know his Name 'till we came to Naas.

Q. How long after Byrne turned back was it that he followed you to Naas?---A. A good while.

Q. Was it an Hour?---A. I cannot ſay.

Q. Half an Hour?---A. To the beſt of my Knowledge it was thereabouts.

Q. Was it after the People met you?

A. I believe it was, I cannot be poſitive.

Q. How long after?---A. I cannot tell exactly how long it was.

6. Mr. William Gooſtry.

Mr. MacManus. Were you at the Curragh laſt September?

Mr. Gooſtry. I was there the firſt and laſt Day of the Races.

Q. Give an Account of what happened there; tell the whole Affair.

A. The 14th of September laſt we went to the Curragh, and there was but one Horſe to run that Day, and there being no great Diverſion, we rode a little up and down the Courſe that Day, and came off again.

Q. From what Place did you go to the Curragh?

A. We went from Dublin to Newbridge-Inn, and from thence to the Curragh.

Q. Did any thing remarkable happen to you on the 14th?

A. We ſaw Lord Angleſea and other Gentlemen ſtanding at a Tent as we rode up the Curragh, and when we were coming back again from the Courſe, juſt before we came to the End of it, Lord Angleſea ſaid, See that Scoundrel MacKercher, though he now looks like a Gentleman, that Coat he has upon his Back I ſaw not a Month ago in Monmouth-Street. Mr. MacKercher ſaid, Do not let us take any Notice of it, it is not worth while; ſo we rode off the Ground, and went to Newbridge; that was all that happened that Day. The next Day was Thurſday; there was no Race that Day; and we went to Gentlemen's Houſes in the Neighbourhood, where Mr. Anneſley was known when he was young. On Friday we went to the Race again, and juſt as the firſt Heat was over, we came upon the Curragh, and went up to the Company. After ſome little Stay there, we left that, and rode on further; and as we were riding, the Coachman of Lord Angleſea came full gallop through the Middle of us; we got out of his Way as faſt as we could; he turned ſhort about again, drove at us, and we got on the other Side of the Rail to avoid him, and he came there with his Whip, and pointed to Mr. Annesley, crying, Shoe-boy, that's he, Shoe-black. Preſently he came to us again——

Court. Which Side of the Rail?

A. The Outſide of the Rail, my Lord—and drove at us there. Mr. MacKercher then ſaid, There is no bearing of this, we muſt either go out of the Courſe, or elſe ſpeak to my Lord to chaſtize him.

Q. Were there other People on the other Side of the Rail beſides you?

A. There were other People there beſides us, but very few.

D. Go on.

A. Mr. MacKercher went up and down to find my Lord Angleſea, and we went up along with him to the Winning-Poſt, and there my Lord and others were ſtanding; and Mr. Annesley was rather behind, out of the Crowd; five or ſix Horſe Lengths behind he might be: So Mr. MacKercher ſaid, with a low Voice, I want to ſpeak with your Lordſhip. My Lord ſaid, I have no Piſtols, and was ſtartled, and changed Colour a little, I thought. This was no Time and Place, he ſaid further, to talk thus, I have no Piſtols. Mr. MacKercher ſaid, For what I have to ſay to your Lordſhip, every Time and Place is proper; for all that I have to ſay, is againſt one of your Servants that uſed a Gentleman ill, or Words to that Effect. My Lord aſked, Who the Gentleman was? Mr. MacKercher ſaid, That's the Gentleman, Mr. Anneſley. My Lord heſitated a little, and ſaid, he was no Gentleman, but that he was a Baſtard. Mr. MacKercher ſaid further, We expect your Lordſhip will turn your Servant away on the Field, as it is a public Affront. My Lord then flew into a Paſſion, and called Mr. MacKercher a great many opprobrious Names; and Mr. MacKercher told him, he lied; with that Mr. MacKercher ſaid, Your Lordſhip durſt not ſingle yourſelf out, and tell me ſo. With that Mr. Francis Annesley up with his Whip and ſtruck Mr. MacKercher on his Forehead, and with that a little Blood came, and his Forehead ſwelled very much. Immediately upon that, I had a little Whip in my Hand, and I ſtruck Mr. Annesley. Upon this it was over, and Mr. MacKercher ſaid, Come, we will go away. There were ſome other Words paſſed afterwards between Lord Angleſea and Mr. MacKercher, and Mr. MacKercher ſaid, turning to go away, Come along, Gooſtry and Kennedy, it is not worth while to talk to a Man who dare affront a Gentleman, and refuſeth him Satisfaction. I could not get away very readily, being in a Crowd of People; and I believe a Minute or two paſſed before any thing further happened at all. When I was turning my Horſe to ride off, There's Goostry, says my Lord, another of the Rogues, as great a Rogue as any in Ireland, knock him down. Upon which Mr. Francis Annesley struck me again, and a great many more struck me. I was stunned with the first Blow, and bled so prodigiously, that I was all over Blood. I got a Blow here [on his Wrist] that swelled as big as an Egg; and I had fallen off my Horse, if I had not been supported by a Crowd on each Side, who were so near me that I could not fall.

Q. What Distance of Time was there between the first Blow and the second, given by Mr. Francis Annesley?

A. It was two Minutes after the first Stroke, that Mr. Annesley struck again.

Q. Did he strike you of himself, or by any Directions from any Body?

A. He did not strike me till Lord Anglesea ordered him.

Q. Did you leave the Curragh immediately upon that?

A. I did not; I thought the Quarrel had been over, and had a Mind to stay to see the Sport. There were some English Horses to run, and I clapped my Handkerchief to my Wound, that I might stay and see the Diversion. I rode forward on the Ground, and immediately I heard the Pretender, as they called Mr. Annesley, was killed. Thinks I, I'll go down to the Starting Post to see what is the Matter, and there I heard that Mr. Annesley was in the Lane leading to Newbridge; I rode after him, and when I came about half Way down the Lane, I saw a great Crowd of People about him, and found him lying senseless, his Arm stripped up in order to bleed him, but he would not bleed. I got a Chaise that was coming by, put him into it, and got a Man to go with him to hold him in the Chaise that he should not fall out of it, and so carried him to Newbridge. The next Morning we were to go early to Dublin; Mr. MacKercher said, it was very prudent to get to Dublin as early as we could. But before we were up, we were alarmed by the People of the House saying, That the House was beset, and that there were a hundred Men, fifty one Way, and fifty another, and that there were Men in the Entry that had Fire-Arms. We immediately got up, and had nothing but Pistols to defend ourselves: We thought them not sufficient to defend us against such a Number of Men, and sent to the Landlord to get us more Arms, if he could; who brought up a Case of Pistols and a Gun; and we were determined not to stir till we could get some Assistance. Mr. MacKercher and Mr. Kennedy went out to see if they could discover what Number of People there were in Arms; they returned immediately, and told us, They saw a great Number of People; so we were determined to secure ourselves in the Room till we should get Assistance. Some time after it was Day-Light, an Hour or two after, Mr. Kennedy went out into the Garden to try if he could see any Body; and when he returned, said, He saw none: I went down into the Garden, came back, and was told there was a Warrant granted by a Justice of Peace, on the Complaint of Lord Anglesea against Mr. MacKercher, and Mr. Kennedy, and myself. I asked Lacy, who came up Stairs to execute the Warrant, if he was a Constable; he said he was my Lord Anglesea's Steward; the Constable was hard by.

Q. Where was this?

A. In the House; they came up Stairs, and shewed the Warrant: Says I, What Occasion for all these People to execute a Warrant? Whose Complaint is this upon? I looked, and found it was a Complaint of Lord Anglesea's. Upon this Lacy said, We must go back to the Gentleman that had granted the Warrant, to give in Security. I said, No, we did not care for that, we have got enough of this Country, I am all over Blood, I don't like it so well to go into it again, and you see the Dress I am in, and I'll go to Dublin; and thinking there was some Dirt in my Wound, I had a Mind to go where I might have it searched and dressed, for there were two Gentlemen there that offered to bail us. Lacy would not go towards Dublin, but insisted on our going to the Justice that granted the Warrant. This occasioned us to dispute about it till the Constable whispered us, Naas is the County Gaol, Gentlemen, and if you say you will go to that Gaol, I must carry you there, whether they will or no. Upon this we told Lacy, That we insisted to go there, and if we did not give Bail, we would be secured there. There being so much Noise, and the Landlord cautioning us, that there might be Danger of going the Road, we sent for some People from Naas to come and meet us; so we got ready, and Mr. Annesley and I would not go into the Coach.

Q. Who went in the Coach?

A. Mr. Kennedy, Mr. MacKercher, and Mr. Carrick, went into the Coach; Mr. Annesley, Mr. Hacket, and I, rode on Horseback; when we had gone a little Way, riding almost all three a-breast, I saw several People follow, and a Fellow came galloping after us: I heard the Horse coming, and I looked, and saw a Fellow coming up with a Gun in his Hand, in a green Coat, and a lusty Man. I said, I wondered what that Man's coming after us in that Manner could mean. So I drops behind Mr. Hacket and Mr. Annesley a little, and let the Fellow come between us; he came close up to Mr. Annesley, and just as he was dropping back, I got up. Immediately I heard the Gun cock, as I thought, and I instantly dropped betwixt him and Mr. Annesley, and then Mr. Hacket and I called out, Mr. Annesley, you'll be shot; get into the Coach this Minute, or this Fellow will fire at you. Mr. Annesley upon that alighted, and got into the Coach, and the Fellow said he was going to Dublin. I spoke to the Servants to bid them not let the Fellow come between them and the Coach, and said to Mr. Hacket, Let us keep between him and the Coach to prevent any Mischief. When the Fellow saw that, he turned back again.

Q. Was he so near as to hear you give those Directions?

A. It was impossible he could avoid it.

Mr. MacManus. Were there any others that had Arms besides that Man?

A. There was a Country Fellow by, that had a Pistol, and Lacy had a Pistol too.

Q. What happened after that?

A. As soon as we had secured the Coach, the Fellow turned back, and Lacy kept behind, and just as they saw the Naas People coming, they galloped up again, and they went with us to Naas.

Q. What happened when you came to Naas? Tell what you observed there.

A. Then we came to examine the Man that had the Gun, and sent for the Sovereign, and desired him to examine that Man; so he was asked, Whose Gun that was? He said, Lord Anglesea's. He then was asked, What was he to do with it? He said, To follow Lacy's Directions. He then was asked, What Directions? He said, He fancied, in Case of Rescue, he was to make use of it. We asked, If Lacy gave him any Directions? He said, Yes. We asked then, What Directions? Before he could answer, Lacy stepped in, and bade him not answer any other Question.

Q. Did you give in Security there?

A. No; we went before the Justice of Peace, and gave in Bail.

Mr. Digby. You said that Mr. Francis Annesley struck Mr. MacKercher?—A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. MacKercher, or any Body else, strike Mr. Annesley before he struck him?———A. He did not, nor Nobody else.

Q. Did you strike him?

A. I struck him after he struck Mr. MacKercher.

Q. With what?—A. With a Whip, upon his striking Mr. MacKercher.

Q. Did you apprehend the Quarrel a continued one, or that it was ceased?——A. The Beginning of the Quarrel was, Mr. MacKercher and Lord Anglesea's speaking together; and after Mr. Francis Annesley struck, it ceased for about two Minutes.

(Cross-Examination.)

Mr. Spring. Pray, Sir, do you recollect the particular Words Lord Anglesea made use of to Mr. Francis Annesley before he struck you?

Mr. Goostry. I did not know Mr. Annesley at that Time, but a Gentleman said, that it was he that struck me.

Q. When Lord Anglesea used the opprobrious Language you mentioned, did not he say to Mr. Annesley, There is he that struck you?

A. I cannot say that I did hear him say that.

Q. Were not you near him?—A. We were Side by Side; Mr. Francis Annesley and I faced Mr. MacKercher.

A. Might not he have received a Blow from you without knowing who gave him that Blow?———A. Yes, I believe he might; and did not know, I believe, that I struck him; I dare say he did not see me, because he rode forwards to strike Mr. MacKercher.

Q. Do you believe he might have asked my Lord who struck him?

A. I can't tell.

Q. Was not he struck by Mr. Kennedy at the same Time?

A. He was not.

Q. Did not Mr. MacKercher lift his Hand in this Manner with his Whip, upon his talking to My Lord Anglesea?

A. No, Sir, he had his Whip in one Hand, and Bridle in the other, and spoke as coolly as any Man in the World could; and before he went up, said, He would have no Quarrel.

Q. Did not he lift up the Butt End of his Whip?

A. He did not lift it up.

Q. Did not Mr. MacKercher speak to my Lord Anglesea in such Manner as tended to a Breach of the Peace?

A. He did not, to my Knowledge.

Q. Did not he tell him, He dared not come aside with him, after he had given him the Lye?

A. He did not, until my Lord Anglesea had abused him, and called him Names.

Q. Were not you cautioned by Somebody not to go to my Lord Anglesea?

A. No Person cautioned us not to go up to him, that I heard of.

Q. Did you yourself caution Mr. MacKercher not to go?—A. I did not.

Q. Did not Somebody, in your hearing, tell Mr. MacKercher, It was your own Fault, if you had taken my Advice, this would not have happened?——A. No Person told him that, that I know of.

Q. Do you know Abraham Robinson?

A. I do. It was his Chaise carried Mr. Annesley to Newbridge.

Mr. Harward. We have a vast Number of other Testimonies of the Gentlemen of this Country to examine as to the Assault, and what happened at the Curragh, which we shall not trouble your Lordship with, for we have now taken up six Hours of your Time; and the only further Evidence that we shall lay before you to conclude this Scene, is to introduce the Person, who shall account for the premeditated Contrivance of this black Scheme; who the Persons were that were employed to execute it; whose Directions they were to have obeyed; and all the preparatory Steps taken in order to come at this Gentleman's Life. We shall trouble you but with this one Witness; and, as it is a Matter of great Concernment to the Publick to have detected, and to my Clients in particular, we shall crave your Indulgence and Patience to hear this Witness.

7. Angus Byrne.

Mr. Harward. Mr. Byrne, begin to give an Account of what you know, and what Directions you received, and what Conversation passed between you and any other Persons at Killcullen-Bridge. Do you know the Earl of Anglesea?———A. Yes.

Q. Were you Huntsman to any Person, and who?

A. I was to the Earl of Anglesea last.

Q. Do you know Mr. Jans?———A. I do.

Q. When were you Huntsman to Lord Anglesea?

A. I parted from him the twenty-fourth of March last, Easter-Saturday was the Day, at his own House at Bray.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Jans?

A. Six Years, or thereabouts.

Q. What is he to Lord Anglesea?——A. I always found him in the Nature of an Agent, or a Man to take Care of his Business.

Q. You know Michael Lacy?———A. I do.

Q. What has he been to Lord Anglesea during the Time you knew him?

A. In the Nature of a House-Steward, and to sell my Lord's Woods.

Q. Do you remember any Races in September last?———A. I do.

Q. Where?———A. At the Curragh.

Q. Now give an Account, whether you saw the Earl of Anglesea, Mr. Jans and Lacy, before the Races at the Curragh, at Killcullen-Bridge, or any Place?———A. I did.

Q. Begin, where you first saw them, and tell gradually, from Time to Time, Day after Day, and Night after Night, what passed from the Time you first saw them, until you came to Naas.

A. I will, Sir. Wednesday, being the first Day of the Running, I came to Killcullen-Bridge, about Ten or Eleven o'Clock, and, as I was going to the Stable, my Lord and Mr. Jans were standing at Cavenagh's Door, as I passed by them to put up my Horse. In some time after Jans came to me to the Stable, and asked me, Where I had been? I told him, I came from the County of Wexford. He asked me, Had I left Mr. Colclough? I told him, I had. He then asked me, For what Reason? I told him,

On

On account of a ſore Leg that I had, and was not able to do any thing. Upon that, he ſaid, I am ſure you muſt know a great deal of this Affair (meaning the Pretender, as they called him). It would do great Service to tell us what you know of it. I ſaid, I know nothing of it, at preſent, I give my Word. Says he, You can be of Service to my Lord, if you pleaſe; you muſt have heard a great deal of it. I told him, I did not hear a Word of it, but only talking about Bliſs, Mr. Colclough asked me, if I knew where he was, and I told him I did not. And then Lacy came up, and Mr. Jans went out; and Lacy came to me, and aſk'd me, How I did? I told him, Very well; and with that I walked out of the Stable. Mr. Jans deſired Lacy to fetch me in, and make me drink; accordingly I went in, got a Drink, and we came to the Curragh that Day.

Court. Who came to the Curragh?

A. Michael Lacy and I together, and ſaw the Running that Day. There was no great Sport, and then I came back to Cavenagh's, and lay there that Night: And, lying there, I got up in the Morning, and went into the Entry, and Lord Angleſea ſaw me; he was ſtanding in the Back-ſide. So, Byrne, ſays he, how are you? Very well, my Lord, ſays I. I was a little angry with you, ſays he, I heard in England you ſwore ſome Things againſt me, about that Woman called Lady Angleſea, and I find they are Lyes, and am ſorry I was ſo long angry with you. You are come from Wexford, what News there? I told him, None ſtrange. Says he, You ſhall go back to Camolin again; there are a good Pack of Hounds for you, but your favourite Hound Forreſter is dead. You can be of great Service to me; I ſhall pay you what I owe you, and double the Quantity, and you ſhall ſtay a little, and Michael Lacy will ſtay two or three Days, for he has ſome Buſineſs with you. What is it, my Lord, ſays I? Lacy will tell you, ſays he, follow his Directions. So that was very well; my Lord went to Mr. Anneſley's to Dinner at Ballyſax——

Mr. Harward. Were there any Promiſes made you at that Time by any Body?

A. My Lord told me, he would pay me what Money he owed me.

Q. Did he ſay nothing further?

A. He ſaid, He would pay me what he owed me, and double the Quantity, and I ſhould never want.

D. Go on.

A So then my Lord went to Dinner at Mr. Anneſley's, and ſome of the reſt of the Gentlemen, I do not know how many; but Mr. Lacy, and one Cavenagh, a Dancing-maſter, ſtaid at the Bridge; and Lacy, and Cavenagh, and Eſquire Berkley dined together.

Court. What Day was this?---A. Thurſday, my Lord.

D. Well, go on.

A. Then Lacy ordered me to get my Dinner, and after I had dined, there was a Sneaker of Punch, and Bob Meakins brought it in.

Q. Who?

A. The Drawer.——And after that Mr. Lacy called me into the Parlour, and made me drink Wine.

Q. Who did?

A. Mr. Lacy and Mr. Berkley of the County of Carlow; they gave me ſeveral Glaſſes of Wine each of them.---Lacy and I went to the Curragh on Friday, and we were at the Curragh a good while before the Running; and after the firſt Heat was over, and the Horſes were ſtarting the ſecond Heat, Mr. Lacy and I were ſtanding at the Starting-poſt; ſays he, G—d, I'll hold you a Crown that yonder is Mac Kercher and the Pretender. Where, ſays I? There, ſays he. So they paſſed up till they came almoſt facing the Starting-poſt, and turned off to the Right towards the Winning-poſt. Lacy ſaid, he would ſhew them to me. With all my Heart, ſaid I: So we rode after them and croſſed them, and ſays he, That's Mac Kercher, and that's the Pretender; Would you know them again? I would, to be ſure, ſays I. Take notice, ſays he, that you know them again. So we croſſed them again; we came to the Starting-poſt, and the Horſes being ſtarted I rode to the round Hill to ſee the Heat, and when the Heat was over, I went into a Tent and drank a Pot of Beer.

Mr. Har. When Lacy deſired you to take notice of them, and aſked whether you would not know them again, was there any Talk between any Perſons about bloody Noſes?

A. Yes. He ſaid, They will have good Luck if they have not broken Heads and bloody Noſes before they leave this Ground.

Q. Was that before, or after he deſired you to take Notice of them?

A. It was after.

D. Now, go on,

A. So then, I tell you, we came to the Starting-poſt, and went round the Courſe; and I went into a Tent to drink, and while I was there I heard there was a Quarrel; and hearing that, I got up, and ſaw People galloping down towards Ballymanny; and when the Race was over, I went to Cavenagh's that Night again: So, coming there, I did put up my Horſe, and had him turned out to Graſs; and my Lord Antrim's Keeper, Arthur Coock, met me: We went in and called for a Bowl of Punch; we drank about the third Part of it, and Mr. Lacy came in. So, Angus! ſays he. Your Servant, Mr. Lacy, Will you ſit down, ſays I, and take a Glaſs of Punch? I came in, ſays he, with Deſign to drink with you. So we drank till the Bowl was out, and I called to the Drawer to get another. Says Mr. Lacy, Angus, you ſhall drink no more, for you ſhall go to bed, I ſhall want you in the Morning upon earneſt Buſineſs. So he went up Stairs and ſaw me go to bed.

Q. Pray, do you know of any Piſtols or Fire-Arms that were a-charging that Night?---A. I will tell you by and bye.

D. Well, go on.

A. Then, Sir, when I went to bed I lay there till in the Morning Lacy came and called me up betwixt One and Two o'Clock; I got up and I dreſſed myſelf, and he waited till I dreſſed myſelf.

Court. What Time did you go to bed?

A. I went to bed between Ten and Eleven o'Clock, I believe; I got up, he brought me down Stairs into the Kitchen, where Mr. Jans was, and ſeveral other Gentlemen, and they were charging and priming Arms when I came into the Kitchen.

Q. Who were they?

A. There was Mr. Jans, Cavenagh the Dancing-maſter, one Williams of Piccadilly, a Gentleman they called Capt. Stewart, and my Lord's Nephew.

Q. What were they doing?

A. They were charging and priming of Arms.

Q. What Arms?---A. Piſtols and ſmall Pieces.

Q. What Pieces?---A. A Fuzee, travelling Pieces.

D. Well, go on.

A. Mr. Jans aſked me, Would I drink? I told him, I would; ſo the Drawer brought a Mug of Ale, and Mr. Jans afterwards gave me a Caſe of Piſtols. What am I to do with theſe? ſays I. You are to go along, ſays he, with Mr. Lacy, and you are to take his Directions, he'll tell you what to do. Then I told him, My Horſe is at Graſs, I muſt ſend out for him before I can go. Mr. Jans ſaid, You muſt ride my Horſe. I then called for my Surtout-Coat. He ſaid, I muſt not ride in it, but go as I was, it will be cumberſome to you.

Q. For what Reaſon?

A. I cannot tell.—So, with that, the Groom went out, and ſaddled Mr. Jans's Horſe, and the other Horſes, and Mr. Chapman, my Lord's Gentleman, and Michael Doyle the Groom, and Mr. Lacy, and I went out. I got Mr. Jans's Horſe, and mounted him in the Road at the End of the Stable, and they all got on Horſeback; and as we got to the Door, there was a Number of Fellows with Pitch-forks and Staves, I believe Twenty of them; and we turned along the Road towards Kinna; and when we came as far as Caſtlemartin, then I aſked Lacy, Where we were going? He ſaid, to Newbridge, to take Mr. Mac Kercher, Mr. Gooſtry, and Mr. Kennedy, for the Aſſault at the Curragh, for ſtriking Mr. Francis Anneſley and my Lord. I ſaid, I'm ſorry you did not tell me this before, for I am ſorry to have any Hand in it. Sure, ſaid Lacy, you are not afraid; you need not fear, what are they to you? What are you to expect from them? If you wanted me to go with you, I'd go farther than this with you. So we went forward to Newbridge, and when we came near the Houſe, the Signal was given, that none of the Fellows ſhould go to the Houſe but one Brennan, a Tenant of Mr. Anneſley's of Ballyſax, as I heard after, the Conſtable, Mr. Lacy, and I.

Q. What was the Conſtable's Name?

A. I cannot tell his Name.—So when we went in, Lacy went into a little Room on the Left-hand-ſide of the Door, called for White-wine, aſked me to come in, and we drank it together; and Brennan and the Conſtable went into a Room on the Right-hand as you go up Stairs, and got Ale, and they were there for a while; and by-and-bye comes down Stairs Mr. Mac Kercher, about half an Hour after we were there; and he came down, and that Time I pointed at the Conſtable, that That was Mr. Mac Kercher, and the Conſtable came up, and I ſaid, That's he, that's your Priſoner, take him. So the Conſtable came up and ſaid, You are the King's Priſoner. With that Lacy came out and told him he had a Warrant againſt him for an Aſſault on Lord Angleſea; and Lacy and the Conſtable went up Stairs with him; I did not: And the other Gentlemen above Stairs were taken. In about an Hour Mr. Lacy ſent Chapman and the Groom to my Lord, to let him know that they were taken; and Doyle, the Groom, left the Gun and the Piſtol he had behind, by Lacy's Directions. So, in ſome time after, I believe an Hour, the Gentlemen got into the Coach, and Brennan got Doyle's Piſtol and put it in his Boſom; Mr. Lacy had his Caſe in his Pockets, and took the Gun in his Hand, and a Quarter of a Mile beyond the Bridge gave me the Gun.

Q. How near the Inn was this Bridge?

A. As near as from this to the Market-houſe.--So, a little while after, as I ſaid, he gave me the Gun: Here's this Gun for you, ſays he, your Bread is baked, you ſhall be provided for while you live; and, ſays he, you are to uſe this Thing, fire at the Pretender, be ſure do not miſs him; we have Horſes to carry us off, and never fear, if we are taken, we'll make a Reſcue of it, we have People enough here to prove it for us.

D. Repeat thoſe Words that he ſaid to you.

A. Angus, ſays he, you ſhall be provided for, your Bread is baked, fire at him, and never fear, we have good Horſes to carry us off, and if we are taken, we'll make it a Reſcue; we have People to prove it for us, and there is none that can prove it againſt us.

Mr. Harward. When he gave you the Gun, what did he deſire you to do?

A. He deſired me to fire at Mr. Annesley.—I will not, ſays I, nor have any hand in it for all the World.

Q. What followed after that?

A. I believe we went about as far as Morriſtown, when there was a Mob met us in the Road. As ſoon as Mr. Lacy ſaw them, They are coming, ſays he, to reſcue Mr. Anneſley; Now is your Time, there is no fear, we can make it a fair Reſcue, and go you on one Side of the Coach, and I'll go on the other, and if you miſs him, I'll hit him. With that he took my Piſtol out of my Holſter. What do you take my Piſtol for, ſaid I? He ſaid, You have another Piſtol, and we'll have three Shots a-piece, ſays he. I have it not, for Brennan has it, ſays I, and I'll have no hand at all in any Man's Blood, and will not commit Murder. So I came up to the Coach-Door, and he to the other, and I did no more, and he fell back again.

Q. He made a further Application to you when he ſaw the People coming from towards Naas?---A. Yes, he did.

Q. Where was Mr. Annesley at this Time, on Horſeback, or in the Coach?---A. In the Coach.

Q. How ſoon before this, of ſeeing the People coming from Naas, was it that Mr. Anneſley got into the Coach?

A. I believe about a Mile beyond that Place, where we ſaw the People, but I cannot be ſure.

Q. Well now, while Lacy was perſuading of you by theſe Inducements and Promiſes to ſhoot Mr. Annesley, pray how many Miles might you have gone along with one another from the firſt Time that he began to diſcover his Mind, and give you Directions?

A. I believe near three Miles from Newbridge, better than half-way, before the People from Naas met us, there or thereabouts.

Q. You had gone a Mile after Mr. Annesley got into the Coach before you ſaw the People?---A. Yes.

Q. Whereabouts was it that Lacy firſt applied to you to perſuade you to ſhoot Mr. Annesley?

A. He began that Minute after he gave me the Gun, and he held the Diſcourſe till Mr. Annesley went into the Coach.

Q. After that did he renew his Applications?

A. He told me, that ſure I did not fear, that I never was a Coward, and that I need not fear now, and that I might be done for as well as any Man of the World.

Q. By whom, pray?---A. He told me by my Lord Angleſea.

Q. Was there any mention of any thing, upon your Refuſal, to contrive your Eſcape?

A. He ſaid, That I need not fear if he was killed, for, ſays he, we have two good Horſes to carry us off, and we have three Shots a-piece, and ſhall be brought off in caſe we are taken.

Q. By

Q. By whose Means did he promise you should be carried off?

A. He said these very Words; when I told him I would not do it, nor have any Hand in it, he said, You need not fear, for you'll be done for; never fear.

Q. Did you get to Naas?—A. Yes.

Q. Was you brought to any Magistrate there?

A. We were brought into the House of Drake there, and I went out with the two Horses to the Backside; and I came in, and gave the Gun to Drake to put up, and went into a Street-Seat, and called for some Drink. So, in some Time after the Sovereign came, and examined, Who gave me the Gun? I told them, Mr. Lacy. They asked, If it was my Lord's Gun? I told them, It was.

Court. And whose was it?—A. It was my Lord's.

Q. How long have you known the Gun?

A. I have known it these six Years.

Q. Is it a Gun of Value?—A. It is a Screw Gun.

Q. Did you charge that Gun?—A. It was not I charged it.

Q. Do you know who did?—A. I cannot tell who did.

D. Well, go on.

A. So then they asked me, What was I to do with it? Why, says I, I was to be directed by Mr. Lacy, and to do what he would have me, So then, Lacy said, You are not to tell any Thing to any Man here. Then I stayed there some Time, and I thought to go back to Killcullen-Bridge for my Wallet; and my Lord's Man comes up to me to Drake's House, and said, You must go to Dublin. Says I, John, I'll not go. Says he, My Lord says you must follow him to Rathcoole. So I went, and my Lord was going off as I got there. Mr. Jans gave me a Shilling to get my Dinner, and Lacy stayed with me. We went on to Dublin together, and I was hired the next Day by Lacy for the same Wages I had before from my Lord.

Mr. Harward. What Day was it Lord Anglesea spoke to you at Killcullen-Bridge?—A. Thursday.

Q. Was this apart, or in the Place he met you in?

A. In private, in the Backside; I was standing in the Entry leading from the Kitchen, and my Lord was in the Backside; he called me, and said the Words I have told you before.

Q. Did he take you privately or not?

A. He took me about as far as from this to that Door, into the Back-Yard.

Q. Was any Person present when he spoke to you?

A. Nobody was there then.

Court. You did not charge any of the Arms?——A. I did not.

Q. Do you know who charged the Gun?——A. I cannot tell.

Q. Did not you see People charging Arms that Morning?

A. I saw People in the Kitchen; they were priming of them.

Q. Did you see any body charge them?

A. I saw Mr. Jans charge them; it was he gave me the Case of Pistols.

Mr. Digby. I would ask him whether, as Jans gave him the Pistols, he got any, and what Directions from Jans?

Court.] He said, I was to follow Lacy's Directions, and I was to follow what he bade me.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Morgan. Did you refuse Lacy to have your Hand in Blood?

A. I did.

Q. Did not you consent to murder Mr. Annesley?——A. I never did.

Q. Did you not ride up to Mr. Hackit and Mr. Annesley, with your Gun rested upon your Saddle?

A. I did, and had it this Way on my Thigh.

Q. On what Account did you do so?

A. I rode up as Mr. Annesley was going into the Coach.

Q. How did you hold the Gun then?—A. It was upon my Thigh.

Q. Was your Hand upon the Cock?——A. It was.

Q. Was the Gun cock'd?

A. It was not cock'd; nor can I say that I did cock it.

Q. In what Manner did you hold the Bridle and the Gun?

A. It was in my right Hand I had my Bridle; I gave my Whip to the Constable, thinking it too cumbersome; I had my right Hand on the Bridle, and the left had the Gun with my Thumb on the Cock.

Q. Did you cock up the Gun?

A. I cannot say that I did cock it up.

Q. Was it cock'd?

A. I had the Cock half bent, and let it down again.

Q. How long was this before Mr. Annesley went into the Coach?

A. Just as he was going to alight.

Q. In how long Time after did you turn back?

A. A Man, one Bernard Neale, came to me, and kept me back.

Q. How long; half an Hour was it?

A. No; only the Coach went on a little before us.

Q. Did you go from Newbridge with an Intent to guard them?

A. I did.

Q. How near did you ride to the Coach all along, till you met the People?

A. Sometimes near, and sometimes at a distance, and was not above fifty or a hundred Yards at the most from it; never further, but sometimes nearer.

Q. How many Servants attended Mr. MacKercher and his Company?

A. I cannot tell; I took notice of one that kept by the Coach-door all the Way; there was such a Number of People along the Road, that I could not tell which were Servants, and which not.

Q. How many People might there be in all?

A. A good many, I cannot tell the Number; I believe the Matter of thirty or forty in all.

Q. What Number attended these Gentlemen along with you and Lacy to Morristown?

A. They attended them as well as I, and went all the Way to Naas.

Q. Did not you ride in company with them to Morristown?—A. I did.

Q. Where and when then had Lacy the frequent Opportunities you mention, to make the Applications to you to take away Mr. Annesley's Life?

A. Why, because we kept company together all along, and the rest went on before us; we went slow as our Horses could walk; the Constable was on one Side along the Coach commonly, and Brennan was before, and I took no Notice of the rest one above another.

Q. Now, Sir, I would ask you, did not you, between Newbridge and Morristown, frequently ride up to the Coach, and just behind it?

A. I did.

Q. With Lacy?——A. Yes; and he and I were constantly together.

Mr. Spring. How far is Kinna from Castlemartin?

A. About half a Mile; it is not a Mile out.

Q. Did you not ask Lacy there, what it was you were going upon?

A. I did.

Q. Did not he tell you, to arrest the Gentlemen for assaulting my Lord Anglesea?——A. He did.

Q. Was any body in Conversation with you?—A. Nobody was by.

Q. Was not Chapman with you?——A. He was before us.

Q. Now, did Lacy at that Time communicate to you any Design of taking Mr. Annesley's Life?

A. Not at that Time, he did not.

Q. When, then?

A. Not till I went over the Bridge, and he gave me the Gun.

Q. How far was you from the Bridge of Newbridge, at the Time of his giving you the Gun?

A. Just beyond it; at the two Cabbins that are there.

Q. How many Yards do you think it was?

A. I cannot tell the Number of Yards.

Q. You know where King lives over the Way?——A. I do.

Q. Was it as many Yards as his House from this?

A. I cannot tell you to the Number of Yards; but it was just at the House on the right Hand.

Q. Are the Cabbins from the Bridge further than the Houses over the Way from this Court-House?

A. I cannot tell that; but it is hard by the Bridge.

Q. At the Time that he gave you the Gun, was the Coach on before you?——A. It was.

Q. How far?—A. Just afore us, and we rode up to it.

Q. Were all the other Attendants behind the Coach at this Time?

A. Some behind and some before.

Q. Were not the greater Part of them behind?

A. I do not know, for I never minded to reckon them.

Q. Did not they all leave the Inn along with you?—A. I cannot tell.

Q. Did not a great many of them?

A. Yes, a great many; I do not know the Number.

Q. Did you perceive any body near you, when Lacy gave you this Gun between the Bridge and the Houses?

A. I do not know; I believe there was People, to be sure.

Q. Well then, did he tell you then you were to take away Mr. Annesley's Life?

A. Before I went three hundred Yards beyond it he did.

Q. You went from Rathcoole to Dublin with him?—A. I did.

Q. You were hired in Dublin?

A. I was, by Lacy, for Lord Anglesea.

Q. Did you, when you were hired, go to Lord Anglesea's House?

A. I did not go to Lord Anglesea's House, but kept my Horse upon the Merchant-Quay at my Lord's Inn, and there kept for a Week.

Q. Where did you go from that Inn?

A. I went to the Bull's Head, in Abbey-Street, and kept there.

Q. Where did you go from that?

A. I went to my Service; two Days before Christmas-Eve I left Town.

Q. Where did you go to?

A. I went to Camolin; my Lord gave me his Hounds and my own Horse, and said—There was another Mare, a black Chaise-Mare I might ride; but I did not like her, and I took my own Horse.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. I stayed there till March, till after the Assizes of Naas, and that I heard there that I was indicted, and that Lacy was come home; I said it was very hard I should be obliged to run my Country, when I had done nothing to deserve it.

Q. How came you to leave my Lord's Service?

A. I asked Lacy first for Money to buy Shoes, and he would give me none; I then said, I would stay no longer; delivered up the Hounds to the Keeper, and the Horse, and so came to Michael Lacy's House in Camolin, got a Dram there, and came towards Dublin, and lay at Bray, and came the next Day to Dublin, and put up my Horse at the York-Minster. Then I went to my Lord's House, and when I saw my Lord, he asked me, What I came there for? I told him, I had neither Cloaths nor Money, and in dread of the Indictment found against me at the Assizes. Well, says he, stay in Town a little, and go to Camolin, and bring up some Hounds that I have given to my Lord Tyrone; and asked me, If Fortune's Hound was at home? and said, Fortune he would not give him. And one Morning, when my Lord went to Bray, I went to him for some Money, and found he was gone; and I went to him to Donnybrook: Sure, says I to one of the Servants, he would not go, and not leave me Money! Go to Donnybrook, says he, and you'll meet him there; he's gone in a Hackney-Coach, and is waiting till his own is ready. I accordingly went and met him, and I walked in my Boots. He asked, What brought my there, and made me wear Boots? I told him, Because I had no Shoes, nor Money to buy any, and came to get some from him. He swore he would give me none; and seeing that, I asked the Coachman to carry me to Dublin. My Lord said, Do not go; and said, He would give me half a Guinea, and bid me follow him to Bray, and that I should then go to Camolin, and carry the Hounds to my Lord Tyrone; and then he would make a Present of me and some Hounds to some Gentleman in England. After this, Joe the Coachman told him I made a great Noise for Money in Dublin; so my Lord came out again, and called me Mr. Byrne; when he called me Mr. I thought he was angry with me, and he came and gave me a Chuck under the Chin, and said, You Villain, do you make a Noise about my House? get about your Business. Green, his Nephew, bade me not go away, but to beg Pardon, and I'd get half a Guinea; and afterwards my Lord came out and gave me half a Guinea; and, Follow me to Bray, says he.

Q. Did you ever threaten my Lord, and tell him, It should be worse for him if he did not pay your Wages?

A. I never did.

Q. Do you know Thomas Stanley?

A. I do.

Q. Is he any Relation to your Wife?

A. I do not know but he was a Relation of my Wife's.

Q. What Character has he?

A. Aye,

A. Aye, aye, he is a very honeſt Man.

Mr. Spring. I deſire the Jury may take Notice, he ſays Stanley is a very honeſt Man.

Mr. Mac Manus. He does ſo; but every body may eaſily ſee in what manner he ſaid it.

Witneſs. But he is a noted Villain in Dublin, and as any Man in Ireland.

Q. Do you know Mr. Francis Annesley?—A. I do very well.

Q. Had you any Converſation with him returning from the Wexford Aſſizes about Lord Angleſea?

A. I had; I told him at Killcullen-Bridge the groſs Uſage I had from my Lord, that I got no Money; and he ſaid he would ſpeak to Counſellor Annesley; and, ſays he, you ſhall be ordered your Wages.

Q. Did not you make uſe of ſome threatening Expreſſions if you were not paid?---A. I made no uſe of any threatening Expreſſions.

Q. Was you ever in England?——A. I was.

Q. How long was it that you went there after this Converſation?

A. About a Month, I am ſure; I cannot tell what Time, for I have not the Day of the Month; I went ſoon after, but cannot tell the Time.

Q. What Buſineſs carried you to England?

A. I tell you. Firſt, I went there to ſee two Siſters I have married there, and a Brother I have married there. Secondly, I was in dread of theſe Indictments, and as I was bred and born in this Country, and not noted for any thing that was bad, I went to England to beg the Gentlemen's Pardons, and try if I could clear myſelf.

Q. In what Part of England are your Siſters and Brother?

A. I have a Brother lives in the Coal-Yard, he is in the Guards; one of my Siſters lives at St. Mary Axe, next Door to the Hoop and Grapes; the other Siſter is married to a Chairman.

Q. Was not this in April you went over?

A. I cannot ſwear to the Month, nor the Day I left Ireland.

Q. How many Weeks after you left Lord Angleſea was you in Dublin?

A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was it a Month?---A. I cannot ſwear; I believe it was a Month.

Q. Do you know Mr. Mac Kercher?——A. I do.

Q. Did you ſee him in England?——A. I did, in London.

Q. How long was you in London before you ſaw him?

A. I believe ten Days before I ſeen him.

Q. Was you inquired after by him, or did you enquire for him?

A. Indeed I enquired for him.

Q. When you met him, did not you give him the Account you have mentioned here?

A. I gave him no Account; I gave them to a Gentleman that drew them in Dublin.

Q. What Gentleman?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge his Name is Baily.

Q. For what Reaſon was it that you never diſcloſed the Matter till April?

A. I would not then, but only that the Indictments were found againſt me in the County of Kildare.

Q. Who is Baily?——A. An Attorney.

Q. Where does he live?---A. I cannot tell the Place; to the beſt of my Knowledge he lives in Golden-Lane.

Q. Is not he now in this Town?

A. I cannot tell; I have not ſeen him to my Knowledge.

Q. Where do you ſay he lives?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge his Office is in Golden-Lane.

Q. Is he a young Man, or middle-aged?

A. He is a young Man, a middle-aged Man, tall and long viſaged.

Q. How came you to find him?——A. I ſent a Man for him.

Q. Were you acquainted with him then?

A. I was acquainted with him two Days or three before.

Q. How came you acquainted with him?

A. A Friend of mine recommended me to him, that he was fit for my Service, that I ſhould employ him to give my Teſtimony.

Q. Where did he draw this Teſtimony for you?---A. He drew it for me in the Houſe of Robert Kennedy on the Blind-Quay.

Q. Who was preſent when he drew it?

A. Nobody was preſent but himſelf and me.

Q. Who wrote the Words you ſaid?

A. He is the Perſon that wrote the Words himſelf.

Q. Was Mr. Mac Kercher in England when this was done?---A. He was.

Q. Was there no Draught of what you had to ſay drawn by your Directions before Mr. Baily drew that, by any one elſe?

A. I had myſelf drawn one before that.

Q. By whom?——A. I do not know the Man.

Q. Where was it drawn?—A. At Mr. Robert Kennedy's.

Q. The firſt Time?---A. The firſt Time and ſecond Time too.

Q. Did you ſhew Mr. Baily any Draught, but what you gave out of your Mouth?--- A. I did not, Sir.

Q. What did you do with your firſt Draught?

A. It was tore to Pieces.

Q. Had you any Paper drawn for you in England?

A. Not for me, indeed.

Q. Have you any Paper of Inſtructions about you what you were to ſwear?---A. I have not.

Q. Did you ſwear to the Examinations you gave in this Kingdom?

A. I did.

Q. Before whom?

A. I do not know the Maſter in Chancery, I forget his Name.

Q. Where does he live?---A. He lives about Chancery-Lane.

Q. Is Mr. Baily here?---A. I cannot ſay that he is here.

Q. Who adviſed you to go to that Maſter in Chancery?---A. Myſelf.

Q. Did any body attend you there?---A. Mr. Baily attended me.

Q. Did he read it and ſign it?---A. He did.

Q. Who paid for that Swearing?

A. I did; I borrowed the Money from Mr. Robert Kennedy.

Q. Where did you live from the Time you left Lord Angleſea till you lived with him again?

A. I lived with Mr. Colcleugh, and Mr. Gerard in Dublin, and Mr. Marſh.

Q. How long did you live with Mr. Colcleugh?---A. About ſeven Months.

Q. Where did you live after that?

A. Lord Angleſea put me in the Marſhalſea.

Q. For what?

A. I will tell you for what. I came to demand my Wages and my Wife's Wages, that lived with him ſeven Months, and my Lord would give me no Money at Bray, but ſaid, my Wife was the vileſt Woman upon Earth; and I ſaid I was very ſorry his Lordſhip thought ſo; and he gave me a Shake, and ſaid, my Children were not my own.

Q. But what did he put you in the Marſhalſea for?

A. He put me in for a ſham Writ for 50*l.* and I cannot tell what.

Q. Did you owe him any Money?

A. No; I owed him none; he owed me my own and my Wife's Wages.

Q. How long was it after that you were to kill Mr. Annesley?

A. It is near three Years; the latter End of this Month it will be three Years.

Court. What was the Reaſon of your giving your Whip to the Conſtable?---A. Becauſe that I could not keep the Whip, the Gun and Bridle in one Hand.

Q. How long had you had the Gun before you gave the Whip to the Conſtable?---A. I did not go, I believe, a Quarter of a Mile before I gave it to him.

Q. You carried them that Way?

A. I did; but they were troubleſome to me.

Q. You put the Gun, you ſay, out of your right Hand into the left?

A. I did.

Q. For what Reaſon?---A. Mr. Lacy was at me to fire, I would not, and I did it to let the Cock down again.

Q. Are you right-handed?---A. I am, my Lord.

Q. When you go a-fowling, on which Side do you put your Gun?

A. On my right.

Q. Always?---A. Always, my Lord.

Q. Your Gun was at firſt held upwards?---A. Yes.

Q. Did you after that level it?

A. I held it this way; directly foreanent the Coach-door the Gun pointed.

Q. When you ſhifted the Gun out of your right Hand into your left, and laid it upon your Thigh, how ſtood the Muzzle?

A. It ſtood this Way.

Q. Did it point towards Mr. Hacket or Mr. Annesley?

A. I cannot tell; but I had it this Way facing the Coach Door.

Q. Did you never reſt it upon the Pommel of the Saddle?

A. I ſhifted it backwards and forwards.

Q. After you told Lacy you would not be concerned in Blood, how long did you continue to ride with him?---A. All along.

Q. Did you ſee Mr. Annesley alight?---A. I did.

Q. Who was by him then?---A. I cannot tell the Man's Name.

Q. What Poſture had you the Gun in?

A. This Way. [Holding it in his left hand, with the Muzzle cocked upwards upon his Arm.]

Mr. Harward. My Lord's Houſe-Steward, Michael Lacy, is indicted, we have had Warrants againſt him, and cannot find him; I want to know from this Witneſs, where this Michael Lacy now is, in whoſe Service, or upon whoſe Eſtate he lives.

Mr. Malone. He is now in this Town, and you ſhall have him.

Mr. Harward. Pray, Gentlemen, where is he?

Mr. Malone. You ſhall have him; we will bring him hither before this Trial is over. [He never was produced.]

Angus Byrne. I ſhall wait three hours in Court 'till I ſee him and talk to him.

STATE of the CASE.

Mr. Spring. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip and you, Gentlemen of the Jury, I am of Counſel with the Noble Earl and the other Traverſers of theſe ſeveral Indictments.

The Traverſers, my Lord, ſtand charged with a Crime, which upon the Face of the Indictments appears to be no more than an ordinary Aſſault; but this Offence, though in its nature one of the loweſt which the Law takes Notice of, has by infiniteS kill and Addreſs been heightened into a Crime of a moſt enormous Size; but I hope we ſhall be able to ſhew to your Lordſhip and the Gentlemen of the Jury, that there is not the leaſt Foundation in Truth for the Light, in which the Counſel for the Proſecutors have endeavoured to put this Tranſaction.

Our Caſe, my Lord, will appear to be this; That the Noble Earl and his Friends, who are now upon their Trials, happened to be on the 16th of September laſt on the Curragh of Kildare, to partake of the Diverſions of the Place: Thither repairs Mr. James Annesley, attended by his Friends, Mr. Mac Kercher, and the other Proſecutors, whether with Intent to meet the Earl, and take hold of any Occaſion that might offer of a Quarrel with him, their ſubſequent Behaviour will beſt explain.

The Earl and his Friends will appear to your Lordſhip to have repaired to this Race-place without any Preparation for what they did not expect, a Battle; they all go unarmed, as Gentlemen always do to a Horſe-race, when nothing is intended but to partake of the Diverſions of the Day.

The Proſecutors, one of whom had, as it is pretended, received ill Treatment two Days before from the Earl, and had conſequently Reaſon to apprehend the like Treatment upon the next Interview, go to that very Place, where they were thus ill uſed, and where it was very notorious the Earl was: but they go prepared for every Event, prepared for that Skirmiſh, which they had Reaſon to expect from the Earl's pretended Miſbehaviour of the 14th; they go in a hoſtile Manner, in terrorem populi, no leſs than five or ſix of them armed with Sword and Piſtol, attended by a numerous Train of Servants armed in like manner with Piſtols, cutting Swords, Carbines and Blunderbuſſes; they go thus armed and attended to ſee a common Horſe-race. A Race, my Lord, is a Place of Entertainment, to which Gentlemen repair without any ſuch hoſtile Preparations: I cannot tell indeed what may be done in North-Britain, but in England and Ireland we have no ſuch Cuſtom; the uſual Manner of riding to Races, is on a Hunting-Saddle, and with a Snaffle Bit.

It will appear, my Lord, by poſitive Teſtimony, that the Words charged on Lord Angleſea, of the 14th of September, as ſpoken to Mr. Mac Kercher; he is a Dog, a Scoundrel, a Villain, and the Coat you ſee on his Back, I ſaw not a Month ago in Monmouth-Street, were not the Words of Lord Angleſea, they were Words uttered by another Perſon. Theſe Gentlemen, two two Days after theſe Words they complain of were ſpoken, repaired to this ſame Curragh. And here I muſt beg Leave once more to obſerve a Circumſtance in itſelf moſt extraordinary: that the Proſecutors, aware of ill Treatment, aware that my Lord Angleſea intended to breed a Quarrel with them, alarmed, as they pretend, with the groſſeſt Inſolence that could be offered to a Gentleman and a Man of Honour, go to the ſame Place where they apprehended they had Reaſon to expect the like or worſe Treatment. It might be expected, if theſe Gentlemen had not imagined they might have derived ſome Benefit, ſome Reputation to their Cauſe, I mean to Mr. Annesley's Claim to the Earldom and Eſtate of Angleſea, that they might have avoided a Quarrel with the Earl, however diſpoſed he might have been to enter into one; but theſe Gentlemen, who had nothing in View but a Quarrel, go there deſignedly to ſeek one, which they at laſt brought upon themſelves by their own Means, and without even the Concurrence of the Earl.

It will appear to your Lordſhip, that theſe Gentlemen, taking ſome Offence at ſome Expreſſions charged upon the Coachman of Lord Angleſea, taking Offence at his driving on the Plain, as he had a Right to do, go to my Lord and demand publick Satisfaction for the Offence his Coachman had given, by ſtripping him in the Field. It will appear, that Mr. MacKercher ſeeks out for Lord Angleſea, whom with Difficulty he found; that he was cautioned and adviſed not to do it; yet it will appear that he goes to Lord Angleſea; that he, who is the known Supporter of Mr. Annesley, calls to Lord Angleſea for publick Satisfaction for an Injury not done to himſelf, but to another; that as the Champion of Mr. Annesley, conſidering himſelf as well the Guardian of this Gentleman's Honour, as the Aſſerter of his Right, he went up towards my Lord, and, in a menacing and violent Manner, forces through a Crowd, and then, with his Whip lifted up ready to ſtrike, cried out, My Lord, you will not turn him off! ſtep aſide with me. Lord Angleſea, who knew the Man and his Buſineſs, which, conſidering all Circumſtances, could be nothing but to quarrel, endeavours to avoid this Quarrel, declines going, and ſays to him, Sir, you can have no Buſineſs with me; and if you have, this is no proper Place to talk about it. Mr. MacKercher ſays, I have no Buſineſs but what may be done here, every Place is proper. My Lord then inquires what he wanted, and is anſwered, My Buſineſs is about your Coachman, who has affronted a Gentleman on the Field. My Lord aſks, Who is the Gentleman? He is told the Gentleman is this very Perſon thus claiming his Honour and Eſtate; and that, as the Affront has been publick, the Satisfaction muſt be adequate, and you muſt ſtrip your Servant, and turn him off directly, and drive yourſelf home. My Lord, this Treatment, which will appear to have been attended with Circumſtances ſufficient to aggravate it, if it had been quite of another Nature, will appear to be the Occaſion of the Quarrel; it will appear that Lord Angleſea declined this Combat, to which he was very unequal, as he was not armed, and to which he was not obliged to expoſe himſelf: he refuſes, my Lord, to turn off his Servant. Mr. MacKercher reſents this; he raiſes his Whip in a threatening Manner, and loudly demands Satisfaction. I had almoſt forgot ſaying, that, during his whole Converſation, he held his Whip over the Earl's Head. Theſe Circumſtances and Menaces will appear, I apprehend, to be no leſs in Point of Law than that he firſt aſſaulted Lord Angleſea. Then it will appear that Mr. Francis Anneſley, the Friend and Relation of Lord Angleſea, who ſaw the Head of his Family, his Friend and Landlord, thus aſſaulted, gives Mr. MacKercher a Blow. It will appear, that though Lord Angleſea did not ſtrike Mr. MacKercher, yet Mr. MacKercher ſtruck him and broke his Head. Mr. Annesley ſtands indicted for aſſaulting not only Mr. MacKercher, but all the other Proſecutors: It will appear that he, upon the giving of this Blow, received two Blows, one from Mr. Gooſtry, and one from Mr. Kennedy, and both behind his Back. My Lord, Mr. Annesley will appear to have been thus aſſaulted by thoſe two Perſons, and yet this is he that is indicted for aſſaulting Mr. Gooſtry and Mr. Kennedy. It will appear that Mr. Annesley called out, and deſired to know who had ſtruck him; and being informed who they were, then, and not 'till then, returned the Blows. With reſpect to Mr. Jans, it will appear that he is the Agent of Lord Angleſea, that he ſaw his Employer, we may call him his Maſter, ſtruck and affronted; and that will be a proper Defence for him. As to the Aſſault upon Mr. James Annesley, there is no Evidence of any ſuch Aſſault. I ſhall give your Lordſhip no further Trouble at this Time. If I have omitted any thing material, there are other Gentlemen joined with me in this Service, who will ſupply my Want of Recollection.

Mr. Morgan. I believe this is our Time to have the Benefit of the Teſtimony of ſome of the Traverſers in Favour of others of them. As to the Indictment for aſſaulting Mr. MacKercher, Lord Angleſea, Mr. Francis Annesley, Mr. Jans and Lacy ſtand charged with that Indictment; and I beg Leave to appeal to your Lordſhip's Notes, whether there be any Colour (from the Evidence given on Behalf of the Crown) for this Indictment as againſt Mr. Annesley and Mr. Jans; and therefore hope that they only will now be given in Charge to the Jury, and that the Jury may be directed to bring in their Verdict as to them, in order, that if they be acquitted upon that Indictment, my Lord Angleſea may have the Benefit of their Teſtimony upon the ſame. When that is done, we ſhall beg Leave to proceed in like manner upon the ſeveral other Indictments, as to ſuch of the Gentlemen as we apprehend have not been affected by the Evidence given on Behalf of the Crown.

Court. Upon the whole Evidence, I take it, that the Aſſault upon Mr. MacKercher ſtands already proved againſt Mr. Francis Annesley only, by Mr. MacKercher, Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Gooſtry; the Aſſault upon Mr. Kennedy ſtands proved againſt Lord Angleſea and Mr. Jans, by Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Archbold: As to the Aſſault upon Mr. Gooſtry, the only Perſon that ſpeaks to that is Mr. Gooſtry himſelf, who ſays, Mr. Annesley ſtruck him with his Whip two Minutes after he had ſtruck Mr. Annesley; ſo that upon that Indictment Mr. Annesley is not guilty in my Apprehenſion, and may be admitted as Evidence to that.

Mr. Harward. I do not know, my Lord, what thoſe Gentlemen would be at; I apprehend the Practice they would introduce is new and unwarranted. Here are in each of theſe Indictments my Lord Angleſea, Mr. Jans, Mr. Francis Annesley, and the out-ſtanding Man indicted; there are four of them in each Indictment.——

Court. It is my Opinion, the Gentlemen of Counſel for the Traverſers may ſeparate the Indictments.

Mr. Harward. My Lord, I do admit the Practice to be, that where it has appeared to the Court upon the Trial, that all the Perſons who could give any Account of the Offence have been indicted, or Bills have been found againſt all the Perſons preſent when the Offence was committed: If it appears upon the Trial, that ſome of thoſe Perſons have not been guilty of the Offence, for which they were indicted, I cannot ſay, but it may be the Practice in ſuch a Caſe to ſeparate the Indictments, and permit ſuch as ſhall be found not guilty to give Teſtimony for the reſt, who happen to be indicted; and that may be reaſonable from the Neceſſity of the Thing, as there can be no other Evidence for the Traverſers, there being no other Perſons preſent at the Time of committing the Offence; otherwiſe the Conſequence might be, that all would be found guilty where the Offence was privately committed, though, in fact, ſome of them were innocent. But where the Offence has been committed before Thouſands, as here, and that four Perſons only are indicted for this, and that after ſix Hours Examination it does appear moſt evidently, that each of theſe Four have had a Hand in the general Affray, though not in the Aſſault of every of the Proſecutors, I would ſubmit it, if that be ſuch a Caſe, as from the Neceſſity and Nature of it, where there can be no want of other indifferent Witneſſes preſumed, the Court will permit that one of them ſhould be at liberty to give Evidence for the other. The Conſequence of it may be, that they may acquit each other of the ſeveral Indictments, and they are not ſuch equal and indifferent Witneſſes as the Law requires, each of them being proved to have had ſome Hand in one Part or other of this general Affray, though not in the actual Aſſault of every of the Proſecutors, and the Evidence in the whole reaches every one of the Traverſers. Can it be ſaid, that thoſe Gentlemen, againſt each of whom Evidence has been given, are ſo unbiaſſed as to be fit Perſons to be examined as Evidence in the Caſe of each other? I humbly apprehend not; and that it may be an Inlet to Perjury, and in great meaſure defeat the End of all Publick Proſecutions for Breach of the Peace. I beg Leave to ſay, that Lord Angleſea is guilty of the Aſſault upon each of the Proſecutors: It has been ſworn that he cried out, Knock them down, knock them down. By thoſe Words he is a Treſpaſſer againſt every Man that was knocked down there. I apprehend the Law to be, that he who directs a Man to be knocked down is a Principal, as well as the Man who commits the Fact. Has it not been ſworn, that he not only encouraged, but alſo gave Directions to purſue Mr. Annesley?——Why, then, as to Mr. Annesley of Ballyſax, does it not appear evidently, that he was the Perſon who ruſhed out upon Mr. MacKercher and ſtruck him, and that afterwards he fell upon Mr. Gooſtry? I think there can be no Doubt but that my Lord Angleſea and Mr. Jans have been moſt deeply concerned in this whole Affray, not only of aſſaulting Mr. MacKercher, but alſo of the reſt. When my Lord was told by Mr. MacKercher, That he dare not for his Soul ſingle himſelf out; Mr. Jans ſaid, Sure you would not do it; are there not enough of us here to go out and to fight him?

Court. Upon three of theſe Indictments there has been no Evidence given that can affect Mr. Francis Annesley, and therefore he is at Liberty to be examined.

Mr. Harward. My Lord, I humbly apprehend, that neither Mr. Anneſley nor any of the Traverſers have the Liberty to be examined 'till they are acquitted. I apprehend, though they may not be affected by Evidence on this or that particular Indictment, that they are not thereby cleared of this Charge; becauſe the Gentlemen of the Jury are to conſider upon the Circumſtances and the Evidence of this whole Caſe, whether they are all guilty or not? And the Court are no Judges of Facts, the Jury muſt determine, and are the proper Judges of them.

Court. But you will allow the Judge to ſay, that there has been no Evidence of ſuch or ſuch a Kind given that can affect ſuch or ſuch a Perſon?

Mr. Harward. That I do not diſpute, my Lord; but what I ſay is true in Point of Law, that the Court have nothing to do with the Determination of the Fact; that is to be left to the Jury; and if ſo, why then, I ſay, that in this Caſe, the Court cannot foreſee who ſhall be found guilty upon this or that Indictment, and who not.

Court. Why, ſhall I not tell the Jury, that there is no Evidence againſt ſuch or ſuch a Perſon, and that they ought to be acquitted?

Mr. Harward. You certainly will, my Lord; but, notwithſtanding that Direction, may not the Jury be of another Opinion concerning this Matter, and may they not conceive, that all thoſe People in general have been guilty, though no Evidence appears againſt Mr. Annesley in particular? Unqueſtionably they may. Now, if it ſhould be done, perhaps your Lordſhip will not fine them above a Penny, unleſs the Jury can ſatisfy the Court, that they went upon their own Knowledge from the whole Evidence, which, in all probability, ſome of them will in the preſent Caſe. So that they are the Judges of the Fact; and, if ſo, I would ſubmit it, whether or no the Court can ſay, in a Caſe of that Nature, We will let one of you be Evidence for another, and ſo the third for the fourth, and by that means ſhift and help one another quite out of this Proſecution?

Court. I am greatly ſurpriſed that the Time of the Court is taken up with contending about this Fact of ſeparating the Indictments. You have debated it before, and it was mutually agreed, that that Point ſhould be given to them. For my Part, I think in point of Law they have a Right to inſiſt upon that, and when it was agreed upon that they ſhould be allowed it, I thought that Method was come into in order to ſave Time. The Argument which is inſiſted upon, that where an Indictment is laid againſt a Perſon ſimul cum others, they ſhall be all tried together, concludes againſt that which I have known done over and over again, and which hardly eſcapes ever being done in caſe of an Action of Aſſault againſt A, with ſimul cum other People.

Mr. Att. Gen. Here is an Indictment againſt Lord Angleſea, Mr. Francis Annesley, and Mr. Jans, for an Aſſault, ſuppoſe, againſt Mr. Gooſtry; has not any one of theſe three Perſons a Right to ſay Mr. Jans is put here to cut me out of my Evidence? They certainly have. I deſire that Mr. Jans may be firſt tried, and that his Indictment may be diſpoſed of before any other Proceedings be had againſt the other two; that if he be acquitted, he may be Evidence for them. And as this would be the Law and the Conſequence in the Caſe of a Traverſe, ſo the Law would be the ſame in any other Caſe. Why then, this is clear that the Agreement has paſſed in this Manner; the Gentlemen of Counſel for the Traverſers made their Objections to the Indictments being tried together, and thoſe on the other Side replied. What was their Anſwer? It was, that where this or that Perſon was not convicted on any one Indictment, he ſhould be at Liberty to give his Evidence for the others on that Indictment.

Mr. Mac Manus. Here are four ſeveral Indictments againſt the Traverſers at the Bar for four Aſſaults; and they are jointly charged in each Indictment.——And where an Offence ariſes from a joint Act, which is in itſelf criminal, the Defendants may be indicted jointly and ſeverally, as that they, and each of them, did ſo and ſo, or jointly only. So is the Law. Now, my Lord, conſider, how it has appeared in Evidence; it has moſt fully and clearly appeared, that all Parties indicted have, one and all, jointly contributed to this unlawful Act; and pleaſe to conſider the Objection theſe Gentlemen make, that if they are deprived of this Benefit, they may want the moſt proper and material Evidence for their Defence; as if ſome Perſons might have been here indicted in order to take off their Teſtimony. Your Lordſhip will pleaſe to obſerve where this Action aroſe, at the Curragh of Kildare, a public Place, where there were a Multitude of People aſſembled; ſo that there could be no Defect of Teſtimony at all on their Side, if any Perſons did or could ſee or hear any thing for their Service; and Numbers of Perſons did and muſt have ſeen this whole Tranſaction; Curioſity, Humanity, or ſome other Motive, muſt have engaged every Eye and every Ear. Then, where there were ſo many Witneſſes that might be had upon this Occaſion, who would either voluntarily, or might have been compelled to come, if material; there can be no Complaint of Want of Evidence, or that the Proſecutors have taken this Method to deprive them of their Teſtimony. And, my Lord, theſe Indictments were of the laſt Aſſizes, ſo there is no Surprize; the Gentlemen might have been fully prepared with any Evidence they thought neceſſary for their Defence, without this extraordinary, this new Method of ſplitting Indictments. And I do apprehend, in this caſe they are in no ſort entitled to the Teſtimony of each other.——It is a ſettled Point, that in Treſpaſs, though one may act more violently, more injuriouſly than another; yet, when all join in an unlawful Act of this nature, the Act of one is the Act of all.——And though A did not ſtrike B, yet if he ſtruck C, where the whole is, as here, one continued Affray, he cannot poſſibly be a legal and competent Witneſs againſt the Crown; the whole is given in Charge to the Jury; he has been in the Affray, and actually committed Acts of Violence; and it has appeared uncontroverted in Evidence, that every Perſon here indicted has been guilty of one Aſſault or another; and that all have been guilty of a publick and dangerous Diſturbance of the Peace.

Court. It has not appeared upon the Evidence, that Lord Angleſea or Mr. Jans actually aſſaulted Mr. Mac Kercher.

Mr. Mac Manus. My Lord, all the Acts of Violence of the Day proceeded from the Directions of Lord Angleſea; menacing Words, lifting up of Hands, his raiſing himſelf up on his Saddle, commanding and inciting others to ſtrike; he himſelf, as Mr. Kennedy and Archbold ſwear, violently ſtriking Kennedy on the Head, and Jans joining him in the Strokes till the People cried out Shame; and though opprobrious, abuſive Language may not be an Aſſault, yet, there are many Things that they carried into Action, not only by Words, but by Geſtures, that prove the Aſſault. My Lord Angleſea was ſo near Mr. Mac Kercher at the Time when Mr. Annesley ſtruck him, that he could have ſtruck him himſelf. Every Thing was done by his Directions; and menacing Words, with a lifted Hand, are an Aſſault in Law; and I do inſiſt upon it, in point of Law, that whoever excites, perſuades, or procures another to commit a Treſpaſs or Treaſon is a principal Offender, and equally guilty in Law, as he who ſtrikes; and more eſpecially ſo when all are preſent; and my Lord Angleſea and Jans were indiſputably preſent, aiding and aſſiſting the aſſaulting of Mr. Mac Kercher, and are in Law guilty of that Aſſault.

Mr. Callaghan. My Lord, as I do on the one Hand agree, that Traverſers are not to be laid under extraordinary Hardſhips, and that Proſecutors by no means are to make uſe of any Contrivance, any Scheme to entrap Men, in order to deprive them of the Benefit of defending themſelves; ſo, on the other Hand, they are not to elude the Rules of Juſtice, by becoming Evidence for each other. I put it upon the Gentlemen on the other Side to ſhew, that ever they met in any Law-Book, that where there was a Fact done in the Preſence of many, and a few only charged with it, that, on the Trial of thoſe few Perſons, the Indictments ſhould be ſeparated, to make them Evidence, in caſe of their Acquittal, for one another. I am the bolder in this Aſſertion, becauſe it is never done, but where extreme Neceſſity requires it; that Neceſſity can never happen, but when all that were preſent at the Time the Offence was committed, are charged in the Indictment with the Committal of it: The Neceſſity, therefore, of examining any of the People charged with the Offence, if acquitted, as Evidence for the reſt, cannot be, but where there is nobody elſe to give Evidence. In that Caſe, it appears but juſt and reaſonable; but, on the other Hand, if you let thoſe four People be Evidence for one another, when many other Witneſſes might be had, who muſt have ſeen the whole Tranſaction; there is no Proſecution of this nature that will not be eluded. But, my Lord, I will go further, and I do ſay that every Perſon charged here is guilty of every Indictment with which he is charged. Wherever there is an Affray or an Aſſault, let who will be the firſt Promoter, every Man that does any Act whatever, that is aiding and aſſiſting in any manner, is guilty of every Act which is done by the reſt, as much as if done by himſelf; where there are ſeveral People that commit an Affray, each is anſwerable for the Act of the other. There is a Charge againſt Lord Angleſea in every Indictment; it ſtands proved in Evidence he has beat Mr. Kennedy; there, my Lord, is a direct Charge; and, though it does not appear he actually ſtruck the reſt, yet it is uncontroverted the reſt were ſtruck on his Account, and by his Directions, and in Law he is as guilty of the Aſſault committed on them, as if he himſelf had actually beat them; I ſay, in point of Law he is guilty of all thoſe Facts for which he is indicted. Let any one of them ſeparately be tried before the Jury, and I will undertake to make them guilty in point of Law; and if ſo, I humbly ſubmit it, whether they can be permitted to try theſe Indictments ſeparately.

Court. Was it not agreed upon at firſt, that if any of the Traverſers were acquitted of any of the Indictments, they ſhould be Evidence for the reſt charged with ſuch Indictment?

Mr. Harward. Let us not be charged by the Court with a Breach of Conſent. I will tell you very candidly what I meant, when the Objection was made. My Meaning was, that as all theſe Indictments were but upon a ſingle Fact, if it ſhould appear, through the Courſe of the Evidence, that any of the Traverſers had no Hand at all in the Fact, but were idle Spectators there, I thought it reaſonable that ſuch Perſon, who did appear to be only a Spectator, ſhould be examined as Evidence for the reſt. That was my Meaning, my Lord; how I was underſtood I cannot account: But I beg leave to rely upon it for Law, and deſire your Lordſhip's Conſideration; Can any body that lifted his Hand up that Day in the Field, be innocent of this Aſſault? Can it be ſaid that he is not guilty of all the Conſequences of it?

Court. Well; but have they not a Right to be tried ſeparately?

Mr. Harward. That is another Point, my Lord.

Court. Gentlemen of Counſel for the Traverſers, you muſt go upon that Indictment, which the Jury are firſt charged with. The Traverſers are firſt charged with the Indictment for aſſaulting Mr. Gooſtry.

Mr. Malone. The Indictment for aſſaulting Mr. Gooſtry, is in no ſort proved againſt the Traverſers. We have many Witneſſes to ſhew, that before ever he was ſtruck, he knocked Mr. Francis Annesley down, which indeed he very candidly admits himſelf; and this appears ſo clearly from his own Teſtimony, it would be miſpending the Time of the Court for us to call our Witneſſes to it. Your Lordſhip obſerves, that in two Minutes after Mr. Francis Annesley got up, and recovered himſelf, Mr. Gooſtry ſwears my Lord Angleſea ſaid to Mr. Francis Annesley, That is he, that is Gooſtry, the greateſt Rogue alive, damn him, knock him down. Mr. Gooſtry does not ſay, whether he heard Mr. Francis Annesley aſk my Lord, who had knocked him down; but, from the Nature of the Thing, it could not be otherwiſe; and the very Anſwer itſelf imports ſuch a Queſtion. A Gentleman is knocked down behind his Back (for ſo the Evidence is), and inſtantly, when he gets up, was it not moſt natural for him to enquire who ſtruck him? It was to this Inquiry, moſt plainly, that Lord Angleſea gave that Anſwer; and then Mr. Francis Annesley goes up to Mr. Gooſtry, and returns his Compliment by breaking his Head. I ſubmit it, therefore, to your Lordſhip, where a Witneſs fairly owns he firſt knocked me down, whether that is not ſuch a ſufficient Juſtification for my ſtriking him, that I need not lay any other Matter before the Jury; for, if Mr. Francis Annesley, who gave the Blow, be not guilty of this Aſſault, it is impoſſible my Lord Angleſea, or Mr. Jans, who did not ſtrike, ſhould be guilty of it. Therefore, I hope your Lordſhip will acquaint the Jury, that there is no Colour for charging any of the Traverſers with this Indictment.

Court. Mr. Gooſtry ſaid, that he was ſtruck, and was all bloody; but I heard none ſay that Lord Angleſea or Mr. Jans ſtruck him, and Gooſtry did acknowledge that about two Minutes before he received the Blow he had ſtruck Mr. Francis Annesley, and at the Time that he did ſtrike him, did ſay, that he believed Mr. Francis Annesley did not know who it was that ſtruck him, and that about two Minutes after my Lord Angleſea ſaid, There is that Villain Gooſtry that ſtruck you; upon which Mr. Francis Annesley ſtruck him. This, as I remember, was Mr. Gooſtry's Evidence.

Mr. Harward. I now deſire to know when it was that Lord Angleſea ſaid, Knock them down, knock them down.

Mr. Callaghan. Mr. Gooſtry expreſly ſwears, it was by the Directions of Lord Angleſea, that Mr. Francis Annesley ſtruck him. He ſays, I thought the Quarrel was all over, there were above two Minutes between the Strokes, and then my Lord Angleſea ſaid, There is the Villain Gooſtry, knock him down.

Mr. Malone. It does not appear from Mr. Gooſtry's Teſtimony, that my Lord ſaid, Knock him down; the utmoſt Gooſtry ſaid, was, that my Lord ſaid, There is the Villain, that is he.

Court. I have nothing upon my Paper about his ſaying any thing concerning the knocking them down.

Mr. Bagot. My Lord, I have it upon my Paper, that Mr. Gooſtry ſaid, There is Gooſtry, as great a Villain as any in Ireland, knock him down.

Mr. Mac Manus. We deſire Mr. Gooſtry may have leave to inform your Lordſhip what he did ſay.

Mr. Gooſtry. My Lord ſaid, There is Gooſtry, another of the Villains, as great a Rogue as any in Ireland, damn him, knock him down.

Court. You ſee, Gentlemen, Mr. Francis Annesley was ſtruck by Mr. Gooſtry, on Evidence, two Minutes before he ſtruck Mr. Gooſtry, can he then be found guilty of an Aſſault on Mr. Gooſtry?

Mr. Grattan. Mr. Gooſtry ſaid, That there was Hurry and Confuſion, and that during that Time he ſtruck Mr. Annesley, and believes Mr. Annesley did not ſee him ſtrike him. I take the Liberty to ſay, that if Mr. Annesley did ſtrike Mr. Gooſtry, and did not ſee Mr. Gooſtry ſtrike him firſt, it was the ſame Thing, in the Intention of his Mind, as if he had not ſtruck him firſt: for, ſince he did not know who had ſtruck him, and yet ſtruck Mr. Gooſtry, it ſhews plainly he was determined to ſtrike him, and nothing can juſtify Mr. Annesley for ſtriking him, but the Provocation of his ſtriking Mr. Annesley.

Mr. Callaghan. There is another Matter, my Lord, which is to be conſidered, that Mr. Annesley ſtruck Mr. Gooſtry after his Paſſion was over. It is true, there is no limited Time for determining a Man's Paſſion, and a Man may in Paſſion commit an Act, and not be the Aſſailant. Your Lordſhip may remember many Caſes in the Books to this purpoſe, which it is not neceſſary to trouble you with; but the Rule is, where a Man has cooled and come to temper, there the precedent Act, which was the Effect of Paſſion, is no Juſtification of the ſubſequent Act. Mr. Gooſtry's Evidence is: I did apprehend all that Matter was over; I do not apprehend the Stroke Mr. Annelley gave me was in conſequence of the Stroke he had received, but of Lord Angleſea's Directions; and if ſo, Mr. Annesley is undoubtedly guilty of the Aſſault on Mr. Gooſtry.

Mr. Malone. As to the Indictment for the Aſſault on Mr. Gooſtry, we contend for it, that there is no Colour for charging the Traverſers with that Indictment, and hope your Lordſhip will let it go to the Jury upon the Evidence of Mr. Gooſtry.

The Counſel for the Proſecuters were over-ruled in their Objection.

The

The Jury go to find whether Lord Anglesea, Mr. Francis Annesley, and Mr. Jans, are guilty of the Assault on Mr. Goostry, on the first Indictment; and, after a quarter of an Hour's stay, return into Court, and find

Lord Anglesea —— Guilty.
Mr. Francis Annesley — Not Guilty.——Mr. Jans — Not Guilty.

Court. Gentlemen of Counsel for the Traversers, call your Evidence.

[Neile O'Neile is called to the Second Indictment, for assaulting Hugh Kennedy, Esq.]

Mr. Malone. There are three Gentlemen, my Lord, Lord Anglesea, Mr. Annesley, and Mr. Jans, indicted for assaulting Mr. Kennedy; they have traversed this Indictment, and Mr. Kennedy himself swears this Assault only on Lord Anglesea.

Court. And upon Mr. Jans; and there is not only his Evidence to prove it, but the Evidence of Mr. Archbold.

Mr. Malone. But there is no Sort of Evidence to affect Mr. Francis Annesley, and therefore, I hope your Lordship will direct the Jury to acquit him, that we may have the Benefit of his Testimony upon this Indictment.

Court. Have you any Objection, Gentlemen concerned for the Crown? You have not offered a Word upon this Indictment.

Mr. Harward. What I have offered before, is all any body can offer to this; and I believe it will soon be seen what the Consequence of it will be.

Court. I call upon you to know, whether you've any Objection to the examining Mr. Francis Annesley on the Indictment for assaulting Hugh Kennedy, Esq.

Mr. Harward. We have an Objection; we do object against examining him, and submit it to the Court.

Mr. MacManus. My Lord Anglesea and Mr. Francis Annesley mutually assisted each other; it is all one and the same Trespass, all one and the same Affray, each is Particeps Criminis, and the whole Scene is interwoven, and mixed together.

Mr. Malone. There is not a single Word of Evidence given, to prove that Mr. Francis Annesley was concerned in the Assault upon Mr. Kennedy, and Mr. Kennedy himself swore to that Effect; therefore we desire that Mr. Annesley may be acquitted of that Indictment, and permitted to give his Evidence.

The Jury go to find, whether Francis Annesley, Esq. is guilty of the Assault on Hugh Kennedy, Esq. or not; and, without quitting the Box, find him——Not Guilty of the Assault in the Indictment.

Mr. Malone. We are now upon an Indictment of Lord Anglesea and Mr. Jans, for assaulting Mr. Kennedy, and desire Mr. Annesley may be sworn.

1 Francis Annesley, Esq.

Mr. Spring. Were you present upon the Curragh on the 16th of September?—Mr. Annesley. I was.

Q. I ask you, was you upon the Course at the Time of the Race?

A. I was.

Q. Was you present when Mr. MacKercher and his Company came up upon the Horse-Course?

A. I never saw one of them before that Day in my Life.

Q. Did you see Mr. Kennedy come up to speak to Lord Anglesea?

A. I don't remember that I ever saw his Face before this Day.

Q. Did you see any body come to ask him about his Behaviour?

A. I did.

Q. Who?——A. Mr. MacKercher.

Q. Do you remember any such Person upon the Course that Day, as Mr. Kennedy?

A. I was told after, that his Name was Kennedy, and I saw some Strokes between him and Lord Anglesea.

Q. Can you say that the Person you saw there was the same with him you now see here?

A. I don't remember his Face at all, but was told it was he.

Q. Can you take upon you to say you saw him that Day?

A. I did not see him that Day that I know of.

Q. What colour'd Cloaths had the Person on you saw engaged with Lord Anglesea?

A. It was Scarlet.

Q. And did not you see his Face?

A. I saw his Face, but I don't know it again.

Q. In what Situation was you when he struck you?

A. I had my Back to him.

Q. How do you know then that he struck you?

A. I apprehend, though my Back was to him, it was he, and upon his striking me, my Lord struck him.

Q. Did you see him strike my Lord?——A. I did.

Q. Which of them gave the first Stroke?

A. The first Stroke that was given was by my Lord to Mr. Kennedy, some Minutes after I had got a Stroke upon my Head.

Q. Were Mr. MacKercher and Mr. Goostry near?—A. They were.

Q. Was Mr. Jans near Mr. Kennedy?

A. I believe Mr. Jans was pretty near, but not within Reach of him.

Q. Did you see Mr. Jans or he give any Stroke to each other?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you think Mr. Jans could have struck him without your seeing him?—A. I don't think he could.

Neile O'Neile.

Mr. Morgan. Pray, Sir, do you know the Inn at Newbridge?

O'Neile. I do.

Q. Where was you on the 13th of September, in the Night?

A. In the Afternoon I went there, I was at Lord Besborough's; and Mr. MacKercher, Mr. Kennedy, and Mr. Livingstone, to the best of my Knowledge, sent a Messenger to my House to speak with me.

Court. Who told you they sent to speak to you?

A. My Wife, when I came home.

Q. Did you go to them?---A. I went to Newbridge.

Q. What Day was this?---A. It was the 15th I went to the Races.

Q. You went to them?---A. I did.

D. Name them again.

A. Mr. MacKercher, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Livingstone, and Mr. Goostry.

Mr. Morgan. Where did you go to the 15th?---A. To Newbridge.

Q. When you came there, who did you meet, and what passed?

A. On the 15th, the Gentlemen never were upon the Sod before, and they went all together to the Curragh.

Court. Upon the 15th?

A. Whatever Day the Race was, it was that Day,----on Wednesday,---as to the Day, I cannot be positive, I did not observe the Day of the Month.----It was the 14th. There was never a Horse to start but one. They said, they never were upon the Ground but at that Time, and upon going to the Curragh, there was no Diversion, and we came back, and Mr. MacKercher said, he saw Lord Anglesea, See what a Look, says he, he gave at us all that Day; but, says he, I want nothing but to expose him to the Populace, and I'll make it my Business to do it before I go back to Dublin.

Q. Who was the Company? Name them.

A. There was Mr. MacKercher, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Livingstone, and Mr. Goostry present, and I don't know but Mr. Robinson was there.

Q. Can you be positive who was there?

A. I know Mr. MacKercher, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Livingstone, Mr. Goostry, and Mr. Annesley were there.

Mr. Harward. My Lord, I desire the Court may take Notice he swears positively that Mr. Livingstone was one of the Company, and we can prove him to be in England at that Time.

Witness. In England! I can bring People to prove, that saw him in Naas the next Day after the Races.

Mr. Spring. Was you upon the Curragh the 16th?---A. I was.

Q. Was you there when Mr. Kennedy was there?

A. I saw him there.

Q. What Part of the Curragh did you first see him on?

A. I went along with him to the Curragh, for we dined at Newbridge that Day.

Mr. Att. Gen.] If you can prove, Gentlemen, that Mr. Livingstone was not there, what need you ask this Man another Question?

Mr. Malone.] My Lord, we will produce the top Men of the Country to his Character.

Mr. Spring.] Was you by with Mr. Kennedy when he met my Lord Anglesea?

A. I was by with him most Part of the Day.

Q. Then give an Account of what happened when they first met?

A. I cannot tell whether I was present at their first Meeting; but when they met, they never spoke a Word to one another, but at the Time of the Action.

Q. What Action, was there a Quarrel?

A. There was a Quarrel, and Mr. MacKercher was the Beginner of it. So there happened some Words that the Coachman had said to Mr. Annesley; and upon the same, Mr. MacKercher was very angry, and said, that the Thing was intended on purpose.

Court.] To whom?

A. To Mr. Kennedy and the Gentlemen in the Crowd with him; and I was there at the same Time.

Q. What Words were they?

A. The Words Shoe-boy, or some such Thing.—And upon that, he said, He would make Application to my Lord, and if he did not discharge the Servant, he would have Satisfaction for it. Upon which, my Lord happened to be down where there was a Dispute about Sir Edward O'Brien's Mare running on the wrong Side of the Post; and we rode around until they came to the Winning-Post, where my Lord was. Upon which, Mr. MacKercher told him, That his Servant used him ill, and hoped for Satisfaction from him, and that he would turn him off. My Lord said, He would not. And upon that Mr. MacKercher said, He did not use him well, and would have Satisfaction. And he had the Whip up in his Hand in order to strike, and he rode a Stone-horse, and he was vicious, and I don't know whether the Stroke was intended for my Lord or for the Horse.

Mr. Spring.] Did you see Lord Anglesea and Mr. Kennedy together that Day?---A. I saw them close together.

Q. Did any Thing happen between them?

A. I saw them strike one another.

Q. Who?---A. Mr. Annesley and Mr. Kennedy.

Q. Give an Account of that?

A. When Mr. Goostry struck Mr. Francis Annesley, he was for about two Minutes before he found out who it was. Upon which, he asked who it was; and my Lord said, That is the Man, that Goostry, pointing to him. Upon which he went over, and made a Stroke at Mr. Goostry, and there were some Strokes that passed; and upon that, Mr. Kennedy came and made a Stroke at Mr. Francis Annesley, and hit my Lord over the Wig, but whether it hurt him or no I cannot tell, or whether the Stroke was intended for him or not, I cannot tell.

Court.] Did you see the Stroke reach my Lord?

A. I did see it reach him upon the Wig.

Q. Did you see my Lord strike Mr. Kennedy?

A. I did. As soon as he received that Stroke, he up with his Whip and struck him.

Mr. Spring.] Did you see Mr. Jans there?---A. I did.

Q. Where was he at the Time of this Quarrel?--A. He was in a Crowd.

Q. Did you see any Engagement between Mr. Kennedy and Jans?

A. I did.

Q. Who struck first?

A. That I cannot swear to at all, which of them struck first; for the Crowd rushing backward and forward, I could not be distinct.

Q. Was the Blow given by Mr. Kennedy to Lord Anglesea, before Mr. Jans and Kennedy were engaged?

A. It was before I saw them engaged.

Q. Which struck first, Jans or Kennedy?

A. By virtue of my Oath, I cannot tell which; I saw Blood run down Mr. Kennedy, and whether it was he struck Mr. Jans first or no, I cannot tell: for when I saw my Lord receive the Stroke, I turned about my Horse, and did not mind. I was just crossing between him and my Lord, and whether Mr. Kennedy struck at Jans first I cannot tell.

Q. But you said you saw Mr. Kennedy strike Lord Anglesea before you saw Lord Anglesea give a Stroke?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. What happened between Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Jans?

A. I cannot tell.

Court.] Gentlemen concerned for the Crown, will you ask this Man any Questions?

Mr. Harward.] We will not aſk him any Queſtion, but beg, for Juſtice ſake, he may not be permitted to get out of the Court, till we proceed to give Evidence againſt him for Perjury.

Court.] How long have you been acquainted with Mr. Mac Kercher? O'Neile. I believe ſince his firſt coming into the Kingdom.

Q. And with Mr. Kennedy?---A. Yes.

Q. And with Mr. Gooſtry?---A. No, not with him.

Q. How came you to go with them to the Curragh?

A. I had an Intimacy with Mr. Annesley, (for he was ſome time at my Father's Houſe when a Child) on his firſt coming into the Kingdom, and they ſent for me.

Q. On what Buſineſs did they ſend for you?

A. I cannot tell, my Lord.

Q. Who went to the Curragh with you?

A. We went all together to the Races, and we had diſcourſe as we went along.

Mr. Mac Manus.] Who did they then ſend for you?---A. Several.

Q. Who were they?---A. Their own Servants.

D. Name the Servants.---A. One Barney Neale, and ſeveral of them.

Mr. Digby, Foreman of the Jury.] Did you meet me coming home on the Road that Day?

A. Yes, Sir, I believe I did, I cannot recollect.

Q. Did you ſay any thing to me?---A. I cannot ſay I did.

Q. Did not you expreſs Concern to me at the Treatment Mr. Mac Kercher and Mr. Annesley had received?---A. I do not remember that I did.

Q. Did not you expreſs yourſelf, that you thought they were uſed very hard?---A. I do not know but I might tell you ſo.

Mr. Har.] I deſire, my Lord, that Mr. Livingſtone may be called, to ſatisfy you he was in England laſt September.

Court.] You had better ſtay a little.

[Patrick Cavenagh is called, and goes away again, being to be examined to another Point.]

Mr. Callaghan.] We'll beg Leave to produce Mr. Livingſtone, to ſhew your Lordſhip where he was in September laſt.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTONE, Eſq.

Mr. Callaghan.] Where was you in September laſt?

Mr. Livingſtone.] In London.

Q. Was you any Part of that Month in Ireland?---A. I was not.

Q. When did you come over to Ireland?

A. It was the Middle of October before I came to this Kingdom.

[Mr. Malone informs the Court, that in October he ſaw Mr. Livingſtone at Parkgate ready to embark for Ireland.]

Croſs Examination.

Mr. Spring.] Do you know this Mr. Neile?

Mr. Livingſtone.] Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you ever ſee him in Mr. Mac Kercher's or Mr. Kennedy's Company?---A. I have.

Q. Were they not well acquainted?---A. Yes, I believe they were.

Q. Was he employed by Mr. Mac Kercher or Mr. Kennedy?

A Sir, when we came firſt into Ireland about two Years ago, Neile met us uncall'd-for at Kill; he told us a great deal of his Knowledge of Mr. Annesley at Kinna, and the Witneſſes that knew his Affairs; and often came about us upon that Errand, till at laſt he came ſo often, that he was uſed with the utmoſt Diſregard; and when we found out his Character, he was never ſuffered to come about the Houſe at all.

Mr. Digby.] What Character has he? Do you think he is an honeſt Man?

A. We were Strangers in this Country; he looked like an honeſt Man to us at firſt, but upon a better Information we found him quite the Reverſe.

Mr. Mac Manus.] My Lord, we deſire my Lord Allen may be ſworn, to give a Character of this Man.

The Right Honourable Lord Viſcount ALLEN.

Mr. Mac Manus.] Pray, my Lord, do you know this Neile O Neile?

Lord Allen. I know him very well, and believe no Man bears a more infamous Character in the County of Kildare.

Q. Does your Lordſhip think he deſerves any Credit?

A. I am confident he does not; he is a very great Villain; I would not credit him, nor believe one Word he ſays. I know that no Gentleman would admit you into his Company at the Time you were employed by me; and my Uncle and I had often many Words becauſe I employed you, and we found you out to be the greateſt Rogue that could be.

Court.] Do you think he is a Man to be credited upon Oath?

A. No, my Lord, he is not.

Mr. Mac Manus.] We beg leave to produce the Miniſter of the Pariſh where he lives.

The Rev. Mr. JOHN DAWSON.

Mr. Mac Manus.] Do you know Neile O Neile?

Mr. Dawſon. I know him ever ſince I came into the Pariſh of Naas.

Q. How long is that, Sir?---A. I have been two Years there.

Q. What Character has he generally bore during that Time?

A. I have always heard he was a Perſon guilty of as many Frauds as he was capable of committing; I cannot account for his Morals, but he is a Perſon that was always very litigious.

Q. What is his general Character?

A. Why, I proteſt, I have known him guilty of Numbers of Lyes and Falſhoods, and is a Perſon, I think, not to be credited.

Q. Do you believe him a Perſon to be credited upon his Oath?

A. The general Character is, that he is a Perſon not only litigious, but capable of any Cheat imaginable.

Q. Is he, or is he not to be believed upon his Oath?

A. I ſhould give little Credit to his Oath, becauſe I have heard his Word ſo often forfeited.

Lord Viſcount Allen.] He is the greateſt Rogue alive. 'Tis nine Years ſince he robbed me; I have had Warrants out againſt him, and could never catch him, but will now ſend him to Gaol before I leave this Town.

Mr. Malone.] We deſire Maurice Keating, Eſq. may be called to the Character of O-Neile— [Mr. Keating is called, but does not come into Court.

Mr. Spring to Mr. Dawſon.] Was not this Neile an Agent to Mr. Mac-Kercher and Mr. Annesley?

Mr. Dawſon. He had the Repute in Naas ſome time ago of being a ſtrenuous Friend of theirs; but I never ſaw him about them; I had no Occaſion to interfere in their Affairs.

Court.] Gentlemen of the Jury, the Lord Angleſea and Mr. Jans ſtand indicted for an Aſſault on Mr. Kennedy. I ſhall only tell you, Gentlemen, that I find, on the Recollection of the Evidence, it ſtands fully proved by Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Archbold, that both his Lordſhip and Mr. Jans, without Provocation, without any Attempt in Mr. Kennedy to ſtrike a Blow, did ſtrike and ſorely beat this Gentleman. Thus it ſtands proved upon their Teſtimony; and, Gentlemen, the only Evidence offered to take off this Charge was firſt Mr. Francis Annesley; and I do think you may lay what he ſays entirely out of the Caſe; for he tells you he never ſaw Mr. Kennedy before this Day, and did ſee Lord Angleſea and a Gentleman in Red engaged that Day on the Curragh; but who that Gentleman was he cannot tell, and knows not whether it was Mr. Kennedy or not, but that he ſaw ſeveral Blows paſs between them. And Mr. Annesley with great Candour and Integrity ſaid, that if it was proved that Mr. Kennedy and that Gentleman were the ſame, he ſaw him give no Provocation; ſo that it ſtill remains clear and undoubted upon the Teſtimony of Mr. Annesley, that my Lord Angleſea and Mr. Jans are both guilty of the Aſſault upon Mr. Kennedy; for he tells you farther, that the firſt Stroke that was given between them was by my Lord. Why then the only other Evidence produced was a Perſon of extremely different Character from Mr. Annesley, one Neile O Neile, a Surgeon from Naas; and what does he ſay? He tells you that he was at the Inn of Newbridge with thoſe Gentlemen; that he was ſent for by them to Naas, and being from home, was told, when he returned, they had ſent for him, and that there he went and found Mr. Mac Kercher, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Gooſtry, and twice I am poſitive, I think three times, ſwore that he ſaw Mr. Livingſtone there too. That with theſe Gentlemen he went to the Curragh; that in the Way Mr. Mac Kercher told him, He wanted of all Things in the World to expoſe the Lord Angleſea to the Populace, and was determined to do it before he returned to Dublin; that for that Purpoſe he began the Quarrel: but ſays he did not ſee Mr. Mac Kercher ſtrike my Lord, nor attempt to ſtrike him: That he was upon a vicious Stone-Horſe, and whether he lifted up his Whip to correct his Horſe, or for what other Purpoſe, he cannot tell. He tells you further, that he ſaw Mr. Kennedy ſtrike my Lord, but knows not whether he intended to ſtrike him or not: and ſays, he believes the Stroke did not hurt my Lord. That upon this, my Lord ſtruck him; but if you believe him, the firſt Blow hit upon my Lord. Why then, this Man having ſworn that Mr. Livingſtone was one of this Company, and it being alledged that he was then in England, Mr. Livingſtone was ſworn to account whether he was or no. He declares upon his Oath he was not in Ireland at that Time, but in London, and came over to this Kingdom in October; and ſays, he knew that this Man was acquainted with Mr. Mac Kercher and Mr. Kennedy, and employed by them; but that he met them on the Road uncalled-for, frequently attended them under Pretence of ſerving them, until at length he became ſo troubleſome, they were obliged to diſmiſs him, and forbid him to come near them. Then, in the next place, in order to diſcredit him further, the Counſel for the Proſecutors called my Lord Allen to give a Character of him; and his Lordſhip tells you, that he is of a moſt infamous Character, of ſuch a one, that his Lordſhip ſwears poſitively he is not to be credited on his Oath. The ſame bad Character is given him by Mr. Dawſon, the Miniſter of the Place where he lives.

You ſee, Gentlemen, there is nothing in the World offered but the Evidence of this Man to take off the Weight of Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Archbold; and you will conſider what Credit he deſerves.

The Jury go to find whether Lord Angleſea and Mr. Jans are guilty of the Aſſault upon Hugh Kennedy, Eſq. or not; and find

Lord Angleſea - - - - Guilty.
Mr. Jans - - - - Guilty.

The Indictment for the Aſſault on DANIEL MAC KERCHER, Eſq.

Mr. Malone.] This, in reality, is the main Indictment, upon which all the reſt have been grounded. It does not appear by any Evidence, that my Lord Angleſea and Mr. Jans had any hand in aſſaulting him; and therefore we hope, upon the Rule you have laid down, to be allowed the Benefit of their Teſtimony. Mr. Mac Kercher himſelf, in his Evidence upon this Indictment, does not pretend that either Lord Angleſea or Mr. Jans did aſſault him on the Curragh. If I miſtake your Evidence, you'll ſet me right.

Mr. Mac Kercher.] What do you underſtand, Sir, by aſſaulting me?

Mr. Malone.] I mean a Blow.

Mr. Mac Kercher.] I cannot ſay they gave me any Blow.

Court.] The Account Mr. Mac Kercher gave was, that after a good deal of opprobrious Language, he told my Lord Angleſea, He lyed, and dared not for the Soul of him ſingle himſelf out, and tell him ſo. That upon thoſe Words Mr. Francis Annesley ſtepped forward, and ſtruck Mr. Mac Kercher upon the Forehead, which occaſioned a Swelling and a Bleeding: and I do not recollect that Mr. Mac Kercher gave any thing in Evidence that my Lord ſaid or did to him more than this.

Mr. Malone.] As there does not appear any Evidence that can affect Lord Angleſea and Mr. Jans on this Indictment, we beg leave to deſire your Lordſhip will give the Jury ſome Directions concerning them before we proceed further.

Mr. Harward.] I believe there can be very little Doubt, when you conſider, but that Mr. Jans is guilty of the Aſſault upon Mr. Mac Kercher; and I'll tell your Lordſhip the Reaſon why I apprehend it ſo; becauſe there is no Controverſy but that this Man, upon the Words which paſſed between Lord Angleſea and Mr. Mac Kercher, ruſhed out and ſaid, Sure, my Lord, you would not offer to fight this Fellow, while there are ſo many here by to fight him for you. What follows upon this? Why then, one of this very Company goes out and ſtrikes him. Pray, my Lord, are not they all all guilty of the Trespass committed against him? I do say they are all Principals, and that there is no distinguishing in Law between the Man that struck, and the Man that assisted by Word or Act.

Mr. MacManus.] I apprehend the Question to be, Whether my Lord Anglesea and Mr. Jans assaulted a particular Person whom they incited others to strike, and whom their Rage and Passion would have inclined them to strike, if they could as forcibly have struck him, as they did other Persons nearer to them of the same Party. In Construction of Law it is an Assault; they both did assault Mr. MacKercher, and that clearly appears from the Evidence.

Court.] The Evidence of Mr. MacKercher was, that upon my Lord's calling him Thief, Scoundrel, and Villain, Mr. MacKercher said, You dared not for your Soul single yourself out, and tell me so. Upon which some that were by said, My Lord, you go fight such a Scoundrel! here are enough to go out with him. What ensued upon this? Why, then Mr. MacKercher tells you, that upon further Words between them, he said, My Lord, you lye; and that immediately upon his saying so, not a Word said by any other Person, Mr. Francis Annesley stepped forward, and struck him a Blow on the Forehead.

Mr. Bagot.] If I apprehend his Testimony aright, Mr. MacKercher said the Words, You lye, were antecedent to the other Words.

Court.] The Jury, I see, have taken very accurate Notes, and they'll take care to do what is right.

(Patrick Cavenagh, Dancing-Master.)

Mr. Morgan.] Do you recollect where you were the 16th of September last?——Mr. Cavenagh.] I do.

Q. Where was you?——A. I was at the Curragh at the Time of the Races.

Q. Did you see Lord Anglesea there?——A. I did.

Q. Did you see Mr. Jans there?——A. I did.

Q. Did you see Mr. MacKercher there?——A. I saw him there.

Q. Give an Account to the Court and the Jury, what you recollect to have passed touching Mr. MacKercher's coming up to Lord Anglesea.

A. I heard some little Thing when I was at Kilcullen-Bridge before the Race, of some Design, and it made me a little more particular. My Lord Anglesea was going down to the Winning-Post when the Dispute was about the Running of the Horses, and I parted from him there; and as I was going, I saw these Gentlemen, Mr. Annesley, Mr. MacKercher, Goostry, and Kennedy, going towards Lord Anglesea. When I saw that, I immediately recollected what I had heard at the Bridge, that there would be a Quarrel; upon which I returned immediately again, and when I came up, I found there was a Crowd about them, and they were engaged in Words: And I just came up at the Time when my Lord Anglesea said, Sir, I would not suffer my Servants to affront any one, let alone a Gentleman. I just came in upon that Answer, and I don't know what passed before at all.

Q. What did Mr. MacKercher reply to that?

A. I could not hear well what he said, for he spoke very low; but Lord Anglesea spoke very loud.

Q. Was Mr. MacKercher near Lord Anglesea?

A. He was close to my Lord, the Horses Heads were just together; and then I heard Mr. MacKercher some little Time after say, My Lord, your Servant has affronted a Gentleman. And my Lord answered, What Gentleman? And Mr. MacKercher assured him again, That he was a Gentleman; but did not tell who he was.

Q. Did not he tell my Lord at all who he was?

A. Mr. MacKercher assured him twice or thrice that he was a Gentleman, and insisted upon my Lord's doing him Justice, without telling him who the Gentleman was, but at last pointed to him; upon which, when Mr. MacKercher insisted on that, and desired him to turn him off, my Lord said, Is it for you? or Words to that Purpose. And Mr. MacKercher still insisted upon it for affronting a Gentleman.

Q. Was Mr. Francis Annesley or Mr. Jans near my Lord at this time?

A. Mr. Annesley was close by my Lord, and so was Mr. Jans; they stood close together, and my Lord a little on one Side speaking to Mr. MacKercher.

Q. What was it my Lord said to Mr. MacKercher?

A. My Lord said, He would not turn him off for him.

Q. What ensued upon that?

A. Mr. MacKercher insisted upon it, and held up the Butt-End of his Whip at my Lord; upon which Mr. Annesley gave him a Blow before he could give my Lord a Blow, if he intended it.

Q. Did he positively turn up the Butt-End of his Whip?

A. He turned up the Butt-End of his Whip, Sir.

Q. How did he hold his Whip when he spoke to my Lord?

A. He had the proper End of it in his Hand first; but upon my Lord's refusing to turn his Coachman off, he turned his Whip, and said, You won't turn him off, my Lord!

Q. What Kind of a Whip was it that Mr. MacKercher had?

A. I cannot be particular.

Q. Was it a long or a short Whip?

A. It was a long Whip; it either had a Lash, or was one of the Whips with a prodigious long End to it.

Mr. Harward.] Was it not a short Jockey-Whip?——A. It was not.

Q. Had it a Lash to it?——A. I don't believe it had a Lash, but he took it about the Middle, or thereabouts, in his Hand.

Q. Did he hold it in a threatening Manner?

A. He did, and said in Anger, You won't turn him off, my Lord!

Mr. Morgan.] Was there, or was there not before that Time in which he turned his Whip, any Stroke given, by virtue of your Oath?

A. There was none given before that Time, by virtue of my Oath.

Q. Did you observe Mr. Jans at that Time?——A. I did.

Q. Did you see him do any Thing?——A. I did not.

Q. Did you see him strike Mr. MacKercher, or any body?

A. I did not. He spoke to Mr. MacKercher, and asked him, Dared he ask any one else there, for he was not worth my Lord's while?

Mr. Digby.] I think you said, some Conversation had passed at Kilcullen-Bridge, about a Design to quarrel?

A. I heard there, as I was mounting my Horse, that there would be a Quarrel.

Q. When was it you heard so?

A. It was the Morning, the 16th, before I went to the Curragh.

Q. Who was it told you so?

A. I heard that a Gentleman came from Dublin, and told Mr. Jans there would be a Quarrel, and I think it was he told me, that there would be a great Quarrel at the Curragh that Day.

Q. Who said this?

A. I heard it from Mr. Jans, and, I think, Mr. Tynan. Jans said he was informed by one out of Dublin, that there would be a Quarrel there.

Q. When did Mr. Jans say he was told so by one from Dublin?

A. He said, he heard by one from Dublin that Morning, that there would be a Quarrel.

Mr. Bagot.] You say, that Mr. Jans told you he heard from Dublin there would be a Quarrel; did he hear it from Dublin, or from a Gentleman that came from Dublin?

A. He told me from a Gentleman that came from Dublin.

Q. Do you know the Road from Dublin to Newbridge?

A. Not very well.

Q. Do you know whether Newbridge lies on the Road between Kilcullen and Dublin?

A. I know it does not lie on the Turnpike Road.

Mr. Digby.] Explain yourself, what you mean had passed when Mr. MacKercher had challenged my Lord.

A. When my Lord refused to give him Satisfaction, he said, He dared not tell him so aside by himself. And my Lord said, He would go with him aside. Upon which Mr. Annesley and Mr. Jans said, He should not.

Q. You said Mr. Jans told you, he was informed of a Quarrel that would happen; I ask you, whether he told you the Gentleman that informed him gave him any Reasons why he apprehended there would be a Quarrel?

A. Mr. Jans told me, he was informed there would be a Quarrel, that a Gentleman from Dublin told him there would be a Quarrel; and told me no more.

(Gross-Examination.)

Mr. Harward takes a Gentleman's Whip in his Hand, and says, A Thong-Whip is where there is a Thong, this is a Fox-Hunter.

Cavenagh.] I understand it to be such a Whip as that; I cannot tell what you call it.

Mr. Harward.] This is a Fox-Hunter. Now, Sir, will you take this Whip, and shew us how Mr. MacKercher exercised his Whip?

A. Sir, this is the Way he had it when I saw him first, [holding the Handle in his Hand] and while I saw him talking with my Lord, he took it up in this Manner [holding the Whip by the Middle].

Q. Tell what People were next to you at that Time.

A. I do not know who was next to me, for I did not know them; I saw Mr. Jans on the other Side, almost opposite to me, and Mr. Francis Annesley, Mr. Kennedy, and Mr. Goostry, were, I think, together to my left Hand.

Q. Now, I think you said, when Lord Anglesea was challenged, you understood it was a Challenge to fight?——A. I did.

Q. I think you have also said, that Lord Anglesea upon that said, he would go out and fight Mr. MacKercher?

A. He said he would go with him, but I do not think he would have gone.

Q. Are you sure he said he would go out and fight him?

A. I am sure he said so.

Q. What was it my Lord said?

A. Mr. MacKercher asked him the Question twice or thrice; upon which my Lord said, Well, I will. And the others said, He should not.

Q. Did what Mr. MacKercher said appear to be in a challenging Manner?——A. It did.

Q. When Lord Anglesea said he would go out with him, did not you apprehend that he would go and fight with him?

A. How do I know, Sir, whether he would or no?

Q. What did you understand my Lord meant?

A. To me it looked indeed as if they would be engaged.

Q. What did you apprehend my Lord intended to do upon his saying those Words?

A. I did not believe my Lord would go out to fight.

Q. You apprehended Mr. MacKercher meant that my Lord should go to fight?——A. I did.

Q. If so, what Reason could make you not apprehend that my Lord did not mean to fight?

A. No, perhaps not, it might be otherwise; it did not come to that Issue, therefore I cannot judge.

Q. Had my Lord any Arms?

A. He had not.

Q. Are you certain that Mr. MacKercher meant to fight?

A. Indeed I cannot tell. How can I be certain? If you challenge me, how do I know whether you will fight me or no?

Q. What do you believe?

A. I protest I cannot answer whether they would have fought, if my Lord had gone.

Q. Do not you believe, if a Man challenges another to fight, he who gives the Challenge means to fight?——A. I do believe.

Q. Do not you believe the Man that accepts the Challenge does?

A. It is probable he does; but I do not believe my Lord intended to fight.

Q. What Kind of a Whip had Mr. MacKercher in his Hand?

A. It was a long Whip, a hunting Whip.

Q. Was it not a Jockey Whip that Mr. MacKercher had that Day?

A. It appeared to have a Tail twice as long as this almost; (the Witness at the same time held out a hunting Whip with a long Lash to it.)

Q. To Mr. MacKercher. Had you ever such a Whip?

A. I might possibly some time or other in my Life have had such a Whip in my Hand, but I never make use of such a Whip; I had a very small Whip, one of the smallest Size, that Day.

Dennis Tynan.

Mr. Spring. Do you know Mr. Jans?

Tynan. I do.

Q. Recol-

Q. Recollect what Converſation you had with him at the Time of the Races at the Curragh, the 15th or 16th of September, concerning any Quarrel that you had heard there was likely to be. Had you any Converſation with him?---A. I had.

D. Tell what it was.

A. On Monday before the Races, I cannot tell the Day of the Month now, but I could if I was in Dublin, becauſe I kept a regular Table.

Q. What do you mean by a regular Table?

A. I mean of my Buſineſs.

Q. What Buſineſs do you follow?—A. That of a Druggiſt and a Dyer.

D. Well, go on.

A. Mr. Uſher of Balſoon and Purcell the Butcher, as he told me he was, the Man that kept the young Earl ſome time, they were in my Shop; I happened to be backwards when they came in, and when I ſaw them, I came out to know what Buſineſs they had, and I firſt ſpoke to Purcell, and aſked what he wanted. He told me they were come there to wait for the young Earl. I went backwards on that, and came into the Shop again; and in a little while after, Mr. MacKercher came into the Shop, and ſpoke to my Man over the Counter. I did not hear what he ſaid, and my Man had a Room over the Way, and they went there together and ſtayed for ſome Time; and while he was away, ſays I, Is that the young Earl? No, by G—d, ſays Purcell, but a cleverer Fellow, a Fellow that would whip the old Earl if he had hold of him. Aye, ſays Uſher, by G—d he would wring his Noſe. So Mr. MacKercher came back, took Coach and went off; and they went off after him.

Q. What Day was this?—A. It was Monday.

Q. Tell what you did relate to Mr. Jans.

A. I told him, that my Servant had told me, that Uſher had told him, there were ten Men armed and gone to the Curragh.

[Note, Mr. MacKercher and his Company did not ſet out till Wedneſday.]

Court. To Mr. MacKercher.] Do you hear what this Man ſwears; was you ever in his Shop?—A. I do not know that ever I was.

Croſs Examination.

Mr. MacManus.] Do you know young Mr. Annesley?

A. I believe I ſhould know him.

Q. Was you ever in England, Sir?---A. I was.

Q. Was you ever concerned in the Proſecution of Mr. Annesley at the Old-Bailey?---A. Not upon the Proſecution, upon my Oath.

Q. Was you a Witneſs there?---A. I will anſwer you. I was to be a Witneſs to tell what I knew of one Paul Keating.

Q. Do you know Mr. Giffard?

A. I do. Mr. Jans brought me to him, and deſired me to tell Mr. Giffard what I knew of Paul Keating.

[Hereupon this Witneſs was turned off the Table by the Traverſers own Counſel.]

The Jury go to try whether Lord Angleſea and Mr. Jans are guilty of the Aſſault on Mr. MacKercher or not, and find

Lord Angleſea——————Guilty.
Mr. Jans——————Guilty.

Mr. Spring. My Lord, I do not know whether it will be neceſſary to trouble your Lordſhip with any further Evidence; for my Part, I am ſatisfied to reſt upon the Evidence of the Crown, and not trouble your Lordſhip and the Jury with any thing further upon that Evidence; but my Duty calls upon me to do every thing I can for my Clients, and therefore with reſpect to Mr. Annesley, I would ſay a ſhort Thing. The Jury will conſider who was the firſt Aggreſſor in this Aſſault, and will find it was Mr. MacKercher. I do inſiſt upon it, in Point of Law, that the lifting up an Hand in the manner Mr. MacKercher did, as appears even from his own Confeſſion, is in point of Law an Aſſault; it appears, and the Jury cannot forget, that theſe Gentlemen went into the Field armed and prepared for Battle, that they went to this Horſe-Race attended by many Servants, all armed in an unuſual Manner, in ſuch an extraordinary Manner, as cannot be juſtified by Law; becauſe going armed to Places, where all other People generally go unarmed, is in terrorem populi, and not ſuffered by the Law. Why then Mr. MacKercher and his Company, who, as they pretend, had been inſulted by my Lord on the 14th, repair to the ſame Place again armed in this manner, which plainly ſhews what their Intent was, and that it was no other but to bring on a Quarrel with my Lord Angleſea. It appears from the Evidence, that upon ſome Indignity offered by a Coachman to Mr. James Annesley, Mr. MacKercher goes to call Lord Angleſea to an Account, and demand publick Satisfaction, and it appears that he was cautioned not to go for fear of bringing on a Quarrel, and that, notwithſtanding, he went and forced through the Crowd to get at my Lord; ſo that it appears, inſtead of declining a Combat, as he would willingly make you believe he did, he brought it upon himſelf, he went to call upon Lord Angleſea for an Offence not done to himſelf, he calls him out to fight him, and my Lord declines doing ſo, by telling him, This is no Time nor Place, you ſee I have no Piſtols. Mr. MacKercher anſwered, Your Servant has affronted a Gentleman, Mr. Anneſley, and as it was publick, it is expected that you ſtrip him and turn him off. And ſo my Lord, to ſatisfy Mr. MacKercher, muſt take upon him to drive his own Perſon home in this Coach. This Treatment of a Nobleman, muſt call for ſuch a Degree of Reſentment, as muſt of Neceſſity have ended in a Quarrel; it tends plainly to a Breach of the Peace, and I would know what Right Mr. MacKercher had to reſent an Affront done to another, and demand Satisfaction in ſuch a manner, as no Gentleman would have complied with. What Right had he to preſcribe the Method of receiving this Satisfaction? That very Circumſtance plainly ſhews he had an Intent to quarrel, and his Manner of demanding Satisfaction, amounts to a Challenge. Why then, if, beſides this, your Lordſhip and the Jury will pleaſe to conſider, who the Perſon affronted is, and for whom this publick Satisfaction is demanded, that my Lord Angleſea looked upon him as his Brother's Baſtard, by a Kitchen Wench, and knew he was claiming his Eſtate and Titles; I hope you will think my Lord's Behaviour was no more than could reaſonably be expected from him, under ſuch Circumſtances. But this is not all, Mr. MacKercher gives my Lord the Lye, deſires him to withdraw with him, and in caſe of his Refuſal, threatens him with a lifted-up Hand. Mr. Cavenagh poſitively ſwears to his lifting his Hand with the Butt-End of his Whip towards my Lord, and threatening him at the ſame time; and Mr. MacKercher in his Evidence does not deny but he might do it. He ſays indeed, that he has a different manner of carrying and holding his Hand from other Perſons, that it was his Cuſtom in Converſation to raiſe his Hand; it may be ſo to his Footman, but to a Peer of the Kingdom, an Earl of Great Britain, that raiſing of his Hand did not become him, and was in point of Law an Aſſault: Why then, what is the Conſequence? Here is a Gentleman, Mr. Francis Annesley, attending Lord Angleſea: this Gentleman, his Tenant, his Relation and Friend, ſees him thus affronted and aſſaulted, and ſtrikes the Perſon who threatened to ſtrike him; I do ſay, that Mr. MacKercher thus aſſaulting Lord Angleſea, could expect no other Return, than that which Mr. Annesley made him. It was incumbent in ſome meaſure on Mr. Francis Annesley, even for the Safety of Lord Angleſea, to do what he did. Was he to wait for this Gentleman's drawing out his Piſtol? Did it not ſeem incumbent on him to prevent this? I beg leave to ſay it was, and that he was juſtifiable in point of Law; if he had been no Relation or Friend to my Lord, but even a Stranger, and ſaw him threaten'd in the manner Mr. MacKercher threaten'd him, he ought to prevent the Quarrel likely to enſue between them; and if in ſo doing, he hurted Mr. MacKercher, he is juſtified by the Law. It would be taking up too much of your Time to ſay more; but for my Part, all Circumſtances conſidered, I am only amaz'd, that inſtead of the ſlight Injury done thoſe Gentlemen, they were not much worſe off.

Court.] What you have offered may be conſidered as a Mitigation of the Offence, but not by the Law as a Juſtification of it. I already find that the Jury have determined upon that Aſſault, to be an Aſſault committed by my Lord Angleſea upon Mr. MacKercher; becauſe had it appeared from Evidence that Mr. MacKercher had aſſaulted my Lord Angleſea firſt, the Jury could not poſſibly have found the Lord Angleſea Guilty.——— As to Mitigation, that is a Matter proper for the Conſideration of the Court when they come to give Judgment for the Offence. But as to the Aſſault of Mr. Francis Annesley on Mr. MacKercher, it ſtands proved againſt him by the Evidence of Mr. MacKercher, Mr. Kennedy, and Mr. Gooſtry, and in my Apprehenſion he is guilty of that Aſſault.---Now, as to the fourth Aſſault, that on Mr. James Annesley, I believe that fourth Indictment may go to the Jury. It appears to me, that the moſt Part of the Evidence as to that, was principally material for the Conſideration of the Court to determine their Diſcretion, to ſhew the Nature and general Tendency of this unfortunate Affair. But, I ſay, that as I recollect it, it does not appear upon the Evidence, that any one Perſon ſtruck, or attempted to ſtrike Mr. James Annesley; and before any Words were uttered by Lord Angleſea, directing the Purſuit of him, there was an Account brought that he was gone off the Sod, and then thoſe Words were ſpoke by my Lord, Follow the Son of a Whore, and knock his Brains out. Mr. Annesley gallops away, and falls into a Ditch, and there lay in a very miſerable Manner; but how that happened is accounted for, by the Feet of his Horſe ſlipping into the Ditch; it does not appear that it was by a Stroke given by any body; it does not appear that any one Perſon did attempt to ſtrike him; there was a Gentleman, that one of the Witneſſes ſaid, had not he interpos'd, would have ſtruck him; but he is out of the Caſe, and not to come within your Conſideration. If you that are concerned for the Crown have any thing to ſay, proceed.

Mr. Harward.] We are ready to offer what occurs to us upon this Indictment; and, my Lord, I humbly apprehend that this Queſtion is reduced to a very ſingle Point of Law upon the following Facts; that Mr. MacKercher being apprehenſive of an Intention in Lord Angleſea and his Company to murder him and all his Friends, deſired Mr. Annesley, who was his chief Care, to get away as faſt as he could. It is given in Evidence that Mr. Annesley did ſo, and alſo that upon my Lord Angleſea's hearing that he had left the Field, that he cried out to the People about him, Purſue him, and tear him Limb from Limb. In conſequence whereof, ſeveral did purſue, and drove him on full Speed; and Word being brought back to him that he was killed, my Lord approved of it, and ſaid, All was well. This being the Fact as nearly as I can recollect it, I apprehend the Law will be clearly determined by your Lordſhip in our Favour. Lord Angleſea, throughout this Evidence, has appeared to have abuſed this Gentleman, to have aſſaulted ſome of his Friends, for which he and ſome of his Aſſociates are found guilty; here is an Abuſe given to this very Gentleman precedent to every thing that happened; here follows an Aſſault upon two or three of his Friends, and Advice being brought from the Place where the noble Lord and his Aſſociates were, of his bad Intentions to this young Gentleman, for fear the like Fate ſhould attend him, he is deſired by one of them to run away, or he would be murdered. The Minute my Lord hears he has left the Field, he hallooes to all his People after him, to tear him Limb from Limb, and one of the Purſuers attempts to ſtrike him, but was prevented. This is clearly proved by the Evidence offered to your Lordſhip; and this being ſo, then the Queſtion is, whether my Lord Angleſea is guilty of an Aſſault upon this Gentleman, who was thrown into the Ditch by his Horſe, as he was turning him about to defend himſelf againſt the Purſuers? I ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether you won't take the whole Caſe, both Words, and Facts, and Circumſtances, into your Conſideration, and then pronounce what the Law is. Why then it appears, that this Gentleman, upon the Purſuit of him, finding the People come up ſo cloſe to him, turned his Horſe to defend himſelf; and then it appears that the Horſe fell into the Ditch, and upon him, and there he received his Hurt. The Queſtion then is, Whether or no Lord Angleſea is a Principal in this Aſſault or not? Whether he was not the Cauſe of the Hurt that Mr. Annesley received by the Fall of the Horſe upon him? I believe Nobody will deny, but that the Perſons who actually purſued and gave Occaſion immediately to this Fall, were guilty of an Aſſault, and alſo of the Battery and wounding received by the Fall. There is a Difference in point of Law between an Aſſault, a Wounding and a Battery; an Aſſault is in its Nature of the leaſt Degree of theſe Kind of Offences. If this Gentleman, who was thus purſued, had happened to be drove into the River Liffy and drowned, there I apprehend, every Man that puſhed him to the Brink of that River was guilty of his Murder. The Law is clear, that in High Treaſon and Treſpaſs they are all all Principals, and there can be no Accessories in those which are the highest and lowest Offence; the Persons aiding, inciting, in any kind assisting, by Language or Ouvert-Act, are all Principals; and if I am present, and encourage or desire a Man to break another's Head, and he does it, I am guilty of that Assault. If the Persons then, who have pursued this poor Gentleman, had been guilty of Murder, in case he had been forced into the River and drowned, I would be glad to be informed by the Counsel of the other Side, how it comes about, that the Law should be more tender in determining a Man to be a Principal in Trespass, than it does in Cases of Murder; I presume they must allow the contrary, and that there is more Indulgence shewn in favour of Life. And if the Case I put, would have been Murder in the Pursuers, and also in Lord Anglesea, I think the Consequence must be, that he is to be looked upon as a Principal in the Assault, as all Cases of Murder include a Trespass; also there are many Mitigations in Cases of Killing, not allowed in an Assault: So that I am at a loss to find how it can be imagined that a Man is not guilty of an Assault, when, if the Person he pursued had been driven into the River and drowned, he would have been guilty of Murder. If this be the Case of the Principal, pray consider, whether any Distinction in Law, or in point of Reason, can put Lord Anglesea in a better Condition, with regard to the Offence, than the Persons he prevailed upon to do it. He was the first Person that stirred up these Men to pursue, who were the Occasion of the Fall into the Ditch; he was the principal Agent, who wrought up their Spirits to execute that unlawful Intention which he had against him, and approved of what was done, when he heard Mr. Annesley was dead. I beg leave to say, that every Act they did in pursuance of his Directions, is his Act in point of Law; and the Law does not separate any of them, but makes them all Principals in Trespass. I would suppose, my Lord, that instead of a brutish Mob, I had got a mere Brute, a fierce Dog, and halloo'd him at a Gentleman without Provocation, and this Gentleman had leap'd into a River to escape from the Dog and was drowned; and if it had appeared I had halloo'd this Dog in order to wound, hurt, or frighten him into this Distress, am not I the Cause, and guilty of all the Distress the Dog frightened him into, and guilty of this Murder? And, tho' the Dog did not come so near as to bite him, and that he rather chose to leap into the River and be drown'd, than be mangled by this Dog, I conceive it would be a Case of Murder, and that it would be so. I put another Case: Suppose a Man designedly had scared another Man's Horse with an Intention that he should do some Mischief to the Man that rode him; the Rider is thrown upon this, though the Man never meddles with him, only scares his Horse; if he breaks his Neck in the Fall, is not that Murder? I must humbly insist upon it that it is, because the Law will not permit any one, either by himself, or others by his Procurement, to do any Act, whereby another's Property or his Life may be in danger or destroyed. Why then, I apprehend, that if my Lord Anglesea had ordered the Men to pursue in such a manner, that they had affrighted this Gentleman's Horse, and that he was unruly, and he had broke his Neck, I look upon it that that was a determinate Murder in Lord Anglesea. If in point of Reason, what I have mentioned has not the Weight that I proposed by it, to prove that this was an Assault in consideration of the Law, as much as if my Lord had with his own Hand broke his Head; I will put your Lordship in mind of a determined Case that comes up to the Point in question, and is this: There was a Man confined above Stairs in a Castle; another Man below sends armed Men up in order to murder him; they get into the Door, and run up the Castle Stairs. As he found them coming up, the Man had not resolution to stand; he thought he might have some Prospect of escaping, by leaping down from the Top of the Castle; he leap'd down from the Battlements, and it so happened that he broke his Neck and died: And in that Case I recollect, upon the Determination of the Judges, there was no doubt but that it was clearly Murder in the Man that commanded them, as well as in those, who by their Appearance of Violence, occasioned him to leap down. Here, my Lord, there was no Stroke given, no Man came near him, they had not got up to the Place where he was; however, the Man not being of Resolution strong enough to wait their cutting his Throat, he chose to leap down, and by that lost his Life. Here was no Election left to Mr. Annesley, he was thrown down by his Horse. If a Man lets loose a mad Bull, knowing him to be so, with Intent only to frighten People, it is Murder in him if any body is killed. Now, my Lord, as I have mentioned some Cases, which I conceive would be held to be Murder, if they were to be determined by your Lordship; and, as I have mentioned others upon my Memory, which have been so determined, and that would make this Fact, had this Gentleman died, Murder in Lord Anglesea; I am at a loss in recalling any Distinction taken in our Law-Books, that any Fact, which would be Murder in case the Person died, shall be extenuated, and said not to be an Assault in case he survived it. I know the Law is quite the contrary, and takes large Strides in Matters of Assault to come at Offenders, to protect the publick Peace, when it will not go so far as to take away the Life of a Man upon a capital Prosecution. I shall only trouble you with this further; that there can be no doubt but that Lord Anglesea gave the Directions I have mentioned, desired them to go and tear him in pieces; it is as certain that People did go and pursue; and it is to be left in the Breast of the Jury, whether that Pursuit was in consequence of my Lord's Directions, or not; and whether it is so natural to believe that this Crowd of People, who don't appear to be any way concern'd, or to have any Ill-will towards Mr. Annesley, would have pursued and galloped after him, who was galloping away to save his Life, had it not been in pursuance of my Lord's Commands, who had such Influence on them. This is to be left to the Consideration of the Jury, and I apprehend you will be pleased, when all the Words and Circumstances attending this public Affray is taken into your Consideration, from the Beginning to the End, to direct the Jury to find my Lord guilty of the Assault against Mr. Annesley, as he not only directed it, but approved of it, when done; nor can he complain of it as a Rigour in the Law to charge him with an Assault, where his Directions amounted to a Crime of Murder.

Court.] Gentlemen of the Jury, this Case, upon the Evidence, stands thus: Mr. Annesley is already gone off the Sod by the prudent Advice of Mr. Mac Kercher; he goes away after Mr. Mac Kercher had given him this Advice, and before the Words are uttered by my Lord, which it is insisted upon is a Foundation for the Jury to find the Traversers guilty of the Indictment for assaulting Mr. Annesley. You must observe, Gentlemen, Mr. Annesley is not driven off the Ground; he is prudently gone already: upon which Intelligence, Lord Anglesea does most improperly, and in a manner that the Court will consider when they come to pronounce their Judgment, call aloud and say, Follow him, and knock his Brains out. The material Evidence to what happened to Mr. Annesley, after he was thus gone off the Field, was Mr. Archbold, who was several times ask'd, I ask'd him myself no less than three times; Did any of the People that you saw follow, in pursuance of and under the Influence of that Direction given by my Lord Anglesea, strike him? He did not say they did. And when he was ask'd, if they pursued Mr. Annesley by my Lord's Directions, or for what other Purpose, he could not account for that; he said, some might, and some might not; some might follow him out of Curiosity, and others not, so far as he could judge. There does not appear after this any Blow given; there does not appear any actual Attempt, upon the Evidence, or any actual Blow by any Man to Mr. Annesley in the Ditch. Nothing appears, but that several People, some out of Curiosity, and some with different Intentions, rode after him, who is already gone, and not forced to go. He goes off the Field by Advice from his Friend, he is followed, after he is gone, by these People, he apprehends he is pursued by them with an evil Intent, he turns about to face them and defend himself, and in the Turn his Horse throws him into the Ditch, upon which he lay senseless, and no Person whatever attempts to hurt him: this, I say, is the Evidence; and I can't persuade myself to direct the Jury, that any of the Traversers are guilty of assaulting him.—As to the other Indictment for the Assault on Mr. Mac Kercher, if I err in point of Law, I have the Assistance of a Gentleman, who can and will set me right. Upon the other Indictment, in which Lord Anglesea, Mr. Francis Annesley, and Mr. Jans, stand indicted for assaulting Mr. Mac Kercher, the Jury have already disposed of two of them, my Lord Anglesea and Mr. Jans. As to Mr. Francis Annesley, it stands proved by the Testimony of Mr. Mac Kercher, Mr. Kennedy, and Mr. Goostry, that he did without any legal Provocation strike Mr. Mac Kercher with the Butt-End of his Whip upon his Forehead; upon which Blood came, and there has been no Evidence given to contradict that; so that I do apprehend Mr. Annesley is guilty of assaulting Mr. Mac Kercher.

Mr. Attorney-General.] I concur in Opinion, as to that Point, with Mr. Baron Mounteney; and as to the Indictment for the Assault on Mr. Annesley, I also think the Traversers are not guilty. He gallops off the Field, and is accidentally thrown by his Horse into a Ditch. The Accident happened in the Flight; the Flight was not in consequence of the Words that Lord Anglesea said, but by the Advice of Mr. Mac Kercher; but yet, if in consequence of those Words, supposing the Parties did pursue, and that there was a Fall; yet if it was no more than a Hurt by the Fall, it does not come within the Consideration of the Law to be an Assault.

The Jury go to find whether Mr. Francis Annesley is guilty of an Assault upon Mr. Mac Kercher. Also,

The Jury go to find whether Lord Anglesea, Mr. Francis Annesley, and Mr. Jans, are guilty of the Assault upon James Annesley, Esq. and find

Mr. Francis Annesley guilty of the Assault on Mr. Mac Kercher. And

Lord Anglesea ——
Mr. Francis Annesley
Mr. Jans —— } Not guilty { of the Assault on James Annesley, Esq.

Clerk of the Crown.] Neile O Neile, call your Security; you must give Bail, or stand committed for a Charge of Perjury.

Neile O Neile giving no Security, was committed.

Saturday, August the 4th.

A Bill of Indictment for Perjury is found by the Grand Jury against Neil O Neile, which is read by the Clerk of the Crown.

Clerk of the Crown.] Do you submit to your Traverse or not?

Neile O Neile.] Traverse.

Clerk of the Crown.] How will you be tried?

Neile O Neile.] I am not ready for my Trial at present, for it is too sudden upon me.

Mr. Attorney-General.] I don't see what Defence the Man can make; but however the Rule of Law must prevail.

Mr. Baron Mounteney comes into Court.

Mr. Mac Manus.] I hope your Lordship will think that there is a Necessity for a speedy Execution of Justice in Crimes of this nature, that a Man so dangerous to the Publick should be removed from the Society of Mankind as speedily as possible. No Man's Life or Property is, or can be safe but upon the due Observation of Oaths; when these are violated, a quick Execution of the Law should follow for the sake of the Publick. I hope therefore we shall be permitted to go to Trial for this Perjury, committed in the Face of the Court; but if you don't try it this Assizes, this Man must go unpunished. My Lord, Captain Livingstone, a material Witness, had the Honour, about two Years ago, to be sent from the Province of South Carolina with a Petition from that Province to his Majesty, and, as he thinks his Sollicitations in regard to that Petition are now at an end, he verily believes that he shall be obliged to set out for South Carolina before the next Assizes for this County; so that we cannot promise ourselves to have him here at the next Assizes, and it would be a Hardship to have him bound over to prosecute, when he is obliged to go on his Majesty's Commands. My Lord, this is a recent Case, a wilful Perjury acted openly last Night before your Lordship, which ought to be instantly punished: I humbly therefore hope your Lordship will bring on this Trial at this Time, considering the many and great Inconveniences that must attend the putting it off, that so flagrant a Perjurer may be brought to Justice.

[Mr. Moreton enforces this with the Case of the King against Davis at the Assizes at Maryborough some Years ago, where Davis was convicted, and a Bill of Indictment being sent up, and found against the Witness (a Brogue-maker) for Perjury, the Court would not put it off, but pillo-ried him that very Day.]

Court. I understand this Matter has been ruled already.

Mr. Mac Manus. Here is an Affidavit of Capt. Livingstone's, which we desire may be read.

Court. I do think when a Man is indicted on the last Day of the Assizes, and desires Time, he has a Right to traverse.

Mr. Mereton. I hope the Court will make Neile give good Security.

Court. Indeed he shall.

Court. Mr. Mac Kercher, I desire to be informed whether you design to bring any Action to recover Damages for this Assault?

Mr. Mac Kercher. We do not, my Lord; we prosecute for publick Justice, for the Safety of our own and Mr. Annesley's Life.

Court. Mr. Kennedy, do you design to bring any Action to recover Damages for the Assault?

Mr. Kennedy. I do not, my Lord.

Court. My Lord, the Concern I am under is very great to see your Lordship here as an Offender against the Law; and it is extremely more so that it falls to my Lot to punish your Lordship for that Offence. Your Lordship has been found guilty of an Assault, and before I mention the Judgment of the Court, it will be necessary to remind your Lordship of some Circumstances appearing upon the Evidence attending this Fact, which greatly aggravate it. It appears, to the Satisfaction of the Court, that the Persons assaulted by you and Mr. Jans gave no Provocation, had not struck or attempted to strike; and it appears upon the Evidence of one of the Witnesses, that not so much as one Word had passed between your Lordship and them. This Circumstance is a great Aggravation of the Assault. My Lord, your Quality likewise greatly aggravates the Offence; you have the Honour to be a Peer of England, as well as of this Kingdom; and that Quality calls upon you to set an Example of Obedience to the King's Laws. The Place where this Accident happened, is another grand Aggravation of the Offence; it was done at a publick Meeting of Gentlemen on the Curragh, in the Presence of great Numbers, to whom such a Behaviour in a Person of your Dignity and Station of Life, must be of a very bad Example; the Prevention of which is the Thing principally regarded by the Law. A Number of People there, by your Lordship's Example, might be led to take Part on the one Side or the other; and if they had done so, it is to be feared that there might have been more fatal Consequences. It is with great Concern I mention this, but such was the Evidence, and I cannot doubt but that your Lordship will be thoroughly persuaded, as I am satisfied every body else will, that the Court exercises their Discretion with Tenderness, when they pronounce the Judgment, that a Fine of Thirty Pounds only is imposed on your Lordship for assaulting Mr. Kennedy, and you are fined accordingly in the Sum of Thirty Pounds for that Assault.

Mr. Francis Annesley, you likewise have been found guilty of an Assault on Mr. Mac Kercher; great Part of what I have mentioned to my Lord Anglesea will be applicable in your Case; you being a Gentleman of Fortune and Character in your Country, the People expect, and will take Example from you. It appears, upon Evidence, that a Gentleman was assaulted by you, who had not assaulted you; and I must say this in Justice to the Prosecutor, that there was no Reason to strike any body for the Words which were said by the Prosecutor; and though the Words did pass in your Hearing, yet they were but Words; and Words the Law does not consider as a Provocation sufficient for an Assault. Besides, they did not pass till after very opprobrious Language had been given. It also appears, that this Blow given by you, was the first Blow given in that Action, and that Blow occasioned all the rest which were given. That is the aggravating Circumstance, which makes it necessary for the Court to lay a pretty smart Fine upon you; but they are pleased to mitigate the Severity of the Law, and go no farther than to fine you in the Sum of Twenty Pounds.----Mr. Jans stands guilty of assaulting Mr. Kennedy, for which he is fined in the Sum of Ten Pounds.----This Assault of Mr. Mac Kercher, my Lord Anglesea has likewise been found guilty of, and a Fine of Five Marks is laid on him for that Offence.-----And on Mr. Jans, who is likewise guilty of assaulting the same Gentleman, One Mark.--------I think I have disposed of all of them but the first Indictment for the Assault on Mr. Geoffry, for which Lord Anglesea is fined Sixpence.

XXVI. The Trial in Ejectment between Campbell Craig, Lessee of James Annesley, Esq. and Others, Plaintiff; and the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Anglesea, Defendant; before the Lord Chief Baron Bowes, the Honourable Mr. Baron Mounteney, and the Honourable Mr. Baron Dawson, Barons of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer in Ireland: Begun on Friday, November 11, 1743; and continued by several Adjournments to Friday the 25th of the said Month *.

The Court being sat, the Jury were called over, and answered to their Names; of whom the following Twelve were sworn to try the Issue joined between the Parties:

Sir Thomas Taylor, Bart.	Nathaniel Preston, Esq.
R. H. Will. Graham, Esq.	Charles Hamilton, Esq.
Richard Wesley, Esq.	Clotworthy Wade, Esq.
Her. Langford Rowley, Esq.	Thomas Shaw, Esq.
Richard Gorges, Esq.	Gorges Lowther, Esq.
John Preston, Esq.	Joseph Ashe, Esq.

Campbell Craig, Lessee of James Annesley, Esq. PLAINTIFF.

The Right Honourable Richard Earl of Anglesea, - - - - - } DEFENDANT.

Michaelmas Term, in the 16th and 17th Years of George II.

In the Exchequer.

County of Meath, to wit. } THE Plaintiff declares that James Annesley, Esq. on the first Day of May 1742, at Trim, in the County of Meath, demised to the said Campbell Craig 30 Messuages, 30 Tofts, 50 Cottages, 2 Mills, 50 Gardens, 800 Acres of arable Land, 300 Acres of Meadow, 600 Acres of Pasture, 50 Acres of Furze and Heathy Ground, 50 Acres of Moory Land, with the Appurtenances, in Great Stramine otherwise Stameen, Little Stramine otherwise Stameen, Little Donacarney, Shallon, Kilcarvan, otherwise Kilsharvan, Cruffey, Annager, otherwise Annager, and Little Gaffney, situate, lying, and being in the County of Meath aforesaid: All which said Premisses were formerly the Estate of the Right Honourable James Earl of Anglesea, deceased, and lately the Estate of the Right Honourable Arthur Earl of Anglesea, also deceased; to hold the said demised Premisses, with the Appurtenances, to the said Campbell Craig, his Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, from the first Day of May aforesaid, for the Term of Twenty-one Years then next ensuing, fully to be compleated and ended.

The Plaintiff also declares upon two other several Demises made by his said Lessor of the same Premisses, that is to say, one by the Name of the Right Honourable James Earl of Anglesea, and the other by the Name of the Right Honourable James Annesley, only Son and Heir of Arthur late Baron of Altham, deceased; otherwise the Right Honourable James Baron Altham of Altham. By virtue of which said several Demises, the said Campbell Craig, on the second Day of May aforesaid, in the Year of our Lord aforesaid, entered and was thereof possessed, until the aforesaid Richard Earl of Anglesea afterwards, on the 3d Day of May aforesaid, in the Year of our Lord aforesaid, with Force and Arms, and so forth, entered into the said demised Premisses with the Appurtenances, and ejected, expelled and removed him the said Craig from his said Farm, (his said Term not being then or since determined) and otherwise did unto him, against the Peace of our Lord the King that now is, and to the Damage of the said Craig One Hundred Pounds Sterling.

* This was the longest Trial ever known, lasting 15 Days, and the Jury (most of them) Gentlemen of the greatest Property in Ireland, and almost all Members of Parliament.—They were only to try a meer Matter of Fact, whether Lord Altham had a Son?——Therefore this Trial cannot be called a State Trial, or a Trial in a criminal Case, and as it was so long, and contains so much Repetition and Tautology in examining and cross-examining the Witnesses, &c. (and as the Trial at large, is in almost every body's Hands) we shall only give you the Opening of the Evidence on both Sides, and the Depositions of the two most material Witnesses, viz. Mr. Giffard, who was reckoned a very principal one for the PLAINTIFF; wherein a Point of Law is determined: 'Whether an Attorney shall be allowed to disclose, and give in Evidence, what his Client had 'told him in secret?' with the Arguments of the Counsel and Judges upon the Question: (perused by themselves) as also the whole Evidence of Mrs. Mary Heath, Lady Altham's Woman, who lived with her from her Ladyship's first going to Ireland until her Death; and was the chief and principal Evidence for the DEFENDANT: which, with the summing up of the Evidence, by the Lord Chief Baron Bowes, Baron Mounteney, and Baron Dawson (as corrected and revised by themselves) will shew the Substance of the whole Trial, and sufficient to carry on the Connection to the following Trial of Mrs. Heath for Perjury.——Besides, as great Part of the Evidence will be repeated in her Trial, it would be unnecessary to insert it here.

To

To this Declaration the Defendant pleaded the general Iſſue, Not Guilty.

Mr. Lill, of Counſel for the Plaintiff. My Lord, we ſhall call our Evidences, and prove the Plaintiff's Title, and then we hope you Gentlemen will find for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall. I am in this Caſe of Counſel with the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, whoſe Title ſtands thus; The Lands in queſtion were the Eſtate of Arthur, late Lord Altham, of which he died ſeiſed, and the Leſſor of the Plaintiff is his only Son and Heir. My Lord, if this were a common Caſe, I ſhould have reſted here; but as the Courſe of Deſcent has been interrupted on a Suppoſition that Lord Altham died without Iſſue; and as this is a Matter of great Expectation, very extraordinary in its Nature and Circumſtances, and may be much more ſo in its Conſequences; ſo it will be incumbent on me particularly to point out to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, the Time and Place when and where the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was born; for on that important Birth this Cauſe muſt depend.

My Lord, in the Year 1706, Arthur late Lord Altham was married to Mary Sheffield, natural Daughter of John Duke of Buckingham. After the Marriage, Lord Altham's Affairs required his Attendance in this Kingdom, and in the Year 1709 he came over; but his Lady remained in England till the Year 1713, when ſhe came into Ireland; and in the Year 1714, Lady Altham reſided in the City of Dublin with Lord Altham her Huſband, and proved with Child. When ſhe had been ſome Months advanced in her Pregnancy, and at the latter End of the Year 1714, Lady Altham went to his Lordſhip's Houſe at Dunmaine, in the County of Wexford, where it was publickly known in the Neighbourhood that Lady Altham was with Child, and the then Dowager Lady Altham (who was married to Mr. Ogle, one of the Commiſſioners of the Revenue in this Kingdom) made Lady Altham a Preſent of a very rich Quilt againſt her Lying-in: And it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that Lady Altham's Pregnancy was ſo well known in the Country, that Intereſt was made by ſeveral Women to nurſe this Child when it ſhould be born; and that great Care was taken in examining the Milk of the ſeveral Women who did apply to be Nurſes, and that one Joan Landy was approved of to be the Nurſe. My Lord, in the Beginning of the Year 1715, Lady Altham fell in Labour, and was delivered of the Leſſor of the Plaintiff by Mrs. Shiel, a Midwife of Skill and Reputation, who then lived at Roſs, about three Miles from Dunmaine; and it will appear to your Lordſhip and to the Jury, that Lord Altham expreſſed great Satisfaction and Joy upon the Birth of this Son; that a Bonfire was made upon this happy Event, and Drink publickly given to the Neighbours and People who came in to teſtify their Joy upon ſuch an Occaſion. It will likewiſe appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that great Preparations were made for the Chriſtening of this Son, and that about a Month after the Birth, the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was chriſtened at the late Lord Altham's Houſe at Dunmaine, in the Pariſh of Tynterne, by one Mr. Lloyd, who was his Lordſhip's Chaplain, and at that Time Curate of Roſs, by the Chriſtian Name of James, after the third Earl of Angleſea, from whom Lord Altham had received great Favours, and the Sponſors on that Occaſion were Mr. Colclough, Mr. Cliff, and Mrs. Pigot. I mentioned to your Lordſhip before, that Joan Landy was appointed the Nurſe; her Father's Houſe was about a quarter of a Mile from Dunmaine, where the Child continued for about a Month; and then the Nurſe's Father's Houſe being firſt made fit for the Reception of ſuch a Child, he was carried to that Place with his Nurſe: And it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that for the Conveniency of Lady Altham, and that ſhe might viſit this Child as often as ſhe pleaſed, a Coach-Road was made from the Houſe of Dunmaine to the Nurſe's Father's Houſe. When the Child was about ſixteen Months old he was weaned, and brought back to Lord Altham's Houſe at Dunmaine, where one Joan Laffan was appointed his dry Nurſe: And it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that while Lord and Lady Altham were united, the greateſt Fondneſs was ſhewn to this Infant by both. My Lord, in February 1716, there were ſome very unhappy Differences between the late Lord Altham and his Lady, upon which they, by Agreement, ſeparated; but Lady Altham, as was extremely natural, deſired to have the Company of her Child, which Lord Altham, but with great Expreſſions of Regard and Tenderneſs for the Child, refuſed; and it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that Lady Altham left her Son with the utmoſt Concern and Regret. After this unhappy Separation, Lord Altham forbade Lady Altham's Acceſs to this Child, and directed that ſhe ſhould by no means ſee him, and that the Child ſhould not be carried to viſit her. The Leſſor of the Plaintiff, thus deprived of his Mother, continued at Dunmaine in the Care of Servants, 'till the Year 1718, and in that Year Lord Altham removed his Family to Kenna, in the County of Kildare, where he continued about two Years; and it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was educated there with the greateſt Affection, and was conſtantly reputed and deemed to be Lord Altham's Son and Heir. My Lord, in the latter end of the Year 1719, or beginning of the Year 1720, Lord Altham removed to Dublin, and had a Houſe in this Town for ſome Time, to which the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was alſo brought; and it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that he was then cloathed in a very extraordinary Manner, and was treated and eſteemed as the Son and Heir of the Lord Altham. My Lord, ſome Time in the Year 1720, Lord Altham removed to a Place called Carrickduffe, in the County of Carlow; and it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that as the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was then of Years capable of Inſtruction, ſo Lord Altham provided a Tutor for him in the Houſe; and when afterwards Lord Altham ſent the Leſſor of the Plaintiff to a publick School at Bunclody in the County of Carlow, that he was there attended as the Son of a Nobleman, and treated as ſuch. My Lord, in the Year 1722, (it was a Year extremely fatal to my Client) Lord Altham began a criminal Correſpondence with one Miſs Gregory, and in the Winter of that Year, Lord Altham ſettled in Dublin with her, in a Houſe in Croſs-Lane; and it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that this Miſs Gregory, before ſhe had made her Intereſt in Lord Altham quite ſecure, behaved tolerably well to the Leſſor of the Plaintiff; and the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was brought to the Houſe where Lord Altham reſided with her, and was ſent to a publick School in this City, and was uſed with great Care and Tenderneſs by his Father, and at School was deemed and taken to be the Son of Lord Altham. It will be neceſſary to mention to your Lordſhip and the Jury what became of Lady Altham after this Separation. She reſided in the Town of Roſs for about three Years, and her Affection for the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was ſo ſtrong, that, notwithſtanding Lord Altham's Prohibition, ſhe found means privately to ſee the Child, and always expreſſed the greateſt Regard and Fondneſs for him, and complained much more ſeverely of being deprived of the Comfort in her Child, than the Loſs of her Huſband. In the Year 1720, or thereabouts, Lady Altham came to reſide in Dublin; but, unhappily for this Lady, ſhe had in her Lying-in contracted Diſorders, which at laſt ended in a Dead Palſy, and not only took from her the Uſe of her Limbs, but alſo, in ſome Meaſure, deprived her of her Memory and Senſes; but notwithſtanding; it will appear to your Lordſhip and to the Jury, that during the Time ſhe continued in this Kingdom, ſhe kept a ſecret Correſpondence with this Family, relative only to this Child. In the Year 1723, Lady Altham was carried from this Kingdom to London in a very languiſhing Condition, and there, during the Remainder of her Life, lived upon the Bounty of ſome Perſons who had Charity enough to ſupport her. My Lord, from this languiſhing Condition of Lady Altham, Miſs Gregory, who had gained a prodigious Influence over Lord Altham (who will appear to your Lordſhip to have been a very weak Man), had Hopes from him of every Thing in his Power, expected to be Lady Altham, and had aſſumed the Title even in the Life-time of Lady Altham; and therefore conſidered the Leſſor of the Plaintiff as the greateſt Bar to her Hopes, in caſe ſhe ſhould have Iſſue by this Lord, and thereupon grew very harſh and ſevere to the Leſſor of the Plaintiff; ſhe raiſed Doubts in the Lord Altham, that, though this was the Son of the Lady Altham, it might not be the Son of his Lordſhip, that ſo ſhe might take off that paternal Affection from the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, which he had always ſhewn to him before; and, my Lord, ſhe gained ſuch an Influence at laſt upon this unhappy Lord, that ſhe prevailed on him to remove the Leſſor of the Plaintiff out of his Houſe; and in the Year 1724, the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was ſent by Lord Altham to one Cooper's in Ship-ſtreet, in this Town. But the Heart of Lord Altham was not at this Time quite eſtranged from his Son, for he gave Directions there that the Leſſor of the Plaintiff ſhould be taken great Care of, that he ſhould be put to School; and it will appear to your Lordſhip and to the Jury, that he was put to School at one Dunn's, in Warburgh-ſtreet, in this Town, and that Lord Altham came privately ſometimes to ſee him there. My Lord, it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that about this Time the Neceſſities of the late Lord Altham were ſo extremely great, that he looked out to raiſe Money by all Manner of Ways and Means; and Lord Altham being adviſed, that if the Leſſor of the Plaintiff were out of the Way, large Sums might be raiſed by the Sale of Reverſions, in conjunction with the Remainder-man in Tail; and this Scheme being agreeable to the Inclinations of Miſs Gregory, who was willing to get rid of the Leſſor of the Plaintiff at any rate, it was determined that this great Obſtacle to Lord Altham's Deſire of raiſing Money ſhould be removed; and to that End the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was ſent to the Houſe of one Cavenagh, with Directions to be kept quite private, ſo as it ſhould not be known where he was. What farther was deſign'd againſt him I can't ſay; but it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that though the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was at this Time a very young Lad, yet he was a little too ſprightly to be confined in that Manner; he found Means to make his Eſcape from thence, and being denied Admittance into his Father's Houſe, he roved about from Place to Place (as will be more particularly given an Account of to your Lordſhip and to the Jury, by the Witneſſes) for the Space of two Years before the Death of the late Lord Altham, his Father, which happened on the 16th of November, 1727. But during all that Time he was taken Care of by ſeveral Perſons of extreme good Credit, and conſidered as the Lord Altham's Son and Heir. Upon the Death of the late Lord Altham, in the Year 1727, the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was extremely young; he was by the Mother's Side deſtitute of all Friends whatſoever in this Kingdom; and the now Defendant, the Earl of Angleſea (I muſt take the Liberty now of mentioning him), he, my Lord, upon the Death of the Lord Altham, claimed the Title of Lord Altham, as Brother and Heir to the deceaſed Lord, upon a Suppoſition that the late Lord died without Iſſue Male. My Lord, it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that many People who had known the Leſſor of the Plaintiff for ſeveral Years before his Father's Death, appeared to be greatly ſurprized that the Defendant aſſumed the Title of Lord Altham, in regard that they believed the Leſſor of the Plaintiff to be the Son and Heir of the Lord Altham; and there were Murmurings among the Servants, and a great many People who were acquainted with the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, on that Account. It will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that, in order to remove every Obſtacle out of the Way of the Defendant, and to take from the Leſſor of the Plaintiff all Poſſibility of aſſerting his Right, and claiming the Title, an Attempt was made very early after the Death of the late Lord Altham; an Attempt was made, I ſay, to kidnap the Leſſor of the Plaintiff; and it will appear that the firſt Attempt was in vain; a ſecond Attempt of this Kind was made, and likewiſe defeated; but the third Attempt was more ſucceſsful; and in about four Months after the Death of the late Lord Altham, the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was ſent into America, and there ſold for a common Slave. I, my Lord, have not taken upon me to mention by whom thoſe ſeveral Attempts were made, it will much more properly come out of the Mouths of the Witneſſes; and when they ſhall ſpeak it here upon the Table, every body will judge with what View and Deſign ſuch a wicked Attempt could be made. My Lord, the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, while he was in Slavery, ſuffered many and various Hardſhips, as every body in thoſe unhappy Circumſtances does, and did make an Attempt to regain his Liberty; but being retaken, he ſuffered according to the Law of that Country, and continued about 13 Years in Slavery: But it will appear to your Lordſhip, and to the Jury, that even in that miſerable Condition, when he had an Opportunity of relating his Misfortunes to any body that had Compaſſion of them, he did mention the Unhappineſs of his Caſe, and by what Means he was reduced to ſuch Circumſtances. It will appear to your Lordſhip and to the Jury, in what Manner the Plaintiff, was brought by the Care and Bounty of Admiral Vernon, into the Kingdom of Great Britain. There an unhappy Misfortune detained him for ſome time; he happened by an accidental Shot, to kill a Man near London, for which he was indicted, and ſtood his Trial: How that Proſecution was carried on, or for what Purpoſe, I ſhall not take upon me to ſay; though it will have its Weight in the Caſe; but it was neceſſary to mention this Circumſtance, to ſhew that, when we were at liberty of coming into this Kingdom, and proſecuting our Right, we did it as recently as was in our power. When theſe Facts are laid before your Lordſhip and the Jury, we of Counſel for the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, do apprehend there is ſuch a Connection in every one of them, that the Force of Truth will prevail, and that your Lordſhip will direct the Jury to find a Verdict for the Leſſor of the Plaintiff.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall. My Lord, Mr. Serjeant Marſhall has ſo fully ſtated the Caſe of the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, that I have no further Facts to mention, unleſs the Gentlemen on the other Side ſhould require of us to prove the Title of the late Lord Altham to the Lands in queſtion; if they do, we are ready to enter into it, and to ſhew that by the Will of James Earl of Angleſea, a Remainder of the Lands in the Declaration was limited to the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, after the Death of his Father.

Mr. Lebunt, of Counſel for the Defendant. My Lord, I hope they will read the Remainders in the Will of James Earl of Angleſea, and the Codicils; whereby it will appear that the next Remainder of the Lands in queſtion, after Failure of Iſſue of Arthur late Lord Altham, was limited to Arthur Earl of Angleſea, and not to the preſent Defendant, who was Brother to the late Lord Altham.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhal. We admit that the late Lord Altham was Tenant for Life of the Lands in the County of Meath, and that Arthur late Earl of Angleſea had a Remainder before the preſent Defendant, and did enjoy it accordingly.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall. My Lord, the Legitimacy of the Leſſor of the Plaintiff is the material Point.

Mr. Recorder, for the Defendant. My Lord, the Leſſor of the Plaintiff inſiſts that he is the Legitimate Son of the late Lord Altham; if this be proved, there will be no neceſſity to read the Wills and Codicils: for we admit, that if Arthur Lord Altham left a Son, the preſent Earl of Angleſea has no right to the Lands in queſtion.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhal. My Lord, there is one Point further to be admitted, which is, that the late Lord Altham intermarried in the Year 1706 with Mary Sheffield, Natural Daughter of the Duke of Buckingham (which was admitted). My Lord, we have been ſo happy as to be able not only to trace the Leſſor of the Plaintiff from his Birth, but to ſhew ſome preceding Circumſtances, rendering it highly probable; with which we ſhall begin, by laying before your Lordſhip and the Jury, that immediately after Lady Altham's coming into this Country ſhe proved with Child, that ſhe miſcarried at Dunmaine of that Child, that ſhe proved pregnant a ſecond time, and was delivered of the Leſſor of the Plaintiff.

Lord Chief Baron Bowes. Gentlemen, From the Evidence as opened, I ſee this is like to prove a Trial of Length, as well as Expectation; and I think it is to the Honour of your Country, as well as for the Advantage of the Parties concerned, that Men of your Rank and known Probity attend the Trial of this Iſſue: But I fear it will not be in the power of the Court to take the Evidence with ſuch Exactneſs as to give you the uſual Aſſiſtance, by ſumming of it up at the End of the Trial. I muſt therefore requeſt you, Gentlemen, to take Notes, as we proceed.

Theſe Witneſſes ſwear, That after Lord and Lady Altham came to Ireland, my Lady miſcarried, and they ſaw an Abortion, and afterwards was with Child again; ſome ſwear they felt her Belly, and found ſhe was with Child, and that ſhe grew bigger and bigger; and ſeveral, that they ſaw her big with Child.—Dennis Redmond ſwears, he ſaw my Lady big-bellied; was ſent to Roſs by Mrs. Heath, for a Midwife, and brought Mrs. Shiel the Midwife; and that my Lady was delivered of a Son, about April 1715; and that Bonfires were made on the Occaſion; that the Boy was chriſtened by Mr. Lloyd, my Lord's Chaplain, by the Name of James, and that the Godfathers were Mr. Colclough, Counſellor Cliff; and the Godmother, Mrs. Pigot.—Mary Doyle and Eleanor Murphy ſwear they were in the Room at the Delivery; ſeveral ſwore, that the Child was put to nurſe, firſt to Joan Landy, and afterwards to Joan Laffan, and that a Coach-way was made to the Houſe of the latter, for my Lord and Lady to go and ſee their Son.—Others, that my Lord kept it and maintained it as his lawful Child, and owned it as ſuch to ſeveral People; put it to School, and maintained it there as his lawful Son; till at laſt Lord Altham parted from his Wife, and took Miſs Gregory into keeping; ſhe hated the Boy, uſed him ill, and was continually telling Stories of his bad Behaviour to my Lord, and at laſt prevailed on my Lord to turn him out of doors under pretence of thieving.—That this Boy afterwards wandered about for ſome time, living ſome time with one Farrell, and ſome time with others, till my Lord's Death, in November 1727. Soon after which, he was kidnapp'd and tranſported abroad, and not heard of for many Years, till at laſt he was diſcovered and ſent home by Admiral Vernon, to aſſert his Rights, &c. That in 1742, when Mr. Annesley happened accidentally to kill a Man at Staines in Middleſex, that Lord Angleſea was at a great Expence to proſecute him, &c. But Mr. Giffard's Evidence will beſt explain the whole Affair.

Tueſday, November 15th.

49. Mr. JOHN GIFFARD.

Q. Do you know the Plaintiff Mr. James Annesley?

Mr. Giffard. Yes, Sir,

Q. Did you know when it was that he arrived in England from the Weſt-Indies?

A. No, Sir.

Q. Do you know of any Proſecution carried on againſt the Plaintiff by the Defendant for Murder?

[The Queſtion is objected to by the Counſel for the Defendant.]

Mr. Fitz Gibbon, of Counſel for the Plaintiff. My Lord, this Witneſs is brought to ſhew that the Lord Angleſea, knowing that the Plaintiff claim'd the Eſtate of the Family, as Son and Heir to the late Lord Altham, expended vaſt Sums of Money on a Proſecution, which he ſet on foot againſt him for the Murder of an unfortunate Man at Staines, in Middleſex, though the Perſon killed ſtood in no Degree of Relation to my Lord Angleſea, that could have engaged him to have taken up this Matter.

It will alſo appear, that while he laboured to convict the Plaintiff for Murder, he knew the Perſon, whoſe Death gave Occaſion for the Proſecution, was killed by Accident. And this we apprehend to be a Circumſtance proper to be laid before the Jury, to ſhew that my Lord Angleſea, conſcious of the Plaintiff's Title, took theſe Methods to cut him off.

Mr. Recorder, (Eaton Stannard, Eſq;) of Counſel for the Defendant. My Lord, I apprehend that the Evidence now offered is not legal Evidence in this Cauſe, becauſe it appertains not directly to it; it is a collateral Thing. It was proper to ſhew the Plaintiff to be the legitimate Son of Lord Altham, and that he was intitled to the Lands ejected; but to produce Evidence of a Trial in England, is very improper; in my Apprehenſion, this is no Evidence in this Trial of Ejectment. The taking away a Perſon, and ſecreting him after the Title accrues to him, is a material Evidence to ſhew that he could not aſſert his Right ſooner; but how is the Indictment of a Man for this Murder, be it accidental or not, relative to this Cauſe? For pending the Indictment, it was no Hinderance to him to put in his Claim when he pleaſed, and to aſſert his Title.

This Cauſe was tried in England. Can you have all the Witneſſes there brought before you? Could any Perſon concerned for Lord Angleſea foreſee that this Indictment would be introduced? And therefore my Lord Angleſea could not be prepared to have the Witneſſes of that Trial here. I ſay, it is not proper to introduce it, for what Man living could guard againſt it?

This Evidence is offered, as I apprehend, to raiſe a Preſumption that the Plaintiff is the legitimate Son of the Lord Altham, becauſe the Defendant endeavoured to deſtroy him; and then the Queſtion will be, Whether ſuch Evidence is proper to be admitted? It would be a Queſtion whether any improper Meaſure taken to affect the Life of the Plaintiff would be Evidence; but where, from their own opening the Caſe, it does appear to your Lordſhip nothing more than a Proceeding according to the regular

(a) As ſome Points of Law were determined, on Queſtions aſked the Witneſſes by the Counſel, we ſhall inſert them by way of Notes.
Alderman Barnes was aſked, Whether he heard Lord Altham mention his having a Son?
The Queſtion was objected to by the Counſel for the Defendant, who ſaid, That what Lord Altham told the Witneſs was not to be given in evidence, but only what came within the Compaſs of his own Knowledge. But the Court were of Opinion, that any Declaration of my Lord Altham, relative to this Tranſaction, the Birth of the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, was proper Evidence, and ought to be received.

(b) Mr. Piget was aſked, Whether ever he heard from his Mother, that ſhe was Godmother to Mr. Annesley, or no? The Queſtion is objected to, by the Earl of Angleſea's Counſel; That Hearſay was no Evidence, and that he ſhould not be admitted to declare what his Mother told him. And the Court allowed the Objection.

(c) Mr. Thomas Byrne, in his Evidence, ſaying, Mr. Annesley told him, he would not go to his Father at Inchicore, for Miſs Gregory was there, who would never let him alone.

" Mr. Attorney-General. My Lord, I deſire to have the Senſe of the Court upon this Part of the Evidence: The Witneſs was going to ſay what the Plaintiff told him: So long as this was for Connection, I made no Objection to it; but he is going by a Side-wind to reflect upon the Credit of a Perſon, who may be produced in evidence for the Defendant; this makes it material to object to this Part of the Evidence.

" Lord Chief Baron. It may be material to know what Reaſon the Boy gave for refuſing to go to my Lord Altham.

" Mr. Attorney-General. The Boy's Declaration cannot be Evidence for him.

" Lord Chief Baron. I ſhall confine the Witneſs to Facts.

and open Courſe of the Law, with humble Submiſſion, that in this Caſe or any Caſe whatſoever, is not to be imputed to a Man as a Crime. As they ſtate it, there was a Proſecution for Murder, whereas the killing was accidental, every Homicide in the Indictment is laid Murder; and if there was a Proſecution on this Indictment, is it not a material Circumſtance, that this Indictment muſt have had the Sanction of a Grand Jury? Here has been an Indictment, is all that they have ſaid, and a Proſecution upon that Indictment. I deſire your Lordſhip to conſider, whether my Lord Anneſley, or any other Perſon, might not have carried on the Proſecution? Nothing is more frequent, in Murder eſpecially, than that the Proſecution is carried on, not at the Expence of the Crown, though the Proſecution is in the Name of the Crown. Will it not then be a Matter of very great Conſequence, to ſay, that this ſhall be imputed to a Man as a Crime, and affect him not only as to his Character, but his Fortune? Your Lordſhip cannot judge now whether or not this Proſecution was what they would make it appear to be, without entering into the Merits of the Cauſe. How can it appear to your Lordſhip whether this was a real Murder, or the Perſon eſcaped only by a favourable Verdict? And therefore we hope, for the Sake of Evidence, that it may not be made a Precedent of in other Caſes.

Mr. Serj. Marſhal, for the Plaintiff. My Lord, we have endeavoured to lay before the Jury a ſpiriting away of the now Leſſor of the Plaintiff, at a Time when he was extremely young, not capable of aſſerting his Right, and with a View of putting him out of the Way of ever aſſerting that Right. We now come to offer Evidence, to ſhew that the Malice of the Defendant did not reſt there; that after he had actually cauſed him to be tranſported, the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, at his Return, unfortunately killed a Man; what we now propoſe to lay before your Lordſhip and the Jury, is the very extraordinary Part that the Earl of Angleſea took in that Trial; a Trial wherein he was not any way concerned. When the Witneſs ſhall be permitted to tell you what Expence the Earl was at in this Proſecution, it will ſtrengthen that Evidence, of the Defendant's ſpiriting away the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, and ſhew the Defendant's continued Deſign of removing this Gentleman from any Poſſibility of aſſerting his Birthright. And therefore we humbly hope your Lordſhip will permit us to go into this Evidence; and ſubmit it to the Jury, whether there could be any Reaſon but one for ſuch an uncommon Proceeding.

Mr. Harward, for the Plaintiff. My Lord, I apprehend, that every Matter which in any degree tends to ſhew whether the Plaintiff was the lawful Son of the late Lord Altham, or no, is proper Evidence to be laid before the Jury. This Evidence now offered, is to ſhew that the preſent Lord Angleſea, conſcious of the Plaintiff's Legitimacy, undertook the Proſecution to take away his Life, and ſpent great Sums of Money in it. If it is an Act of the Defendant's, it is proper for the Jury to conſider, quo animo he undertook it, whether from a publick Spirit of Juſtice, or a private View to take away the Life of this Rival to his Eſtate; for every Act of the Defendant that can give Light to the Jury of the Opinion that my Lord himſelf had of the Plaintiff's Right, is proper Evidence to be offered to them. We have already laid Evidence before the Jury that we apprehend clearly ſhews that the Lord Angleſea had, ſeveral Years ago, ſpirited away this Plaintiff, to prevent his aſſerting his Right to the Eſtate. This now offered is a further Proof of my Lord Angleſea's Opinion concerning his Right; and to corroborate that Evidence that has been already laid before the Court, we have a Right to produce it, as a further Inſtance of this Lord's own Opinion, that it was neceſſary for him to come at his Life at any rate.

The Queſtion is not now, whether the Proſecution was juſt or not? Whether Mr. Anneſley was guilty or not of the Murder charged on him? He has been acquitted. I muſt beg leave to ſay, if he had been found guilty, and got a Pardon, and came to ſeek his Right in this Court, my Lord's carrying on the Proſecution might have been imputed to a Zeal for Juſtice; but being acquitted, there is Room for the Jury to conſider, whether his interfering was not owing to ſome other Motive, and ſome other End than that of publick Juſtice. The ſingle Queſtion is, Whether my Lord Angleſea, being a Stranger to the Deceaſed, became a voluntary Proſecutor, for the Death of a Man who ſtood in no Degree of Relation to the Family, from a Principle of Juſtice, or to gratify ſome private End of his own? It might have been very proper for Lord Angleſea to have expended ſuch large Sums of Money in proſecution of Juſtice, had he been any way related to the Deceaſed; but as he was not, his expending ſuch unuſual Sums in a Proſecution no ways relating to him, more than to any other Stranger, argues, that it was to anſwer his private Ends, by ſecuring his own Title to the Eſtate, if he could prevail to have the Plaintiff found guilty of Murder. If we were going to charge him with any thing that might involve him in any Sort of Guilt, the Objections might have been proper, but as we are not, they can carry no Weight.

Lord Chief Baron. This Witneſs was produced to ſhew that the Proſecution againſt the Plaintiff, for killing a Man at Staines, was promoted and carried on by the Defendant, and at his Expence; which, as it was an Attempt to take away the Plaintiff's Life, his Counſel have inſiſted is proper to be laid before the Jury, as further Proof of the preſent Defendant's Diſtruſt of his own Title, and his Opinion of the now Plaintiff's Right: And this has been offered without any previous Evidence, that the Defendant had been convicted or proſecuted for the malicious Proſecution of the Plaintiff, or that the Court, before whom the Plaintiff was tried for that ſuppoſed Murder, had, by any Act of theirs, declared their Opinion that this Proſecution was malicious, as is frequently done by ordering the Priſoner a Copy of his Indictment.

This is a new Attempt, and were it neceſſary for me now to give my Opinion, I ſhould think it ought not to be admitted.

The Proſecution in itſelf was not unlawful, on the contrary, it is the Duty of every Man, eſpecially in the Caſe of Blood, to take care that the Offender be put upon his Trial. And therefore, without entering into the Merits of that Caſe, the Motives of the Proſecution cannot appear; and thoſe alone can, in my Apprehenſion, introduce this Evidence as pertinent to the Matter in Iſſue in this Cauſe: Who, without going farther, can ſay, this Proſecution, though lawful, was carried on with an unlawful Intention?

Theſe Reaſons weigh with me at preſent. But as this Trial will laſt another Day, the Counſel for the Plaintiff may proceed to ſome other Evidence, and we, if it be inſiſted on, will give you our Opinions in the Morning.

Mr. Baron Mountney. It will always give me Concern, to find myſelf under a Neceſſity of delivering a ſudden and immediate Opinion upon any Queſtion, the contrary Sides of which are with equal Zeal contended for, by Gentlemen of ſuch Figure and Character in their Profeſſion as thoſe concerned in the preſent Cauſe: that Concern muſt be extremely increaſed, whenever I have the Misfortune to differ in Opinion, either from my Lord Chief Baron, or my Brother Dawſon, for both of whoſe Opinions I have the higheſt Regard; and ſtill infinitely more ſo in the preſent Cauſe; the immenſe Conſequence of which will incline me to heſitate even upon ſuch Points, as I ſhould otherwiſe be moſt extremely clear in. I ſhall therefore very gladly avail myſelf of that Opportunity, which, as my Lord Chief Baron hath been pleaſed to mention, the Adjournment of this Cauſe will afford us, of giving this Matter a farther Conſideration.

But my preſent Opinion is, that the Evidence now offered ought to be admitted; and the Foundation of my Opinion is this: Every Act done by the Defendant, which hath a Tendency to ſhew a Conſciouſneſs in him of Title in the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, muſt, I think, be admitted, beyond all Controverſy, to be pertinent and legal Evidence in the preſent Cauſe: —I think that the Evidence now offered hath that Tendency, and conſequently is proper to be admitted.

This Evidence of the Proſecution, in my Apprehenſion, ſtands exactly on the ſame Footing with the Evidence of the Kid-knapping; (againſt which not the leaſt Objection was attempted by the Defendant's Counſel) for I can by no means enter into the Diſtinction of lawful and unlawful Acts; which ſeems to have ſo much Weight with my Lord Chief Baron.

That unlawful Act was not therefore, in my Apprehenſion, to be admitted in Evidence, becauſe unlawful, but, becauſe it had a Tendency to ſhew ſuch a Conſciouſneſs, as I have mentioned, in the Defendant: and if the carrying on the Proſecution (which muſt be admitted to be a very extraordinary, though lawful, Act of the Defendant) hath the ſame Tendency, it ought, upon the ſame Principle, to be admitted.

Many Inſtances, I believe, might be put of lawful Acts done by one Party, which yet, it could not be controverted, would be legal and material Evidence for the other. One Inſtance occurs to me at preſent, which I think cannot bear the leaſt Diſpute. Suppoſe it could be proved, that the Defendant had offered to the Leſſor of the Plaintiff a conſiderable Part of his Eſtate, or a large Sum of Money, to compromiſe this very Suit ——Will any of his Counſel ſay, or can any Man living imagine, that this would not be legal Evidence in the preſent Cauſe?———And yet, the compromiſing of a Law-Suit is not only, univerſally, a lawful, but is, generally ſpeaking, a commendable Act.

Cui bono hath ever been eſteemed one of the ſtrongeſt, and moſt unanſwerable Arguments in all Caſes:———And therefore the Fact, which I have mentioned, would be not only legal, but, in my Apprehenſion, moſt exceedingly material Evidence to be left to the Jury; who would be the proper Judges quo animo ſuch an Offer was made.

As to the Fact now offered to be proved, it is poſſible indeed, that the Noble Lord might take up a Proſecution, deſerted (ſo far as appears) by the near Relations of the Deceaſed (the Perſons moſt likely to have carried it on, if they had thought Mr. Anneſley guilty of Murder) merely out of a publick-ſpirited Regard to Juſtice;——it is likewiſe poſſible, that his Motive for engaging in it might be an intereſted one——a Conſciouſneſs of Right in that Perſon, and conſequently that, unleſs that Perſon could be put out of the Way, the Titles and Eſtates which he was in Poſſeſſion of would be inſecure.

I think the Jury will be the proper Judges upon the whole Evidence in this Caſe, upon which of theſe two Motives, it is moſt probable, the Defendant acted:---and that therefore the Evidence of that Fact ought to be admitted, and left to their Conſideration.

This, I ſay, is clearly my preſent Opinion: but, as I mentioned before, I ſhall make uſe of the Opportunity of conſidering it further; and, if I find Reaſon to think that I am at preſent miſtaken, I will mention it To-morrow, and ſhall be exceedingly glad to change the Opinion which I have now given for a better.

Mr. Baron Dawſon. I am very glad that there is no Neceſſity for our giving our Opinions immediately on this Point, I ſhall therefore decline giving any poſitive Opinion, as we have this Night to conſider of it. The Proſecution here is agreed to be a lawful Act, and is not immediately relative to the Matter in Iſſue. The Difficulty with me is, that if this be given in Evidence, a Jury may, from a lawful Act not immediately relative to the Iſſue, draw an unwarrantable Conſequence.

If the Act were unlawful, it would undoubtedly be good Evidence, there could be no other Way of accounting for the Party's ſubjecting himſelf to legal Puniſhment: But where it is not unlawful, it may be dangerous to leave the Intent to the Jury. We will conſider of this Matter, and give our Opinions in it To-morrow.

Wedneſday, November the 16th.

The Counſel for the Plaintiff propoſed to examine Mr. John Giffard to what he had heard the Defendant ſay concerning the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, and his Title; and being called upon to open the Nature of that Evidence;

Mr. Harward, of Counſel for the Plaintiff, ſpoke as follows: My Lord, the Converſation Mr. Giffard had with Lord Angleſea was to this Purpoſe, Mr. Giffard is an Attorney of Reputation in England, and as ſuch has been twenty Years or thereabouts employed by this noble Earl in his Buſineſs, as he had Occaſion for him. When my unfortunate Client was to be tried at the Old Bailey, that was the Time Lord Angleſea had greateſt Occaſion for this Mr. Giffard; and it will appear to your Lordſhip that Lord Angleſea diſcloſed his Intentions to him in this Manner: "I am adviſed "that it is not prudent for me to appear publickly in the Proſecution, but I would "give ten thouſand Pounds to have him hanged. Mr. Jans my Agent ſhall al- "ways attend you. I am in great Diſtreſs; I am worried by my Wife in Ire- "land; Mr. Charles Anneſley is at Law with me for Part of my Eſtate, "and," ſays he, "if I cannot hang James Anneſley, it is better for me to "quit this Kingdom and go to France, and let Jemmy have his Right, if he "will remit me into France Three thouſand Pounds a-Year; I will learn French "before I go."

Mr. Daly, of Counſel for the Defendant, objects to Mr. Giffard's being examined, ſince as an Attorney he was to keep the Secrets of his Client, and ought not to be permitted to disclose them; and cited the Case of Cutts and Pickering, 1. Vent. 197.

Mr. Serj. Marshall, for the Defendant.] But if an Attorney will voluntarily come and disclose any Secret, he ought to be heard.

Mr. Blake, of Counsel for the Defendant.] An Attorney or Solicitor might not, nor is he compellable to disclose the Secrets of his Client; this is a Privilege inherent in the Office of an Attorney or Solicitor: But as this Privilege has its Source in a publick Consideration, I shall, with Submission to better Judgment, insist that this exemptive Privilege is not merely and solely the Privilege of the Solicitor or Attorney, but is, in Law and Reason, the Right and Privilege of the Client. Formerly, Persons involved in Contests and Litigations appeared in Court personally, and pleaded and inforced their several Demands and respective Defences, and beyond all doubt retained some Secrets unrevealed; but when, from an inevitable Variation of Things, an Increase of Trade, and an Exuberance of Opulence, legal Altercations became innumerable, then it became necessary to employ others to represent the Parties engaged; these Persons are denominated Attornies or Solicitors, and they, in the Nature of Things, must unavoidably be trusted with the most retired and secret Thoughts and Actions of their Employers, not only with respect to Suits actually instituted, but also with regard to Suits threatened or intended to be commenced; for a Person menaced, if directed by Prudence, will be conducted by Vigilance and Caution, equally as if attacked; therefore it is absolutely necessary to extend this Privilege to the Client, and not restrict it entirely to the Solicitor, especially as there may be some of that Profession, who cannot be supposed to be actuated by such Principles of Honour and Virtue, as an Office of so great Confidence requires; I mean the Person now produced to be a Witness for the Plaintiff. The Case of Lord Say and Seal, in Macclesfield's Reports, I think, is an Authority in point.

Mr. Recorder, for the Defendant.] My Lord, formerly Persons appeared in Court themselves; but as Business multiplied and became more intricate, and Titles more perplexed, both the Distance of Places, and the Multiplicity of Business, made it absolutely necessary that there should be a Sett of People who should stand in the Place of the Suitors, and these Persons are called Attornies. Since this has been thought necessary, all People and all Courts have looked upon that Confidence between the Party and Attorney to be so great, that it would be destructive to all Business, if Attornies were to disclose the Business of their Clients. In many Cases Men hold their Estates without Titles; in others, by such Titles, that if their Deeds could be got out of their Hands, they must lose their Fortunes. When Persons become Purchasers for valuable Considerations, and get a Deed that makes against them, they are not obliged to disclose whether they have that Deed. Now, if an Attorney was to be examined in every Case, what Man would trust an Attorney with the Secret of his Estate, if he should be permitted to offer himself as a Witness? If an Attorney had it in his Option to be examined, there would be an intire Stop to Business; Nobody would trust an Attorney with the State of his Affairs.

The Reason why Attornies are not to be examined to any thing relating to their Clients or their Affairs, is, because they would destroy the Confidence that is necessary to be preserved between them. This Confidence between the Employer and the Person employed, is so sacred a Thing, that if they were at liberty, when the present Cause was over that they were employed in, to give Testimony in favour of any other Person, it would not answer the End for which it was instituted. The End is, that Persons with Safety may substitute others in their room; and therefore if you can't ask me, you can't ask that Man; for every thing said to him, is as if I had said it to myself, and he is not to answer it. Now, the Question will be, for whose Sake it was instituted? Be sure, for the Sake of the Person employing him. Who then has the Option that he should be examined? Why, the Employer; because otherwise it would be in vain to fix a Confidence in Persons, if that Person was at liberty on any Account to shake him off, and say, While I was employed by you, it was not in my Option to disclose it, but now that I am not, I will unravel all. As it was for the Sake of the Employer that Attornies were instituted, they cannot in Civil Suits become Witnesses without the Consent of the Employer; therefore, I submit it, whether the Option is in the Attorney or in the Person who is the Employer; and if in the Employer, as I think it must be both for his Safety and Advantage, the Attorney neither can nor ought to reveal what is intrusted to him. In Pleading, it is, ponit in loco suo Attornatum, the Attorney is as himself. And it is contrary to the Rules of natural Justice and Equity, that any Man should betray himself. I apprehend it is not material whether this be a turpis Causa or not; as this Man was employed by my Lord Anglesea, he can be asked no other Questions than my Lord Anglesea himself.

My Lord, I must submit it, whether an Attorney's Testimony should be received, altho' he offers to give it? And in the next place, I submit it, whether this Kind of Testimony in this criminal Case ought to be received? It would be very little Satisfaction to a Client to be put to apply to the Court for an Attachment against this Person who offers to lay his Evidence before the Jury, if his Testimony could be received. I apprehend that Person is in the Place of the Client, and as he intrusts him with Secrets, he is not to disclose them without his Leave; and if he should disclose them out of Court, an Action of Deceit lies against him. And tho' an Attorney should not insist upon his Privilege, yet it is in the Power of the Employer to insist upon that Privilege, and to say he is the Person intrusted with his Secrets. Now, in this Case it is much stronger, for here it is said, that he is employed by my Lord Anglesea. Now, if that Party can't disclose those Secrets in a civil Case, he ought not, for a stronger Reason, in a criminal Case; because that is subjecting his Client perhaps to a criminal Prosecution.

Mr. Lee, of Counsel for the Defendant.] My Lord, if the Attorney confess Judgment upon Record, it shall bind the Conusor, though done without Warrant; and the Reason is, that the Attorney appearing for the Party is, since the Statute of Merton, considered as the Party himself. If then the Attorney and Party are considered as one Person, why shall the one be suffered to be examined in this Cause, when the other cannot?

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] I do admit in some Cases the Attorney ought not to be permitted to disclose the Secrets of his Clients; but that must be where the Confidence was necessary and lawful: but here the Trust was unlawful, and the Attorney could not conceal it without Breach of his Oath, as an Attorney, which was to do Right to all Men. This was a criminal Secret, that was not only to affect the Plaintiff's Property and Life, but also to acquire a Title in which the Public were interested; so that it became the Duty of the Attorney to disclose it.

[Mr. John Giffard called and sworn]

Q. Are you an Attorney of any, and what Court?

A. I am an Attorney of the Common-Pleas in England, and a Solicitor of the High-Court of Chancery, and sworn and admitted as such by Virtue of the Act of Parliament.

Q. Did you know the Defendant the Earl of Anglesea?---A. Yes.

Q. Was you ever Agent or Solicitor for him in any, and what Cause?

A. In the Year 1722, Lord Anglesea employed me to assist him on a particular Occasion to make his Defence.

Q. Name the Parties.

A. He was prosecuted, the King against him, as Richard Annesley, Esq.

Q. Were you employed in any other Cause?

A. In the Year 1722, the same Year, when an Action was brought against him at the Suit of one George Risden. But from the Year 1722, 'till he became Earl of Anglesea, I never heard of him. In the Year 1737 I met him in London, and he desired me to solicit an Affair between him and his Countess that lived at Biddiford.

Q. Name the next Cause.

A. Between the Right Honourable Maurice Thompson Lord Haversham, and the Earl of Anglesea.

Q. The next.

A. I was concerned in another, the same Year, and attended it, (it is very well known through the Houses of Lords and Commons in England) in order to throw a Bill out of the House of Commons, for the exemplifying the late Earl of Anglesea's Will.

Q. Go on.

A. I was likewise concerned in a particular Cause, between my Lord Anglesea, in the Year 1741, and one Mrs. Simpson of this Place; and have also sued out several Writs out of the Court of Common-Pleas, at the Suit of my Lord Anglesea, against one Henderson a Quaker.

Q. Go on.

A. I likewise was employed by Lord Anglesea in a Cause, wherein his Lordship was Plaintiff, and one Rachel Cooper was Defendant.

Q. Go on.

A. I issued out Writs against Henderson, at the Suit of one Banks, by Lord Anglesea's Directions.

Q. Go on.

A. I was sent for, and commanded by him to solicit and carry on a Prosecution against the Plaintiff Mr. Annesley.

Q. Have you been retained as Agent or Solicitor for the Earl of Anglesea, in any other Causes within these three Years?

A. I do not know; some frivolous Thing might have slipped my Memory, but I was not concerned in any other Cause, since the Prosecution of Mr. Annesley.

Q. Name the Time when you was retained by the Earl to prosecute that Murder.

A. The second Day of May, 1742.

Q. The Conversation that passed between you and my Lord, to which you are now produced as an Evidence, was it before, or after, that Time?

A. There were several Declarations, some before, and some after. The Conversations were from the 7th of December 1741, to the Time of Mr. Annesley's being discharged at the Old-Bailey.

Q. When was the Bill of Indictment found against Mr. Annesley?

A. The Bill was found in June, and he was admitted to Bail in July Sessions, 1742.

Q. On what Day is the Murder laid in the Indictment?

A. On the first of May, 1742, the 15th Year of the present King.

Q. Was you Agent or Solicitor for Lord Anglesea at the Time that the Conversation passed, before the 2d of May?

A. Not for the Cause of Mr. Annesley.

Q. Were not the other Causes subsisting?

A. The Causes were on Writs which were never executed.

Q. I desire you may answer directly, whether the Conversation before the 2d of May was not on some Affair in which my Lord Anglesea consulted and advised with you as his Agent or Solicitor, designing to employ you in that Affair?

A. No, my Lord, it was not; for I did not expect to be employed by him again, he having employed Mr. George Garden and Mr. Adam Gordon.

D. Name the People.

A. Mr. Garden and Mr. Gordon. They are Attornies, they are Partners, and I received my Instructions, in a great part, from them; my Lord ordered me to take Directions from them, and I have Instructions under Gordon's own Hand-writing.

Q. Had my Lord Anglesea those Conversations with you relative to the Plaintiff, between the 7th of December and the 2d of May, as intending to employ you, or not?

A. I never was employed, nor intended to be employed, in any Suit for or against him, during that Time.

Q. When did you first receive Instructions from Garden and Gordon?

A. In a Week after the first of May.

Q. Had you any Instructions from them, except what were relative to the Prosecution, in relation to the Plaintiff?

A. No; no Instructions but what were relative to the Prosecution.

Q. Did you charge Lord Anglesea with any Term Fees in the Year 1741, relative to particular Suits?

A. I believed I charged 10 s. 4 d. for Lord Haversham's Suit.

Q. In what Term did you charge it?

A. I find that Cause was in the Vacation between Hillary and Easter Term, and was concluded before Easter Term came. It was depending in Hillary Term 1741, and was concluded before the next Term.

Q. Was it depending for any time before Hillary Term?

A. The Beginning of it was the 20th of January, the Essoign Day before Hillary Term.

Q. Was you concerned for Lord Angleſea from the latter end of November to the beginning of January 1741?

A. I was concerned in iſſuing out ſome Writs.

Q. And do not you think, if any Suit had depended upon them, you would have been concerned?——A. I do not know but I might.

The Witneſs goes off the Table.

Mr. Prime Serjeant, (Anthony Malone, Eſq.) for the Defendant.] An Attorney ſhall not diſcloſe any thing whatſoever in a collateral Queſtion, that ſhall affect the Property of the Client.

Mr. Serj. Tiſdall, for the Plaintiff.] My Lord, we propoſe to examine to no Fact which came to his Knowledge as an Attorney, in any Suit in which he was employed for Lord Angleſea: but he declares he never was employed in any Suit relating to the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, nor was even intended to be employed in any Suit relating to this Trial. We hope, therefore, we are proper to give in Evidence ſeveral Declarations and Converſations Lord Angleſea had with the Witneſs concerning the Leſſor, his Title to this Eſtate, and the Neceſſity he apprehended himſelf under of putting him out of the Way at that Time. We do not propoſe to examine him as to any Facts relating to the Proſecution of that Suit in which he was then employed; we deſire only to examine him as to the Converſations with Lord Angleſea concerning this Cauſe; and I apprehend we have undoubtedly a Right to examine him as to theſe Points.

I cannot ſay, but the Gentlemen on the other Side have good Reaſon to oppoſe this Evidence, which, if it appears in the Manner we are inſtructed it will, muſt be an Evidence of great Weight. I ſhall firſt beg Leave to conſider, whether an Attorney may be examined to any Matter which came to his Knowledge as an Attorney. If he is employed as an Attorney in any unlawful or wicked Act, his Duty to the Publick obliges him to diſcloſe it; no private Obligations can diſpenſe with that univerſal one, which lies on every Member of the Society, to diſcover every Deſign which may be formed, contrary to the Laws of the Society, to deſtroy the publick Welfare. For this Reaſon I apprehend, that if a Secret, which is contrary to the publick Good, ſuch as a Deſign to commit Treaſon, Murder, or Perjury, comes to the Knowledge of an Attorney, even in a Cauſe wherein he is concerned, the Obligation to the Publick muſt diſpenſe with the private Obligation to the Client: But in this Caſe the Witneſs propoſed to be examined was not Attorney to the Defendant in any Caſe relative to his Teſtimony. And the Secrecy of the Attorney is neceſſary to the Client in that Cauſe only, for the carrying on of which he is under a Neceſſity to entruſt him. For this Reaſon I agree, that whatever is communicated to him from that Neceſſity ought not to be diſcloſed, even in a future Cauſe, wherein he is not concerned; but as the Client is not obliged to entruſt his Attorney with any of his Secrets, but ſuch only as are relative to, or may be uſeful for carrying on the Cauſe in which he is employed; if he truſts him with any Matter foreign to that, even during the Time that he is employed, with any Matter which was not neceſſary, or any way material to the Cauſe depending, he is not obliged to conceal it.

I beg Leave to ſay, as there was no Neceſſity upon the Client to entruſt him with it, ſo mutually there can be no Obligation upon the Attorney to conceal it; for as the only Obligation which lies on the Attorney to Secrecy, ariſes from the Neceſſity of Confidence between him and his Employer, from the Neceſſity the Client muſt be under to entruſt him, it cannot extend to any Caſe where that Confidence was not neceſſary, where the Client was not under ſuch a Neceſſity. If this be admitted, the Matters we propoſe to examine to are quite foreign to thoſe Suits in which the Witneſs was employed for the Defendant. My Lord Angleſea was indeed under a Neceſſity of entruſting him with all the Evidence that he thought neceſſary for the Proſecution carried on againſt the Plaintiff in England, and the Attorney is under an Obligation of concealing that Evidence: but was he under a Neceſſity of telling the Attorney he wanted to put this Man out of the Way, or that he was entitled to his Honours and Eſtate? This was a Secret he ought in Prudence to have kept within his own Breaſt, and not to have diſcovered. This was a Secret not neceſſary to be communicated, and therefore not to be concealed.

Upon theſe Principles, therefore, I ſhould ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, that we muſt be at Liberty to examine Mr. Giffard as to thoſe Converſations which were no way relative to the Matter in which he was then employed by the Defendant, and which, if true, as they are repreſented to us, import a Deſign contrary to all Laws of Nature and Society.

Mr. Walſh, for the Plaintiff.] I do admit that an Attorney ſhall not be examined to any Fact diſcloſed to him by his Client as an Attorney, relative to a Cauſe wherein he was employed; becauſe a Client muſt of Neceſſity entruſt the Secrets of his Title to his Attorney, to enable him to conduct his Suit; and therefore the Attorney ſtands in the Place of his Client, who cannot be examined as a Witneſs againſt himſelf. But this Rule can never be extended either to a Caſe where the Matter was not communicated to him as a Secret, in the Cauſe wherein he was employed, or before he was employed as Attorney in that Cauſe; becauſe there the Client was not under any Neceſſity of diſcloſing the Fact to him; and if it were otherwiſe, this Inconvenience muſt happen, that no Attorney could ever be a Witneſs againſt a Perſon, if he ever happened, upon any Occaſion whatſoever, to be his Attorney. The Queſtion then is, Whether the Fact to which we want to examine Mr. Giffard was communicated to him by Lord Angleſea, as his Lordſhip's Attorney, or not? or whether he was actually employed by him in the Proſecution of Mr. Annesley, at the Time the Diſcourſe we would examine him to happened? It is true, Mr. Giffard had been Attorney to Lord Angleſea in ſeveral Suits before this Converſation happened; but he could not be at that Time employed in the Proſecution of Mr. Annesley; becauſe it appears, that this Diſcourſe happened before the Coroner's Inqueſt ſat, or any Proſecution began on that Account; ſo that I apprehend this Caſe does not come within the Rule I mentioned, and that Mr. Giffard ought to be examined. But beſides, what we would examine him to is, not as to any Secret in the Proſecution itſelf, but only as to Lord Angleſea's Intention and Deſign in engaging himſelf in the Proſecution. But I muſt mention another Reaſon, which puts this Matter out of doubt, and that is, that this Proſecution was at the Suit of the Crown; if any Secrets were in that Suit, they were the King's Secrets, the revealing of which could be no Inconvenience to Lord Angleſea, or affect his Property; and therefore, my Lord, I apprehend, for theſe Reaſons, that Mr. Giffard ought to be examined as to the Point we have opened.

Mr. Harward.] I apprehend, that what is contended for by the Gentlemen on the other Side, is not ſupported by the Authorities they have relied on; becauſe, in all the Caſes quoted by them it does appear, that the Attorney propoſed to be examined, was the Attorney or Agent in that very Cauſe that was then to receive a Determination, and it appears that the Secrets to which he was to be examined, were Secrets that came to his Knowledge from his Client concerning that very Cauſe. So that the Caſes quoted do not maintain the Objection made; for this Witneſs was never in this Cauſe employed as Agent, or in any other, in which the Title to the Angleſea Eſtate was controverted, as it is here; ſo can't be ſaid to violate any Confidence repoſed in him, as to any Secrets concerning the Title to the Eſtate; for that could not come in queſtion on the Proſecution for Murder, or be in any Sort neceſſary for the Client to reveal to him to carry on the Proſecution; and therefore not within the Rule laid down, That the Client has a Privilege to hinder his Attorney from diſcloſing any of the Secrets communicated to him neceſſary to carry on the Cauſe he is employed in: And in the Caſe of Cutts and Pickering in Ventris, it was agreed, that if the Secret came to him from his Client before he was retained, he might be examined; and a Retainer in a capital Proſecution cannot, in the Nature of the Thing, imply any Truſt in the Attorney to keep the Secrets of the Title to an Eſtate, no way to be in queſtion in that Proſecution: And the Caſe of Lord Say and Seal mentioned, makes rather for us than againſt us; for there the Attorney employed to ſuffer a Recovery was examined againſt his Client as to antedating a Deed to make a Tenant to the Præcipe; for that the Time of executing a Deed could not be called the Secret of his Client; and the Rule laid down on the other Side, in ſuch general Terms as it is urged, inſtead of promoting public Juſtice, would ſubvert it, and ſcreen all Villainies that could be contrived to carry a Cauſe. I take the Diſtinction to be, that where an Attorney comes to the Knowledge of a Thing that is malum in ſe, againſt the common Rules of Morality and Honeſty, though from his Client, and neceſſary to procure Succeſs in the Cauſe, yet it is no Breach of Truſt in him to diſcloſe it, as it can't be preſumed an honeſt Man would engage in a Truſt that by Law prevented him from diſcharging that moral Duty all are bound to, nor can private Obligation cancel the Juſtice owing by us to the Publick. But the Truſt repoſed in this Attorney was, to carry on a Proſecution of Murder. The Matter diſcloſed by this Lord to him was foreign concerning the Title to an Eſtate; then, how can the revealing of that be a Breach of Truſt, when not within the Truſt he was employed in? The Proſecution was properly at the King's Suit, and not at the Lord Angleſea's; this Ejectment was not then even in Contemplation, or could be foreſeen that the Title to the Eſtate would ever come in queſtion; ſo, what Lord Angleſea declared to him concerning the Title, is no more within the Bounds of the Truſt repoſed, than if any other Perſon had declared it to him, for whom he never was employed.

But to go a little farther, ſuppoſe I employ an Attorney to recover Blackacre for me, and I bring an Ejectment for it; while he is thus employed, I come and diſcover to him that I have forged a Deed which relates to Whiteacre in my Poſſeſſion, and which is the Right of another Man; might not the Attorney hereafter diſcloſe that Forgery, to enable the other to recover Whiteacre from me? For he never was employed or entruſted as an Attorney by me in that Caſe. So, in the preſent Caſe, the Attorney was never employed in any Cauſe where the Title of the Eſtate was or could come in queſtion; ſo not at all within the Reaſon of that neceſſary Privilege given by Law to the Client, to hinder his Attorney from diſcloſing any of the Secrets communicated to him, neceſſary for, and relative to the carrying on of the Cauſe he has engaged himſelf in to proſecute. The Thing therefore that varies this Caſe from the Rule of Privilege laid down on the other Side is, that this Attorney was never concerned in any Suit of my Lord's relative to the Title of the Eſtate, and to which we now produce him; and there can be no ſuch Privilege, but where there is ſuch Suit and Retainer for that individual Purpoſe, and cannot extend to Concealment of Secrets diſcloſed under the Confidence of ordinary Friendſhips or Diſcourſes.

And laſtly, As it is a Diſcovery to the Agent to contrive the Death of an innocent Man, that there is no Protection whatſoever can be given to diſpenſe with that moral Engagement he was under to the Diſcovery of it; if this unfortunate Gentleman had come to the Diſcovery, that the Lord Angleſea and his Attorney had entered into a Conſpiracy to bribe Witneſſes, could the Court ſtand by and ſay, That this Witneſs ſhould not be examined? How can he now then, in a Civil Caſe, wherein he never was concerned, have that Protection? Will any Gentleman deny, that this Attorney could have gone and given in an Examination concerning this Proſecution? He certainly could; for no Man can have a Protection againſt the King. And if Lord Angleſea was ſo idle, or if Providence has ſo ordered it, that he ſhould be ſo unwary, or ſo wanton, as to make a Diſcovery of this, and of the Plaintiff's Title to the Eſtate, he has no Privilege againſt the Diſcovery of it.

Mr. Solicitor General, (Warden Flood, Eſq.) for the Defendant.] I humbly hope your Lordſhip will not admit this Perſon to be examined in this Cauſe. If the Queſtion were only to his Credit, ſurely he can deſerve none; for he appears under the Circumſtances of a Perſon who was employed from the Year 1722, by this noble Perſon as his Attorney; a Man willingly betraying thoſe Secrets, which, in point of Duty and common Honeſty, he ought to keep. Beſides, the Secrets he pretends to diſcloſe are ſuch as it was not neceſſary for my Lord to communicate to him, and ſuch as no Man in his Wits could diſcloſe to any Perſon, under what Obligation ſoever of Secrecy, without an unavoidable Neceſſity, which does in no Sort appear to be the Caſe here; and this makes what he ſays the leſs credible, and him the leſs fit to be believed as to his Competency. The Caſe of the Lord Say, which has been cited, is a full Authority that the Secrecy indulged to this Sort of People by the Law, is not for their Sakes, but that of their Clients. That it is the Privilege, not of the Attorney, but of the Client; and of conſequence cannot be waved without his Conſent. 'Tis true, this Privilege will not hold in a criminal Caſe, but is ſuperſeded, when it is incompatible with the Peace and Welfare of the Publick; but ours is a private Caſe, and falls not within this Rule.

Mr.

Mr. Hargrave mentions the Case of Staples and Staples, wherein a Settlement that was concealed, but not suppressed, was wanted to be known by Mr. Matthews; when the Lord Chancellor directed it so, that there was a Meeting, by Consent of all Parties, between the Attorneys on both Sides, and a Copy taken and signed.

Mr. Daly, of Counsel for the Defendant, supposes, that if he was concerned for a Man guilty of High-Treason, the Court could not oblige him to disclose the Secrets committed to him by that Man.

Mr. Smith, for the Defendant.] If I rightly apprehend the Nature of Mr. Giffard's Evidence offered by the Gentlemen on the other Side, it relates to two different Kinds of Declarations alledged to have been made to him by my Lord Anglesea in Conversation during two different Periods of Time; first, the Declarations of my Lord concerning the Right of Mr. Annesley, (the Lessor of the Plaintiff) and these are alledged to have been made at several Times in the Year 1741, antecedent to the Prosecution of Mr. Annesley; and in the next Place, my Lord's Declarations that he would give Ten Thousand Pounds to have Mr. Annesley hanged; and these are said to have been made during the Continuance of the Prosecution. We objected to this Evidence, that as Mr. Giffard appeared from what he said on the Table, to have been employed by my Lord as his Attorney, he ought not, by Law, to be permitted to disclose any Thing that was uttered to him by my Lord under the Trust and Confidence reposed in him as an Attorney. There have been two Answers given to this Objection: First, That the not disclosing the Secrets of the Client is a Privilege given by Law to the Attorney, and in his Favour only, and therefore he is at Liberty, if he thinks fit, to wave it. In the next Place, the Gentlemen say, that the Declarations touching Mr. Annesley's Right, were made at a Time when my Lord had no Cause depending, and that whatever is disclosed by the Client to his Attorney, when there is no Cause depending in which the Attorney is employed, is not within the Reason of the general Rule; because in such Case he may be said to be intrusted as a Companion or Acquaintance, but cannot be said to be trusted as an Attorney; and therefore, they say, Mr. Giffard ought to be examined, at least to these Declarations. Before I speak to these Points, I shall beg Leave to observe in general, that Breach of Trust and Confidence is a Thing no ways to be favoured in any Man whatsoever, whether he is or is not an Attorney; for mutual Trust and Confidence is one of the strongest Cements of human Society, and without which it could not subsist; and therefore I apprehend, that the Court will always go as far in every Case, as by Law they can, to prevent a Person from being guilty of so base an Action as Violation of Trust and Confidence, although he should be ever so willing to do it.

As to the first Point, Whether Mr. Giffard ought to be at Liberty to wave his Privilege; I think the Case of my Lord Say and Seal, in the Book called Macclesfield's Cases, fol. 41. mentioned by Mr. Prime Serjeant, seems to be an express Authority that he ought not. In that Case, the Court in giving their Opinion, lay it down as a general Rule, "That an Attorney's Privilege is the Privilege of his Client; and that an Attorney, tho' he would, yet shall not be allowed to discover the Secrets of his Client." The different Interest which the Attorney and the Client have in this Privilege, shew this Rule to be highly agreeable to Reason. As to the Attorney, this Privilege is an Exemption from the General Rule, which obliges every one to testify his Knowledge in any Affair where he is called upon as a Witness. By this Exemption he is freed from the disagreeable Necessity of revealing what was disclosed to him by his Client under the Seal of Confidence; this is a Privilege which every honest Attorney will set the highest Value upon, and will endeavour to preserve; and whenever any Attorney desires to be discharged from that Exemption, and to be at Liberty to wave his Privilege, he does, in effect, desire to be at Liberty to be guilty of one of the basest of Actions, Breach of Trust and Confidence; which as it is a Thing highly to be discountenanced in any Case, more especially in that of an Attorney; he ought not to be permitted to do it, let him have ever so strong an Inclination to it. As to the Client, the Interest which he has in this Privilege, is very obvious. No Man can conduct any of his Affairs which relate to Matters of Law, without employing and consulting with an Attorney; and if he does not fully and candidly disclose every Thing that is in his Mind, which he apprehends may be in the least relative to the Affair he consults his Attorney upon, it will be impossible for the Attorney properly to serve him: Therefore, to permit an Attorney, whenever he thinks fit, to betray that Confidence which the Client is under such an absolute Necessity of reposing in him, would be of the most dangerous Consequence, not only to the particular Client concerned, but to every other Man who is or may be a Client. The Gentlemen on the other Side have attempted to confine and circumscribe this Privilege, and to make it extend only to Matters disclosed by the Client relative to some Suit, then depending, in which the Attorney is concerned. But I apprehend this would be making the Rule a great deal too narrow; for, if the Principles on which the Rule is founded, are considered, the true Meaning of it must be, that the Attorney shall not be permitted to reveal any thing that his Client discloses to him under a general Confidence as his Attorney; so that it cannot be material whether a Suit was then actually depending or not; but the material Point to be considered is, whether the Client did not consider him as his Attorney, when he so disclosed his Mind to him? In the present Case, that my Lord Anglesea, at the Time these Declarations touching Mr. Annesley's Right are said to have been made, did consider Mr. Giffard as his Attorney, cannot be doubted. Mr. Giffard says, That my Lord, at several Times before, and particularly in the Year 1741, had employed him in several Suits; that he, after those Discourses, employed him again, and in the Month of May 1742 discharged him. So that the general Confidence my Lord reposed in him as his Attorney, must be presumed actually to subsist from the Time he first retained Mr. Giffard, till the Time he discharged him; and whatever my Lord said to him, during that Space of Time, touching his Affairs, was plainly said to him under Confidence as his Attorney; my Lord had employed him as an Attorney before, and plainly intended again to employ him as his Attorney afterwards; and because there was an Interval, during that Space of Time, in which my Lord was at Peace, and happened to have no Suits on his Hands, to say that his Attorney shall therefore be at Liberty to disclose what was in that Interval revealed to him, would be equally productive of all the ill Consequences that would attend his being permitted to disclose what he was intrusted with relative to a Suit actually depending; the Confidence reposed in the Attorney, is the same in the one Case as in the other, and his Violation of that Confidence equally prejudicial both to the Client and the Publick. It has been objected, That what has been cited out of the Case of Lord Say and Seal, is not the Point adjudged in the Case: But although the Court do there decide the Question before them upon another Point, yet the general Rule which they lay down (as I have mentioned it) stands admitted. The Case of Mr. Matthews, the Attorney, was mentioned on the other Side: If I am rightly informed of that Case, Mr. Matthews had, in the Presence, and at the Desire of his Client, attested and subscribed a Deed as a Witness. The Question asked of him, was touching the Execution of that Deed, and he was ordered to answer it; but that Case is entirely different from the present; whenever a Man attests the Execution of a Deed as a Witness, he does thereby engage to prove the Execution of it, whenever he is judicially called upon so to do; and his Client's desiring him to attest the Deed, is a Consent that the Attorney shall enter into that Engagement; therefore that Case is no way relative to the present Question. This is all I shall trouble the Court with as to the supposed Declarations of my Lord, antecedent to the Prosecution of Mr. Annesley. As to the Declarations supposed to have been made by my Lord during the Prosecution; besides the other Reasons I have before mentioned, as to the Confidence my Lord reposed in him as an Attorney, I have another Objection against the examining Mr. Giffard in this Point. The Gentlemen last Night produced Mr. Giffard, and proposed to examine him, to shew that my Lord Anglesea was concerned in, and assisted to carry on this Prosecution; which Evidence was objected to on our Side, and upon Debate the Court seemed to be of Opinion, that they ought not to be let in to give that Evidence; and I apprehend the Point was this Morning given up by the Gentlemen on the other Side: But the Examination now proposed, is an Attempt to do the same Thing in another Shape; they were not admitted to give Evidence directly that my Lord was concerned in, or carried on the Prosecution; but if they are admitted to prove his Declarations touching his Intention in carrying it on, it is plainly doing the same Thing in other Words, and would be to admit them to do that this Morning which was refused last Night. The Gentlemen have, in proposing their Evidence on this Occasion, used many harsh Expressions concerning the Defendant; but I apprehend they are a little too early; harsh Reflections should not be used until the Facts on which they are founded are proved and given in Evidence; whether that Evidence shall be given or not, is now the Point under the Consideration of the Court; and until that Matter is decided, I make no Doubt but that the Gentlemen of the Jury will not permit the Supposition of Facts to have any Influence upon them, before the Facts themselves shall be proved. Upon the whole, as whatever the Court shall do in this Case will be a Precedent, and, for the Reasons I have mentioned, a Precedent of very great Consequence, in all other Cases between every other Client and his Attorney, I hope the Court will be of Opinion, that Mr. Giffard ought not to be examined to any of the Points proposed.

The Lord Chief Baron. The Objections to Mr. Giffard's being admitted to give the Evidence proposed by the Plaintiff's Counsel, have been argued with great Strength; and undoubtedly the Publick is interested in the Event of this Question, so far as it may affect the necessary Confidence between the Client and his Attorney or Agent, which will make me cautious of fixing Boundaries to that Trust. The proper Way will be to determine this and every like Case upon their own Circumstances. What has been urged to take the present Case out of the general Rule, was, that the Conversation to which they would examine Mr. Giffard, was neither in any Cause wherein he was concerned for the Defendant, or relative to any in which he was consulted, or intended to be employed by the Defendant. If so, the Question will be, Whether an Attorney shall be permitted to disclose the general Conversation he had with his Client, without relation to him as his Attorney? Now, admitting the Policy of the Law in protecting Secrets disclosed by the Client to his Attorney, to be, as has been said, in Favour of the Client, and principally for his Service, and that the Attorney is in loco of the Client, and therefore his Trustee, does it follow from thence, that every Thing said by a Client to his Attorney, falls under the same Reason? I own, I think not; because there is not the same Necessity upon the Client to trust him in one Case as in the other; and of this the Court may judge, from the Particulars of the Conversation. Nor do I see any Impropriety in supposing the same Person to be trusted in one Case as an Attorney or Agent, and in another as a common Acquaintance. In the first Instance, the Court will not permit him, though willing, to discover what came to his Knowledge as an Attorney, because it would be in Breach of that Trust which the Law supposes to be necessary between him and his Employer: But where the Client talks to him at large as a Friend, and not in the Way of his Profession, I think the Court is not under the same Obligations to guard such Secrets, tho' in the Breast of an Attorney. The Case cited of Cutts and Pickering, 1 Vent. 197. restrains it to what came to his Knowledge as Attorney; and so I think is the Case of Lord Say and Seal; the Evidence to which he was produced being to the defective Execution of a Deed, to make a Tenant to the Præcipe for suffering a Recovery, in which the Witness had been employed as Attorney, which was the Secret of his Client's Cause.

The Lord Chief Baron was going to mention the Case of one Hamilton, where he apprehended the Attorney had been examined in Chancery; but being informed he was not, his Lordship proceeded:

What I found myself upon is, the Nature of the Testimony proposed, which appears to me to have been casual Conversation between the Witness and the Earl of Anglesea, which was not necessary to have been communicated to Giffard by his Lordship. And as to the private Trusts between Man and Man, we cannot interpose. Besides, as this was in Part a wicked Secret, it ought not to have been concealed; though, if earlier disclosed, it might have been more for the Credit of the Witness. I therefore think Mr. Giffard may be examined to the Defendant's Declarations concerning the Plaintiff's Person and Title.

Mr. Baron Mounteney. The prodigious Consequence of the Cause now depending before us, hath, very properly, induced the Gentlemen who are of Counsel

Counſel on both Sides, to inſiſt upon, and argue at large, every Point ariſing in the Cauſe, which could poſſibly bear the leaſt Debate.—The ſame Reaſon hath induced the Court to hear gladly, with the utmoſt Patience and Attention, every thing which could poſſibly be offered on either Side; and, I think, nothing hath been omitted, which could have been materially offered upon the preſent Queſtion.

For my own Part, notwithſtanding all the Objections which have been raiſed againſt the Evidence now under Conſideration by the Defendant's Counſel, I ſtill continue of the ſame Opinion, which I entertained when the Evidence was firſt offered and objected to; which is, that the Queſtion now before us will receive a very eaſy, clear, and ſhort Determination, and that in favour of the Evidence propoſed. I the rather ſay ſo, becauſe I think, that upon the very Principles laid down, and upon the Authority of the very Caſes cited by the Defendant's Counſel, it is to Demonſtration clear that the Evidence now offered ought to be admitted.

Mr. Recorder hath very properly mentioned the Foundation upon which it hath been held, and is certainly undoubted Law, that Attornies ought to keep inviolably the Secrets of their Clients, viz. That an Increaſe of legal Buſineſs, and the Inability of Parties to tranſact that Buſineſs themſelves, made it neceſſary for them to employ (and as the Law properly expreſſes it, ponere in loco ſuo) other Perſons who might tranſact that Buſineſs for them.—That this Neceſſity introduced with it the Neceſſity of what the Law hath very juſtly eſtabliſhed, an inviolable Secrecy to be obſerved by Attornies, in order to render it ſafe for Clients to communicate to their Attornies all proper Inſtruction for the carrying on thoſe Cauſes which they found themſelves under a Neceſſity of intruſting to their Care. And if this original Principle be kept conſtantly in view, I think it cannot be difficult to determine either the preſent Queſtion, or any other which may ariſe upon this Head: for upon this Principle, whatever either is, or by the Party concerned can naturally be ſuppoſed, neceſſary to be communicated to the Attorney, in order to the carrying on any Suit or Proſecution, in which he is retained, That the Attorney ſhall inviolably keep ſecret.

On the other hand, whatever is not, nor can poſſibly by any Man living be ſuppoſed to be, neceſſary for that Purpoſe, That the Attorney is at liberty, and in many Caſes, as particularly, I think, in the preſent Caſe, the Attorney ought to diſcloſe.

The Declarations of the Defendant to his Attorney, which are now offered to be proved, I ſhall not mention at large, but ſhall only take notice of one, which was, that (ſpeaking of Mr. Annesley, the now Leſſor of the Plaintiff) he declared, he did not care if it coſt him ten thouſand Pounds, if he could get him hanged. Does any Man living, who hears theſe Words pronounced, heſitate one Moment as to the Meaning and Import of them? They ſpeak too plainly to be miſunderſtood, or doubted of. For God's ſake then let us conſider, what will be the Conſequence of the Doctrine now laid down, and ſo earneſtly contended for, that ſuch a Declaration made by any Perſon to his Attorney, ought not by that Attorney to be proved? A Man (without any natural Call to it) promotes a Proſecution againſt another for a Capital Offence—he is deſirous and determined, at all Events, to get him hanged—he retains an Attorney to carry on the Proſecution, and makes ſuch a Declaration to him as I have before mentioned, (the Meaning and Intention of which, if the Attorney hath common Underſtanding about him, it is impoſſible he ſhould miſtake)—he happens to be too honeſt a Man to engage in ſuch an Affair—he declines the Proſecution—but he muſt never diſcover this Declaration, becauſe he was retained as Attorney. This Proſecutor applies in the ſame Manner to a ſecond, a third, and ſo on, who ſtill refuſe, but are ſtill to keep this inviolably ſecret:—at laſt, he finds an Attorney wicked enough to carry this iniquitous Scheme into Execution—and after all, none of theſe Perſons are to be admitted to prove this, in order either to bring the guilty Party to condign Puniſhment, or to prevent the evil Conſequences of his Crime with regard to civil Property. Is this Law? Is this Reaſon? I think it is abſolutely contrary to both.

As the Principles upon which the Defendant's Counſel have argued, ſo I think likewiſe the Caſes which they have cited make directly againſt them, and are expreſs Authorities in favour of the Evidence now offered.—In the Caſe of Gutts and Pickering, in 1 Vent. the Court were of Opinion, that the Solicitor might be ſworn to the Diſcoveries made to him by his Client before his Retainer.——The Meaning of which I take to be, that ſuch Diſcovery not being made in conſequence of the neceſſary Confidence between Client and Attorney, was therefore not within the Rule of Secrecy: and if the ſame Reaſon will hold in the preſent, or any other given Caſe, even after a Retainer, the Objection muſt equally fail. Now I think the ſame Reaſon does hold in the preſent Caſe, becauſe the Declaration now offered to be proved does not appear, nor could poſſibly by the Defendant be ſuppoſed, to be a neceſſary Inſtruction, or Communication between him and his Attorney, in order to the better carrying on either that Proſecution, or any other legal Buſineſs in which he had retained that Attorney.——So that this Declaration, after the Retainer, ſtands entirely, in my Apprehenſion, on the ſame Footing as if it had been made before. For to ſay that the Confidence between Client and Attorney (to which inviolable Secrecy is to be annexed) is to be taken in the Latitude laid down by the Defendant's Counſel, is, in my Apprehenſion, to ſay that which hath no Foundation in Law, nor the leaſt Colour in point of Reaſon.

The other Caſe which was cited by the Defendant's Counſel, that of Lord Say and Seal, is, I think, ſtill infinitely ſtronger againſt them; and every Reaſon which the Court in that Caſe proceeded upon concludes directly in favour of the Evidence which is the Subject of the preſent Debate.

In that Caſe the Court were of Opinion (and I think moſt rightly), that the Privilege of an Attorney is the Privilege of his Client; (and ſo I have always underſtood the Law to be) but, notwithſtanding that, the Court admitted the very Attorney, who had been intruſted in ſuffering the common Recovery, to prove that the Deed to lead the Uſes of that very Recovery was antedated. And what were the Reaſons upon which the Court proceeded? The firſt mentioned in the Book is, that "the Time of executing the Deed could not be called the Secret of his Client." Now, I think, in this Caſe, the Declaration offered to be proved, can ſtill infinitely leſs be conſidered as the Secret of the Client. The next Thing mentioned in the Report of that Caſe now produced, is, that "it was a thing he might come to the Knowledge of without his Client's acquainting him;" and that, I think, will hold equally ſtrong in the preſent Caſe. Giffard might have heard from others, that Lord Angleſea had made ſuch a Declaration; or Lord Angleſea might himſelf equally have made it to Giffard, altho' he had not retained him as an Attorney, it not being, as I have before mentioned, a neceſſary Inſtruction, nor what could poſſibly by the Defendant be thought ſo, for the better carrying on the Buſineſs in which he was retained; and conſequently, not proceeding from that Confidence which is neceſſary between Client and Attorney; and to which, only becauſe, and ſo far as it is neceſſary, the Privilege of Secrecy hath been annexed. The laſt thing mentioned in the Book is that the Fact offered to be proved, "was of that Nature," that an Attorney concerned, or any body elſe, might inform the Court of it. Now I cannot help thinking from theſe Words, that one Ingredient in the Determination of the Court, was, that the Proof offered in that Caſe was the Proof of a criminal Fact: If it were, that Reaſon will hold infinitely ſtronger in the preſent Caſe. The Declaration now offered to be proved, is of that Nature, and ſo highly criminal, that, in my Opinion, Mankind is intereſted in the Diſcovery; and whoever it was made to, Attorney or not Attorney, lies under an Obligation to Society in general, prior and ſuperior to any Obligation he can lie under to a particular Individual, to make it known.

I ſpeak this without Prejudice: God knows whether ſuch Declarations, as have been mentioned, were, or were not, made by the now Defendant; but, when we are debating the Propriety of the Evidence, we are, during the Debate (and for Argument's ſake only) to ſuppoſe it true: If they ſhall afterwards appear in Proof, I think they will be exceedingly material for the Conſideration of the Jury; and do therefore moſt heartily concur in the Opinion given by my Lord Chief Baron, that the Evidence now offered ought to be admitted.

Mr. Baron Dawſon.] If there had been no Objection made on the Part of the Defendant that the Attorney had been employed by him, the Plaintiff would have had a Right primâ facie for his being admitted a Witneſs; therefore to deprive the Plaintiff of this Right, it muſt be ſhewn, that the Particulars offered here to be given in Evidence came to the Knowledge of Giffard meerly as Attorney for the Defendant. Nothing that came properly to the Knowledge of the Attorney in defence of his Client's Cauſe ought to be revealed. I will ſuppoſe an unknowing Man to have twenty Deeds by him, and he delivers them all to his Attorney to ſee which were relative to the Suit; he looks them over, and finds not half of them to be relative thereto; I apprehend the Attorney is not compellable to diſcloſe the Contents of any one of thoſe Deeds; neither do I think it neceſſary that there ſhould be a Suit actually depending. If I have an Apprehenſion that a Man intends a Suit againſt me, and I employ an Attorney to draw a State of my Caſe from my Papers, though there is no Cauſe depending, there I apprehend it would be a Breach of Truſt to diſcloſe the Contents of thoſe Papers, and that the Attorney ought not to be admitted to diſcloſe what has been ſo intruſted to him: And I think the Court muſt, in this Caſe, be ſatisfied, firſt, that what came to this Man's Knowledge was not neceſſary to his Client's Affairs; and in the next place, that the Client could not think it neceſſary. The Cauſe to be carried on, was a Proſecution for the killing of a Man; what was neceſſary for the carrying on that Proſecution, I think the Attorney ought not to diſcloſe. I think further, that any thing that the Client thought neceſſary, ought likewiſe not to be diſcloſed. The Motive for carrying on the Proſecution againſt the Plaintiff is ſaid to be, becauſe he has a Right to the Eſtate the Defendant was in poſſeſſion of. Can any Man think that this was neceſſary to tell the Attorney, or that the Defendant could have thought it ſo? What was neceſſary, or what a Man might have thought neceſſary, ought not to be diſcloſed. But if the Defendant in this Caſe, has gone any thing further, he has truſted him, not as an Attorney, but as an Acquaintance. The Attorney is to keep ſecret what comes to him as an Attorney; but this Converſation I don't think was neceſſary for carrying on the Cauſe. I agree therefore with my Lord Chief Baron and my Brother Mounteney, that the Evidence is proper to be given.

I think it proper at this Time to mention, that I have conſidered the Point of Evidence that was propoſed Yeſterday, and if it was now to be determined, I ſhould be of Opinion to allow the Evidence; and if the Counſel for the Defendant ſhould ſo pleaſe, they may take a Bill of Exceptions.

Mr. JOHN GIFFARD ſworn.

Q. Do you know the preſent Earl of Angleſea?

Mr. Giffard. Yes, Sir.

Q. Pray, Sir, do you know the preſent Plaintiff, Mr. Annesley?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Pray had you at any time any Converſation, and when, with the preſent Lord Angleſea concerning the Plaintiff, or his Title to the Lands in this Ejectment, or any other Lands?

A. It was ſome time between the 7th of December 1741, and May 1742, my Lord Angleſea had an Appeal from this Kingdom to the Houſe of Lords in England between Charles Annesley, Eſq; and him, which Appeal was heard on the 10th of March 1741.

Court. Anſwer the Queſtion directly.

A. I am only giving you the Reaſons of this Diſcourſe.

My Lord Angleſea having that Suit, and a good many others, with my Lord Haverſham, Francis Annesley, and Mrs. Simpſon, he was very uneaſy at it. He ſaid, he would be very glad to ſend to the preſent Plaintiff, and if he would give him 2 or 3000*l. a-Year, he would ſurrender up to him the Titles of* Angleſea and Altham, and the Eſtate, and go over to France and live there; and then he ſhould be much eaſier and happier than to be tormented with thoſe People that were ſuing of him, for that he would rather his Brother's Son ſhould have it than any other Perſon.

D. Go on.

A. For if Jemmy had the Eſtate on thoſe Terms, he ſhould live much happier and eaſier in France than he was here, as he was tormented by Law; for it was his Right, and he'd ſurrender it to him, (for he did not value the Title) rather than Frank and Charles Anneſley, and thoſe that were ſtriving to take it from him ſhould have it; and that he would ſend for a Gentleman to teach him the French Tongue, to qualify him to live in that Kingdom; and accordingly he sent for one Mr. Stephen Hayes.

Q. What is he?

A. He was an Officer in the French Service, as Hayes himself and my Lord told me; and my Lord had him in the House a considerable Time, on purpose to converse with him in French.

Q. Did you ever see him there?—A. I did, my Lord, forty Times.

Q. Can you recollect any particular Time when this Conversation happened?—A. I told you, my Lord, it was about March 1741, when he had the Appeal in England.

Q. Was it before or after the Determination of that Appeal?

A. I believe it was both before and after; the Appeal was determined the 10th of March, and he continued in that Resolution till May 1742.

Q. And, pray, what altered his Resolution then?

A. Why, on the first of May Mr. Annesley had shot a Man at Staines; it was on Saturday, as appears by the Indictment and Coroner's Inquest; upon which, the second of May, my Lord sent for me, and ordered me to go to Staines, and to inquire into the Affair, and to collect the Evidence, and carry on the Prosecution, and to follow the Directions of Mr. Garden and Mr. Gordon, with the Assistance of one Mr. Jans, who was a Surgeon; which I accordingly did. My Lord told me further, that I should follow their Directions, and in some small Time after (perhaps three or four Days) told me, That they had consulted together, and advised him not to be seen to converse with me, for that it was not proper for him to appear in the Prosecution, for fear of its hurting him in the Cause that was coming on between him and the Plaintiff; and, that he did not care if it cost him 10,000*l. if he could get the Plaintiff hanged*; for then he should be easy in his Title and Estate.

Q. After he told you that he did not care if it cost him 10,000*l.* if he could get the Plaintiff hanged, for then he should be easy in his Titles and Estates, who laid out the Money in carrying on this Prosecution of this unfortunate Man?

A. Money came privately from Mr. Jans; my Lord told me, He was determined, as he was advised, not to appear in it himself, but that I should apply, from Time to Time, to Mr. Jans and Mr. Jans should, from Time to Time, supply me, for that he had ordered him to provide Money; and accordingly I had Money from him.

Q. What was Jans to my Lord Anglesea?

A. His Companion, and Manager, and Agent, and managed every Thing for him.

Cross-Examination.

Q. Repeat again the Time when you first had this Discourse with the Defendant, of his desiring Mr. Annesley to be sent to.

A. Some Time before the 10th of March 1741, we had the first Colloquium; we had the like Discourse, at sundry Times, between the 7th of December 1741, and May 1742.

Q. When was the first Colloquium, as you call it?

A. The first Time was some Time before the 10th of March, 1741.

Q. Where was Mr. Annesley at this Time?

A. I don't know, I never saw him at that Time.

Q. Do you know whether he was in the Kingdom of England or not?

A. I cannot tell. I believe he was.

Q. Do you know for what Purpose it was that my Lord said these Words to you? Was it with an Intent that you should apply to Mr. Annesley?—A. No, I don't believe it was.

Q. Pray now, Sir, do you know of any Steps that were taken in order to this Accommodation that my Lord desired?

A. I don't know of any, Sir.

Q. Pray, Sir, how soon after this 10th of March 1741, was it, that you first saw this Frenchman with my Lord?

A. Near about that Time; I cannot tell exactly. Frenchman he was not, I believe he was an Irish Gentleman, a Tenant's Son of my Lord's.

Q. How soon was it that my Lord said this after the 10th of March?

A. Near about the Time it was.

Q. Had my Lord Mr. Hayes in the House with him?

A. He had him in the House for that Purpose, of learning the French Tongue.

Q. Did you ever hear any Thing of my Lord's applying for an Accommodation?

A. It was very often talked in the House, Sir, that one Mr. Paterson and one Mr. Mac Kercher should be sent to.

Q. Do you know of any Steps that were taken towards an Accommodation?

A. I know, of myself, of no Steps in order to an Accommodation.

Q. Sir, I see you have refreshed your Memory with Papers and Memorandums as to Periods of Time, are they of your own Hand-writing?

A. They are.

Q. I should be glad to know when it was that you put down those Periods of Time in Writing?

A. Sir, I put down the Days as they came on. I could shew you every Day where I was for seven Years last past.

Q. Were they wrote about the Time the Transactions happened?

A. I always did, since I was a Practitioner of the Law, keep a Day-book of every thing I did; and the first thing I do in a Morning is, to set down the preceding Day's Work.

Q. You say, my Lord used some Words to this Purpose, that he did not care if it cost him 10,000*l. if he could get the Plaintiff hanged*; and you were the Agent, under Garden and Gordon, to carry on that Prosecution?

A. I was.

Q. How came you to be employed?

A. The Reason I was sent for was, that I had been a Coroner myself in the County of Devon for some Years (a Dozen or Fourteen), and was thought a proper Person because of that.

Q. Did you go on with that Prosecution till there was a Verdict?

A. I did, Sir.

Q. Pray now, did you inform yourself of the Nature of that Fact at any Time before the Trial came on?

A. I attended the Coroner's Inquest, Sir, and did inform myself of it. I collected Evidences, and drew the Brief. I have the Brief here.

Q. Did you see, or had you a Copy of, the Examinations upon which the Indictment was found?

A. I was present at the Examination of the Witnesses before the Coroner, and took some Notes of my own at that Time, which I have with me.

Q. How was the Indictment found?

A. The Indictment was upon the Coroner's Inquest.

Q. Were there any Examinations upon which the Bill of Indictment was found?

A. The Coroner only took their Examinations short, as Memorandums. The Bill was found upon the Evidence of the Son of the Deceased, and others, vivâ voce, before the Grand Jury.

Q. Were there, to your Knowledge, any Examinations taken in Writing?

A. I was told that Sir Thomas Reynell took some Examinations in Writing; I applied to him for them, but he refused me; I applied to him a second Time for them, when he told me that he had consulted with Sir John Gonson, and that no Examinations should be shewn till they were produced in Court.

Q. Were the same Witnesses that were examined before the Coroner examined in Court upon the Trial?

A. Most of them were, and a great many more.

Q. Were they not all examined?

A. I believe they all were. A Matter of forty People were examined.

Q. Was your Brief framed from the Depositions of those People that were examined before the Coroner?

A. My Brief was framed from the Examinations of Witnesses that I took myself.

Q. Pray now, did the Case appear, for the most part, to be the same upon the Trial, as upon the Examinations before the Coroner?

A. No, Sir, it differed vastly.

Q. What was the finding on the Coroner's Inquest?

A. Wilful Murder.

Q. Recollect some one material Circumstance wherein the Evidences varied?---A. I tell you, Sir,---

Q. Was the Evidence stronger on the Coroner's Inquest than it was in Court on the Trial?

A. Yes, it was stronger against Mr. Annesley, because the main Evidence was taken off upon the Trial, for Reasons----

Q. Had my Lord Anglesea any Hand in taking off the main Evidence?

A. No.

Q. Who then took it off?

A. It was the Prisoner who took it off. His Evidence was rendered invalid; his Evidence was given in Court, but his Evidence was discredited in Court by Reason of his Character; and there was a strong Reason given for it in Court by a Witness.

Q. What was that Witness's Name?---A. It was Paul Keating?

Q. Were there any Persons produced upon that Trial to the Character of Paul Keating?---A. Yes.

Q. Was Paul Keating for or against the Prisoner?

A. He was for the Prisoner.

Q. Who was the main Witness that swore against the Plaintiff on his Trial?---A. It was John Eggleston.

Q. Had you any Conversation with that John Eggleston before the Trial, touching his Evidence?

A. I had. He was brought to me by one Williams, that keeps the White-Horse in Piccadilly, and he varied from his Evidence that he gave before Sir Thomas Reynell.

Q. Was you present when he gave that Evidence?---A. I was not.

Q. How do you know it?

A. It was declared so in Court, and you asked me what passed in Court.

Q. Tell us, whether this Fact, for which Mr. Annesley was prosecuted, was committed by Day or Night?

A. By Day. The Fact was committed at Staines.

Q. What Time of the Day was it?---A. As it appeared upon the Examinations, one or two o'Clock in the Afternoon.

Q. Did it appear to have been done in a publick Place?

A. In a Meadow.

Q. Did it appear on the Trial, that there were any Number of Persons present?

A. There were present, John Eggleston, John Fisher, and one John Bettesworth, and one more, I think

Q. Were there any other of the Witnesses that appeared on that Prosecution that were discredited on account of their Character, besides Eggleston?

A. There was a Variation in their Testimony, but that they were discredited for their Character, I can't say.

Q. What Time was the Trial?

A. The Trial, I believe, was the 14th of July 1742.

Q. What Time was the Coroner's Inquest held?

A. The 4th of May 1742.

Q. Pray now, when my Lord Anglesea said to you, That he did not care if it cost him 10,000*l. to get the Plaintiff hanged*, did you understand that it was his Resolution to destroy him if he could?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. Did you advise my Lord Anglesea not to carry on that Prosecution?

A. I did not advise him not to carry it on; I did not presume to undertake to advise him.

Q. Did you say any thing in answer to my Lord, and what, when he told you, he did not care if it cost him 10,000*l. if he could get the Plaintiff hanged?*---A. I don't know any particular Answer that I made him.

Q. Did you approve or disapprove of his Expressions and Design together?——A. I can't say that I did either.

Q. Did not you go on as effectually after, with the Prosecution, as you could?——A. I did, to be sure, Sir. Indeed, I advised my Lord Anglesea not to appear upon the Trial.

Q. Since my Lord had told you, that he would agree with the Plaintiff, and go to France, and disappoint Charles Annesley, how came you not to tell him, that if he hanged this Pretender, it would frustrate his Designs, and the Expectations he had?

A. In answer to what you say (that if the Pretender, as you call him, were hanged, there would be a greater Fund left than 2 or 3000*l.* a Year to go abroad with), it certainly would destroy that Project of disappointing Mess. Annesleys; but then it would put a greater Estate in his own Pocket.

Q. Was not the Intention of the Prosecution to disappoint the Annesleys?

A. No, the Intention was to put this Man out of the Way, that he might enjoy the Estate easy and quiet.

Q. When my Lord Anglesea said, that he would not care if it cost him 10,000*l.* so he could get the Plaintiff hanged, did you apprehend from thence, thence, that he would be willing to go to that Expence in the Proſecution?

A. I did.

Q. Did you ſuppoſe from thence that he would diſpoſe of that 10,000 l. in any Shape to bring about the Death of the Plaintiff?---A. I did.

Q. Did you not apprehend that to be a moſt wicked Crime?---A. I did.

Q. If ſo, how could you, who ſet yourſelf out as a Man of Buſineſs, engage in that Project, without making any Objection to it?

A. I may as well aſk you, how you came to be engaged for the Defendant in this Suit.

Q. Was it before, or after, the Coroner's Inqueſt, that my Lord Angleſea told you, he did not care if it coſt him Ten thouſand Pounds to get the Plaintiff hang'd?

A. I can't charge my Memory; it was there, or thereabouts.

D. Look in your Diary, and ſee.

A. I'll look in my Diary. I cannot exactly tell you, Sir. The Second of May was the Day I was ſent for to my Lord, at the White Horſe in Piccadilly; and I believe one Thompſon Gregory was ſent for me, and with a great deal of Joy they ſaid, that Mr. Anneſley had killed a Man, and would be hang'd. The 3d of May I went to Colebrooke, within three Miles of Staines. The 4th of May I went to Staines, and the Inqueſt was held there.

Q. Was it after that 4th of May it was held?

A. I came home the 5th, and I believe it was that Day; for my Lord met me at Hounſlow, in his Coach-and-Six to know how Things went on.

Q. Was it at that Meeting he ſaid this to you?---A. I cannot tell. It was within a Day or two, up or down. I did not take particular Notice.

Q. Did you ever enter down in Writing any Converſation between you?

A. I have made Memorandums about my Buſineſs, but private Converſation in Company I never entered in Writing.

Q. Was it not upon the Day he ſent for you to go down to Staines that he ſaid theſe Words?

A. I can't ſay more than I know. I believe it was not. And I believe it was after, or juſt upon, holding the Coroner's Inqueſt.

Q. Did not you underſtand from thence, that he would lay out that Money, in any Shape, to compaſs the Death of this Man?

A. I cannot tell. But my Lord is very apt to be flaſhy in his Diſcourſe.

Q. Did not you apprehend it to be a bad Purpoſe to lay out Money to compaſs the Death of another Man?

A. I do not know but I did. I do believe it, Sir: But I was not to undertake that bad Purpoſe. If there was any dirty Work, I was not concerned in it.

Q. If you did believe this, I aſk you, how came you to engage in this Proſecution without Objection?---A. I make a Diſtinction between carrying on a Proſecution, and compaſſing the Death of a Man.

Q. How came you to make that Diſtinction?

A. I may as well aſk, How the Counſel came to plead the Cauſe?

Q. Did you ever mention to any of your Counſel, that my Lord made that Declaration?---A. I did not.

A. If you had told any of them that my Lord made that Declaration, would they have appeared for you?

A. I can't tell whether they would or not.

Q. Do you believe any honeſt Man would?

A. Yes, I believe they would, or elſe I would not have carried it on, Sir. And I do aſſure you, it is the only Cauſe I was concerned in at the Old Bailey in my Life, and ſhall be the laſt.

Q. Don't you believe, that my Lord's engaging in that Proſecution was, becauſe the Man ſet up a Title to his Eſtate, and not on account of his killing the Man at Staines?

A. I believe it was; and believed it then, and do now.

Q. Do not you believe it was an unlawful Purpoſe?

A. I cannot help that. I was employed by the Church-warden of Staines to proſecute. I ſhould not have been concerned upon any Account whatſoever, had not I the Sanction of the Coroner's Inqueſt for Wilful Murder, which I thought a Juſtification of the Proſecution.

Q. When was it that the Church-warden employed you?

A. The 8th of May, 1742. He wrote a Letter to me, "Pray proſecute "James Anneſley, &c." Signed Stephen Bolton.

Q. Was not this after my Lord declared he would ſpend Ten thouſand Pounds to get him hang'd?---A. It was.

Q. Sir, I aſk you, was there any Money given to any Witneſs to appear and give Evidence?---A. I don't know of any.

Q. What Sum was given for their Attendance?

A. About Half-a-Crown a Day for their Attendance. If there was any dirty Work, I knew nothing of it.

Q. Are you paid your Bill of Coſts?---A. Not all of it.

Q. How much does it come to?

A. The Proſecution coſt Eight hundred Pounds: But the Total remaining due to me is Three hundred and Thirty Pounds.

Q. Was there any body preſent, when you had this Converſation with my Lord?

A. No, I believe not; for we uſed to converſe together alone frequently.

Q. Was Mr. Jans ever preſent?---A. No, never.

Q. Was Thompſon Gregory preſent when he went and brought you to my Lord?---A. He came with me.

Q. Did he remain in the Room?---A. I believe he did, all that Night.

Q. Was this the 2d of May?---A. Yes.

Q. Had you that Day any Diſcourſe about the Sum of Money that my Lord would ſpend?---A. No, not that Day.

Q. Was it by your Advice and Directions that that Letter was ſent to you by the Church-warden of Staines?

A. No, it was by Garden's and Gordon's Advice.

Q. Was you privy to it?

A. Yes, I was. And this Letter was adviſed in order that the Defendant might not appear in the Proſecution.

Q. Did not you know this was to give a Colour?---A. I did.

Q. Did you think this was for a good Purpoſe?

A. Mr. Garden, Gordon, Jans, and Lord Angleſea had a Conſultation, and it was thought proper that I ſhould have another Perſon to my Aſſiſtance, becauſe they would not appear, and my Inſtructions were, to ſend this Order to the Church-warden and get it ſigned, that my Lord ſhould not appear in it; and the Reaſon was, that if my Lord ſhould appear in it, they thought it would be attended with ill Conſequences.

Q. Did you know at the time of the Trial that Mr. Anneſley intended to ſue for the Title and Eſtate of Lord Angleſea?---A. It was reported he would, that he intended it; and this was in order to prevent it.

Q. Do you know one Mr. Thomas Smith?---A. Yes, Sir.

Q. I deſire to know, if Mr. Anneſley gets this Suit, whether you will be paid your Bill of Coſts?

A. No, Sir, if he gets it, I ſhall loſe every Shilling of it.

Q. Where do you lodge?---A. At one Parſons's in King-Street.

Q. Are you acquainted with Thomas Smith the Cabinet-Maker?

A. I am very well acquainted with him.

Q. Had you any Diſcourſe with him about this Evidence that you have given To-day?---A. I have had ſome Diſcourſe with him about it.

Q. Did not you tell him that you had been ill uſed, and that that provoked you to give in this Evidence?

A. No, I never did; for he knew that I had been ill uſed. I will tell you what I have ſaid to him: That it was a wrong Step in my Lord; for this Bill of Coſts of mine would never have come to light, had not I been obliged to ſue for my Right. That my Lord filed a Bill in the Exchequer againſt me in England, to diſcloſe what Buſineſs I had done for him, and that I was obliged in my Juſtification to annex in a Schedule this my Bill of Coſts.

Q. Did not you look upon my Lord Angleſea as your real Client in the Proſecution of the Plaintiff?

A. He promiſed to pay me, but I did not look upon him as my immediate Employer, for my Lord told me he had directed Mr. Jans to employ me.

Q. Did you look upon Mr. Jans at this Time as your Client?

A. I did look upon him as my Client.

Q. Do not you believe that my Lord had theſe Diſcourſes with you as his Attorney?

A. No, Sir; for I knew I was never to be concerned in the Cauſe.

Q. In what Light then did you look upon that Diſcourſe?

A. I looked upon it to be a Diſcourſe to me as a Friend.

Q. Was not the Diſcourſe with you on the 4th and 5th of May, as his Attorney or Solicitor?---A. I looked upon him to be my Client.

Q. And therefore did not he look upon you as his Solicitor?

A. I cannot tell what he did.

Q. Did he meet you as his Friend, or Solicitor?

A. Sir, there was another Man with me.

Q. Were not you employed by him to ſee the Inqueſt held?

A. I was. I wiſh you would produce any Perſon to attempt to prove that I am a diſhoneſt Man.

Q. How long have you been a Practitioner?

A. I have had a great many Clients in the Courſe of twenty and odd-Years.

Q. Do not you look upon it as a Rule of Prudence and Honour, for Attornies to keep religiouſly the Secrets of their Clients?

A. I do, indeed.

Q. Do not you think, that if a Solicitor or an Attorney diſcloſes theſe Secrets, he is a very bad Man?---A. I think he is.

Q. And how came you to diſcloſe this Secret?

A. I would not have diſcloſed this, if I had not been obliged to do it; and the Reaſon which obliged me to do it, was, my Lord's filing a Bill in the Exchequer to diſcloſe what Buſineſs I had done for him; when I was obliged to anſwer the Interrogatories I am now aſked.

Q. You ſaid my Lord Angleſea was a very flaſhy Man in his Diſcourſe; did not you ſay ſo?---A. Yes.

Q. Is not he a Man ſubject to Paſſion and Heat, and haſty and raſh in his Expreſſions?---A. He is.

Q. At the Time that he talked to you about giving up theſe Things to Jemmy, was not he chagrined, and in a Paſſion?

A. He was far from being in a Paſſion, and aſked my Opinion whether it was proper for him to do it.

Q. Was not the Reaſon he gave this, that he did not value his Titles, and ſhould live eaſier in France?---A. It was.

Q. Was it a conſcientious Scruple, or his Deſire of Eaſe?

A. I believe it was both. The Reaſon of it was, he was extremely angry with the Anneſleys, becauſe they pulled away Money too faſt from him.

Q. Was not this ſaid out of the Effect of his Chagrin at this Time, or out of Spleen to Charles Anneſley?

A. No, I believe he ſaid it for his own Sake, for his own Advantage; for the Cauſe then coming on with the preſent Plaintiff made him deſirous to be eaſy.

Q. Was there any Intercourſe or Treaty ſet on foot between him and Mr. Anneſley?---A. I cannot tell: I have anſwered that already.

Q. At the Time this Diſcourſe happened, about the 10th of March 1741, and ſeveral other Times, can you recollect whether any one was preſent?

A. None at all, Sir; we were conſtantly alone; but I heard Mr. Jans ſeveral times adviſe him to leave the three Kingdoms.

Q. In your Anſwer to the Bill in the Exchequer, did you inſert that Declaration that my Lord made to you?

A. Sir, I wonder you would aſk that Queſtion; it has no relation to the Bill.

Q. Did you ever tell any Perſon that my Lord made that Declaration?

A. Yes, I have ſworn it before in London.

Q. Before whom?---A. Before the Examiner.

Q. Did you mention it at any other time before you were examined?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom?

A. Upon having the Copy of this Bill, the Managers of Mr. Anneſley came to me to know if I knew any thing of this Matter.

Q. What Managers?

A. Mr. Kercher, Mr. Paterſon, and two or three more.

Q. Was you ſerved with a Subpœna?---A. I have it here.

Q. Where did you receive it?

A. Here, Sir. They applied to me to go to Ireland, and ſaid I muſt go; and ſaid, Will you give us the Trouble of ſending you a Subpœna? and I told them I would not give them the Trouble.

Q. Did

Q. Did not you say that you would not have given Evidence here, except you had been forced to it?

A. Why, Sir, is not that a Force? If a Man applies to me, and says, he will subpœna me, must not I obey that Subpœna?

Q. Did you ever hear my Lord Anglesea say any Thing about the stealing of a Silver Spoon?

A. I have heard my Lord Anglesea say, that this Pretender, as he called him, was transported for stealing a Silver Spoon.

Q. When did you hear that?

A. At the Time of the first Discourse between us.

Q. Did you ever hear it more than once?

A. Yes, fifty Times, I believe.

Q. Can you recollect any one Time of those fifty Times, and who was present?

A. I cannot recollect; but it was between the 7th of December 1741, and the 14th of July 1742.

Q. Upon your Oath, did you ever, in any Conversation between my Lord Anglesea and you, hear my Lord say, that the Plaintiff was a Bastard?

A. I have. I have heard him say, he was his own Bastard. I have heard him say, that he was his Brother's Bastard. I have heard him say, That he got the Wench with Child, and made her lay it upon his Brother, because he was better able to maintain it than himself.

Q. Did you hear him say that as often as you heard him speak of the Silver Spoon?

A. That is not possible for me to charge my Memory with. I have heard him say both very often. When he said he got him transported, he said he stole the Silver Spoon.

Q. Was any one present when he said this?

A. Yes, I will tell you one, who said he was in the Bed with her along with my Lord, one Rolph.

Q. Was Rolph present?——A. Rolph was present.

Q. At what Place?—A. I believe in my Lord Anglesea's Lodgings.

Q. Where?——A. In London; either there, or at a Tavern.

Q. Who did you hear this from?——A. I heard Rolph say this.

Q. Was Rolph one of the Company at the Tavern?——A. He was.

Q. Did he sit down at Table with you?

A. I believe it was in the Morning, at my Lord's Lodgings in Bury-Street, at the Time of Breakfast, now I recollect me of it.

Q. What was it my Lord said then?

A. What do you say to this, says he? Here is Rolph says, he was in the Bed at the same Time, and knows the Pretender is a Bastard.

Q. Was this when he mentioned the stealing the Silver Spoon?

A. I believe it was at the same Time.

The Evidence closed for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Attorney General, (St. George Caulfield, Esq.) opens the Defendant's Evidence.

May it please your Lordship, and you Gentlemen of the Jury,

I am Counsel for the Defendant, the Earl of Anglesea. You have heard a great deal of Evidence carried on for several Days, entirely taken up in the Examination of Witnesses on the Part of the Plaintiff.

It is necessary, before I mention the Nature of our Proofs, to take Notice of the Method observed in producing the Evidence that has been already given, in order to attend the Gentlemen of the other Side in the same Method.

Though they were very sensible, that this Fact, if true, must admit of the clearest Proof in the Affirmative, yet, they were pleased to begin, as I thought, at a considerable Distance from the Point, and took up much Time in examining Witnesses to shew, that it was probable, or at least not improbable, that my Lady Altham might have a Child, and gave Evidence, such as it was, that my Lady Altham had been with Child, and had one or two Miscarriages before the pretended Birth of the Plaintiff.

They afterwards came more directly to the Question, and called Witness to prove the actual Birth of the Plaintiff; that it was at Dunmaine, in the County of Wexford, in April or May 1715, (though one of their Witnesses of the best Appearance swore it to be in September 1715, and gave very particular Reasons for it) that there were great Rejoicings, a publick Christening, who the Sponsors were, the nursing, and bringing home again of the Child, when nursed, to the House of Dunmaine, and his Stay there with my Lord his Father, 'till about three Years old; this seems to me a material, and indeed the most material Part of the Case; the Jury will therefore recollect the Inconsistencies and Contradictions of the Witnesses to these Facts, and judge of the Truth and Probability of the Evidence, by comparing the Nature of the Facts testified, with the Witnesses produced to prove them, how likely, how possible, that such Persons as these, and these alone, should be able to prove a Fact of this Nature.

They proceeded afterwards to give an Account of this Child in the several Places where my Lord Altham had resided after his Separation from my Lady; at Kinna, at Carrickduff, and in Dublin, in the several Places where he lodged there, and I think one of the Witnesses produced, late last Night, gave some Account of him during my Lord's Residence at Inchicore: Whether this Evidence has Substance and Strength in it, or does not rather consist of loose Expressions, and the private Apprehensions of People, who knew but very little of the Family, is a Matter that will be observed upon by those Gentlemen, whose Province it is.

It was judged necessary, in the next Place, to shew, how this unfortunate, unoffending Child came to be forsaken and quite neglected by my Lord his Father; for they were sensible it would be proved, that my Lord considered him only as his Bastard, and even doubted, whether he was justly laid to his Door; you remember what Sort of Witnesses were called to give this Account, and what the Proof was. It is not my Business to make Observations.

I cannot but think the Evidence that ensued was produced, and judged to be necessary, from a Consciousness, that all their former Proofs were in themselves insufficient to establish this Fact; for after positive swearing, and so much of it, what Occasion could there be to enter into Evidence, that at most could induce but a Presumption? But this Evidence was, it seems, withal very proper to captivate, and therefore it was they called Witnesses to prove, that the Defendant, the Earl, did (not in any Hurry, but about three Weeks after his Brother's Death) employ some Bailiffs to seize this Boy, then publick in Town, and at Noon-Day to carry him by Force on Ship-board, in order to be transported, and that my Lord himself assisted in it. But you, Gentlemen, will consider of the whole Proof as to this Transaction, and judge, whether it does not very plainly contradict and refute itself, and shew, that this Person did of himself desire, and in the usual regular Way procure an Opportunity of going abroad, without the least Interposition on the Part of the Earl. They then called a single Witness to shew my Lord was so sensible of the Plaintiff's Right, for this is the Turn they give it, that taking Advantage of a Misfortune that happened to befall him, his killing a Man by mere Accident, the Earl had him indicted and prosecuted for that Fact, in order to have him capitally convicted, and so to put him out of the Way; and to conclude all with a finishing Stroke, this same Witness tells you, that the Earl confessed the Estate, and Honours, and all were the Plaintiff's Right, and that he had a full Purpose to strike up a Bargain with him. If the Earl did at all interpose in this Prosecution, it will be shewn to you in proper Time, that the Inference drawn from such a Piece of Misconduct is by no Means just; and we shall insist, that the Witness being entirely unsupported as to this Fact, had, of his own shewing, too great a Share in the Transaction, to be capable or deserving of Credit, as to this, or any other Matter of Fact.

This then, in a few Words, is the Scope and general Tendency of their Evidence; but how these Circumstances and Facts have been proved, by whom, with what Circumstances of Probability, and how just their Conclusions, are Matters that might well deserve the Consideration of the Jury, though no Evidence was to be offered on our Part, by comparing it with what might be expected, and must have been in their Power, if the Fact really was, as they would now have it thought to be.

We apprehend it will be material to our Defence, before we enter into other Proofs, to state to your Lordship and the Jury the Pedigree of this Family, shortly to open somewhat of the Settlements in the Family, their Prospects and Expectations, as well as the Circumstances of the Fortune in Possession at the Time of this supposed Birth; which will shew that a legitimate Son of my Lord Altham (supposing there was a Desire to conceal it, which is not pretended) must have been a Matter of such Notoriety, as that the Proof of it at this Day could not possibly admit of the least Difficulty.

Arthur, the first Earl of Anglesea, had a considerable Family Estate, and upon the Settlement of the Kingdom at the Time of the Revolution made great Additions to it; his Credit at Court, and the Condition of the Times, gave him, as it did to many others, an Opportunity to do: this Estate, taken together, does, as I am informed, far exceed any other now in the Kingdom: this Earl, Arthur, had Issue five Sons, James, Altham, afterwards created Lord Altham, Richard, Arthur, and Charles.

On the Marriage of his eldest Son James, with a Lady of the Roscommon Family, he settled the greatest Part of his Estate in the usual Manner, with Limitations over to his other Sons, and their Issue, successively, in Tail Male, and soon after died.

James, his eldest Son, also died, leaving Issue of this Marriage, three Sons, James, John, and Arthur.

Altham, the second Son of Arthur the first Earl, died without Issue, and his Honour devolved

Upon Richard the third Son; and this Richard Lord Altham had Issue, Arthur, late Lord Altham, and Richard, the present Earl of Anglesea.

Arthur, the fourth Son of the first Earl Arthur, died without Issue; and Charles, the fifth Son, died, leaving Issue Mr. Charles Annesley, whom we all know.

My Lord, James, the eldest Son of Earl James, and Grandson to Earl Arthur, being in Possession of the Honours and Estate of the Family, he levied Fines, and suffered Recoveries of a great Part of this Estate, and in the Year 1701 made several Wills and Codicils disposing of it. By the first of these Wills, dated May 14, 1701, after the Limitations to his Brothers, on default of Issue-Male in them, he devised his Estate to his Uncle Richard, Lord Altham, the Defendant's Father, and the Heirs-Male of his Body, and in default of such Issue, to his Uncle Charles Annesley, and the Heirs-Male of his Body. On the 9th of December following, he made another Will, and limited the Estate in the same Manner; after recollecting that his Uncle Richard, Lord Altham, died some little Time before, he apprehended it would be wrong to let his Name stand in his Will, and therefore, in the Will of December, drew a Line across his Name, and instead of Richard, wrote over it Arthur, and then the Limitation stood to Arthur, Lord Altham, and the Heirs-Male of his Body; by which Alteration Richard, the younger Brother, the now Defendant, stood excluded from the Succession. After this he made several Codicils, which I have not read, but by some of them, the Will of the 14th of May is recited and established, by others the altered Will that was in December; but by the last of these Codicils, the Will of May 14, 1701, is, as we apprehend, clearly set up and established. This we shall shew, if not admitted, from the Wills and Codicils that are now on the Table.

Soon after this, Earl James died without Issue-Male; his Brother John also died without Issue-Male, and Arthur the youngest Brother succeeded to the Honours and Estate. From this Confusion in these Wills and Codicils it remained a Matter of great Doubt, if the late Earl Arthur, and the late Lord Altham, should both die without Issue-Male, of which there was no Prospect, who should succeed to the Estate, whether the present Earl, under the first Will of May 1701, or Mr. Charles Annesley, under the altered Will in December 1701; but the general Opinion was, and it was the Apprehension of the late Earl himself, that the present Earl stood excluded. A Son of the late Lord Altham would have made this Question unnecessary, for clearly he must have succeeded to these great Honours, and to this vast Estate. Such a Son, and such a Birth, must therefore be an Event, as of great Consequence, so of great Notoriety; how could it be unknown, or known only to such as you have seen, in a Country so peopled, and, as I may say, in the Midst of their own Estates?

But it will appear further, that the late Lord Altham was possessed himself of an Estate of about 1200 l. a Year; the Town of New Ross, in the Neighbourhood of Dunmaine, was Part of it; this Estate, on the Failure of Issue-Male in him, was to go, not to his Brother the Defendant, but to the late Lord Anglesea. It will appear, that this Estate, on the Death of Lord Altham, was entered upon and enjoyed by the late Earl of Angleſea, until his Death.

Is it poſſible then there could be ſuch a Son of Lord Altham, and the late Earl know nothing of it? Could he be ſuch a Stranger to his own Family? Nay, though a Stranger in other Reſpects, the Lord Altham and his Family, and his Family-Affairs, made too much Noiſe in the World to ſuppoſe it poſſible. There is no Pretence, that the late Earl was concerned in any iniquitous Scheme. If he knew of this Child, can it be ſuppoſed he would do him ſuch an Injury? In Policy, if from no better Principle, ſure he would have more Regard to his own Character.

My Lord, we ſhall ſhew it further in Proof, that the late Lord Altham, for particular Reaſons, was deſirous to have a Son, and would very greatly have found his Account in it, being in Remainder to the Angleſea Eſtate; as I ſaid, often in Diſtreſs for Money, one Method of raiſing it was by the Sales of Reverſions of Parts of this Eſtate; the Validity of theſe Sales depended on his ſurviving the late Earl Arthur. Now upon his adviſing with Counſel, touching theſe intended Sales, we ſhall prove he was adviſed and informed, that theſe Sales, as Matters ſtood, could produce but little Money, becauſe the Title depended on the Contingency of his ſurviving the Earl, who was judged the better Life of the two, as it really fell out. But if he had a Son, that ſomething worth while might be expected, becauſe then, by levying a Fine, the Eſtate would have ſtood aſſured to the Purchaſer ſo long as there was Iſſue Male of his Body. This we ſhall prove by a Gentleman of undoubted Veracity and Reputation.

The Gentlemen on the other Side think, they have great Advantage againſt us, that the Proof on our Part is in the Negative; the Obſervation is partly juſt, that it is much more eaſy to prove the Affirmative in any Queſtion of Fact; but they might carry it a little further; for as ſuch Proof is more eaſy, ſo it ought to be in proportion more clear and ſatisfactory: But be that as it will, we apprehend this is a Fact of ſuch a Nature as admits of Proof in the Negative, and that ſuch as may produce a full and clear Conviction; for this Purpoſe, therefore, we ſhall now proceed to give an Account of my Lady Altham from the Time of her Arrival in this Kingdom in the Year 1713, by a Perſon who attended her Ladyſhip into the Kingdom, continued in her Service as Woman to her all the Time of her being here, I think was never a Week together from her, went back with her again, and continued in the ſame Service and Attendance, till my Lady's Death. This Witneſs will prove, that my Lady Altham was never with Child, never had any Miſcarriage that ſhe knows of; and that it ſhould be, and ſhe not know of it, is, I think, next to impoſſible. She will prove my Lady's Expreſſions of Concern upon this Head, that ſhe had not the good Fortune to bring a Child to this Family: She will prove to you, that my Lady lived ſome Years after her Lord, had an Account of his Death, of the late Lord Angleſea's going into Poſſeſſion of her Lord's Eſtate, and the preſent Earl's aſſuming the Title of Altham; that ſhe had at this Time Acceſs to the Ducheſs of Buckingham, and other Perſons of Quality in England, and was in a lonely, diſconſolate Way; but as to her ever having had a Son, complaining of any Injury done to this Son, that not one Syllable to this Purpoſe was heard to proceed from her.

We ſhall produce alſo one Thomas Rolph, who was Butler to my Lord, and lived with him at the Time of this pretended Birth; my Lord's Gentleman likewiſe, and ſome other Servants of the better Sort, who were in the Family and Service at this Time; and they all agree in this, that my Lady was not with Child; that there was no Miſcarriage or Birth that they ever knew or heard of: and this, we apprehend, will be far better Evidence than that of Murphy, Laffan, or Doyle, becauſe theſe People teſtify what was properly within their Sphere, and muſt know, if there was ſuch a Fact.

We ſhall produce Perſons of the beſt Condition in the Neighbourhood of Dunmaine, between whom and my Lord Altham there paſſed a conſtant Intercourſe of Viſits, and with ſome of them you will find the Intimacy was very great: They have mentioned Mrs. Lambert as a Perſon extremely intimate with my Lady; we ſhall produce her, and her Huſband Mr. Aaron Lambert; he had ſet Dunmaine to my Lord, lived himſelf at Roſs; his Dealing, as well as Neighbourhood and Acquaintance, gave him and his Lady great Opportunities of knowing more of his Family than many others.

We will call Colonel Palliſer, and alſo his Son, who was unfortunately made the Pretence of the Separation, and from him you will have a full Account of that Matter; and he will not only ſwear it, but ſhew you that what Laffan has teſtified is falſe.

That I may not mention all as to this Point, we ſhall call, in the laſt Place, Mrs. Giffard, a Woman of an exemplary good Life and Character; ſhe will not only prove, as others, that there was no Child that ſhe ever heard of; but ſhe will prove further, that there being ſome Pretender's Men to be tried at the Aſſizes at Wexford, which were held in the Beginning of April 1715, and this being a Buſineſs of ſome Expectation, my Lord, my Lady, and ſeveral others, went to that Aſſizes; that my Lady was at all publick Places, and was in Court at the Trials of thoſe People: This was ſo near the Time of the pretended Birth, 'tis plain her being with Child, if fact, muſt be viſible and conſpicuous to all the World. This therefore will be proved by Mrs. Giffard, and ſhe will be corroborated herein by many others.

We ſhall alſo lay before you the frequent Declarations and Expreſſions, not only of my Lady, but of my Lord alſo, upon this Head. They have likewiſe, on their Part, given ſome Evidence of this Kind; you will compare together the Witneſſes, and what they ſay: We apprehend there is little Streſs to be laid on this Part of their Proof, teſtified at this Diſtance of Time, where the Omiſſion or Addition of a ſingle Word might invert the whole Senſe. We think it ſtrange that theſe Witneſſes, if they knew and believed ſo much, neither ſaid nor did any thing in conſequence of it; and we think this Conduct can only be accounted for by their not believing, their not laying any Streſs upon what they had heard; and when we have ſhewn all this, I can't but think, for my Part, that we might ſafely reſt our Caſe here.

But we ſhall go a great deal further, and give an Account of the Plaintiff from the Moment of his Birth. When my Lady returned to Ireland, my Lord was at Dunmaine; he came to Town, they were reconciled, ſtayed ſome time, and then they both went to Dunmaine. One Joan Landy was before, and at the Time of my Lady's coming to Dunmaine, Kitchen-maid there; and in a few Months ſhe appeared ſo big with Child, that it came to my Lady's Knowledge; upon which ſhe was turned off, and went to her Father's, who lived on the Land of Dunmaine, at a very little Diſtance from the Houſe. As my Lord, as well as others, had, it ſeems, given Cauſe, ſo it was wiſely reſolved to make him the Father of this Child. We ſhall ſhew the Birth, the Chriſtening, and Manner of Keeping this Child till the Separation of my Lady: We ſhall prove, that, on the Separation, the Child was ſuffered into the Houſe, and the Schooling of it, while my Lord lived at Dunmaine; that the Pretence that Landy's Child died is falſe; that there was but this Child; that my Lord regarded it but little; that it was brought after him to Kinnea, Carrickduffe, and Dublin, and as it grew up gained ſome ground; but ſtill treated, conſidered, and reputed as a Baſtard, and no other. This we ſhall prove in thoſe ſeveral Places, not by looſe Expreſſions, but by thoſe who knew my Lord and Family well: We ſhall prove to you the Reputation concerning him, when at thoſe poor Schools that have been mentioned: We ſhall ſhew the Occaſion of my Lord's Neglect of him; that he was untowardly, vicious, and incorrigible; that he rambled down to Roſs, my Lord's Eſtate, where he and his Mother were well known, and was there treated and conſidered as my Lord's Baſtard by Landy;—and ſhew him after in Dublin, for a great Length of Time, in a poor Condition, yet known and reputed by ſuch as knew any thing at all of him, to be my Lord's Baſtard; that he himſelf pretended no other; and being aſked about his Parents, mentioned not only my Lord as his Father, but Landy alſo as his Mother.

And we ſhall ſhew, in the laſt Place, while he was thus neglected, and in this Diſtreſs, that my Lady was in Dublin, knew of his Condition, and that her Diſlike of him was ſuch, that ſhe could not endure to hear him named; and from Perſons of undoubted Character, and with whom ſhe lodged and dieted here, it will appear, that, amidſt all her Complaints of Wrongs and Injuries, there never was the leaſt mention of any, with reſpect to a Son or Child that ſhe ever had. Her Silence upon this Head, at this Time, and under her Circumſtances, we apprehend to be great Evidence; but much more ſo after my Lord's Death, when ſhe ſaw one aſſume the Eſtate, and another the Honours of the Family. My Lord, we apprehend their Evidence, as to the ſpiriting away, and the Teſtimony of Mrs. Giffard, when conſidered, is in Truth already anſwered; but if thought to be neceſſary, I doubt not but we ſhall give you full Satisfaction.

You obſerve they don't produce Joan Landy, though in the Liſt of their Witneſſes, and in their Power: We charge her to be the Mother, they ſay the Wet-Nurſe only; can there be a ſtronger Inference than that which muſt of neceſſity be drawn from the keeping back this Woman?

Gentlemen, I ſhall trouble you no more, but proceed to prove what I have now ſtated, and indeed a great deal more which has eſcaped my Memory; and when this is done, as we reſt aſſured that this Cauſe will be tried uninfluenced by any Conſiderations that have not a Tendency to prove the Matter in Iſſue, and that the Purchaſers from, and Creditors of the Family, and thoſe who have a Right to ſucceed to the Honours and Eſtate, will receive no Prejudice from Conſiderations that do not properly relate to the Caſe, and certainly have no Relation to them; ſo we do not doubt but you will put an End to this ſtrange Buſineſs, by finding according to our Plea, that the Defendant is not guilty of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment in the Declaration mentioned.

The Names of the Witneſſes produced on the Part of the Defendant.

(a) Mrs. Catherine Lambert being asked, on her Croſs-Examination, if her Huſband did not put in an Anſwer to a Bill filed on her Behalf againſt Mr. Matthias Reilye, anſwered, Yes, he did. Then was asked, Is he to be believed on his Oath? The Defendant's Counſel objected, "That the Queſtion is improper, and therefore not to be "asked; and that a Woman ought not to give Evidence for or againſt her Huſband, eſpecially where he is intereſted. Should ſhe anſwer this Queſtion, it might "prejudice her own Cauſe. The Huſband is not to be affected by any Declaration of his Wife, even upon her Oath; and the only Inſtance where ſhe can be examined "againſt her Husband, is in High Treaſon."

The Plaintiff's Counſel waved the Queſtion.

(b) On the Croſs-Examination of Arthur Herd, the Counſel for the Plaintiff asked the Witneſs, Whether he did not tell the Company that Lord Altham debauched Miſs Gregory? which Queſtion was objected to by the Defendant's Counſel, as it might ſubject the Witneſs to an Action, and tend to defame her, who was a Witneſs for the Defendant in this Cauſe. And the Court were of Opinion the Witneſs might refuſe to anſwer the Queſtion; and the Witneſs refuſed.

(c) On the Examination of Matthew Derenzay, an Agent for Lord Angleſea, he was asked, Whether, if my Lord Angleſea loſt his Eſtate, he did not apprehend he ſhould loſe the Balance of his Account? He anſwered, I believe, if my Lord Angleſea has it upon Earth, he won't let me loſe a Shilling.

The Counſel for the Plaintiff objected to this Witneſs, That he was conſequently intereſted in the Fate of this Cauſe, as he might loſe his Agency, or Receiverſhip; but the Court were of Opinion, that this did not go to his Competency, but might to his Credit.

These Witneſſes prove, that ſeveral of them lived in the Neighbourhood of Dunmaine, (where it was ſaid Lady Altham was brought-to-bed of a Son) and viſited Lord and Lady Altham frequently; and they never heard Lady Altham had a Son, or ever was with Child, or that they ever ſaw her with Child. Several Servants of the Family ſwear, who lived with Lord Altham in the Year 1714 and 1715, that they never heard Lady Altham had a Son, or ever was with Child; or that any Midwife was ſent for, or any Chriſtening, or any Bonfires, or any Godfathers or Godmothers; or any Coach-road for Lord and Lady Altham to go and ſee their Child; and that there could be no Child born without their Knowledge: Others, that Lord Altham had a Baſtard by Joan Landy, which he called his Baſtard; but they never heard of any Son by his Lady. Others depoſed, That Lady Altham went to the Aſſizes at Wexford, in April, 1715, and ſtaid ſome Days (which was about the Time it was ſaid ſhe was brought to-bed of a Son): Others, that Lord Altham would have been glad to have had a legitimate Son, becauſe he could have raiſed Money on his Eſtate, and wiſhed for a Son: Others, that Lady Altham lived two Years after my Lord, and never enquired after any Son of her's; and that if there had been any ſuch, he would have been entitled to an Eſtate of 1200*l. per Ann.* and my Lady might have applied for the Guardianſhip of him, and had a good Allowance from my Lord Chancellor for the Truſt, which ſhe very much wanted, &c. But as the moſt material Witneſs for the DEFENDANT was Mrs. Mary Heath (Lady Altham's Woman), we ſhall give her Evidence at full Length, with the Evidence brought to confront Mrs. Heath; and then cloſe with the Judge's ſumming up of the whole.

Friday, November 18.

13. Mrs. MARY HEATH.

Sworn to the Voir Dire.

Q. Do you know the Plaintiff, Mr. James Annesley?—Mrs. Heath. No.

Q. Has he any Law-Suit with you?—A. He filed a Bill againſt me for the Effects of Lady Altham. I had a Subpœna given me in England.

Q. At whoſe Suit?——A. At Mr. James Annesley's.

Q. Have you any of the Effects of Lady Altham in your Hands?

The Queſtion is objected to by the Defendant's Counſel, who ſay, that the Adminiſtrator will have the Right to recover them, let this Cauſe go which Way it will; and the Effects are no way relative to the real Eſtate which is now in Diſpute.

The Witneſs ſworn in Chief.

Q. Did you know Arthur late Lord Altham and his Lady?

Mrs. Heath. Yes, very well.

Q. What Time did you firſt become acquainted with the one or other of them?——A. I have known them a great many Years.

Q. Were you in any Service in that Family?

A. Never till the Time of my coming to Ireland.

Q. When was that?——A. In the Year 1713.

Q. At what Time?

A. In October I came over with my Lady as her Woman.

Q. How long did you live with my Lady after ſhe came over?

A. I lived with her to the Day of her Death.

Q. When was the Day of her Death?

A. I can't juſtly tell; it was ſome time in October, 1729.

Q. During that whole Courſe of Time, was you ever out of her Service?——A. Never out of her Service.

Q. Did you conſtantly reſide with her as her Woman?

A. I was one Week from her in Ireland.

Q. What Time was that?—A. When I come on further, I can tell you.

Q. Do you not remember that you were longer abſent from her?

A. Not in Ireland, nor one Day, except ſhe was out a-viſiting. I was never from her a Night but that Week.

Q. Do you know a Place called Dunmaine in this Kingdom?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you remember who lived at Dunmaine? Did my Lord and Lady Altham live there?——A. Yes, we went down there.

Q. At what Time, Madam?

A. We got down to Dunmaine the Chriſtmas-Eve after we came over.

Q. How long did my Lord and Lady reſide together at Dunmaine?

A. My Lord did come up, but I can't tell juſtly whether it was in May or June following; but I know he was there in April: He came to Dublin himſelf, and left my Lady and I at Dunmaine. Upon St. George's Day I know he was at Dunmaine, I am ſure of that.

Q. How long in the whole did they live together at Dunmaine?—A. About three Years and two Months, to the beſt of my Remembrance.

Q. Do you remember in what Month they parted?—A. In February.

Q. In what Year?—A. I call it 1716-17.

Q. Had my Lady a Child at Dunmaine?

A. A Child! never had, nor never was with Child; I never had Reaſon to think ſhe was with Child all the while I lived with her.

Q. Who dreſſed and undreſſed my Lady?

A. I always did, except the Week I was abſent; while ſhe was at Dunmaine I always put her to Bed, and attended her at her Riſing in the Morning; for ſhe was ſuch a Woman, ſhe would not permit any body elſe to do it.

Q. Could ſhe then ever be with Child, or have a big Belly, unknown to you?——A. No, never.

Q. Was not you at Dunmaine at the Time of the Separation?

A. Yes, to be ſure.

Q. To what Place did ſhe go when they parted?

A. We went to one Capt. Butler's, in Roſs.

Q. Did you go with her?—A. Yes, I went with her in a four-wheeled Chaiſe and a Pair of Horſes.

Q. Did you get to Roſs the ſame Day?

A. Yes, at Night, dark Night; for my Lady made it as late as ſhe could; for ſhe had no Mind to be ſeen coming in.

Q. Can you remember the particular Day this happened?

A. To the beſt of my Remembrance, it was on the 3d of February; but it was on a Sunday, I am poſitive.

Q. Did you live any Time there, and how long?

A. We lived about four Years in Roſs, to the beſt of my Remembrance.

Q. Did my Lord and Lady come together again within that Period of Time?—A. No, never. I don't know whether ſhe ever ſaw him.

Q. Will you recollect yourſelf, who were the Servants of the Houſe when you came down to Dunmaine?

A. It is very hard for me to do ſo at this Diſtance of Time, there were ſo many. There was Mr. Ralph as the Butler, and there was Mr. Anthony Dyer, my Lord's Gentleman; there was one (I believe Ralph went down with us) Settwright, the Houſe-keeper, and there was Michael, but what his Sirname was, I can't tell, but he was Cook, and there was Juggy Landy that was the Kitchen-maid, big with Child.

Q. At what Time?—A. When we came down, my Lord, a Kind of Scullion under the Cook.

Q. Did you obſerve her to be with Child?

A. When we went down firſt, I went up to the Room to my Lady, and ſoon after I came down to ſpeak to the Houſe-keeper; and I turned about and ſaw this Woman with Child; What, ſays I to the Houſe-keeper, you have got a Maid big with Child here! Yes, ſays ſhe, an Officer was here ſome time ago, and his Servant got to Bed to her, and got her with Child. This was what I heard that Day; and the next it was buzzed about that it was my Lord that got the Child, and ſome ſaid my Lord's Brother, and ſome the Dog-Boy, and ſeveral of the Servants had to do with her. This is what they told me, it was the Talk about the Family.

Q. Give an Account what became of this Joan Landy afterwards.

A. She ſtaid two or three Months, till the Houſe-keeper was afraid to keep her any longer, till we were afraid ſhe would cry out; and then ſhe went to her Father's, and I never ſaw her there; but I knew he lived upon the Land.

Q. Did ſhe go of her own Accord, or was ſhe turned out?

A. I can't tell.

Q. Did you know of any Child this Woman was delivered of?

A. I ſaw the Child.

Q. Give an Account of that.

A. I ſpoke to the Coachman's Wife to bid her bring it up to the Gate that I might ſee it; and accordingly ſhe did, and it was in Blankets then.

Q. Who brought the Child?—A. Juggy Landy herſelf brought it.

Q. About what Age might the Child be at that Time?

A. I can't really tell, whether ſix Weeks or two Months old when I ſaw it, I can't tell juſtly.

Q. Had this Child any tolerable Cloaths on it?

A. The Neckcloth it had on was what I gave it, it was a Cambrick one, and a very fine one; I brought it from England among my own Things, and the Child was in a clean Blanket, and I gave her ſeveral other Things.

Q. How came it to paſs, that you did not rather direct that the Child ſhould be brought to Dunmaine-Houſe, than to that Gate?

A. I would not bring it to the Houſe.

Q. What was your Reaſon for that?

A. Becauſe I would not have my Lord or Lady know any thing of it.

Q. What was your Reaſon for ſeeing the Child?

A. To know who it was like.

Q. How far was that Gate you mentioned from the Houſe?

A. A little Diſtance.

Q. What was your Reaſon for ſeeing it there?

A. I did not care my Lady ſhould know any Thing about it. My Lady would not care the Child ſhould be brought into the Houſe.

Q. Was there ever a Child either chriſtened or living at that Houſe while you were at Dunmaine?——A. No, never.

Q. Did my Lady ever talk to you any Thing of her being with Child, or having had a Child, during that Time?—A. No, never a Word.

Q. Ladies ſometimes talk to Women in your Situation; had you any Diſcourſe ever with my Lady about having Children, and what was that Diſcourſe?——A. Yes, Sir, my Lady often wiſhed ſhe had a Child, on Account of a Quarrel ſhe had with Mr. Anneſley.

Q. Pray give an Account of that Quarrel.

A. I don't know how the Quarrel began; but ſhe came up one Day after Dinner, and was crying. I aſked her, what was the Matter with her Ladyſhip? She ſaid, That Brute below, meaning the Defendant, had ſaid, he wiſhed ſhe might never have a Child; and my Lady ſaid, ſhe wiſhed ſhe might but have a Child to inherit, and ſhe did not care if ſhe was to die the next Hour.

Q. You ſaid, you had been an entire Week abſent from my Lady, and no more; give an Account of that Week's Abſence, and the Occaſion of it; was it while you lived at Dunmaine?——A. My Lady was in Dublin the Week I was from her; I left my Lady in Dublin, and went to Dunmaine; I was never a Night from her in Dunmaine.

Q. Do you recollect how long that Quarrel was after you went to Dunmaine?——A. Not very long.

Q. Was it before they came to Dublin?

A. Yes, it was; this Quarrel was ſome little Time after our going down, and Mr. Anneſley upon it left the Houſe, and went to Dublin.

Q. Do you remember, during your Service, that ever you were at the Town of Wexford?——A. Yes.

Q. Give an Account at what Time, and on what Occaſion you went there.

A. My Lady went there to hear the Trials at the Aſſizes, and it was about the Pretender's Men, as they were called; and my Lady told me that there was one Walſh tried, and how handſomely he pleaded his own Cauſe, and the Defence he made; and there was one Mr. Maſterſon who was picked up in the Court at that Time, and tried.

Q. Can you recollect yourſelf the Time of the Year?

A. I know we came to Dublin the May after; and what I remember it for is, that it was King George the Firſt's Birth-day that we were in Dublin in May; and I remember it for this Reaſon, that there were Fireworks in the Cuſtom-houſe Yard, and this preſent Lord Angleſea, that was Mr. Anneſley then, had Lodgings juſt oppoſite to it, and we went to his Lodgings to ſee the Fireworks.

Q. Did my Lady go to Mr. Anneſley's Lodgings?

A. She did, my Lord, and my Lord and I.

Q. Do you know what Day of that Month was the Birth-day of King George the Firſt?

A. I can't tell whether it is the 28th or 30th; I know there is the Reſtoration next to it; but I don't know which it is, the Day before or after.

Q. Recollect how long a Time before your going to Dublin was it that you were at Wexford?

A. It

A. It was not long indeed. I can't recollect: I know we were in Dublin ſome time before the Birth-day; I don't know, about a Fortnight.

Q. But what time from your Return from Wexford Aſſizes, did you go to Dublin?

A. I can't tell what time the Aſſizes were, not I, for I don't remember the Month.

Q. Do you remember the Seaſon of the Year?

A. Yes, I know it was the Spring, and I know it was a little before we came to Dublin that the Aſſizes were.

Q. Recollect who was the Company that went at that time to Wexford with your Family.

A. Mrs. Giffard went in the Chariot with my Lady, my Lord went on Horſeback, and I went on Horſeback, and Ralph went on Horſeback, and Mrs. Giffard's ſiſter on Horſeback, but what her Name was I cannot tell; but what other Servants went I cannot tell; and there were ſeveral more which I don't know.

Q. Do you remember any other Servants that went?

A. No, except the Coachman, one Weedon, and the Poſtillion, one Burke.

Q. You ſay, you lived at Dunmaine at the time of this unfortunate Separation? ——A. I did.

D. Give an Account of the Occaſion of that Separation.

A. On Saturday Night, my Lord ſaid, he would go out ſomewhere to dine the next Day, but I don't know where, indeed; but my Lady begg'd of him not to go, for ſhe hated he ſhould be out on a Sunday; but he ſaid, he would go; and accordingly on Sunday Morning he did go from the Houſe; and I heard a Noiſe, and was going down Stairs to ſee what was the matter, and I met my Lord coming up with his Sword in his Hand, and he ſaid, Heath, I have found Tom Palliſer in Bed with my Wife. I ſaid, It was impoſſible, and that he was ſet upon by a Sett of Villains; upon that, my Lord ſaid, She ſhould go out of the Houſe; and upon that, he ſent for one Mr. Wilman from Roſs, and he came and adviſed my Lord, I believe, to turn my Lady out; but ſhe begged, he would let her have one Room in the Houſe, and he needed not come near her, till ſhe wrote to my Lord Duke; but he would not hear her; but he hauled her out of Bed, and I adviſed her to come out: Upon which we packed up ſome Things, and went into the four-wheel'd Chaiſe, and I believe it was duſkiſh when we went out, and it was Night when we got into Roſs.

Q. Was there any thing happened to you when you went away?

A. Mr. Taylor handed my Lady into the Chaiſe.

Q. Was there any Child brought to take leave of my Lady?

A. O no! no Child, indeed.

Q. Who was in the Chaiſe with her?

A. I was, my Lord; ſhe got in firſt, and I after her directly.

Q. Did you know Joan Laffan?—A. Yes, I did.

Q. During your Reſidence at Mr. Butler's in Roſs, was there any Child that my Lady received in that Houſe as her Child?

A. No, no ſuch thing.

Q. How long did you live at Mr. Butler's?

A. We were not long at Captain Butler's.

Q. Was he and his Family at home when you went there?

A. There was Nobody at home but the Servants: Mrs. Butler and Captain Butler were out of Town; there was one Mr. Watſal that was Clerk to the Captain, and he ſent a Man and Horſe to let Mrs. Butler know that we were there, and ſhe came home the next Day; but Captain Butler did not come home for three or four Days after.

Q. Recollect the ſeveral Places in which my Lady lodged at Roſs.

A. I believe ſhe ſtayed two Months or more at Captain Butler's, and then we went to one Mr. Wright's, and then we went to one Mr. Croft's, and there we ſtaid till we came to Dublin.

Q. During this time, was there any Child brought to my Lady as her Child?

A. No, never was; ſhe had no Child. I can ſay no more, if they rack'd me to Death.

Q. Did you know one Joan Laffan?——A. Yes, I did.

Q. What was ſhe?——A. She was what we call Houſe-maid.

Q. Was it her Buſineſs to clean the Rooms?

A. Yes, to waſh the Rooms, and make the Beds.

Q. What time did ſhe come to live at Dunmaine?

A. Three or four Months before my Lord and Lady parted.

Q. During the time that you lived at Dunmaine, had ſhe any other Employment in the Family?

A. No other, except ſhe went to the Laundry, when the Buſineſs was done in the Houſe, and help'd the Laundry-maid to waſh.

Q. Who was Laundry-maid at this time?

A. I cannot tell, we had ſeveral.

Q. Did ſhe dry-nurſe any Child before the Separation?

A. No, we had no Child for her to dry-nurſe.

Q. Did you ever ſee a Child in the Hands or Care of Joan Laffan while ſhe was at Dunmaine Houſe?

A. No, never, for we had no Child.

Q. Did you know one Edward Lutwyche, a Shoe-maker at Roſs?

A. No, I don't know any thing of him.

Q. Who made your Lady's Shoes at Roſs?--A. I don't know, indeed.

Q. Do you know of her buying any Shoes whilſt ſhe lived there?

A. I don't remember ſhe did.

Q. What ſort of Shoes did her Ladyſhip uſually wear?

A. She wore braided Shoes.

Q. Of what Colour?

A. Several Colours, and ſeveral Pair of Shoes, I cannot tell what.

Q. Do you remember her ever beſpeaking a pair of Shoes for a little Boy?——A. That I'm ſure ſhe never did.

Q. Had ſhe a Pair of white Damaſk Shoes at Roſs?

A. She never had, while I liv'd with her.

Q. Can you recollect what Perſons were preſent when you ſaw my Lord come up Stairs with his Sword in his Hand?

A. Indeed, I don't know any.

Q. Where did you remove to from Roſs?

A. We came to one Mr. Cavenagh's, in a Place called Stable Yard, I think they call it ſo, in Mary's Lane.

Q. There you came to a Lodging?——A. Yes, and boarded there.

Q. How long did you ſtay at that Houſe?

A. I really cannot tell; but from thence we went to one Mr. King's.

Q. What was he?——A. An Apothecary in Charles-Street.

Q. Did you lodge and board there?——A. Both.

Q. How long might you ſtay there?

A. I cannot tell; from thence we went to one Mrs. Mac Mullen's, I don't know what the Street is, I think it is Taſh's Square in Mountrath-Street, it turns up by Mr. King's, and there we were a little while, two Months or more, before we went over to England.

Q. Can you recollect in what Year you went to England?

A. Yes I can, in the year 1724.

Q. In what Month?——A. I believe about September.

Q. Before Lady Altham went to Mr. King's, the Apothecary, had you, or any other Perſon, look'd out for other Lodgings?

A. Yes, I went ſomewhere upon the Quay, but I don't know whoſe Houſe it was.

Q. Did you ſee the Owner of that Houſe?—A. Yes, it was a Woman.

Q. Do you recollect her Name?——A. No.

Q. Did you come to any Agreement?

A. Yes, I gave her a Piſtole in earneſt; but afterwards we did not like the Place, and I went and told her ſo, that the Doctor did not like my Lady ſhould live upon the Quay, and ſhe gave me the Piſtole again.

Q. Did you ever ſee that Woman afterwards?

A. Never, to my Knowledge.

Q. Did my Lady ever tell you, that ſhe ſaw that Perſon?

A. My Lady never did ſee her in her Life, for my Lady never knew any thing of her, and never did ſpeak to her, to my Knowledge.

Q. During your Lady's Reſidence either at Cavenagh's, or King's, or Mrs. Mac Mullen's, did any Boy viſit or wait upon her, as her Child?

A. No, never, nor they could not.

Q. Did any other Perſon go with you, when you went to ſee this Gentlewoman about the Lodgings?

A. One Mr. Mac Mullen went with me.

Q. What was he?——A. He dealt in Linens.

Q. Did any Servant of Lady Altham's go with you?——A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear or know any thing of this ſame Boy, that you ſay was Joan Landy's Child, from the time you left Dunmaine?

A. No, I never troubled my Head after him.

Q. Did you ever hear that he was in Dublin?

A. I had heard that my Lord had took him; but I know nothing of him.

Q. Do you know whether my Lord Altham was alive when you went to England?——A. I heard he was alive.

Q. Had you any Account afterwards of his Death?

A. I had a Letter from Mrs. Mac Mullen, giving me an Account that he did die.

Q. What was the Purport of that Letter?

A. I have the Letter in my Pocket.

Q. Did you communicate that Account to your Lady?

A. I went directly and ſhewed her the Letter.

Q. How ſoon after you received this Letter was it that you gave her the Account?——A. I went directly and ſhewed the Letter to her.

Q. What happened upon that? Did my Lady make any Reflections upon that Affair?——A. She ſaid nothing at all.

Q. Had your Lady any Fortune come to her upon the Death of her Huſband?

A. No, the Eſtate went to the late Lord Angleſea, ſhe not having a Jointure ſettled upon her; had ſhe a Child, the Altham Eſtate would have come to it.

Q. Did my Lady know that this Eſtate went to the Earl of Angleſea?

A. My Lady told it me, or elſe I ſhould not have known it; I had all my Knowledge of it from her, otherwiſe I ſhould not have known it.

Q. When was it you had that Diſcourſe; before, or after, my Lord's Death?——A. Both before the Account of his Death came, and after.

Q. Did you acquaint my Lady Altham of the Purport of that Letter?

A. I directly went up Stairs, and ſhew'd her the Letter as ſoon as I had read it.

Q. When did my Lady Altham die?

A. She dy'd in October, 1729; ſhe has been dead fourteen years laſt October.

Q. Had my Lady any Account how, and where my Lord was buried, and any Circumſtances relating to it?

A. No more than what is in this Letter.

Q. Did ſhe go into Mourning?

A. No, ſhe made no Mourning, ſhe was in Mourning at that time.

Q. What Sort of Mourning?

A. A Norwich Crape that ſhe had had for my Lord Duke, and which ſhe made a Night-gown of when King George the firſt died.

Q. Were there any further Particulars in the Letter?

A. She told in the Letter, that my Lord died, and was miſerably poor.

Q. Did you communicate the whole Contents of that Letter to Lady Altham?——A. Yes, I did.

Q. Had ſhe any Diſcourſe with you, or did ſhe make any Obſervations touching any Part of the Contents of that Letter?

A. I do not know any thing that ſhe ſaid: ſhe took no Notice of it, but ſhe read the Letter as well as I.

Q. Was there any Converſation between you, about any other Perſon mentioned in that Letter beſides my Lord her Huſband?

A. No, ſhe made no Reflection upon it, nor ſaid any thing.

Q. Had my Lady any Maintenance or Allowance from my Lord after their Separation?---A. No, my Lord never ſent her a Farthing.

Q. Who ſupported her then?——A. My Lord Duke.

Q. What Allowance did he give her?

A. There was 1200 l. Remainder of her Fortune in the Duke's Hands, for which he allowed her 80 l. a Year, gave her 20 l. a Year more, and when he died left her 100 l. a Year.

Q. Do you know a Gentleman whoſe Name is Mac Kercher?

A. He was once with me.

Q. Should you know him now if you ſhould ſee him? Look about.

A. That is the Gentleman I am ſure (pointing to Mr. Mac Kercher); he told me his Name was ſo.

Q. Had

Q. Had you any Acquaintance with him, and when did that Acquaintance commence?

A. He came to my House, I live in St. Andrew's Court, Holborn, and he came there; there is the Directions he gave me to find a Gentlewoman, and I put the Day of the Month upon it that he was with me. It was the 13th of April 1742. for he said, one of Captain Briscoe's Daughters was in Town, and told me her Name; and he wrote his Name upon it, that I should not forget it.

Q. Are you certain he wrote it?---A. He wrote it, and I saw him write it.

Q. What passed between you at that Visit?

A. When he first came in, he was a Stranger to me, begged my Pardon, and said he came to ask me some Questions about my Lady Altham, Whether she had ever a Child? I told him, She never had one while I lived with her, I could take my Oath. Then he told me, how this Mr. Annesley was recommended to him by two Lieutenants, one of their Names was Lieutenant Simpson, but the other I do not know; and then he told me how he came to him; and that he, Mac Kercher, gave him Ten Guineas; and then Mr. Annesley told him he had no Lodging, and did not know where to get one. He said his House was small, but if he would lodge with him he might, and should be welcome, and took him in. He then shewed me a List of the Servants Names, and my Name was crowded in at the Top, and I laughed at it. There were several Names, some that I did know, and others that I did not; there was Martin Nieff, and Charles Magher the Butler after Ralph went away, and there was Juggy Laffan; and with that I said: What can she know of this Affair? Why, says he, Madam, she says that she saw old Parson Lloyd christen it; I suppose you know him, Madam? Aye, says I, I knew him very well, but I cannot think how she can know any thing. Why, says he, she says she came to Dunmaine about a quarter of a Year after my Lord and Lady came from Dublin. So she did, says I, but that was the last Time we came down from Dublin. He then thanked me very kindly, said, He was very well satisfied with what I had told him, that he would go home and wash his Hands of them, and turn them all out of Doors, and would not for a Thousand Pounds that he had not seen me; for, says he, if you were dead, my Lord Anglesea would lose his Estate and Title, as sure as you are alive, there would be such bloody Swearing. Says I, Sir, I am sorry you have been so imposed on, for I assure you my Lady had not a Child. He said, Madam, for what I have been at the Charge of, I do not value. And I told him farther, Do you suppose, Sir, if my Lord and Lady had had a Child born to such an Estate, that they would not have him registered? He said, That they lived in a Country Parish where no Register is kept, and could not have it done. But I told him again, Could he suppose if they had had a Child born Heir to such an Estate, that they would not have had his Birth registered?

Q. Did you acquaint Mr. Mac Kercher at the Time of this Discourse, or offer to shew him this Letter of Mrs. Mac Mullen's?

A. Yes; and he told me, that Juggy Landy did not deny that she had a Child by my Lord, but that it died young.

Q. Did Mr. Mac Kercher make any Application in relation to your giving Evidence?——A. There was not any.

Q. Did he promise you any thing?---A. No, he did not; for he said, he would have nothing farther to say to them.

Q. When you returned to Dublin, after the Assizes at Wexford, where did Lady Altham lodge in this Town?——A. At Mrs. Vice's.

Q. Where was that?——A. In Essex-Street.

Q. Did you know one Mr. Maurice Annesley?—A. Yes.

Q. What Family had he?

A. There were three Daughters that used to come to visit my Lady.

Q. Name them.

A. One was named Cherry, one was named Sarah, and the other Dorothy.

Q. Did you hear of Mrs. Cherry's being married to any one since?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom?—A. I did not hear to whom.

Q. Was not her Name Blake?---A. I don't know, I never saw her after.

Q. Did they visit as Relations?

A. They did, and were Relations to my Lord.

Q. What Condition was your Lady in when she lodged at Mrs. Vice's, was she with Child?---A. No, she was not.

Q. Did you ever hear of any Miscarriage at that Time?

A. Never while I lived with her.

Q. Did your Lady at any Time keep her Bed at Mrs. Vice's?

A. I do not know; she might lie a-bed a Day or so.

Q. Did you ever tell any body that she miscarried?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Or that she was with Child?---A. No, never.

Q. Had she any particular kind of Shoes or Slippers made when she was there?---A. None particular.

Q. Was there any Woman-Servant in the House of the Name of Mac Cormack?---A. Yes, Mrs. Vice's Maid, one Catherine.

Q. Did you ever tell her that your Lady miscarried?

A. Never; I never had any Conversation with her in my Life.

Q. Did you ever tell her any thing relating to your Lady as a Piece of good News?---A. No, never.

Q. Did you know one Alice Bates, a Servant of Mrs. Briscoe?

A. There was one Ally, that waited on Mrs. Briscoe's Mother, but what her Name was I cannot tell.

Q. Had you any Discourse with her of my Lady's being with Child?

A. No, never, for we were not so long in Briscoe's House.

Q. Had she Access to my Lady Altham, did she use to visit her?

A. Visit my Lady! I never saw her out of Captain Briscoe's House.

Q. Did you never see her put her Hand upon my Lady's Belly?

A. No, I never did.

Q. Do you remember Alice Bates's going at any Time in a Sedan-Chair to see my Lady at Vice's?

A. No, nor I do not know that ever I saw her at Mrs. Vice's.

Q. Did you ever hear my Lord Altham call his Lady by any remarkable, familiar Appellation?

A. He used to call her Molly.

Q. Did he ever use to call her Moll Sheffield, in good Humour?

A. No, I never heard him say so.

Q. You are positive you never told any Thing to Alice Bates as a Piece of good News?

A. I am positive as to that, I never did.

Q. Do you remember at any Time, during Mrs. Briscoe's and her Daughter's being at Dunmaine, that you called Mrs. Briscoe out of her Bed?---A. No, never.

Q. Do you remember any Fright my Lady received during the Time they were there?---A. No, I never did.

Q. Do you remember any particular China in the House of Dunmaine, or any thing concerning them?

A. I remember, when we came to Dunmaine, that there were some Cups and Sawcers that had very ugly, nasty Figures on them, indecent Figures, and my Lady never cared to have them used; but one Day the House-keeper had got some of the Sawcers to put the Desert on, and there happened some Words at the Table, and my Lord threw them on the Ground, as I was told.

Q. Did that cause any Fright in my Lady?---A. No, none at all.

Q. Did you ever call Mrs. Briscoe and her Daughter out of Bed, and tell them that my Lady was very ill?---A. No, I never did.

Q. Do you remember one Mary Doyle in the Family?

A. No; Betty Doyle, I did.

Q. Was my Lady in any sort out of Order the Night that the Sawcers were broke?---A. No, she was not at all.

Q. Was you in my Lady's Room the next Morning?---A. Yes.

Q. Were there many Servants there?

A. No, not at all; the House-Maid might be there, that used to come and light the Fire.

Q. Was Miss Briscoe in my Lady's Room the next Morning?

A. I cannot tell but she might.

Q. Did you see her there? --A. She might be there, for my Lady always breakfasted in her Chamber, and she breakfasted with her.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Sutton the Surgeon?---A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember any Quarrel that happened about him?

A. Yes, my Lady never liked him, and he went from the House, and was away some time.

Q. Do you recollect any Occasion of sending for Sutton from Ross to my Lady?——A. I cannot tell whether there was or no.

Q. Do you remember any such Occasion as required a Surgeon?

A. I remember once she had an Inflammation as we thought in her Leg, and I do not know whether my Lord sent for him then; and once her Arm was cut, but Sutton was then in the House.

Q. Could he attend her in any Disorder of any Continuance without your knowing it?---A. No, I think not.

Q. Did he attend her in any Disorder after that Quarrel?

A. I do not remember any thing ailed her after that Quarrel.

Q. Was there any Confinement for about a Fortnight that required the Attendance of a Surgeon?

A. No, not that I know of.

Q. Did Sutton ever refuse to come when sent for?

A. I do not know that ever he refused to come.

Q. Do you remember the Chariot to be sent for him?

A. I do not know; he generally had a Horse.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Shiels, a Midwife?

A. I knew her at Ross.

Q. Did you ever see her at Dunmaine?

A. I never saw Mrs. Shiels at Dunmaine in my Life.

Q. Do you remember the Name of Dennis Redmonds?

A. No, not that I remember.

Q. Did you ever send that Man to Ross for Mrs. Shiels?

A. I never gave any Directions to him or any Servant to fetch Mrs. Shiels to my Lord's House.

Q. Did any thing particular happen after breaking of the Sawcers?

A. No, nothing particular.

Q. Did not you go to Mrs. Briscoe's Room, to tell her my Lady was ill?——A. I did not.

Q. Do you remember the Name of one Thomas Brooks?

A. I do not remember any such Name.

Q. Do you remember whether my Lady was, or was not, let Blood at that Time?---A. I cannot be positive whether ever she was let Blood.

Q. Do you remember any particular Person being sent for that Afternoon that the Sawcers were broke?

A. No, I do not remember that any Person was sent for.

Q. Recollect if you know Dennis Redmonds.

A. I do not remember any such Name.

Q. Was there a Huntsman in my Lord's Family?

A. Not a particular one; there was the Groom and other Servants.

Q. Do you remember any thing particular to be done at the Time of the Separation by any of my Lord's Servants to any Gentleman in the House?

A. They said that they had cut off Mr. Pallser's Ear; but I cannot tell any thing of it, not being present; I was waked with the Noise, and came down Stairs.

Q. Had you ever any Discourse with any to this Purpose, That if my Lady was to be affrighted at this Rate, she would never go on with a Child.

A. No.

Q. Did you ever expostulate with my Lord about giving my Lady ill Usage?——A. No, I never did about any such thing as a Miscarriage.

Q. Can you say that my Lady kept her Bed one Day or more during the Time of Mrs. Briscoe's being at Dunmaine?---A. No, I do not know that ever she kept her Bed a Day, or more, while they were there.

Q. Did you ever call Mrs. Briscoe out of Bed at any Time earlier than usual?——A. No, I did not indeed.

Q. Do you remember, whether my Lady took any Offence at my Lord's breaking the Sawcers?——A. No, I heard no more than what the Servants told me, I was not in the Parlour.

Q. Did you hear her express herself in any Manner concerning it?

A. No, not at all concerning those Sawcers, she never liked them.

Q Con-

Q. Conſider whether the Night of that Day Mrs. Briſcoe was called up by you?---A. No, I never called her up at all. I am ſure of it.

Q. Recollect whether Sutton the Surgeon, after he quitted the Family, came and ſtayed any particular time?

A. Often after he was turned out; he went away becauſe my Lady did not uſe him as pleaſed him.

Q. Did he come again and ſtay any time?

A. Often, may be a Fortnight, ſometimes more, and ſometimes leſs.

Q. Was he reſident in the Houſe?

A. He was only backwards and forwards.

Q. Recollect yourſelf, whether Sutton, about the time of the Sawcers being broke, came and lived there any time?

A. I do not remember that.

Q. Did he come and attend my Lady as a Surgeon?

A. Indeed I cannot ſay he did.

Q. Who was it firſt told you of that unfortunate Affair of Mr. Palliſer's?

A. My Lord Altham himſelf.

Q. Do you recollect, whether Joan Laffan called you down to reſcue Mr. Palliſer from being murthered?

A. No, I am ſure ſhe did not; becauſe my Lord came up, before I could get down on the Noiſe, and told me of it.

Q. Had you any Converſation with her that Day concerning that Accident?

Q. No, for I was in too great a Fret to talk to her about it.

Q. Can you recollect how ſoon after my Lady came firſt to Dunmaine that Sutton quitted the Family?---A. I cannot tell indeed how long.

Q. How long was it after ſhe firſt came that this Accident of the Sawcers happened?

A. It was whilſt Mrs. Briſcoe was in the Houſe, and that was not long.

Q. Was you in the Room during any Part of the Dining-time?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Were you ever in the Dining-room during the Stay of Mrs. Briſcoe there whilſt they were at Dinner?

A. No, I cannot ſay I was, I had no Buſineſs there at Dinner-time, but went in with the Tea-things ſoon after Dinner.

Q. What was the Age of Miſs Briſcoe?---A. I cannot tell.

Croſs-Examination.

Q. You ſay, Madam, you came over with Lady Altham, and ſhe lodged at Captain Briſcoe's?-- A. Yes, we did.

Q. Was not Lord Altham brought to that Houſe, and reconciled?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Did not they ſtay ſome few Days after there?---A. Yes.

Q. Did not they go from thence, after four or five Days Stay, and lodge at Vice's in Eſſex-ſtreet?—A. No, they went directly down to Dunmaine.

Q. How many Days Stay did you make at Captain Briſcoe's?

A. My Lord and Lady met the 4th and 5th of December, and we got to Dunmaine on Chriſtmas-Eve.

Q. Did my Lady ſtay there all the time till ſhe went to Dunmaine?

A. My Lady did not lodge out of Captain Briſcoe's Houſe at the firſt Meeting.

Q. How ſoon, after the firſt time that you went to Dunmaine, did my Lady come next to Dublin?

A. I know Mrs. Briſcoe and her Daughter were at our Houſe at Dunmaine on St. George's Day; afterwards my Lord came up to Dublin, I do not know in what Month, but ſhe deſired my Lord to make uſe of her Houſe while he ſtayed in Dublin; for Mrs. Briſcoe did not go to Dublin, but to ſome other Acquaintance. My Lord was at her Houſe for ſome little time, and after went to Mrs. Vice's; and when we were at Dunmaine, we heard a great many Quarrels that my Lord was in; and my Lady, when ſhe heard of ſuch doings, came up. He ſent down a running Footman, who came when all were in bed but me and Mr. Rolph; he knocked at the Door and alarmed us, for we were afraid he was come with ſome ill News about my Lord. I went down, and aſked how my Lord did; he ſaid, Very well; and he brought ſome Green Tea for my Lady. I carried the Tea to my Lady, the Man was to go to Roſs the next day, and ſo return to Dublin; there was one Captain Najack and his Lady at our Houſe, and they perſuaded my Lady to go up to Dublin.

Q. When was that?

A. In violent hot Weather, whether in July I cannot tell; but it was a little while before the Queen died, for I ſaw King George proclaimed at the Caſtle.

Q. Did not you lodge then at Mrs. Vice's in Eſſex-ſtreet?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Were my Lady Altham and you ever before at Vice's?

A. My Lady Altham was one Day, but not to lodge there; ſhe was there the Day after my Lord and ſhe met, which was on a Saturday; my Lord took her out on a Sunday, and ſhew'd her where ſhe was to lodge.

Q. Did not you continue in the Lodgings at Mrs. Vice's till the Chriſtmas following?---A. No.

Q. How long then?

A. A little after the News of the Queen's Death my Lady got Mourning, and we ſtayed three Weeks, or a Month, or five Weeks, I cannot gueſs the time, after my Lady went into Mourning; and then we returned to Dunmaine.

Q. How long then were you at Dunmaine, after my Lady's Return, and after the Queen's Death, before you came to Town again?

A. Till the May following that was the firſt Birth-Day of King George Iſt; may be a Fortnight or three Weeks, or thereabouts, in May.

Q. You named the Daughters of one Mr. Maurice Anneſley?

A. I did.

Q. Now, recollect yourſelf very well, did they viſit Lady Altham when ſhe was at Vice's, in the Month of Auguſt, after the Queen's Death, the firſt time ſhe lodged there?

A. I cannot recollect that, whether they did the firſt time, or not.

Q. Where did you lodge the ſecond time?

A. At Mrs. Vice's again in May 1715.

Q. Did any, and which, of Mr. Maurice Anneſley's Daughters viſit Lady Altham at Vice's in May 1715, or at any time after?

A. In May 1715 they all did.

Q. Now name them.---A. Cherry, Sarah, and Dolly. I know Cherry was the eldeſt; but which of the other was elder, I cannot tell.

Q. How long did you ſtay then in Dublin?

A. We ſtayed above a Year in Town, from May 1715, and better.

Q. Did my Lord and Lady leave Town during that time?

A. My Lord went down, but my Lady did not.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Charity Anneſley?—A. I did very well.

Q. Was my Lady viſited by Mrs. Charity Anneſley, after ſhe came to Vice's in Eſſex-ſtreet, in May 1715?

A. She was viſited by her then, I am ſure.

Q. You mention, Madam, that there were Inſtances of ill Uſage from my Lord to my Lady; when he behaved in that manner, I ſuppoſe, you did not always eſcape; had you ever any Quarrel with my Lord at Vice's, or any where elſe?

A. I cannot ſay I had at Mrs. Vice's. I know one Night he was making a great Noiſe with a Chair, and I went to take away the Chair, and he took hold of my Head-clothes.

Q. Which of the times you lodg'd there did this happen?

A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was it in the Year 1714, or 1715?—A. I cannot tell.

Q. Did he make a great Noiſe?

A. Yes, and I went to take the Chair from him, that he might not diſturb the Family.

Q. Did my Lady Altham ſcream out upon that Occaſion?

A. No, I do not believe ſhe did; for ſhe would rather have been killed, than any one ſhould have heard it.

Q. Did you know any one that was called Lucas?

A. I had no Knowledge of any ſuch.

Q. Did you ever hear any Perſon, in that Family of Mrs. Vice's, name the Name of Lucas?—A. I remember ſome Quarrel there was, that I heard my Lord make uſe of the Name of Lucas.

Q. My Lord and Lady were both in bed at that time, you ſay?

A. Whether they were or not, I cannot ſay.

Q. Did either of them get out of Bed?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Suppoſe either of them ſhould have opened the Window, and called out of the Window, muſt not you have heard it?

A. I cannot tell; I remember one Night my Lord was going towards the Window, and my Lady held him.

Q. Was it that Night that you took the Chair from him?

A. I don't know whether it was; but I believe not. My Lord ſaid, That he would ſend for one Mrs. Lucas, to ſee whether my Lady was with Child; for if ſhe was not, he would turn her off, and would not live with her; but he would know whether ſhe was with Child before he turned her away.

Q. Can you be poſitive, whether, immediately after this, my Lady was confined to her Chamber?

A. I do not remember that ſhe was confined to her Chamber; ſhe was out of order with a Cold or ſo.

Q. Was there any Diſcourſe the next Morning about a Miſcarriage?

A. I am ſure there was not; for I am certain there was no Miſcarriage, and therefore there could be no Diſcourſe of it.

Q. You are ſure you heard the Name of Lucas mentioned?

A. Yes, I did by my Lord.

Q. You mentioned your having gone to take a Houſe upon the Quay?

A. Yes, when we went from Mr. Cavenagh's.

Q. And you gave a Piſtole in Earneſt?

A. Yes, which the Gentlewoman returned.

Q. You ſay this Woman never ſaw your Lady that you know of?

A. No.

Q. Might not ſhe have ſeen her, without your Knowledge, in the Houſe of Mr. King?---A. No, never that I know of; ſhe might have gone there when I was out of the way.

Q. Was there any Converſation with Lady Altham and you, about the returning of that Piſtole?---A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did ſhe ever tell you that ſhe had ſeen the Woman?

A. She never did; and I believe if ſhe had, ſhe would have told me of it.

Q. Did you ever tell any body that that Piſtole was returned?

A. I ſpoke of it; I made it no Secret.

Q. Did you ever hear of that Piſtole being returned?

A. One MacMullen went and received it, and not I.

Q. And who did MacMullen give it to?

A. He gave it either to me, or my Lady.

Q. Did MacMullen go with you both times to the Lodgings you took on the Quay? Did not you ſay, you went and told the Woman that the Doctor ſaid the Air of the Quay was not fit for my Lady?

A. Really, I do not know whether I went with MacMullen or no; I do not believe I was with him.

Q. Was it you that made the Excuſe to the Woman?

A. Indeed I do not know whether I did or no, I believe it was he that went.

Q. Where did Mr. Anneſley, now Lord Angleſea, live in 1715?

A. Oppoſite the Cuſtom-Houſe I think; it was ſo that I could ſee the Fire-works.

Q. How far was that Lodging from Eſſex-Bridge?

A. Indeed I cannot tell how far.

Q. Do you know whoſe Houſe it was in?—A. No indeed.

Q. Did you know the Houſe where Sir Alexander Cairnes and Mr. Henry lived?---A. I do not know where any of them lived.

Q. What kind of an Apartment was there for Lord and Lady Altham to be entertained in?---A. There was a Dining-Room and a Bedchamber, the Supper was in the Bedchamber ſet out.

Q. Did not you go over Eſſex-Bridge to go to theſe Lodgings?

A. We did.

Q. Did you turn on the right hand or the left?---A. On my right hand.

Q. How far did you drive on the Quay?---A. I went in a Chair.

Q. How far did you go then?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was it up one or two Pair of Stairs?---A. One Pair.

Q. Was that Mr. Anneſley's Lodging?---A. It was.

Q. Was it a very handſome Apartment?---A. Indeed I cannot tell.

Q. You mentioned in your going to Wexford a Siſter of Mrs. Giffard?

A. Yes.

Q. Did she ride behind any body?——A. No, she rode single.
Q. What was her Name?——A. I cannot tell.
Q. Was she a Maiden, or a married Woman?
A. She was unmarried.
Q. Was she Part of Lady Altham's Company?
A. She was when she came there.
Q. Did she lodge with Lady Altham?—A. Yes.
Q. At whose House did Lady Altham live?---A. At Captain Sweeny's.
Q. Did my Lady go there to visit Mrs. Sweeny?
A. I cannot tell whether she did or no.
Q. Was it not to hear the Trial of the Pretender's Men?
A. I cannot tell, for I did not know of any particular Trial.
Q. Was there any particular Trial expected?
A. My Lord and Lady might know it, but I did not know it.
Q. What Clothes did my Lady wear at Wexford?
A. Indeed I cannot tell you what Clothes.
Q. Had not my Lady a Silver Silk?
A. No, not then; she did not wear it at Wexford, because she was in Mourning for the Queen.
Q. Pray, what Servants attended my Lord at that Time?
A. I cannot tell what Servants, but his own Servant Anthony Dyer was ill.
Q. But you are sure Rolph went there?——A. Yes.
Q. What Colour was the Horse he rode?
A. Indeed I cannot tell, nor what coloured Horse I rode myself.
Q. Did Rolph lodge in the same House with my Lord?
A. No, he did not.
Q. Did he come to my Lord at Mrs. Sweeny's?
A. I cannot tell, for my Lord was a Justice of Peace, and Rolph had some Informations to deliver.
Q. Did he attend him as a Servant?
A. I do not know but he might, for my Lord never dressed in my Lady's Room, and I cannot tell who attended him.
Q. Was it the Day after you came down that you mentioned Juggy Landy's being with Child?
A. The very Night. It was said that Night that it was an Officer's Servant's, and the next Day that it was my Lord's, or his Brother's, or the Dog-Boy's, or some else of the Servants.
Q. How long did this Woman continue in the House after?
A. I cannot tell.
Q. And pray, Madam, could your righteous Spirit bear that this Woman should stay so long in the House?
A. Indeed I did not concern myself about her.
Q. Do you know the Lady Blessington?
A. I do not know Lady Blessington; what Lady Blessington do you mean? There was one Capt. Boyle, I've seen his Lady.
Q. She is the Lady I mean; did you ever see her visit Lady Altham?
A. I am sure I've never seen her.
Q. Do you remember one Mrs. Pigot?——A. Yes.
Q. Did she visit Lady Altham?——A. Yes, she did.
Q. Was there an Intimacy in the Family?
A. She visited us more in Ross than at Dunmaine.
Q. Did she visit my Lady at Dunmaine frequently?
A. She did, but not often.
Q. Where did you dine the Day of Palliser's Affair?---A. No where.
Q. Did you get any thing to eat when you came into Ross?
A. I know we had some Tea there, I cannot tell whether we had any thing else.
Q. Did you eat nothing else that Day?
A. I cannot tell, for there were none but the Servants there.
Q. Did not Crowds gather about to see my Lady come into Ross?
A. There was a Crowd of People, but it was so dark, I could not see who they were.
Q. Was it dark when you left Dunmaine?
A. It was duskish when we left Dunmaine, but it was dark when we came into Ross.
Q. What happened upon the Quarrel between my Lady and Captain Annesley, did he leave the House upon it?
A. Not immediately, but he never came up to dine with my Lady after.
Q. Did they never come into Company at Dunmaine after?
A. They never did; my Lady sent for him the next Day to come up to Dinner, but he would not; she then sent to know if he would have something sent down, and he would not.
Q. Did he ever come to Dinner after at Dunmaine?
A. Not up Stairs into the Parlour.
Q. Did he ever come to Dunmaine after he left it while my Lady was there?——A. He never did.
Q. When was it they first met after this Quarrel?
A. When we came to Dublin afterwards; when we came, my Lady took a Chair to Mrs. Vice's, and she met Mr. Annesley in Essex-Street: he said, Your Servant, my Lady; your Ladyship is welcome to Town; and after that he came to Mrs. Vice's.
Q. Do you recollect what Month that was in?
A. It was violent hot Weather, I believe in July, for it could not be a Month before the Queen died.
Q. Do you know one Mr. Hussey?——A. I do know him.
Q. Did you see him at your House in London?---A. I did.
Q. Did you ever discourse with him relating to this Affair?
A. Yes; and told him several Times that my Lady had not a Child.
Q. What Mr. Hussey is this?
A. I know nothing but that he was an Acquaintance of an Acquaintance of mine that brought him to my House.
Q. Did not you tell Mr. Hussey that the Plaintiff was greatly wronged, and that you knew more of that Affair than any body?
A. No, by the Virtue of my Oath, I never did.
Q. Did not you see Mr. Hussey at your House, when the Report was that this Mr. Annesley was on board the Fleet with Admiral Vernon?
A. Indeed I do not know what Time.
Q. Pray recollect yourself. I ask you, was not this immediately after that Mr. Annesley was on board Vernon's Fleet?
A. I do not know what Time.
Q. Was it a Month after you heard the Report?
A. I do not know indeed.
Q. When was it you first heard that Report?
A. The first Time I heard of it, I believe, will be three Years next January.
Q. Who first informed you of it?
A. The Duchess of Buckingham sent her Woman for me; I could not think what she could want, and I said nothing to her Woman, but went with her, and when I came, and went up Stairs, and sat down, her Woman was the first that told me of it.
Q. Was it not immediately after that, that Mr. John Hussey came to your Lodgings?---A. I cannot tell what Time he came.
Q. Is it three Years ago since he came to visit you?
A. I believe it is three Years and more, I cannot tell what Time.
Q. Was it not two Years ago?
A. I have seen him several Times within these two Years; he has had the Discourse about this Plaintiff several Times.
Q. Was it two Years since you saw him last?
A. Yes, it will be two Years——I cannot recollect.
Q. Was it before the Duchess of Buckingham sent for you?
A. No, I knew nothing of it 'till the Duchess sent for me.
Q. What State of Health was Lady Altham in when she came to Dublin from Ross?——A. She was lame.
Q. Was not she troubled with a Dead Palsy?
A. I cannot call it a Dead Palsy.
Q. Did not that Disorder deprive her of her Limbs?
A. She lost her Limbs by that Disorder, it came by Degrees; but when she came from Ross, she could go about with holding by the Hand.
Q. When she went to London, what State was she in?
A. She had lost the Use of her Limbs; she could not stand; when I first went to London, with one Hand I could lead her about the Room, and then with both Hands; and then not at all; I was forced to put her in a Chair and wheel her about.
Q. How did she come by that Disorder?—A. Indeed I cannot tell.
Q. Did not that Disorder come on her after there was a Report that she had a Child?
A. A Child! The Disorder began at Ross.
Q. Was there any Report, that you know, of my Lady's being with Child?
A. Yes, there was a Report before I lived with her; I heard of such a Thing.
Q. Was there any such Report after you came to live with her?
A. No, I do not know, Sir, that there was at any Time after I came to live with her.
Q. Was not she bed-ridden of this Disorder before her Death?
A. No, she never was.
Q. Was not she impaired in her Senses?
A. No, she never was; she was well in her Chair the Night before her Death, and she took a Fit, and we put her to Bed, and she died the next Night, but 'till that Time she had her Senses as perfect as any body in the Court, and could manage all her Affairs, for I never kept any Account for her.
Q. Was not that 100 l. a Year left her by the Duke to cease upon the Death of my Lord Altham?---A. Yes, it was.
Q. How was she supported then to her Death?
A. Because my Lady Duchess gave her 100 l. a Year, for the Interest of the 1200 l. after the Duke's Death.
Q. Where have you lived since the Death of Lady Altham?
A. In the House I now live in.
Q. What Business do you follow?
A. I take in Plain-work, and I have some Money at Interest.
Q. Are not you a Washer-woman?---A. No, I am not.
Q. What Time did the Duke of Buckingham die?
A. I do not know, he was dead before my Lady and I went to England, he was dead before we left Ross.
Q. What is your present Way of living?
A. I have the Interest of some Money left me, and I take in Plain-work, and Clear-starching; my Daughter and I live together, and we have the Interest of about 700 l. between us, but the greater Part of it is my Daughter's.

Monday, November 21.

Serjeant Marshall.] My Lord, the Gentlemen have by their Defence*, made it necessary for us to give some new Evidence. It has been insisted on by them, and they have endeavoured to prove, that Lady Altham was at the Spring Assizes 1715, at Wexford, without any apparent Sign of Pregnancy; that being a new Point, your Lordship will give us Leave to controvert, because the Credit of the Lessor of the Plaintiff's Birth may, in some Measure, depend upon it. They have gone a Step farther, and have attempted to impeach the Credit of Joan Laffan; we apprehend it will be material to defend the Character of that Witness, and to shew that some of the Witnesses produced on their Part, have been prepared for this Trial.

The six Evidences, on the Plaintiff's Reply, were:

1. Cæsar Colclough, Esq. who swore, He was at Wexford Assizes, in April 1715; did not see Lady Altham there; and if she had been there, should have known her; believes she was not in Town that Day.

2. John Hussey, confronted with Mrs. Heath; their Evidence afterwards.

3. Mr. Thomas Higginson, Receiver to Arthur Earl of Anglesea, who swore he was at Dunmaine the Beginning of April 1715; that Lady Altham made him drink a Glass of Wine; he saw she was big with Child, and her Face lank, and he drank to her happy Delivery, and went from thence to Wexford Assizes.

4. William Stephens, to contradict Arthur Herd, who said to him (meaning Mr. Annesley) This is the right Heir, if Right takes place.

* Before the Evidence of the Defendant was closed, the Counsel for the Defendant offered to give in Evidence the Record of the special Verdict in Ejectment, in the King's Bench, wherein the late Lord Anglesea was Lessor of the Plaintiff, and Graham, who held under Lord Altham's Title, was the Defendant, which special Verdict found that the late Lord Altham died without Issue.

Court. That Record cannot be Evidence against the Plaintiff, who was not a Party to it; nor could the Admission of either of the Parties in that Cause be Evidence against the now Plaintiff.

5. William

5. William Houghton ſwore, Herd told him Mr. Anneſley was the true and lawful Son, and Heir to the Eſtate.

6.* John Ryan, brought to contradict Michael Downes, who declared to him he was to get 200 l. for ſwearing that Gentleman away.——Downes denied this, or having any Converſation of that kind, and appealed to Colonel Palliſer and Colonel Loftus, &c. for a Character. Colonel Loftus being called, was aſked whether Downes bore a good Character, and to be believed on his Oath, replied, Yes; but being aſked whether under that Circumſtance he ſhould be believed, anſwered, I cannot ſay that.

2. JOHN HUSSEY, confronted with Mrs. Heath.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Heath?—John Huſſey. I do, Sir.

Q. Had you any Converſation with her about the Plaintiff being, or not being the Son of Lady Altham?—A. I had.

Q. How long ago is it ſince you had the Converſation with Mrs. Heath?—A. I think about two Years and a half ago.

Q. Give an Account of what paſſed between you?

A. About two Years and a half ago, I went with a Gentlewoman to Mrs. Heath's to drink Tea in Holbourn, within thirty or forty Yards of Saint Andrew's Church, and as Mr. Annesley was the common Converſation of the Coffee-houſes then, we began to talk about him; I do not know whether ſhe or I introduced the Diſcourſe, but ſhe ſaid, to the beſt of my Memory, Nobody knows that young Man's Affairs better than I, becauſe I long lived with his Mother the Lady Altham; and ſhe expreſſed a great deal of Concern for him, and the Circumſtances he was in: ſhe told me withal, That the Ducheſs of Buckingham ſent for her three times, and that ſhe was in private with her. And I have no more to ſay, my Lord.

Q. Did ſhe tell you the Import of the Converſation between her and the Ducheſs of Buckingham?

A. I do not remember ſhe did, nor I never aſked her.

Q. Did ſhe ſay concerning whom, or what the Ducheſs ſent for her?

A. To the beſt of my Remembrance, ſhe did about Mr. Annesley.

Q. I aſk you again, and recollect and conſider very well before you give an Anſwer, Are you ſure that Mrs. Heath ſaid that Lady Altham was the Mother of this young Man; or was it only this, that I have long lived with Lady Altham?—A. She ſaid, my Lord, that ſhe had lived a long while with his Mother, Lady Altham.

Q. Are you ſure ſhe called her his Mother?—A. Yes, I am, my Lord.

Q. Recollect whether you heard Mrs. Heath ſay any thing concerning any Perſon's being much wronged or injured.

A. She did ſay, That the young Gentleman was very much injured, and that Nobody knew better than her, becauſe ſhe had lived long with the Lady Altham his Mother.

Q. Pray, Sir, had this Mrs. Heath any Diſcourſe concerning her coming to Ireland, or that ſhe expected any thing?

A. She ſaid ſhe believed ſhe ſhould come into Ireland, but I do not remember that ſhe ſaid ſhe expected any thing; it would have been very imprudent of her to tell me ſo, if ſhe did.

Mrs MARY HEATH.

Q. Mrs. Heath, do you know that Gentleman that ſits down there?

Mrs. Heath. Yes, I have ſeen him ſeveral times.

Q. Do you remember about two Years ago, that he drank Tea at your Houſe, with one Mrs. Simpſon?—A. He has ſeveral times.

Q. Did he drink Tea with you after the Account came concerning Mr. Anneſley?—A. He has ſeveral times.

Q. I aſk you then, whether you had ever any Converſation with him in relation to the Plaintiff, and what was it you ſaid?

A. I have ſeveral times talked about it, and ſaid, What a vile Thing it was to take away the Earl's Right, and that my Lady never was with Child; and I cannot ſay no more if you rack me to Death.

Q. How long have you known that Mr. Huſſey?

A. Whether three Years or how long I can't ſay.

Q. Can you ſay any thing of his Character?

A. I can ſay no more than that ſome ſaid he was a Gentleman's Servant, and ſome ſaid he lived by Gaming.

Q. Do you believe him an honeſt Man?

A. I can ſay nothing of him; but if he ſays that I ſaid my Lady had a Child, I cannot ſay he is an honeſt Man.

Q. Did you ever ſay that Nobody knew that young Man's Affairs better than you?——A. No, my Lord, I never did.

Q. Did you ever give it, in his Preſence, as a Reaſon why you ſhould know the young Man's Affairs, that you had long lived with Lady Altham, his Mother?—A. No, my Lord, I never did; and if I was to be torn to Pieces, I would ſay no ſuch Thing.

To Mr. HUSSEY.

Q. Repeat the Words you heard her ſay.

Mr. Huſſey. She told me that the Ducheſs of Buckingham had ſent for her herſelf, and I cannot ſay who introduced the Converſation firſt; but Mrs. Heath ſaid, Poor Gentleman, I am ſorry for him from my Heart; for no one has Reaſon to know his Affairs better than I do; for I lived long with Lady Altham his Mother.

Mrs. Heath. By all that is good and great, I never ſaid any ſuch Word; I never thought that you was ſuch a Man; I have heard People ſay that you were a Gameſter, and lived in an odd way, but I could never believe it 'till now, but I always took your Part, and ſaid you behaved like a Gentleman.

Mr. Huſſey. I am a Gentleman, I can bring ſeveral People to juſtify me to be a Gentleman, and a Man of Family; indeed I have heard you ſay it, and ſpeak it with all the Regret and Concern imaginable.

To Mrs. HEATH.

Q. Do you remember the Time that Lady Altham went to Wexford Aſſizes?——Mrs. Heath. Yes.

Q. Was that for the Trial of one Doyle?

A. I do not know any other that was tried but Mr. Walſh; my Lady came home and told me how handſomely Mr. Walſh pleaded for himſelf.

Q. Do you remember what Day of the Week it was you went to the Aſſizes?—A. Indeed, my Lord, I do not.

Q. Did my Lady Altham lodge at Mrs. Vice's more than twice?

A. No more than twice.

Q. Would you be underſtood then, that the firſt time was when ſhe came from Dunmaine, after ſhe went down from Mrs. Briſcoe's?

A. A little before the Queen died the firſt time was, and the ſecond a little before King George's Birth-day.

Q. What time of the Year was it after the King's Birth-day that you went into the Country?—A. Some time in the Summer.

Q. Did you ever come up to Town after the Separation?

A. Not till the Time we left Roſs.

Q. Was the Aſſizes begun before you went to Wexford, or did they begin after?—A. I believe they begun after, I don't know.

Q. Do you know one Mr. Higginſon, that was Receiver to Arthur Earl of Angleſea?——A. No, I do not. †

Tueſday, November 22.

The Court ordered Mrs. Henrietta Cole, and Mrs. Heath, to confront each other.

To Mrs. HEATH.

Q. Mrs. Heath, you ſaid, as well as I remember your Teſtimony, that Rolph was Butler at Dunmaine?

Mrs. Heath. Yes, when I firſt went down.

Q. Can you recollect how long he continued there?

A. No, but I remember he went away when we were in Dublin.

Q. When?——A. The laſt time that we came up.

Q. You mentioned that you ſaw the Fire-works, the firſt Birth-day of King George the Firſt, from Captain Anneſley's Lodgings?——A. I did.

Q. Had you left Rolph in the Country then, or had you not?

A. I left him in the Country, in the Houſe.

Q. Did you find him in the Houſe when you returned?

A. No, for my Lord hired a Butler in Dublin, one Charles Magher, and ſent him down.

Q. Was he ſent before my Lady went back?

A. He was ſent while we were at Mrs. Vice's, and hired there.

Q. Was there any Account that Rolph had quitted the Family before Magher was hired?

A. I cannot tell; but there was a Quarrel between Rolph and the Gardener, and he was ordered to quit it.

Q. What Time of the Year did you go back with my Lady to Dunmaine?——A. It was above a Year we ſtaid in Town.

Q. Did Magher act as Butler during that Time?---A. He did, my Lord.

Q. You came over with my Lady from England?——A. I did.

Q. You firſt came to the Houſe of Captain Briſcoe?

A. We came there to lodge.

Q. Where did you go immediately after you left Captain Briſcoe's?

A. We went down to Dunmaine, and got there on Chriſtmas-Eve.

Q. Did not you go firſt into other Lodgings?

A. We did not go at all to any Houſe to lodge.

To Mrs. COLE.

Q. Do you remember the Time of Lady Altham's coming to your Houſe, when the Reconciliation happened?——Mrs. Cole. I do.

Q. What became of my Lord and Lady afterwards?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, they did not ſtay in our Houſe above four or five Days, and they went and took Lodgings at Mrs. Vice's.

To Mrs. HEATH.

Q. Do you know this Gentlewoman?

Mrs. Heath. I do remember her.

To Mrs. COLE.

Q. Did you ever viſit, after they had left your Houſe, while they remained in Town?

Mrs. Cole. I cannot tell, but I believe we might.

Q. Recollect yourſelf and fix, whether you are certain that they went to Vice's, or any other Place from your Father's?

A. Indeed, my Lord, I believe they went to Mrs. Vice's.

Q. Can you be poſitive that they lodged in any other Houſe in Dublin but your Father's, before they left Dublin?---A. I am poſitive.

Q. What do you found your Opinion upon?

A. I believe I have ſeen them in Dublin.

Q. Well, but what Reaſon have you to think they went to Vice's, before they went to Dunmaine?

A. The Reaſon I can recollect is, that after my Lord and Lady came together, my Father was ſtill uneaſy, though they were come together, till my Lord took her to a Lodging of his own; and he thought if they went to lodge at ſome other Place, it might have a better Face or Air of a Reconciliation.

Q. Did you underſtand your Father to mean by that, that it would become more public and notorious to Mankind, that Lord and Lady Altham were really reconciled?

A. Yes, I did underſtand that to be his Meaning.

Q. How long was Lady Altham at your Houſe, in the whole?

A. A Month or ſix Weeks before my Lord came and was reconciled, and not above four or five Days after the Reconciliation, at our Houſe.

* When John Ryan was croſs-examined, the Counſel for the Defendant aſked him, What Religion he was of? He anſwered, I am a Roman Catholick. Then they aſked him, Do you follow any Buſineſs, or are you of any Profeſſion? The Court ſaid, You need not anſwer that Queſtion, if you think it will criminate yourſelf; and he refuſed anſwering it.

† After the Evidence for the Plaintiff on the Reply was cloſed,

" Mr. Serjeant Marſhall, of Counſel for the Plaintiff, ſtated the Title of Arthur Lord Altham, from the Wills and Codicils of James the firſt Earl of Angleſea, to ſhew that " Arthur Lord Altham was only Tenant for Life; the Counſel for the Defendant having inſiſted, that he was Tenant in Tail under the ſaid Wills and Codicils; upon which " the Wills and Codicils were in part read.——But the Court were pleaſed to interpoſe, and ſaid, That this was a Queſtion of Law that might require great Conſideration, " and was not neceſſary to be determined at this time; the only material Point being, what was the Opinion of Lord Altham concerning his Title; that is, at the Time " mentioned by Col. Wall, in his Evidence, (which was, that he never heard Lord Altham had a Child by my Lady; for in 1725, Counſel gave an Opinion that he had an " Eſtate Tail, in the Remainder of the Angleſea Eſtate. Col. Wall told my Lord, that he could ſell the Reverſion of the Angleſea Eſtate better if he had a Son, for he " could by a Fine bar his Iſſue; but that he could not bar the Remainder, not being in poſſeſſion; and that he often heard my Lord wiſh he had a legitimate Son; and " that he had an illegitimate one) therefore whether Arthur Lord Altham conſidered himſelf as Tenant in Tail, or only Tenant for Life, of the Angleſea Eſtate, for, according " to his Opinion, concerning his Title in that Eſtate, it was his Intereſt to own or diſown his having a lawful Son.

Q. You remember the time of your going down to Dunmaine?--A. I do.
Q. What time was it?——A. It was in the Winter.
Q. Do you remember any Thing concerning the Lady's being indiſpoſed there?——A. Yes, I do.
Q. Tell that again.
A. There was an Accident happened, which frightened and fretted my Lady, upon which ſhe became indiſpoſed, and I remember a Servant's being ſent up by my Lord to deſire my Lady to come to Supper, and my Mother was with her two or three times to call her, and yet ſhe excuſed herſelf.
Q. Do you remember any thing that happened upon that?
A My Lady miſcarried.
Q. Who gave that Notice firſt to your Mother?—A. Mrs. Heath.
Q. At what Time?—A. My Mother was called up in the Night.
Q. By whom?
A. By Mrs. Heath, who came to my Mother's Room, and ſaid, For God's Sake, Madam, get up as ſoon as you can, for my Lady is exceeding ill.

To Mrs. HEATH.

Q. Do you remember that Fact?
Mrs. Heath. No, my Lord, there was no ſuch thing happened, for my Lady never miſcarried.
Q. Do you remember that you called up Mrs Briſcoe in the Night?
A. No, I never did; I don't know what I ſhould call her for.
Q. Did you ever tell Mrs. Briſcee that your Lady had miſcarried?
A. No; for if I had, I ſhould have told a falſe Thing; and I never lay a Night in any Houſe in Dublin but Captain Briſcoe's, till we came to Dunmaine.

To Mrs. COLE.

Q. Was you, after that Time, in my Lady's Bed-chamber?
Mrs. Cole. I was.
Q. How ſoon after?——A. The next Morning.

To Mrs. HEATH.

Q. Was ſhe in my Lady's Bedchamber the next Morning?
Mrs. Heath. I do not know but ſhe might, for my Lady always breakfaſted in her Bedchamber.

To Mrs. COLE.

Q. Who was it that ſhewed to you that, which you took to be the Abortion?
Mrs. Cole. My Mother, my Lord.
Q. Where was Mrs. Heath then?
A. Indeed I cannot tell whether ſhe was there or not.
Q. How old was you when my Lady came into Ireland?
A. I was either thirteen, fourteen, or fifteen, I cannot remember.
Q. How old are you now?
A I believe I am either forty-five, or forty-ſix.
Q. How old was you when at Dunmaine?
A. I ſay, I believe I was either thirteen, fourteen, or fifteen, I cannot recollect.
Q. Do you remember how long my Lord and Lady ſtayed in Dublin after they left your Father's Houſe, before they went to Dunmaine?
A. Not very long: I cannot exactly tell.
Q. Did you ſee them in that Time ſeldom or often?
A. I cannot tell how often.

To Mrs. HEATH.

Q. Did my Lady keep her Bed, or not, the Day after that Accident of the Saucers?
Mrs. Heath. No, my Lord, it never diſturbed her, for ſhe was glad they were gone.
Q. Did ſhe keep her Room the next Day?——A. No, my Lord.

To Mrs. COLE.

Q. Did my Lady keep her Room the Day after?
Mrs. Cole. She did, and for ſome Days after.
Q. Who was Butler when you was there?——A. One Rolph.

Here the Evidence on both Sides cloſed.

Friday, November 25.

The Court being met according to Adjournment, and the Jury having appeared as uſual, the Lord Chief Baron Bowes ſummed up the Evidence in the following Charge.

Lord Chief Baron's Charge.

Gentlemen of the Jury,

We are now come to the laſt Period of this very important Trial, and after having attended to a longer Evidence than ever was known upon a Trial at Law, You, Gentlemen, by your Verdict, muſt determine a Queſtion of as great Conſequence both as to Property and Title, as ever came before a Jury.

I did apprehend when this Trial began, that it would run out to a great Length, and therefore apprized you of what I thought muſt be the Conſequence, that the Court would not be able minutely to ſum up the Evidence upon this, as upon like Occaſions; and therefore recommended it to you to make and enter your own Obſervations, as the Evidence ſhould be laid before you: But when I conſider your exemplary Behaviour during the Courſe of this long Trial, the Attention you have given, and the Deſire you have expreſſed to do Juſtice; I think it incumbent upon the Court, as far as they can, to be aiding and aſſiſting to you, in this your Search after Truth. To this end I ſhall, though very briefly and imperfectly, lay before you what hath occurred to me; which I ſhall do in this Method. I ſhall endeavour by way of Narrative, to collect the Facts that have been ſworn to on both ſides; I ſhall next mention the Objections, as far as I have taken them, that have been made to the Credit of the reſpective Witneſſes, together with ſome Obſervations that may aſſiſt you in judging how far thoſe Objections ought to weigh with you. And as it will appear in the Courſe of this Evidence, that there have been Inconſiſtencies, and, in the moſt material Facts, direct Contradictions; I ſhall therefore take notice of thoſe Circumſtances attending this Caſe which may throw a Probability or Improbability upon the Teſtimony you have heard.

The Action to be tried is, an Ejectment brought for Lands in the County of Meath; and by the Admiſſion of the Counſel for the Defendant the Plaintiff's Title is brought to a ſingle Queſtion, Whether the Leſſor, Mr. James Annesley, be the legitimate Iſſue of Arthur late Lord Altham? It is admitted on both Sides, that the Plaintiff and Defendant claim the Lands in queſtion, under the Will of James Earl of Angleſea; and that by ſuch Will, the Limitation to the Heirs Male of the Body of Arthur late Lord Altham, is prior to the Remainder limited to the Defendant; and therefore if the Plaintiff can prove that he is the legitimate Iſſue of Arthur late Lord Altham, a Verdict muſt be found for the Leſſor of the Plaintiff; but if he fail, then there is an undoubted Title in the Defendant, being the Perſon next in Remainder under the Will of James Earl of Angleſea; and a Verdict muſt be found for him.

Gentlemen, The Queſtion being a meer Matter of Fact, the Plaintiff's Counſel have proceeded to lay their Evidence before you in the following Manner: They have given Evidence to induce a Probability, that Mary the Wife of Arthur, late Lord Altham, might have had a Child, and that, by examining Mrs. Dorothy Briſcoe, and Mrs. Henrietta Cole, alias Briſcoe, to ſhew that there was a Reconciliation between the Lord and Lady Altham, ſome time in the Year 1713; that they came together and cohabited at the Houſe of their Father in Bride-Street, from whence they went to one Mrs. Vice's in Eſſex-Street, and from thence to Dunmaine; and there another Circumſtance ariſes, which is, that Mrs. Cole and her Mother being invited to Dunmaine, went thither, and while they were there, upon an Accident, which has been ſo often repeated that I ſhall not go into the Particulars of it, Lady Altham was frighted, and in conſequence of that Fright miſcarried; and the ſame Witneſs, Mrs. Cole, ſwears that ſhe ſaw an Abortion. They have alſo produced Catharine Cormack, to ſhew a ſecond Miſcarriage, in the ſame Summer with that mentioned by Mrs. Cole; the Circumſtances of that likewiſe have been ſo often repeated, that I only mention the Fact. Having done this, the Plaintiff proceeded to ſhew an actual Pregnancy in Mary Lady Altham. The Evidence for this was Alice Bates, the Servant of Mrs. Briſcoe, who was admitted to Intimacy with Lady Altham, and to whom it was told by Lord Altham, and acknowledged by Lady Altham; and who further ſwears the Pregnancy was ſuch that ſhe did obſerve it, and by laying her Hand upon the Belly of Lady Altham, ſhe took upon her to ſay that Lady Altham was big with Child. I do not, as I go along, take notice of the Objections to the reſpective Witneſſes, intending to conſider them together. In the next place, they have endeavoured to prove Circumſtances preparatory to the Delivery of Lady Altham. Dennis Redmond tells you, that he was ſent for the Midwife, and Thomas Brooks, that he was ſent for as a Surgeon to let her blood at the time of her Labour; and Dennis Redmond and Philip Breen both ſpeak to their obſerving that Lady Altham was pregnant before this time: And, Gentlemen, it did appear that theſe two were Servants about the Houſe, though in a very low Station; the one, I think, a Helper in the Garden, the other in the Stables.

The next Period is the actual Delivery; and for that, they have produced two poſitive Witneſſes; the one Mary Doyle, a Servant in the Family; the other Eleanor Murphy, who calls herſelf Chamber-maid; both theſe ſwear they were in the Room at the time of the Delivery; and as far as their Teſtimony ſhall avail, are poſitive Witneſſes to the Fact. The next, are the Circumſtances conſequent upon the Delivery, that were Evidences of it. The firſt is ſpoke of by Breen and one or two more, and that is, the Rejoicings that were made upon the Birth of this Heir. The next was the Chriſtening, which is ſworn to by the two Maids that I mentioned before; who alſo ſwear, that Mr. Colclough and Mr. Cliff were Godfathers, Mrs. Pigot Godmother, and that Mr. Lloyd was the Clergyman that officiated in the chriſtening of this Child. The next is Chriſtopher Brown, who was a Servant attending upon one Mr. Anthony Cliff, not the Cliff that was the Godfather, but an invited Gueſt; and he ſpeaks to the being there at that Time, and attending his Maſter at the Table, at the Entertainment that was made on the Occaſion. John Scot, a Servant, I think, of Mr. Pigot's, he ſpeaks to a ſubſequent Time after the Delivery, and ſays, that after his Return with his Maſter from England, he was ſent a dozen Times, as he has ſworn, to this Houſe with Meſſages, and Compliments to the Lady, and to know how the Child did.

Gentlemen, it will be material for you to obſerve that the Birth to which this Evidence has been applied, has been fixed by the Witneſſes, and admitted by the Plaintiff's Counſel, to have happened in the Beginning of Summer, 1715; which the Witneſſes have alſo explained to be about the Month of May. There were two Witneſſes more, proper for me to take notice of, but I ſhall not give you their Evidence by way of Teſtimony, becauſe they ſeem to differ from all the reſt. The one was that of Charles Mac Carthy, who was brought to prove the Pregnancy of Lady Altham, and ſomething further, but he ſet out from a Period of Time ſo different from the other Witneſſes, that the Counſel for the Plaintiff did not think proper to proceed in the Examination of him; nor have the Counſel for the Defendant made any uſe of him. The next I ſhall lay aſide, is Major Fitzgerald, whoſe Evidence was to the Declaration of Lord Altham, the Day my Lady was in Labour, and the Invitation he had to go and tap the Groaning-drink, and his Excuſe for not going, as it was an improper Time; the Invitation he had to go the next Day; that he went, dined there, but did not lie there; that the Child was brought down to him, and that he gave the Nurſe half a Guinea; but then he fixes this in Harveſt, and therefore no Advantage has been taken of that Examination by the Plaintiff; the Defendant indeed has made uſe of it, which I ſhall take notice of in the Objections.

The next Evidence, Gentlemen, has been to ſhew the Diſpoſitions that were made relating to the Child thus brought into the World; and, indeed, I ſhould have mentioned before, the Evidence of Matthew Furlong, who applied for having his Wife employed as Nurſe to that Child; but, Gentlemen, the ſame Evidence for the Plaintiff that ſwore to the Chriſtening, the ſame Evidence that were about the Houſe, and preſent at the Birth, have gone farther, and told you that one Joan Landy was appointed the Nurſe for this Child; and they have all of them given this Account of Joan Landy, that ſhe was a Perſon unmarried, that was with Child, and ſuppoſed to be ſo by Lord Altham, that was turned away, as ſome ſay, upon my Lady's coming down; as others ſay, before my Lady came into that Country: This Perſon was choſe to be the Nurſe. She had a Place of Reſidence, the Cabbin that was built for her Father, a Quarter of a Mile from the Houſe of Dunmaine; which, as the Witneſſes for the Plaintiff tell you, was fitted up upon the Occaſion of receiving her and this Child. Laffan has told you that a Room was added; others others, that the Cabbin was white-waſhed and beautified, but ſpeak not of the Room; but all agree that this Nurſe had the Child there, and that for the Conveniency of viſiting this Child, a Road for the Coach was made from Dunmaine-Houſe to this Place. They tell you that the Child remained with her 'till Joan Laffan comes into Play as dry Nurſe: And Joan Laffan ſays, ſhe came into the Family when the Child was three or four Months old, and ſhe has fixed her coming to Harveſt after the King came to the Crown; and that it was put into her Care about three Months before the Separation of Lord and Lady Altham, and continued in her Care ſo long as it continued at Dunmaine; and that the Child was carried from her to Kinnea in the County of Kildare; and that it was about three or four Years old at the Time it went to Kinnea. They have introduced as Evidence the Declarations of Lord and Lady Altham, in reſpect to Lady Altham's having a Child, and in reſpect to Lord Altham's acknowledging that Child. The earlieſt in point of Time is that of Alderman Barnes of Kilkenny, who ſays, that it was in the Beginning of the Summer, and by his Account not long after the Birth; he tells you the Occaſion of his going to Roſs, and that there he met with Lord Altham; that my Lord took him into an upper Room, and diſcloſed his Mind, by telling him, "Tom, I will tell you good News, I have a Son by Moll Sheffield;" that he went next Day to my Lord's Houſe, but that he did not ſee the Child, nor did he hear either my Lord or Lady ſpeak of it whilſt he was there; but at laſt did ſay, that he believed the Child's Health might be drank at the Table. The next Witneſs that I ſhall mention upon this Head, was Edward Lutwitch, and he ſpeaks to the ſeeing of a Child at Roſs, for whom my Lady Altham had beſpoke two Pair of Shoes, which he was to make, and when he brought them Home, he inquired for the young Lord, and they told him he was gone back to Dunmaine; upon which Lady Altham broke out into this Exclamation, "It had been better "for me to have been the Wife of the pooreſt Tradeſman in Roſs than my "Lord Altham's; for then I could ſee my Child every Day, but now I can "ſee him but by Stealth." Gentlemen, the Witneſſes for the Plaintiff that were in the Houſe, and converſant in the Family, tell you, that my Lord did always acknowledge this Child to be his lawful Son; that this Child was ſhewn as ſuch to the Perſons that came to the Houſe to viſit, and ſome tell you, that they often ſaw the Child in and about the Houſe.

I mentioned, Gentlemen, the Child's being removed to Kinnea, in the County of Kildare, and this was after the Separation of Lady Altham from my Lord. When the Child was brought to Kinnea, they have gone on by Evidence, to ſhew you, that there he was treated as the Son of my Lord by Lady Altham. For this, they have produced Mr. Miſſet; who tells you, that there was a Child that he took to be about ſix Years old; that he went to a School in the Neighbourhood, and was conſidered as the Child of Lord Altham; that it was called the young Lord; that it was ſent to School with a Servant, and that he remembers it particularly by an open Lace upon his Hat, which he believes was the firſt and laſt that had ever been at that School. Whilſt he was at Kinnea, as that Witneſs ſays, the Child was treated by my Lord as his Son; and Mrs. Annesley, a Relation of the Family, who lives in the Neighbourhood of Kinnea, tells you, that her Brother Colonel Geoffry Paul, a Gentleman well known to moſt Perſons here, uſed to viſit my Lord, and my Lord to viſit him, and that her Brother uſed at Table to drink the Boy's Health as my Lord's Son; and ſays, that ſhe was ſure, from the Knowledge ſhe had of her Brother, that if he had ſuſpected that he was the illegitimate Son of Lord Altham, he would not have done him the Honour to have drank his Health; and that ſhe never heard he was the illegitimate Son, till of late that he has been called ſo, on account of this preſent Diſpute.

The next Place the Child was carried to was Carrickduff, in the County of Carlow; and there you have had ſeveral Witneſſes to prove him the legitimate Son, viz. Two Cavenaghs, James Dempſie, and Mr. Charles Byrne; who all ſwear to this Child's being there acknowledged as my Lord's lawful Son, and that they had no Doubt upon them, at that Period of Time, concerning his being ſo; and it appears, that Dempſie was taken in to teach the Child, and afterwards kept School where the Child was conſtantly ſent.

From hence, they have carried him to Dublin, to my Lord Altham's Houſe in Croſs-lane; and here Catherine O' Neil, who was the Perſon that brought him, gives you an Account of the Identity of the Perſon, and likewiſe of his being acknowledged as the Son of Lord Altham. And Nicholas Duffe, who kept a Publick-Houſe, and was a Chairman in this Town, who was frequently with my Lord (and I think I may, once for all, obſerve, that this unhappy Nobleman did not diſtinguiſh his Company as became one of his Rank and Quality) tells you, that my Lord has mentioned this Boy to him, as one that would one Day be Lord Altham; and another Time, in Diſcourſe, told him, he would be Earl of Angleſea. From Croſs-lane (there is ſomething mentioned of Stephens Green, but I could not collect at what Period of Time he was there), the next Place he is removed to with Certainty, is Frapper-Lane; and there he is ſome time with his Father, is put to School to one Carth, and is known to ſeveral People in that Neighbourhood: To this you have the Evidence of the two Byrnes and Matthew Plunket, who ſwear that he was treated as the Son of Lord Altham, though the Care of him ſeems to leſſen at that Place; for in Croſs-Lane you hear of Miſs Gregory, and more of her in Frapper-Lane; and to her they have imputed the Neglect ſhewn to this Son. From hence my Lord moves to Inchicore, about the Month of Auguſt 1724, at which Time the Child, then about nine Years of Age, was left by his Father. The Evidence ſpeak of his being ſent immediately to the Houſe of one Mrs. Cooper. Here the Evidence begins to be leſs connected than before; but I ſhall mention it as given. Michael Waldron and Dunn ſay, he was put to School to the ſaid Dunn, who alſo ſwears to the Perſon, and that he was put to School by one Cavenagh, a Dancing-Maſter; that he afterwards ſaw Lord Altham at Cavenagh's, and that Lord Altham promiſed to pay him for his Care of him. It was before this Period of Time, that Byrne junior ſpeaks of his coming to him, and the Care he took of his School-fellow, and the deſtitute Condition he was then in. After this, the firſt Account that I think is given of him, is that of Mr. Amyas Buſhe, who ſpeaks of him as a Boy loitering about the College, who got his Subſiſtence by running of Errands, by the Name of a Scull; that, moved by his Story, he was taken in by the Humanity of this young Gentleman, and that he had Intentions to do for him, if his Grandfather would have permitted him to keep the Lad. The next Account we have of him is from Farrell; he tells you, that he received him for a little while into his Houſe, and that at the Requeſt of his Father; and gives an Account how he handed him over to Purcell; and Purcell tells you the Care he and his Wife took of him, and that they both conſidered him as the lawful Son of Lord Altham. The Boy left Purcell's ungratefully, after the Treatment he met with there; and the next News of him was at the Houſe of Mr. Tighe, taken in by his Son; this in Point of Time muſt have been ſoon after the Death of Lord Altham, which happened in November 1727; and in the February following, this Boy, about thirteen Years of Age, was miſſing, without any previous Quarrel, and, as the Witneſs ſoon after heard, was ſent to the Weſt-Indies.

Gentlemen, the Plaintiff, after this, thought it neceſſary to give ſome Evidence, to account how a Child that had been acknowledged by the Father as his lawful Son, came to be treated in this manner; and you will obſerve, that one of the Witneſſes, Plunket, ſays, that in Frapper-Lane Miſs Gregory lived with Lord Altham as a Miſtreſs, that ſhe complained of this Boy, and that he was corrected: Indeed, he does ſay, that the Boy owned the Fault that he was charged with; and a Witneſs produced for the Defendant, Arthur Herd, tells you what the Offences were, and the immoderate Correction that was given to this Boy. And other Witneſſes have told you, that my Lord, Miſs Gregory and the Boy did not agree, and that Lord Altham could have no Peace whilſt the Boy was in the Houſe.

Gentlemen, the next Fact that the Counſel for the Plaintiff have thought proper to apply their Evidence to, has been to ſhew that this Boy, at the Time he was taken from Mr. Tighe's, was ſent out of the Kingdom by the Procurement of the now Defendant, and that by Force, about five Months after Lord Altham's Death. He, as has been ſaid, died in November 1727, and the Boy was taken away the February following. And, Gentlemen, as this ſeems to be a controverted Fact, I ſhall mention the Evidence particularly. The firſt Account is that which Purcell gives, That after the Child had the Small-Pox, the preſent Defendant came to his Houſe, enquiring after this Boy; that he there called him the Son of Lord Altham his Brother; that the Boy cried, and ſaid he was afraid of his Uncle Captain Annesley; and that Captain Annesley told Purcell he would ſpeak to my Lord, and induce him to make him a handſome Conſideration for his Care of the Child. Some Time after this, and after my Lord Altham's Death, the Boy came to Purcell, and told him, his Miſtreſs had ſent him, for that a Man had come to his Houſe from his Uncle, deſiring him to go to the Houſe of one Jones in the Market; and that ſhe deſired Mr. Purcell to go along with him: He tells you, that he went thither, and that he met this Captain Annesley there, and the Expreſſions that were made uſe of by him in order to take away this Boy; and he tells you that he reſcued and carried home the Boy. The next Account that they give you, is by one Marks Byrne, a Conſtable at that Time, who tells you, that he was applied to by one John Donnelly, who told him that he had a Jobb, for which he was to have a Guinea, which was to fett this Boy, and bring him to Lord Altham; that accordingly they carried him to the Houſe of this ſame Jones; that Lord Altham was there; that he accuſed him of ſtealing a Silver Spoon, and ordered them to take away the thieving Son of a Whore; that accordingly they took him away, and in carrying him to George's Quay, as they were directed, that there was a Crowd gathered; that the Boy cried; that they put him in a Hackney-Coach which they met near Eſſex-Bridge, and carried him to the Place appointed on George's Quay; that my Lord followed on Foot; and there he tells you, that he ſaw one Reily, a Servant of Lord Altham's, and that my Lord went into the Boat with Reily, the Boy, and Donnelly; that they went off, and that he ſaw them go to the End of the Wall. The next Perſon produced was Reily, and he agrees in the material Circumſtances, which were, that he ſaw this Boy on George's Quay, that he went into the Boat with my Lord and the Boy, and that my Lord and the Boy went on Board the Ship; that the Boy was left behind in the Ship, and by the Time the Boat returned it was Night. Gentlemen, there is, to be ſure, a Difficulty to reconcile the Teſtimony of this Reily; but I ſhall ſpeak to that, when I ſpeak to the Objections made to the Witneſſes.

The next Evidence they produced on this Head was, to ſhew that a Ship called the James of Dublin, Thomas Hendry Maſter, ſailed over the Bar of Dublin, the 30th of April 1728; the Ship was entered in the Cuſtom-Houſe Book the 18th, and the Evidence afterwards ſhew that it ſailed the 30th. Mr. Babe, the proper Officer, produced the Book, and there this Entry did appear, with this Addition, that the Entry was made by Mr. Stevenſon, a Merchant in this Town. The next Step they took was to ſhew from the Books of Mr. Stevenſon, that this Boy did actually ſail on board that Ship, and produced Mr. Cromie, at that Time Clerk to Mr. Stevenſon, in order to ſhew you that this Boy did actually ſail on board this Ship: He tells you, that this Ship was partly freighted by Mr. Stevenſon, that it was bound to Philadelphia, that the principal Part of the Cargoe were Men and Maid Servants; he produced Mr. Stevenſon's Book of Entries, and this Book being read as Evidence, the Title of it was, An Account of Men and Women Servants on board the Ship James, which went over the Bar of Dublin the 30th of April 1728. Gentlemen, there was a long Liſt of Names, and among the reſt was that of James Anneſley; and, Gentlemen, this Cromie was croſs-examined as to the Manner of putting Servants on board, in order to ſhew you that it was impoſſible this James Annesley could have been put on board without his free Conſent; for that the Way of Dealing was to have Servants indented before the Lord Mayor, and the Cuſtom was to have one Part of the Indentures delivered to the Servant, the other to the Maſter of the Ship, and the Name enrolled in the Tholſel-Books: But it appeared from his Evidence, that the Liſt produced and kept by the Merchant, was not taken from the Indentures, or the Books of the Town Clerk, but that the Method of taking ſuch Liſt was, that the Night before the Ship ſailed, the Clerk of Mr. Stevenſon went on board, and the Maſter gave him the Names of the Perſons on board, and from that Liſt this Entry was made in the Merchant's Books: So that from this Account, it was very poſſible for Perſons to be ſent away that had never indented. In order to ſhew that this Boy was really indented, the Counſel for the Defendant produced the original Book kept by the Town-Clerk, in which are entered, by the Town-Clerk, the Names of the Persons who indent for foreign Service, before my Lord Mayor; in which was entered the Name James Hensley, and insisted that it was the same Person, tho' wrong spelt; and that the Plaintiff had indented in the regular Way, and was carried off, not by Force, but according to Law. But, Gentlemen, I must observe to you, that the Manner of Indenting is such, that wherever a Person of tender Years, as this Child was, being about thirteen Years old, was to indent, it is always expected that the Parent, or some body that can answer for that Child, should be there consenting to that Indenture, or that some Account should be given concerning him. I mention this, because no Evidence has been produced by the Defendant, to shew who were present; and you will consider whether it was not in the Power of Lord Anglesea to have produced the Town-Clerk himself who made the Entry, and is now living, and whose Knowledge of the Anglesea Family was such, that upon his Memory he might have given some Light into this Affair, and probably could not have mis-spelt the Name of Annesley, with which he was well acquainted.

But, to put this Fact out of doubt, the Plaintiff produced Shelcross Ashe, an Attorney of the Court of Common Pleas, who had been employed by the Defendant the Earl of Anglesea; who tells you, that upon the Defendant's coming to the Title of Lord Altham, by his Brother's Death, the Boy was mentioned to his Lordship by a Gentleman in Ashe's Presence; that his Lordship complained of the Reproaches he underwent on the Boy's Account; and in particular, said that Hawkins, who was King at Arms, had refused to enroll his Title as Lord Altham, upon the Clamour made by this Boy; and thereupon called him Impostor, Vagabond, and he believes, Bastard: That Ashe then told his Lordship, if the Boy were a Vagabond, he might be obliged to indent before my Lord Mayor at the Tholsel, and be transported. And Ashe further says, that some Time after, he was again in Company with the Defendant at a Tavern, with others of the Defendant's Intimates, when my Lord Anglesea, then Lord Altham, told the Witness he was gone, meaning the Boy; which, coupled with the former Evidence, shews, as was insisted, that the Defendant intended to put the Plaintiff out of the Way; and gives Credit to the Witnesses, who for his Lordship executed such Intention, as before related.

The Plaintiff went further, to shew that the Defendant not only occasioned this Person's being taken away, but upon the Plaintiff's Return into England, a Misfortune befalling him, by the accidental killing a Man at Staines; that Opportunity was laid hold of to prosecute him, and under that Colour to take away his Life; for which Purpose one John Giffard has been produced. He appears to have been an Attorney of the Court of Common-Pleas in England, and Agent for the Defendant. Some Difficulty was made whether his Evidence should be received; but the Court having admitted him to be examined, with Liberty to disclose what did not come to his Knowledge as Agent for the Defendant; You, Gentlemen, will not consider whether the divulging Conversation be what is called honourable between Man and Man, or whether the ill Treatment this Person received from the Defendant has induced him to appear to give Testimony in this Cause, but whether what he has sworn be true.

This Witness speaks to the Declarations made by my Lord Anglesea, at the Time an Appeal was depending between him and Captain Annesley, before the Lords in England; upon which Occasion, the Defendant said, that it was better for him to throw up his Titles, which he did not value, and to give up them and the Estate, upon Terms, to James Annesley the Plaintiff, whose Right they were; that he would go over to France, and live there, where he should be much easier and happier than he was at that Time. He tells you, that this was repeated more than once; that it was not a sudden Resolution, but the Result of deliberate Consideration, accompanied with another Act, which was that of taking a Person into his House, to teach him the French Tongue, to qualify him to live in that Kingdom. And the Witness tells you farther, that the Reason why this Project was dropt, was the accidental Homicide committed by the Plaintiff; upon which Lord Anglesea changed his Purpose, and resolved to prosecute him; and frequently declared, that he would give 10,000*l.* if he could get him hanged, for then he should be easy in his Titles and Estate; and that this Prosecution cost Lord Anglesea Eight hundred Pounds. As I shall not touch this Part of the Evidence again, I must desire you, Gentlemen, to consider, whether the Words sworn to be spoke by Lord Anglesea, as to giving up his Estate, may not be accounted for as the rash Expressions of a Man distressed in his Circumstances; but, Gentlemen, if you believe the other two Facts, that is, that Lord Altham did spirit away this Youth, and that he did carry on this Prosecution against him, the Question will then be, what Influence they ought to have upon this Cause? And how far they ought to conclude against the Defendant as to the Fact in Question, will deserve your Consideration, that the Plaintiff may not suffer by the illegal Acts of the Defendant, nor the Defendant be injured by your relying too much upon presumptive Evidence. If the Defendant did send away the Plaintiff, that Absence must be imputed to the Defendant. The Suppressor and the Destroyer of Evidence are to be considered in the same Light the Law considers a Spoliator, as having destroyed the proper Evidence; and against him defective Proof, so far as he has occasioned such Defect, shall be received, and every thing presumed to make it effectual. Nay, I think you may by Law go farther, and if the Plaintiff has given probable Evidence of his being the legitimate Son of Lord Altham, the Proof may be turned on the Defendant, and you may expect Satisfaction from him, that Lord Altham his Brother died without Issue; and this on account of that Evidence which the Plaintiff must be supposed to have lost, by the Defendant's having so many Years put it out of the Plaintiff's Power to assert his Right. And you will also consider whether these Acts are not Evidence to satisfy you, that the Defendant, in his own Thoughts and Way of Reasoning, considered the staying of the Boy here, as what might some way prejudice his Title. But whether, as insisted upon by the Plaintiff's Counsel, you ought to take this as an Admission on the Part of the Defendant, that the Plaintiff was the lawful Son of Lord Altham, will deserve further Consideration. Undoubtedly, there is a violent Presumption, because no Man is supposed to be wicked without Design, and the Design in this Act must be some way or other relative to the Title; but whether or no it was the Opinion of the Trouble he might have from this Lad, that induced him to do this Act, or a Consciousness that the Lad was the Son of Lord Altham, must be left to your Determination; keeping in your Mind, that it, though violent, is but a Presumption, and that the Defendant has an undoubted Title, unless it be proved that there be a Son of his elder Brother now living.

Taking the Influence of these wicked Acts with you, I shall now briefly mention the Nature of the Defence; which has been, first of all, by many Witnesses to shew that the Reputation of the Country was against there being such a Child. Col. Lostus, who lived within eight Miles of Dunmaine, who was a Person of that Rank and Distinction in the Country as was likely to hear it, says, he never heard of it. Col. Palliser, Mr. and Mrs. Lambert, Mr. Palliser, Mrs. Giffard, have all gone likewise to the same Point, and say, that they never heard of a Miscarriage. But their not hearing of a Miscarriage, has little Weight, because things of that Nature are conducted with Privacy, and the Report of them seldom reaches far. In the next Place, they have produced the Persons, who, they say, were the Servants of the Family at the Time that this Birth must have been: Mrs. Heath, my Lady's Woman, Rolph the Butler, who was there during that Time, Anthony Dyer, who was a Gentleman to my Lord, Martin Nief and Owen Cavenagh, Servants in the Family. Gentlemen, Mrs. Heath, Rolph and Dyer, are all positive that there was no Child, and that there could be no Child without their Knowledge; and Mrs. Heath goes so far as to say, there never was so much as a Pregnancy. These are positive Evidence, that stand in direct Contradiction to the Plaintiff's Witnesses. They have also produced William Knapper and William Elmes to the same Point, both conversant at Dunmaine: William Knapper in particular tells you, he was employed by the late Earl of Anglesea to sell the Ross Estate, which came to him upon Lord Altham's Death without Issue, and that though he made a hundred Articles for Leases of the Ross Estate to the Tenants, he never heard one Objection made that there was a Son. They then went into another Piece of Evidence, which, if true, stands in the Place of positive Evidence, because inconsistent with Lady Altham's being delivered of a Child at the Time deposed; and that was, my Lord and Lady Altham's going to Wexford at the Spring Assizes, held the 16th of April, 1715, and returning from thence to Dunmaine, and going soon after to Dublin: Mrs. Giffard's Account is this, that there being some Men to be tried as Pretender's Men, the Curiosity of Lady Altham proposed a Journey to Wexford; that she accompanied my Lady in the Chariot; that my Lord, Mrs. Heath and Rolph, rode; she says, when they came to Wexford, they lodged at the House of one Sweeny; that they went into Court and stayed there during the Trial, and that Mr. Cæsar Colclough sat by them part of the Time; that they stayed a Week in Wexford, and then went Home; and, as appears by the Examinations of Heath and Rolph, they went to Dublin in a very short Time after, and stayed there all the Summer; Heath swears it positively, and Rolph that they stay'd there 'till he went away. Now, Gentlemen, if this Fact could be established, it would undoubtedly put an End to the Controversy of this Day; because, if Lady Altham was at the Assizes of Wexford, which appears to be the 16th of April; that she continued there a Week, and went back and stayed but two or three Weeks at Dunmaine, and thence went to Dublin, where she lived the Remainder of the Summer; and this being at the Time when she was supposed to have been delivered of the Plaintiff; you will consider if both can be true. But this Fact has been disputed, and in this Manner; first of all, Ker, who was Clerk to my Lord Chief Justice Foster, who went that Circuit, tells you, that he does not remember to have seen any Ladies there; this is not a positive Proof, but it is a circumstantial one: The next is Cæsar Colclough, who swears that he does not remember to have seen them, and from the Business he was engaged in, the Gentleman on Trial being his Relation, he does not believe he sat by any Woman that Day. There were also two positive Witnesses produced to prove Lady Altham was not there, which were Turner and Higginson. Turner tells you, that he was at the House of Dunmaine, when my Lord went to that Assizes; that he saw him get into the Coach, and that he saw my Lady in the House after my Lord was gone. Higginson tells you likewise, that on the Tuesday of this Assizes, he was at Dunmaine, and the Occasion that brought him thither (which makes him certain to the Time) was, to desire Lord Altham to send somebody to Innisworthy for the 28 Pounds Arrear of Rent, which his Son was to bring there. He tells you, that he saw my Lady, that she was undressed, and that he believes she was with Child, and drank to her safe Delivery. And there is one Circumstance further, which you should take with you, that Mrs. Heath says in her Account, the Sister of Mrs. Giffard went with them; tho' Mrs. Giffard said, No one went with them but the Persons she named, but did not name her Sister.

The Defendant has also, in order to account for what has been said by the Plaintiff's Witnesses, as to the Child taken in by Lord Altham after the Separation, and who was carried by him from Place to Place, and treated as his Son, examined the several Witnesses produced by them, who were acquainted with Lord Altham and his Family, during the Time the Boy was with him, to prove that the Boy kept by Lord Altham was the Son of Joan Landy by Lord Altham, as was supposed; and that he was always considered and treated by that Lord as his Bastard. And thus, Gentlemen, you see how the Witnesses produced in this Cause stand, as to the most material Circumstances, in direct Opposition to each other; so that the one or the other must speak false; which of them have done so, God only knows. You, Gentlemen, must, after taking the whole into your Consideration, say which, in your Opinion, deserves Credit. I shall now take notice of the Objections to the Witnesses on each Side.

The Objections that have been made to the Plaintiff's Witnesses, as to their Uncertainty with regard to Time and Place, and other Circumstances to which they were examined, were also made to the Witnesses for the Defendant; and if an Imputation arises from thence, you will consider whether it be not equal on both Sides. In the next Place, an Objection is made to the Condition of the Evidence for the Plaintiff, that they are Servants of the lowest Stations, and meanest Condition. You will consider how far that Objection ought to lessen, much less take away the Credit of their Testimony: Servants about the Family, tho' in the meanest Stations, were likely to know such particular Facts as they have given Evidence of. But on the other Side, you will conſider that the Fact in Queſtion, is a ſingle Fact, which might be put in the Mouth of any body, and which has been affirmed and denied on Oath by the reſpective Witneſſes. You will therefore, I think, find it neceſſary, with Caution, to attend to the Objections made to the Credit of the ſeveral Witneſſes that ſtand in Oppoſition to each other: For Inſtance, if the Credit of Mrs. Cole can engage your Belief as to the Circumſtance of the Miſcarriage, then Mrs. Heath has not ſworn true; becauſe ſhe has ſworn the contrary, and that to a Fact which muſt have been obſerved by her. Again, if Mrs. Cole obtains Credit, Mrs. Heath muſt be miſtaken in another Fact, though not of that Conſequence, and that is, the Removal to Dunmaine: Mrs. Cole ſays, and Mrs. Briſcoe too, that my Lord and Lady Altham went to Lodgings in Eſſex-Street; Mrs. Heath, that they went directly from Capt. Briſcoe's to Dunmaine. Now, Gentlemen, as to Mrs. Cole's and Mrs. Briſcoe's Teſtimony, there is no Imputation, other than what ariſes from their Age, at the Time to which their Teſtimony relates, when the eldeſt of them could not be above Thirteen by her own Account, and ſhe ſpeaks to a Fact, which Mr. Prime-Serjeant thinks was not likely to engage the Attention of ſo young a Perſon, I mean the Place to which they removed; but you will conſider, whether the Removal of my Lord and his Lady from their Family to another Place in Dublin, eſpecially as an Intimacy was kept up between them, be not ſufficient to anſwer that Objection. As to the Circumſtance of the Miſcarriage, there ſhe is extremely poſitive, and probably the Curioſity of Girls of her Age, in theſe Matters, exceeds that of grown Perſons. There was an Obſervation made as to the Word Abortion, but I think there can be no great Weight laid upon that, the Term may have been learnt ſince. There has been alſo a Witneſs produced to diſcredit Mrs. Heath, as to the very Subſtance of her Teſtimony; what he has ſaid muſt be freſh in your Memory, but you will remember the ſeeming Art made uſe of by him, to ſhew he was compelled to give his Teſtimony. Beſides, his Teſtimony is not ſupported by Circumſtances, but is another Inſtance of Oath againſt Oath.

Gentlemen, The next Witneſs I ſhall take Notice of, is Rolph: (I don't ſpeak regularly to them, intending only to take up the moſt material) He certainly delivered his Teſtimony in a very clear Manner; he gave an Account of his coming to and living in the Family, and of his Continuance in it, and Manner of leaving it; and there is one Circumſtance that gives Credit to Rolph, as he is the only one that can be ſaid to receive Credit from the Witneſſes on the other Side. The Plaintiff's Witneſs, John Scott, has ſaid, That Rolph was Butler before, and continued after my Lady's Delivery; which agrees with Rolph's Evidence, but varies from all who have ſpoke to the Birth; who ſay, that Rolph was gone; that Magher lived there at the Time of Doyle's and Murphy's being there. Dennis Redmond does ſay, there was ſuch a Servant as Rolph, but that he was gone before the Delivery. But then you will conſider what Figure this Rolph made on his Croſs-Examination; ſuch an abſolute Uncertainty as to every Thing but what he was brought to diſcloſe, and his Readineſs to give Evidence on one Side of the Queſtion, neceſſarily induce Suſpicion; and you will conſider his Attempt to throw a Reflection on the Plaintiff, as if thoſe concerned for him would have tampered with Rolph: But the Story carries an Improbability in it, that a Man ſhould ſend Victuals before him, and come and offer to a Stranger what was not in his Power to give, and that in ſuch an open Manner.

[Here Mr. Baron Mounteney ſpoke to the Lord Chief Baron.]

Gentlemen, My Brother Mounteney mentions one Thing, which I am miſtaken in, if he is right; he ſays, That when Mr. Mac Kercher made the Offer of a Lieutenancy to Rolph, his own Company were only preſent; I do apprehend there was not only the Company of Mac-Kercher, but the Company that was with Rolph. Gentlemen, if I miſtake the Evidence on either Side, impute it to my Memory, for I have no Intention to miſrepreſent, and ſhould be extremely glad if any Body would ſet me right: When you come to look upon your Notes, you will ſee how this Fact ſtands. But there is one Thing I would obſerve as to the Teſtimony of Rolph, and that is, that Mrs. Giffard and he differ: Rolph has ſaid, that the new Road leading from the Houſe of Dunmaine to the Cabbin, was made for the Benefit of going to Mrs. Giffard's and Colonel Palliſer's, and that Mrs. Giffard always went that Way: Mrs. Giffard ſays, that ſhe never went that Way, but always by the Bridge. Theſe are ſlight Circumſtances; but however, where Witneſſes ſtand in ſuch direct Oppoſition to each other, they deſerve ſome Attention.

Anthony Dyer, Gentlemen, is another material Evidence for the Defendant. But you will conſider how far his Credit is affected by what I am going to mention. The Witneſſes on both Sides have ſaid, that after the Separation of Lord and Lady Altham, the Child, be it legitimate or illegitimate, came into the Houſe of Dunmaine. William Elmes fixes it to three Weeks after, and another to a Month; but this Man ſays, that he was there at the Separation, and three Quarters of a Year after; and ſwears, there was no Child in the Houſe during that Time. As to the poſitive Evidence on the Part of the Plaintiff, Doyle and Murphy, the Obſervations on them as to their coming into the Service, have been made, and are extremely ſtrong. Murphy did ſay, that Doyle came there firſt; ſhe afterwards changed, and ſaid, ſhe came there before Doyle: You will conſider alſo the Manner in which they give their Evidence. And in regard to Mr. Palliſer, Mrs. Lambert, and thoſe People that ſpoke to the Pregnancy on the Part of the Defendant, they have gone ſo far, that if you believe them, there could not have been a Miſcarriage. There is one Thing I forgot to mention, to ſtrengthen the Evidence of Mrs. Cole, and weaken that of Mrs. Heath, which is, that Lambert ſaid, that Sutton the Surgeon was ſent for to Roſs, and ſtaid at Dunmaine a Fortnight: Now when you come to compare the Times of his being ſent for, and the Miſcarriage, you will conſider, whether it does not tally pretty near with the Time when Mrs. Cole gives an Account of the Miſcarriage; and yet Mrs. Heath ſays, he never did attend my Lady.

There is one general Obſervation to be made on all the Evidence; and that is, that there is a Forwardneſs, an Inclination to go on to ſerve their Party, on both Sides, and that they want that Candidneſs which gives a Credit to Witneſſes; I ſay not this on either Side, but you will conſider whether it is not an Obſervation that runs thro' the whole. I ſhall not trouble you with reſpect to the Surgeon. The Objection to him ariſes from the Improbability of his own Teſtimony. As to Chriſtopher Brown, who was one of the Servants attending at Dinner at the Chriſtening, ſuppoſing what he ſays could be credited, you will conſider how that Man was miſtaken in the Deſcription of the Houſe. And you will permit me to obſerve, that there is a great Difference between not recollecting Circumſtances, and a Witneſs ſwearing to thoſe that are falſe; the not recollecting may conſiſt with Integrity, the ſwearing to a Falſhood never can, nor can you give any Credit to ſuch a Witneſs; becauſe you cannot ſay that he is wrong as to this, and right as to that Part of his Evidence. With regard to the ſeveral Witneſſes who ſay the Child, from firſt to laſt, was not only reputed, but called a Baſtard, and Joan Landy's Child, and that the Boy knew it, and ſent his Duty to her as his Mother; you will conſider how conſiſtent that is with what William Elmes and others have ſaid, who would have it underſtood that my Lord would not for five hundred Pounds that the Child ſhould know his Mother; and that my Lord ordered them to ſet the Dogs upon her if ſhe came near the Houſe; and yet thoſe who ſpeak of him at Kinnea and Carrickduff ſay, that my Lord has often curſed him, for having too much of his Mother's Blood in him. How theſe different Accounts can be reconciled, you muſt conſider. There is one Witneſs more on this Head that I muſt take notice of, and that is Elizabeth MacMullen; and ſhe would have it underſtood, that out of the Mouth of the Boy himſelf, at the Funeral of his Father, upon being aſked by her, who was his Mother, he ſaid Joan Landy. Gentlemen, you will compare this with the Teſtimony of Mr. Buſhe and Mr. Tighe; the Boy, when he lived with Mr. Buſhe, perſiſted that he was my Lord's own Son, and the ſame at Mr. Tighe: Now, if the Boy had once received the Notion of his being the lawful Son of Lord Altham, you will obſerve the Improbability there is of his ſaying to her, a Stranger, I am the Son of Joan Landy. I will carry this a little farther, and that with regard to the Letter, ſhe ſays, was wrote by her, giving an Account of Lord Altham's Death; if this Circumſtance be falſe, that Letter muſt have been fictitious, and of later Date.

I have now mentioned the Evidence on both Sides; and from what I have obſerved to you, it does appear, that here is ſuch a Claſhing of Witneſſes, ſuch contrary Evidence, that though ſome Circumſtances might be reconciled, yet others will remain irreconcileable; and therefore I muſt, and I think, you Gentlemen will be obliged to conſider the Circumſtances that will throw a Probability or Improbability upon the Teſtimony you have heard. The ſtrong Circumſtances which induce Probability in Favour of the Plaintiff are thoſe I have mentioned, of ſpiriting him away, and afterwards attempting, by an unjuſt Proſecution, to take away his Life; to which I have before ſpoke at large, and need not repeat. On the Part of the Defendant, the Circumſtances are of a different Kind; and thoſe are ſuch as relate to this Family, from the Beginning of the Tranſaction to the End, and ariſe from the Quality and Circumſtances of the Perſons, which, as has been urged, muſt have rendered a Fact of this Kind too notorious ever to have been doubted, eſpecially in this Kingdom: That it muſt have been known to the Relations of this Family in England, whoſe Eſtate and Honours were to be enjoyed by that Son; that my Lord Altham himſelf ought to have made it publick; and that it was the Intereſt of Lady Altham, that the Duke of Buckingham, her Father, ſhould know that ſhe was with Child. Again, you will conſider the Improbability ariſing from the Place where he was born; at Dunmaine, in a remote Part of the Country, attended by a Country Midwife and the Surgeon you have ſeen. Ladies, ſay they, of her Rank would not ſubmit to it, and are uſually placed, on ſuch Occaſions, where they can have the beſt Aſſiſtance; and the Conſequence of a Child to this Family particularly required it. In the next Place, you will conſider, whether there be not a farther Improbability ariſing from the Nurſe; that a poor Body ſhould be employed is no Wonder, but that an infamous poor Body, rendered infamous, as was ſuppoſed, by my Lord, and in that very Place, ſhould be taken by my Lady to nurſe her legitimate Child, is ſcarce to be accounted for. There is nothing ſaid to reconcile this, but the Teſtimony given by Laffan; and ſhe tells you, that this was a Secret not diſcloſed to my Lady, till after the Separation: Indeed, if you believe this, the Improbability will decreaſe; but you will find it difficult to ſuppoſe my Lady the only Perſon in the Family to whom this was a Secret. The Place where the Child was nurſed has been alſo urged; but the Difficulty is not that a Nobleman's Child was nurſed at a poor Man's Houſe, but whether that Houſe was fit to receive a Child intended to be preſerved; and therefore the Probability or Improbability in this Inſtance, will depend upon the Credit you ſhall give to the different Accounts of the Cabbin where this Nurſe lived. It has been further ſaid, that the Sponſors at the Chriſtening of this Child, ought to have been of high Rank, and from among the Relations of this Noble Family. Again, this Child, after the Separation, was removed from Place to Place, and we have not heard that Lady Altham, either by herſelf or Friends, took any Care or Notice of him, except the ſingle Inſtance at Roſs. Was it not Lady Altham's Intereſt to have acquainted the Duke of Buckingham that ſhe had a Son by her Lord; that he had ſent him away, and put this Child into the Care of his Whore? And was it not probable, if this Notice had been given, that Care would have been taken of this Child by ſome of the Family? The little Care taken of his Education by my Lord, has alſo been urged. In Anſwer to which, you have been reminded of the Character and Circumſtances of Lord Altham. Again, my Lord's parting with this Child, or rather expoſing him, in the Manner you have heard, cannot, as it is ſaid, be accounted for, ſuppoſing him to be the real Son of Lord Altham: But this is alſo attempted to be anſwered, by the Influence of Miſs Gregory, and her repreſenting him as a Baſtard, in reſpect to my Lord, though born in Wedlock: But, ſay the Counſel for the Defendant, ſuppoſing the Plaintiff to be, what they have endeavoured to prove, a Baſtard, the whole may be reconciled. But if the Inhumanity of expoſing this Child raiſes the Objection, you, Gentlemen, will conſider, whether a Perſon capable of treating his own Baſtard in that Manner, may not be ſuppoſed capable of being worked up, by a bad Woman, to turn his legitimate Child out of Doors. The Inhumanity ſeems equal in both Caſes, as both are entitled to the Care and Protection of the Father. I had almoſt given the Preference to the natural Child, as the legitimate does not ſtand in equal Want of it; the Mother, the Family may take care of him, but the other is a Caſt-off. But, Gentlemen, though this Objection may be removed, with reſpect to the Father, it makes the Objection tion very ſtrong when applied to the Mother: The Sufferings of the Child in this Manner, were what one would expect ſhould have excited and called for the Mother's peculiar Care: That ſhe was not ignorant of it, you will gather from the Teſtimony of Catherine O'Neile; and you will conſider the Manner in which the Mother is ſuppoſed to treat that Child: "I ſhould be glad to ſee my Son, but I know it would coſt the Servant that brought him his Bread." It muſt be a weak Affection that could, for that Reaſon, be prevailed on not to ſee the Child. This Lady lived two Years after the Death of her Huſband, and we do not find any Evidence of her Care for this Son; which has been urged alſo to ſhew, that he was not her Son. Again, it was her Intereſt to take notice of this Child; it has been mentioned, and not denied, that there was an Eſtate of Twelve Hundred Pounds a-Year that went away on the Death of Lord Altham, and would have gone to this Son, if legitimate. It was inſiſted upon, that Lady Altham might have applied for the Guardianſhip of her Son, and have had a good Allowance made by the Lord Chancellor, for the Diſcharge of that Truſt, which ſhe wanted. I muſt alſo obſerve the additional Weight they gave to this Objection, from the Teſtimony that Welſh gave, of her declaring that her Heart would break, were it not that ſhe had a promiſing young Son, who would be a Support to her in her old Age. Alderman King, at whoſe Houſe ſhe reſided fourteen Months, a Man of Integrity and Truth, whoſe Credit cannot be controverted, ſays, he never heard her mention her having a Son, though the Intimacy of dining at one Table for that Time, muſt probably have afforded frequent Opportunities of doing ſo. And whether a Woman, under the Affliction of a Separation, and her unhappy Circumſtances, could have concealed ſuch a Fact, is worthy your Attention.

There was another Matter urged, as an Improbability, from the Teſtimony of Colonel Wall. I ſhall ſtate to you how that Fact ſtands. Colonel Wall ſaid, he had taken an Opinion for Lord Altham, as to the Power he had over the Angleſea Eſtate: That, according to that Opinion, Lord Altham was Tenant in Tail, and might have barred his Iſſue, and by that Means, have had it in his Power to raiſe more by the Sale of his reverſionary Intereſt, ſuppoſing he was only Tenant for Life, expectant on the Death of the then Earl. But the ſame Witneſs alſo ſaid, that he would not, upon the Credit of this Opinion, carry the Title to Market, and that, notwithſtanding this Opinion, he was very angry with his Brother, the now Defendant, for refuſing to join with him in ſelling their Reverſions. So that Lord Altham's reverſionary Intereſt being certain, and his other depending on an undecided Queſtion in Law; you will conſider, whether, upon theſe Views, he was more likely to have made publick, or concealed his having a Son.

Having now gone through with what I propoſed to ſay upon the Evidence, I ſhall only in general take notice, that it will be proper for you, Gentlemen, while you are conſidering this Caſe, to take with you the Characters of the Perſons Actors in it; and thence to judge what was, or was not to be expected from them. Again, if there are, as I ſuppoſe there will be, of the Plaintiff's Witneſſes to whom you will not give Credit, you will conſider, whether the Plaintiff in juſtice ought to be affected thereby: You will conſider him as reduced, by the Defendant, to the Neceſſity of making uſe of ſuch Evidence as offered; and in ſuch Caſe, bad Witneſſes may have obtruded themſelves, or Art may have been uſed to put them in his Way; ſo that unleſs it appeared that the Plaintiff made uſe of them, knowing them to be bad, they ought not to be placed to his Account. You will alſo conſider, that though you have only the Defendant before you, yet the Remainder-men, who do not derive under the Defendant, are to be affected by your Verdict, and ought not to be poſtponed, unleſs you are ſatisfied that the Plaintiff is the legitimate Son of Lord Altham: Therefore you muſt conſider, (taking the Proofs, the Probability and the ſeveral Things together) whether the Plaintiff be the lawful Son or not? If he be, you muſt find for the Plaintiff; if not, for the Defendant.

Gentlemen, I forgot to mention the Evidence of my Lord Mount-Alexander, and of Mr. Medlicot, concerning Lord Altham's Declarations, as to his having a Son. Lord Mount-Alexander told you of an Expreſſion of Lord Altham's to one Mr. Crow, an Expreſſion not very eaſy to be underſtood: "My Wife has got a Son, which will make that Rake my Brother's Noſe ſwell." Which has been applied to the Son now in queſtion: You will conſider, whether it concludes neceſſarily to that, or whether Lord Altham might not have, in his Imagination, ſome other Child begot on the Body of my Lady. There was an Intimation of a Son by one Segrave, who might be then living; how far this Rumour was in my Lord's Mind, is hard to ſay; but if this was not in his Thoughts, the Expreſſion is extraordinary: "My Wife has got a Son." This might be ſaid of ſuch a Son; but you will conſider whether it was a Manner of Expreſſion for a Son of his own, born in his own Houſe. As to Mr. Medlicot, the Words ſworn to by him were, that my Lord ſhould ſay, "I have no Child, nor know not that I ever ſhall, I do not care if the Devil had the Eſtate." If my Lord looked upon the Son by his Lady to have been begot by another Man, conſider, if the Words import more than this: I have no Son, no Son that I ſuppoſe to be my own, I do not care if the Devil had the Eſtate.

But taking each Sett of Words as contended for by each Side, all that can be ſaid is, that my Lord has at different Times varied his Manner of ſpeaking on this Subject; whether you can find out the Motives inducing him ſo to do, or can draw any Concluſion therefrom, muſt be left to your Conſideration. I ſhall think myſelf happy, if any thing collected by me can aſſiſt you in the Diſcovery of Truth.

Mr. Baron Mounteney.] Gentlemen of the Jury, My Lord Chief Baron hath ſummed up this Evidence in ſo full, ſo judicious, and ſo maſterly a Manner, that it would be a very improper Taſk for me to attempt to go again with you over the Evidence at large.

I ſhall therefore confine myſelf to ſome of the more capital Parts of the Caſe: and (although I am extremely ſenſible in how inaccurate and diſjointed a Manner I ſhall lay my Thoughts before you, yet) with the Hope of ſtriking out even the ſmalleſt Spark of Light, which may help to guide you through this dark Affair, I ſhall endeavour to recollect a few Remarks on thoſe Parts of the Evidence which ſtrike my Underſtanding in the moſt forcible Manner.

And, Gentlemen, I ſhall take up the Caſe where the Evidence for the Plaintiff, and the Obſervations of the Defendant's Counſel, cloſed; I mean, the Kidnapping of the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, and the Proſecution for Murder carried on againſt him by the Defendant.

The latter of theſe two Facts I ſhall conſider firſt: It is proved by John Giffard, the Attorney employed to carry it on; and in the Courſe of his Evidence, Gentlemen, ſeveral Things occur, which though not relative to that Proſecution, are yet extremely material for your Conſideration.

In the firſt Place, Gentlemen, he relates to you a Converſation between the Defendant and himſelf ſo long ago as the Month of March 1741, and the Occaſion upon which that Converſation happened. He tells you, that at that Time it was the common Topic of Diſcourſe, that Mr. Annesley was returned from the Weſt-Indies to aſſert his Right; and that the Defendant my Lord Angleſea was at that Time embarraſſed with a Variety of Law-Suits—that my Lord expreſſed great Uneaſineſs upon both Accounts—and thereupon told him, that "he ſhould be very glad to ſend to "Mr. Anneſley; and if he would allow him 2 or 3000 l. a-Year, he would "ſurrender up to him his Titles and Eſtates, and go live in France; for he "ſhould be much happier than to be ſo tormented, and had rather his Brother's "Son ſhould have it than any body elſe; for if Jemmy had the Eſtate, he ſhould "live eaſy in France, for it was his Right, and he would ſurrender it to him; "---that he did not value the Title---he would go live in France; and that he "might live the eaſier there, would ſend for a French Maſter to converſe with "him in that Language."

The Counſel for the Defendant, Gentlemen, with great Art and Ingenuity endeavour to avoid the Force of this Evidence: And in the firſt Place, they repreſent this Declaration of my Lord with regard to a Compromiſe and his going to France, as an haſty, paſſionate Expreſſion, flowing from his Uneaſineſs of Mind, on account of the ill Situation of his Affairs, and his Reſentment againſt the Anneſleys.

But, Gentlemen, upon Giffard's Evidence, this could not poſſibly be the Caſe; for he tells you, it was my Lord's Reſolution---that he continued in that Reſolution from the Time of the firſt Converſation, which was before the 10th of March 1741, to May 1742---that in purſuance of that Reſolution, he actually did (as he had declared he would) ſend for a Perſon, one Stephen Hayes, and had him in the Houſe, to converſe with him in French; and that he, the Witneſs, was preſent forty Times.

The next Thing, Gentlemen, ſuggeſted by the Defendant's Counſel was, that my Lord Angleſea (in his then uneaſy Situation, and ſo angry with the Annesleys as Giffard ſaid he was) might poſſibly be induced to wiſh for ſuch an Accommodation as was mentioned with the Leſſor of the Plaintiff, not through a Conſciouſneſs of his being the legitimate Son of the late Lord Altham, but with a View of gratifying his Reſentment by diſappointing the Annesleys, and at the ſame Time of promoting his own Intereſt by ſecuring to himſelf a larger Share of the Eſtate than would otherwiſe remain to him.

But, Gentlemen, when you conſider the following Part of Giffard's Evidence, you will find, that neither can this Interpretation hold: Becauſe, if this had been the Scheme, my Lord muſt certainly have perſevered in it. Whereas, upon the unhappy Accident of Mr. Annesley's killing a Man, this ſuppoſed Scheme is abandoned, and another (much more beneficial, as Giffard told you, for the Defendant, and abſolutely deſtructive of the other) is immediately embraced; which was, to carry on a Proſecution againſt Mr. Annesley for that Fact, and if poſſible, to get him hanged.

Conſider now, Gentlemen, the Evidence concerning that Proſecution, and the Circumſtances attending it.

The firſt of May is the Day on which the Murder is in the Indictment laid to be committed.---On the ſecond, Lord Angleſea retains Giffard to go down to Staines to collect Evidence, and to carry on the Proſecution---On the fourth, the Coroner's Inqueſt finds it Wilful Murder---Before Giffard returns from Staines, my Lord goes down to Hounslow to meet him, in order to learn how Things went on; and declares to him that he did not care if it coſt him 10,000 l. if he could get Mr. Anneſley hanged:

Quo Animo are theſe Things ſaid and done by the Defendant? Upon what Grounds was it that the noble Lord thus officiouſly interpoſed upon this Occaſion? that he ſhewed ſo much Impatience to learn how Things went on? that he actually expended ſuch large Sums of Money as Giffard expreſsly tells you he did (I think no leſs than 800 l.), and declared himſelf ready to expend much larger, in carrying on this Proſecution?---Was it for the Sake of Juſtice?---If ſo, Why all thoſe Precautions, that Contrivance, which you were told of, that my Lord might not appear to be concerned in it?---If not for the Sake of Juſtice,---then, Gentlemen, you are to conſider upon what other Principle and Motives this extraordinary Conduct can be accounted for.---And this will be the leſs difficult for you to do, when you ſhall compare theſe Facts and Circumſtances with the Reaſon given by my Lord for that remarkable Declaration of his as to the 10,000 l. which Giffard ſwears poſitively my Lord mentioned to him ---viz. He did not care if it coſt him 10,000 l. if he could get him hanged; "for then he ſhould be eaſy in his Titles and Eſtates."

There is another Part of Giffard's Evidence, which, as it ſtrikes me ſtrongly, I ſhall mention for your Conſideration; and that is, that my Lord told him (fifty Times, I think he ſaid, between the 7th of December 1741, and the 14th of July 1742, which was the Day of the Trial) that this Pretender, as he called him, was tranſported for ſtealing a Silver Spoon.

You will conſider, Gentlemen, what Weight this Circumſtance may have when coupled with the Complaints made againſt him by Miſs Gregory of thieving---with what the Witneſſes, who prove the ſeveral Attempts upon the Boy, and at laſt the actual Tranſportation of him, have told you of my Lord's repeatedly calling him a thieving Son of a Whore---and with the particular Charge which one of them ſwears my Lord made againſt him of having ſtolen from him a Silver Spoon.

I have endeavoured to ſtate to you, Gentlemen, the main Subſtance of Giffard's Evidence: In order to avoid the Force of it, the Counſel for the Defendant have ſtrongly inſiſted upon two Objections to his Credit.

The firſt is, that underſtanding, as he owns he did, that my Lord Angleſea by his Declaration as to the 10,000 l. meant, that he intended to deſtroy Mr. Annesley if he could, and that he would expend that Sum in Means to have him hang'd, he did not decline being farther engaged, but ſtill continued to carry on the Proſecution.

And indeed, Gentlemen, it does to me carry with it an Imputation upon Giffard, that he did not immediately fling up any Concern in this, or any other other Buſineſs of my Lord's, and publiſh this Declaration to all Mankind. But, Gentlemen, you will conſider, on the other hand, what Giffard hath ſaid in excuſe of himſelf. He tells you,—— "If there was any "dirty Work, he had no Hand in it." He diſtinguiſheth between a bad Pur- "poſe and the carrying on a legal Proſecution---and he tells you, that "the Coroner's Inqueſt having found the Fact wilful Murder, he thought that a "ſufficient Foundation for him to proceed."

The other Objection to his Credit is, that being an Attorney retained by Lord Angleſea to carry on this Proſecution (in any Suit between Mr. Annesley and my Lord, he ſwears poſitively he never was, nor ever expected to be retained), he comes here voluntarily to diſcloſe the Secrets of his Client.

Now, Gentlemen, as to the Proſecution, you will obſerve, that the original Diſcovery of my Lord's being concerned in it was not voluntarily made by the Witneſs; for he tells you, that he found himſelf under the neceſſity of ſuing my Lord for a large Sum of Money, which remained due to him upon his Bill of Coſts; and that, upon his ſo doing, my Lord filed a Bill againſt him in the Court of Exchequer in England, in his Anſwer and Schedule to which he was obliged to ſet forth the particular Items of his Bill of Coſts---that by this Means (as he ſuppoſeth) Mr. MacKercher got knowledge of it, and thereupon applied to him to give his Teſtimony in this Cauſe.

As to the Converſation between my Lord and him, I have already declared my Senſe ſo fully, when the Point was debated, whether Evidence of it ſhould be admitted or not, that I ſhall trouble you with a very few Words only upon it now.

Gentlemen, I can by no means allow it to be any Objection to the Credit of the Witneſs, that he voluntarily diſcloſeth that which the Court hath unanimouſly determined he was compellable to diſcloſe. And I muſt ſay this farther, that, in my Apprehenſion, Giffard could not have juſtified himſelf, either to God or Man, if he had not diſcloſed it; eſpecially, as it was a Declaration wantonly made to him, not under the Seal of Friendſhip, nor of that Confidence which is neceſſary between Client and Attorney.

Gentlemen, you are the Judges, and you will carefully conſider what Degree of Credit to give to this and every other Witneſs who hath been produced upon this Occaſion; and God forbid, that any Part of the Evidence, any Argument, or any Obſervation, ſhould have more, or leſs Weight with you than it will bear.

If you believe the Evidence of Giffard, you will then conſider, that you have an expreſs Acknowledgment of Right in the Leſſor of the Plaintiff from the Mouth of the Defendant;---that, independently of this, you have Declarations and Facts which ſtrongly import a Conſciouſneſs of that Right.——And laſtly, you will conſider what Strength this Evidence of Giffard adds (if any Strength is wanting) to the Evidence of the Kid-knapping in 1728.

That Fact, Gentlemen, ſtands poſitively and fully proved by a Multitude of Witneſſes, neither diſcredited, nor, as it was promiſed by the Defendant's Counſel, contradicted. And, indeed, if that Fact was not ſo clearly proved, the Evidence of Mr. Shelroſs Aſhe is, in my Apprehenſion, ſufficient to ſilence the leaſt Doubt about it.

You will then conſider, Gentlemen, if you believe that Evidence, whether there does not from thence ariſe the moſt violent Preſumption of the Defendant's Knowledge of Title in the Leſſor of the Plaintiff.

It is repreſented to you by the Defence, that it was notorious to every body converſant in that noble Family, that Lady Altham never had a Son in Ireland---that ſhe never miſcarried---that ſhe never was with Child. On the other hand, that it was equally notorious, that my Lord had a Son by Jean Landy—and that the Leſſor of the Plaintiff was that Son. Now, if this was the Caſe, for Heaven's ſake, Gentlemen, what Apprehenſions could the Defendant poſſibly be under from a Boy, who, if he had ſet up any Claim to the Title and Eſtate, muſt inevitably have been detected as a moſt notorious Impoſtor?

But if, on the other hand, this Boy was the legitimate Son of Lord Altham (and whether he was or not, muſt certainly lie in the Knowledge of the Defendant), then, Gentlemen, you will conſider whether this Kid-knapping and this Proſecution will not be eaſily and naturally accounted for; and whether any other adequate Cauſe than a Knowledge of his being ſo, can, with any Degree of Probability, be aſſigned for this extraordinary, this iniquitous Behaviour of the Defendant.

But, Gentlemen, the Counſel for the Defendant have told you, that the material Fact in this Caſe is the Birth; and unleſs that is inconteſtably proved, that the Plaintiff cannot poſſibly avail himſelf of any Preſumptions (an ingenious Gentleman choſe generally to call them Suſpicions) which ariſe in this Caſe.

Gentlemen, I differ entirely from them upon that Head.---If that, which to be ſure is the material Fact, were proved to you inconteſtably, the Plaintiff would then have no Occaſion for Preſumptions. Preſumptions then only are, or can be, of uſe, when the Fact in diſpute is not, nor can be, proved inconteſtably.

Gentlemen, as this Aſſertion hath been ſo ſtrongly inſiſted on, and hath had ſo much Streſs laid upon it, by every one of the learned Counſel, let me detain you a little to make a few Obſervations upon the Subject of Preſumptions.

Preſumptions, Gentlemen, have at all Times, and in all Laws which I have ever heard of, particularly in our own, been allowed to have great Weight in doubtful Caſes. Some are of ſo high a Nature, that the Law will not admit of any Proof to the contrary:---and theſe are called Preſumptions Juris & de Jure.——Again, there are Preſumptions of Law; as likewiſe what the Writers upon this Subject call Preſumptions of Man (ſuch as are collected occaſionally by Man's Underſtanding from given Facts), which, though they fall ſhort of that Strength and concluſive Force which the others have, are yet to ſtand in the Place of full Proof till the contrary is proved.

"Violenta Præſumptio is many times Plena Probatio," are the expreſs Words of my Lord Coke; and the Caſe which that great Oracle of the Law puts upon it, is this: "A Man is run through the Body with a Sword, in an "Houſe, whereof he inſtantly died——A Man is ſeen to come out of that "Houſe with a bloody Sword, and no other Man was at that time in the Houſe." Upon theſe Circumſtances, Gentlemen, a violent Preſumption ariſes, and ſhall ſtand for full Proof, unleſs the contrary can be proved, that that Man was the Murderer.

Now, Gentlemen, you will obſerve, that in the Caſe put (and many others of a like, or even inferior Kind, may be put, in which great Numbers of the King's Subjects daily ſuffer capitally), the Jury from Circumſtances infer a criminal Fact committed by the Perſon accuſed.——A fortiori it ſhould ſeem reaſonable, from a criminal Fact proved, to infer the Circumſtances and Motives leading to that Fact.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall very properly mentioned to you the Caſe of the Spoliation of a Deed.

In that Caſe, Gentlemen, it is an eſtabliſhed Maxim, "That all things "are to be preſumed in Diſfavour of the Spoliator." And you will conſider, whether a Parity of Reaſon will not operate ſtrongly in the preſent Caſe. Mr. Serjeant's Reaſoning on this Head was entirely agreeable to what I remember to have heard laid down by one of the greateſt Men who ever ſat in a Court of Judicature, viz. That Circumſtances were, in many Caſes, of greater Force, and more to be depended upon, than the Teſtimony of living Witneſſes.

Witneſſes, Gentlemen, may either be miſtaken themſelves, or wickedly intend to deceive others. God knows, we have ſeen too much of this in the preſent Cauſe on both Sides! But Circumſtances, Gentlemen, and Preſumptions, naturally, and neceſſarily, ariſing out of a given Fact, cannot lie. And, Gentlemen, it muſt be left to your Conſideration, whether in this Caſe the Preſumptions ariſing from the Kid-knapping, and the Proſecution for Murder, do not ſpeak ſtronger than a thouſand Witneſſes.

The next Obſervation, Gentlemen, which naturally ariſeth from the Kid-knapping, is, that the Leſſor of the Plaintiff is thereby thrown fifteen Years back in his Evidence.——If his Caſe had come under your Conſideration, or that of any other Jury, ſoon after the Death of the late Lord Altham, it would not have been attended with the Difficulties it now is, but muſt have received a very eaſy and clear Determination. Mrs. Shiells, who is ſworn to have brought him into the World,---the Clergyman, who is ſworn to have chriſtened him---the Perſons, who are ſworn to have been Sponſors (with many other material Witneſſes) were probably all, or moſt of them then living, and might have borne their Teſtimony.——The Account which you now have of them is, that they are all dead.

In the next place, Gentlemen, you are to conſider the Dangers to which this Gentleman lies open in aſſerting his ſuppoſed Right;—on the one hand, from Witneſſes officiouſly obtruding themſelves, and on the other, from Witneſſes who may have been induſtriouſly obtruded upon him. And if you believe that theſe Difficulties have been occaſioned by the wicked Act of the Defendant, you are then to conſider whether a much ſlighter Evidence, than might otherwiſe have been required, will not ſatisfy you, in a Caſe thus circumſtanced, of the Truth and Juſtice of his Claim.

But, Gentlemen, the Counſel for the Defendant farther tell you, "that "although you might poſſibly be induced to think the Defendant capable "of committing a wicked Act, yet that ought not to influence your Judg- "ment as to the Determination of his Property."

And, Gentlemen, I muſt agree that a wicked Act, nay repeated wicked Acts, in general, ought not to influence your Judgment.——But if the Defendant hath committed a moſt wicked Act againſt the Perſon, who then aſſerted himſelf to be the Son of Lord and Lady Altham, and who is now conteſting with him his Title and Eſtate---if he hath done another very extraordinary, though legal, Act againſt him,---in a clandeſtine Manner,---and coupled with a Declaration highly criminal,---This, in my Opinion, may, and ought to have great Weight with you upon this Occaſion.

Another Thing, Gentlemen, inſiſted upon by the Defendant's Counſel was, that if the Caſe be doubtful, the preſent Poſſeſſion ought to turn the Scale in Favour of the Defendant.

Now here I muſt again differ from the learned Gentlemen. If indeed upon the whole Evidence the Caſe ſtands doubtful, they ſay well: But if upon the direct poſitive Evidence the Caſe is balanced, then, Gentlemen, the Kid-knapping and the Proſecution will, in my Apprehenſion, turn the Scale in favour of the Plaintiff. For a violent Preſumption is to ſtand for Truth 'till the contrary is proved.---Now if upon the poſitive Teſtimony on both Sides, the Mind remains in Equilibrio---then, Gentlemen, the contrary is not proved, and conſequently the Preſumption ſtands.

I cannot help ſaying, that I think it pretty extraordinary in this Caſe, that ſo many Objections ſhould be raiſed, and ſo much Streſs laid upon them, againſt your being influenced in your Judgment by Preſumptions ---by Suſpicions---by Probabilities.

Gentlemen, their whole Defence is built upon Probability and Improbability.

They firſt tell you, you are to judge not upon Probabilities, but upon poſitive Proof of the material Facts; and to that poſitive Proof, when given, they tell you, you ought to give no Credit, for it is improbable.

There was one Objection of this Sort which I forgot to mention, and that was as to the Proof of the Kid-knapping; they told you, Gentlemen, that although the Defendant could be ſuppoſed wicked enough to commit ſuch a Fact, yet it was inconceivable that he ſhould be ſo weak as to do it at Noon-day---that he ſhould carry the Boy through a public Market---nay, by the very Stall of Purcell, who had before protected him——(by the bye, Gentlemen, you will remember that the Boy was charged with Felony, and carried off by known Conſtables) and the ſame Objection, I think, was before made to Giffard's Teſtimony, that it was utterly incredible, that any Man living ſhould be ſo weak as to put himſelf into the Power of any other Man, by making ſuch Declarations as Giffard ſwore my Lord made to him.

I muſt own, Gentlemen, that this Objection does not to my Underſtanding carry any great Weight with it.

Wickedneſs and Weakneſs generally go hand-in-hand together; and upon the repeated Obſervation of their doing ſo, is founded that well known Saying,

"Quos Deus vult perdere prius dementat."

The next Part of the Caſe which I ſhall ſpeak to, is the Evidence of Mrs. Heath, as it ſtands oppoſed to that of Mrs. Cole; and the Evidence of Relph, oppoſed to that of Mrs. Colclough, Turner, and Higginſon.

It was my Deſire that Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Heath might be confronted, becauſe I did then, and do ſtill think, that this Caſe may receive great Light, and may be greatly narrowed for your Determination, by a careful Consideration of Cole's Evidence, as it stands in direct Contradiction to the Testimony of Heath, whom I look upon as a capital Witness, and one of the main Pillars of the Defence.

In other Parts of the Case, Gentlemen, you meet with many Variations between the Witnesses, as to Periods of Time, and other minute Circumstances, which will not be of much Consequence in the Cause, or tend to impeach the Credit of those Witnesses on the one Side, or the other:—But when once you come to a Fact in which two positive Witnesses flatly contradict each other---a Fact, the Truth or Falshood of which the Witnesses on each Side must with as much Certainty and Exactness know at the Time she gives her Testimony, as she did at the Time that Fact is said to have happened, let it be ever so long ago---so that one of them is, to Demonstration, perjured; then, Gentlemen, it becomes exceedingly material for you to consider which of two such Witnesses you will give Credit to; and your Determination of that Point may go a great way towards enabling you to form a Judgment upon the whole Case.

The first material Circumstance which occurs to me, in which Cole and Heath differ, is as to the going or not going away of Lord and Lady Altham from Captain Briscoe's (at whose House the Reconciliation was brought about) to my Lord's Lodgings at Vice's, in Essex-street.

Mrs. Heath swears positively, that during their Stay in Dublin, they never lodged one single Night out of the House of Captain Briscoe---Mrs. Cole (supported by her Sister, Mrs. Briscoe---by Alice Bates, a Servant in her Father's Family--and by Catharine Mac Cormick, Vice's Servant) swears as positively, that after staying four or five Days at her Father's, they went to Lodgings in Essex-street (as to the Person's House she is not positive, but she takes it to be Vice's), and there continued a considerable Time, I think about two Months, before they left Dublin, and went to Dunmaine. And, Gentlemen, you will remember that Mrs. Cole, when she was a second time produced, gave you a particular Reason why she could be so positive as to that Fact, which was, "that, notwithstanding the Reconcili- "ation between my Lord and Lady, her Father still continued uneasy about the "Matter; and was very desirous and pressing, that they would leave his "House, and go to other Lodgings, because he thought it would have a better "Air of their being well together;" which she explained afterwards, by saying, that it would become more publick and notorious to Mankind, that my Lord and Lady were in fact reconciled.

This Circumstance, as soon as it was mentioned, I thought, struck some Light into this Affair---it did to me explain clearly two other odd Circumstances, which I shall mention to you presently.

The next Fact, concerning which Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Heath stand in direct opposition, is, the supposed Miscarriage at Dunmaine. Mrs. Cole swears positively, that about the Middle of the Night, after the Accident of Lord Altham's breaking the Sawcers, Mrs. Heath came into the Bed-chamber of her Mother, Mrs. Briscoe, with whom she lay, alarmed her with Account of my Lady's being extremely ill, and begged that she would immediately rise and go to her, which her Mother accordingly did; that the next Morning she (the Witness) was in my Lady's Bed-chamber, where were present her Mother, Mrs. Heath and several of the Servants---that her Mother there told her, that my Lady had miscarried, and shewed her the Abortion in the Bason.

Mrs. Heath, on the contrary, swears as positively, that she did not, either upon that or any other Night, call up Mrs. Briscoe---that she does not remember, that Mrs. Briscoe, or her Daughter, was in my Lady's Room the next Morning---and she swears positively that my Lady did not then miscarry, nay, that she was not, either then, or at any other Time, with Child.

It was insisted on strongly by the Defendant's Counsel, that this Evidence of Cole was attended with great Improbability--that it was incredibly strange, that a Mother should shew an Abortion to her Female Child of such tender Years. And, indeed, Gentlemen, I think that Fact does, prima Facie, appear to be extremely odd, and to carry with it a strong Air of Improbability.

There was another Fact, proved in the very Outset of the Cause, which (though it had not the same Remark made upon it by the Counsel) struck me in a very odd Light; and that was, that upon the Reconciliation of Lord and Lady Altham, at Captain Briscoe's, Mrs. Dorothy Briscoe, then not above Ten, and her Sister, Mrs. Cole, not then above twelve Years of Age, were, with the rest of the Family, called into the Room, to see my Lord and Lady in Bed together.

But Gentlemen, you will consider, whether the Reason which Mrs. Cole tells you her Father had for pressing Lord and Lady Altham to leave his House, and lodge elsewhere in Dublin, viz. that their Reconciliation might become more notorious to Mankind, does not fully explain, and strongly corroborate the Proof of, those two odd, and otherwise unaccountable Facts.

Gentlemen, you will consider further, whether from these three Circumstances connected and compared together, there does not arise a strong Probability, that Captain Briscoe (who I think appears to have been the Person employed by the Duke of Buckingham to bring about the Reconciliation) had some Apprehensions, that although the Reconciliation was effected, and although, in consequence of it, Lady Altham should have Issue by my Lord---yet, that in some future Time, and for some Reasons or other, Lord Altham (whose Character and Conduct appear pretty extraordinary upon the Evidence in this Cause) might be induced to bastardize that Issue.

And, Gentlemen, you will consider further, whether such an Apprehension in Briscoe, as I have supposed, would have been unnatural or ill founded, when you have compared these Circumstances (which, as I have mentioned, seem to render it probable, that he had such an Apprehension) with the Evidence of Palliser the younger. He relates to you a very extraordinary Conversation which passed between my Lord and him, about five Days before the Separation, as they were returning from Bourkstown to Dunmaine. He tells you, that my Lord called to him in a familiar Manner, and said, "Tom, I will tell you a Secret, as I have no Son by my "Wife, nor ever expect to have any, and as my Lord Anglesea is very angry "with me for keeping this Woman---I am determined to put her away, not "to disoblige my Lord Anglesea." The same Witness had before sworn positively that he never had---that he never attempted to have---that he believes in his Conscience, that my Lord did not suspect he had---any criminal Commerce with Lady Altham; and that my Lord only made use of him as a Colour and Pretence for putting away his Lady.

Now, Gentlemen, you will observe, that upon this Testimony even of the Defendant's Witness (who, indeed, is a very material Witness for the Defendant in some other Parts of his Evidence, if you give credit to him), Lord Altham was a Man capable of putting away his lawful Wife, to whom he had lately been reconciled--upon a mere Pretence--and for no other real Cause than that he might not disoblige Lord Anglesea:---If he were so, you will then consider, whether it be at all an unnatural and strained Supposition, that he was capable of abandoning, and bastardizing his lawful Son, in order to oblige some other Person or Persons.

This Supposition, Gentlemen, will, I think, appear still less unnatural, when you recollect how Miss Gregory's Behaviour to the Boy stands upon the Testimony of another Witness for the Defendant: I mean Herd (who, in his Account of the Boy's Treatment by my Lord before they came to Dublin, differs totally, as my Lord Chief Baron hath already observed, from all the Gentlemen of that Part of the Country who have been produced before you).

Herd tells you, that when my Lord lived in Frapper's Lane, great Complaints were made to my Lord against the Child, by Miss Gregory, of his Thieving---that he cannot tell whether the Boy was really guilty or not, but that he confessed himself so--and that upon this my Lord (whom the Witness had never once seen strike the Child upon any Occasion in the Country) corrected him more severely than ever he had seen any Child corrected in his Life.

When the Witness was asked by my Lord Chief Baron, what those Things were, with the Thieving of which this Boy (who is admitted on all hands to be the Son of my Lord, though his Legitimacy is disputed) was charged by this Lady, and for which he was so cruelly corrected by his Father, he tells you they were "a Jockey Belt and a Pair of Pigeons."

These are Circumstances which, I must own, strike my Understanding strongly: You, Gentlemen, are the Judges, and you will well consider what Weight they carry, when connected with the rest of the Evidence; and what Light may be collected from them to guide your Judgments on this Occasion.

I forgot to mention to you one thing, which I think is very remarkable, upon Heath's Evidence; and that is, that she accompanies some of the Plaintiff's Witnesses in all the preparatory Steps, and separates from them only, when they come to the critical and material Facts themselves.

She recollects distinctly with Mac Cormick, Vice's Servant, "That my "Lord came home late one Night disordered with Liquor---that he made a great "Noise with the Chair---that he quarrelled with her---that he jumped out of "Bed from my Lady, and ran towards the Window---that he called for Mrs. "Lucas the Midwife---swore he would send for her to see if my Lady was "with Child, and with another Oath declared, that if she was not with Child, "he would turn her away." All these Circumstances she recollects minutely, and exactly agrees in them with the other Witness---but as to my Lady's screaming upon this Occasion--there she separates.--She says, my Lady would have died first. As to her miscarrying, or to any Discourse in the Family the next Day that she had miscarried---this she positively denies.

With regard to the Miscarriage at Dunmaine---she agrees with Cole in the Fact of my Lord breaking the Saucers, that those Saucers had ugly or indecent Figures on them, and that my Lord had forbad their being brought to Table.---But that my Lady was the least disordered upon this Occasion, she denies---that she called up Mrs. Briscoe---that my Lady miscarried---that she kept her Chamber for several Days, or even one Day after---all this she positively denies, in direct Contradiction to what has been sworn by Cole. And here, Gentlemen, it will be extremely material for you to recollect that, pretty exactly to the Time at which Cole swears this Miscarriage happened, and my Lady kept her Chamber at least five Days, it appears from the Evidence of the Defendant's Witnesses (Mr. Aaron Lambert) that Sutton the Surgeon, whom my Lord brought over with him from England, but had turned out of his House, on account of some Misbehaviour which he had been guilty of in the Family, was twice sent for to Dunmaine; that he twice refused to go, being picqued at his having been turned out of the Family---that being sent for a third Time, and my Lord's Chariot coming for him, he went, and continued attending my Lady at Dunmaine, to the best of the Witness's Remembrance, for a Fortnight. This Evidence was produced in order to discredit Brooks, the Piece of a Surgeon (as he called himself), produced on the Part of the Plaintiff, who in my Opinion sufficiently discredited himself. You will consider, Gentlemen, whether it does not go strongly in support of the Testimony of Mrs. Cole, in contradiction and discredit of Heath; with regard to whom, an Observation was made by the Defendant's Counsel, which I was exceedingly surprized to hear from that Side of the Table. They took notice of the peculiar Excellency of our Law, especially with regard to Trials by Jury, on which Occasions the Witnesses are examined viva voce; that from confronting Witnesses who contradict each other, and carefully observing their Appearance, and the manner in which they give their Testimony, some Light is to be collected; and the Court and Jury may in some measure be enabled to form a Judgment upon a doubtful Case.

The Observation, Gentlemen, is undoubtedly just, but what I little expected to have heard from that Quarter.---For, Gentlemen, when you recollect and compare together the outrageous Behaviour and vociferous Asseverations of Heath, with the calm, sedate, and modest Demeanour of Cole---You will consider whether all the Weight which can be laid upon an Observation of that Sort does not lie entirely on the other Side.

Another Point which hath been strongly, and indeed very properly insisted upon by the Defendant's Counsel, is this:---They say it is extremely improbable, if this Person were really the Son of Lady Altham, that my Lady, who is proved to have lived two Years after the Death of her Lord, should make no Enquiry about him.

But, Gentlemen, if you will compare the Time of Lord Altham's Death with the Time of Kid-knapping the Boy, you will find, I think, that there is very little, if any, Weight in this Observation.

Lord Altham died in November, 1727--the Letter which Mac Mullen swears she sent to Mrs. Heath, notifying my Lord's Death, (and which Heath swears swears she communicated to my Lady) bears Date the 18th of that Month ——that Letter must be some Days at least going to England.——On the 26th of the March following, the Boy appears from the Tholsel Book to be indented to Thomas Hendry by the Name of James Hensly, and on the 30th of April, the next Month, it appears from Stevenson's Book, that he passed over the Bar of Dublin—So that taking that to be Truth, (which, I think, is liable to strong Objections of Improbability, that Mac Mullen sent that Letter) there will be very little more than five Months between Lord Altham's Death, and the Transportation of the Boy.

When Alice Bates appears, and gives you an Account of her joking with Lady Altham about her being with Child, you are told by the Defendant's Counsel, that this is highly improbable—That Lady Altham was a very haughty Woman——That it is incredible she should condescend to such Familiarity with a Person so much her Inferior.

Will it not appear to you equally improbable at least, that this haughty Lady should condescend to receive Visits once a Week, as Mac Mullen tells you she did, from her---the Daughter of an Ale-house Keeper?

It must be allowed that my Lady's living with Alderman King for thirteen or fourteen Months, conversing with him about her Family Affairs, and yet never mentioning to him her Son, does primâ facie carry with it a great Improbability of her having at that time a lawful Son.

But considering that my Lord had put her away upon a Suspicion (either real or pretended) of her Virtue, and had aspersed her Character, it might not be so prudent, nor perhaps so probable, that she should discourse with him, or any other Person, upon the subject of Child-bearing.

However, allowing this to be improbable----will it not be equally improbable, that the Care of communicating so material Intelligence as the Death of Lord Altham, should be intrusted, not to this Alderman King, or any other Person of some tolerable Figure in this Town, but to such a Woman as Mac Mullen?

These, Gentlemen, are Circumstances which in my Apprehension weigh strongly against the Credit of Mac Mullen's Evidence. But taking that Evidence to be true, you will consider, whether the small Distance of Time between Lord Altham's Death and the Transportation, does not greatly lessen the Force of this Argument, which has been so strongly insisted upon by the Defendant's Counsel,--- especially if you add to it, the Circumstances both of Health and Fortune, in which Lady Altham appears to have been at this time.

And here, Gentlemen, will come in very materially for your Consideration the Evidence of Mrs. Deborah Annesley, a near Relation of this noble Family.

She who had before told you that her Brother frequently visited my Lord at Kinnea---that whenever he returned from thence, and whenever my Lord visited at their House, it was their common Practice to drink the Health of my Lord's Son---that they all considered that Boy as my Lord's lawful Son, and the future Earl of Anglesea (so that it is not Fact, as you have been told, that none of the Relations of the Family ever heard of Lady Altham's having a Son); this Lady, I say, tells you, that upon the Death of Lord Altham she and her Sister made frequent Enquiries after this Boy: That for some time they could learn no Account of him, and at last they concluded that he was dead. Now if it became a general Reputation that he was so, then, Gentlemen, tho' Lady Altham likewise might have made frequent Enquiries after this Boy (non cònstat upon the Evidence whether she did or not, and she might have made several, not at this Day capable of Proof), and might receive an Account, and give credit to it, that he was dead; and this might put a Stop to any further Enquiry, consistently with Lady Altham's Knowledge of this Boy's being her legitimate Son.

These Parts of the Case, independant of the other, which have all been fully laid before you by my Lord Chief Baron, seem to me to have great Weight in them.

You, Gentlemen, will consider what Stress you will lay upon the Observations I have thrown out to you, and what Light may be collected from them.

There were several other things, Gentlemen, which I designed to have mentioned to you; but the Fatigue which we have all undergone hath been so very great, and the Time I have had for Recollection so very short, that my Thoughts are too much dissipated to proceed, and indeed I have already trespassed too much upon your Patience; considering the great Attention which you have all along given, and the careful Notes you have taken of the Evidence; I shall therefore now conclude with that which I at first set out with, the Kidnapping and the Prosecution. If the Case be doubtful, upon the other Parts of the Evidence (whether it be or not you are the proper Judges), I must then leave it to your Consideration, whether the Evidence of those two extraordinary Facts may not be sufficient to determine you what Verdict to give upon this Occasion.

Mr. Baron Dawson.] Gentlemen of the Jury, my Lord Chief Baron and my Brother Mountney have summed up the Evidence, and observed upon it in so judicious and clear a manner, as makes any further Observations from me unnecessary; I shall therefore only require your Patience for a few Minutes, to shew you how I would consider this Case if I was upon the Jury, and my Reasons for so doing. There are such Contradictions on both Sides of the Question, that it would not be hard to shew, that several Witnesses on each Side are not entirely to be credited. Several of the Witnesses on each Side, not only contradict the Witnesses on the other Side, but also, in some Instances, themselves, and therefore, independent of other Things proper to be consider'd, one could not tell where to settle. If I was upon the Jury, and to determine this Question, I should lay before me and consider the Story as told on each Side; I should consider how far the Story on one hand, independent of the Witnesses, exceeded the other in point of Probability: if on either hand the Story told appeared extremely improbable, I should then require from that Side, the strongest Proof imaginable; and that because Probability ought to weigh, except it be contradicted by Testimony not to be doubted of: and therefore, if on either Side, the Story should be extremely improbable, and probable on the other Side, I should give my Opinion on the Side of Probability. How far any thing of this kind appears in this Case, will come under your Consideration.

This is the longest Trial ever known at the Bar, this is the 15th Day since the Trial began; Trials at Bar are usually determin'd in one Day, and the Policy of the Law hath taken care that no Person should speak to the Jury after any Evidence given in Court; there is no Occasion, I am persuaded, Gentlemen, to remind you that any thing heard out of Court is not to govern you, you are to be governed by nothing but the Evidence laid before you.

In the first place, the first Stage is the Time of the Birth. You will take into your Consideration the Number of Witnesses and their Stations that swear to that Birth, and also the Number and Station of the Witnesses that swear in direct Contradiction to them; if you cannot determine that Question by comparing them together, you will then have recourse to the other Part of the Testimony, which is, the Reputation of the Country, and the Persons that visited constantly at that House; you will consider the Probability or Improbability that a Fact of this kind could have happened, and the People visiting not know of it. This could hardly be in a Family of less Consequence than my Lord Altham's, but when you consider this Family and the Estate that was to fall to it, you will consider if there could be a Birth, and Persons visiting the Family not knowing of it. There have been Proofs on the one hand, laid before you of my Lady's being with Child, and on the other hand of her not being with Child; either of these Parties may swear false; but then you must take into your Consideration, if they that swear she had a Child swear Truth, whether it could be possible that that could be kept a Secret? There was not any Interest or Reason that it should be kept a Secret. If it was not industriously kept secret, how comes it that all those Persons that visited there should never have heard of a Child?

To go to positive Testimony, Laffan swears positively the Child was presented to several Gentlemen and Ladies, and often to Mrs. Lambert. Mrs. Lambert swears positively the Child never was shewn to her. Which is to be credited? There are several Circumstances you will take into your Consideration, concerning the Probability or Improbability of the Birth of this Child, whether the Preparations for my Lady's Lying-in were suitable to her Rank? Whether Dunmaine, a small Village, distant from any Assistance necessary on such an Occasion, was a proper Place? Whether my Lady Altham would be easily brought to lye-in in the Country, especially of her first Child? These are Considerations worthy your Attention.—There have been many Gentlemen who gave Evidence to there not having been a Child; they swear not only that they never saw, but that they never heard of a Child. I won't enter critically into every particular Period of Time sworn to by them; but if in three Years those Persons were three or four times a-piece at Dunmaine, and they swear Truth, it will be of Weight in the Question whether there was a Child or not. For admitting Colonel Pallifer and the other Witnesses to be there four times a-Year, you are the Judges whether it is probable that there was a Child there, and unknown to them. The Separation is agreed on all hands to have been in the Year 1716, and some little time after that, the Child was brought home to my Lord Altham's House. Dyer swears the Child was not brought to Dunmaine in his Time; but the Witnesses for the Plaintiff say, either from the Separation, or soon after; and that the Child continued in the House with Lord Altham till about the Year 1724. You are to observe, that my Lord left Dunmaine about Summer 1717; the Separation was in February 1716-17, and Lord Altham came up to Parliament, and after that went to Kinnea; the Parliament sat down the 27th of August 1717; then you will consider what has been sworn to of my Lord's Behaviour to this Child all that Time. During this Period of Time at Kinnea, Carrickduff, Cross-Lane and Frapper-Lane, there are many Witnesses on both Sides that give a most contrary Testimony to one another; there are Witnesses on both Sides that I cannot say how to disbelieve, there are many of them that I cannot disbelieve, who swear to his being treated as a legitimate Son; there are many of them whom I also cannot disbelieve, who give a contrary Testimony, and say that he was treated as an illegitimate Son; and Colonel Harman, Doctor Medlicott and Colonel Wall give an Account of my Lord's manner of calling him his Bastard Son. And in my Apprehension, if the Witnesses deserve Credit, my Lord Altham did during that Time treat him to some Persons as his lawful Son, and to others, as his illegitimate Son. You will consider the Temper and Disposition of Lord Altham, and the Circumstances he was in; he was a Man not of Prudence, either as to the Management of his Fortune or Family; you will please to consider in what manner to account for this Behaviour of his; whether there may, or may not be any Reason for treating an illegitimate Son in some Companies as a legitimate Son, and whether there may be, at any time, any Reason for treating a legitimate as an illegitimate one. A Man comes into the Country where he was not known before, and has a Child that he had not by his Wife; perhaps he may have Reason for treating him as a legitimate Son. A Man may carry an illegitimate Child abroad, and visit with him in the Neighbourhood, and pass him for his legitimate Child; for perhaps he might be glad that that Person whom he visited, should not know him to be a Bastard; but a Man can have no Reason, in my Apprehension, for treating a lawful Son as an unlawful one. Then you will consider the several Schools the Child was put to by Lord Altham; you will consider whether these Schools were fit Schools for my Lord, even in indigent Circumstances, to put his lawful Son to. You will consider the Consequence of my Lord's being under the Influence of Miss Gregory; the Consequence was, that this unhappy Child was thrown abandoned to the World at not ten Years old: here you will consider whether a Treatment of that kind bespeaks him to be his legitimate or illegitimate Son: Had he been a legitimate Son, surely my Lord Altham must have had Reflection enough to have considered what a dishonourable Action he was doing publickly. On the other hand, you will consider that the Influence of Miss Gregory might well be carried to make him doubt whether this Child was his or not, if the Child was by an improper Woman. In the next place, you will consider the Situation and Behaviour of the Mother, that is the tender Sex, and their Tenderness to their Children is hardly to be got the better of at any rate. Lady Altham was three Years in Ross, and there is but one Testimony of her seeing him then, and that is the Man that swears he made him Shoes. From this she comes to Dublin, and lives near my Lord at the time this Child is with him; it seems a little odd that she made no Attempt to have this Child brought to her but by Catherine O Neile; and I ſubmit it to you, how far what ſhe ſays can have Weight; for ſhe ſays, that my Lady declared ſhe would be glad to ſee the Child, but ſhe was afraid the Servant that brought him would loſe his Bread. Can ſuch a thing as that be put in competition with the Tenderneſs of a Mother for a Child? That, Gentlemen, is for your Conſideration, Why then, Gentlemen, my Lady comes to the Houſe of Alderman King, and he tells you, that for thirteen or fourteen Months ſhe frequently ſpoke to him of her Family Affairs, yet never mentions ſhe had a Child. It ſeems very ſtrange; a Woman, where ſhe fancies herſelf injured, is mighty apt to tell the Injuries done her to every body, and to aggravate her Diſtreſs by ſaying ſhe was deprived of the Comfort of ſeeing her Child. This was not to be entruſted to Alderman King, but communicated to Mrs. Hodgers, whom ſhe had never ſeen but once; you will conſider this, Gentlemen. In the Year 1727 my Lord died, and there can be no Doubt but my Lady knew it; there is not any Proof of her having made any Enquiry after the Child: It is true, my Lady might have made the Enquiry after the Child, and it might have proved ineffectual, becauſe of his being tranſported ſo ſoon after; but of this there is no Evidence; but how comes it ſhe did not make the Enquiry, eſpecially where her own Intereſt was to guide her in that Caſe? And yet here is the Force of the Mother and Intereſt joined together, and they work nothing on my Lady Altham. You will conſider that the Eſtate of this Family, on Failure of Iſſue, being to go to Arthur, late Lord Angleſea, it was the Intereſt of the Mother to have made a ſtrict Enquiry after him; and yet there is a Witneſs for the Defendant, William Napper, who tells you, that he had a Letter of Attorney from Lord Angleſea, to take Poſſeſſion of the Roſs Eſtate; and by virtue thereof made Numbers of Minutes to ſeveral Tenants, and no Objection he ever heard made, that Lord Altham ever had a Son. That, Gentlemen, ſeems a little extraordinary.

The next Thing that offers, and the Strength of the Caſe for the Plaintiff is, the Tranſportation of him, and the Directions the Defendant gave to Mr. Giffard for the Proſecution of him after his return into England. You will conſider, as to the Tranſportation, whether the Defendant was the Occaſion of it, or not? If you ſhould be of Opinion he was, you will conſider how far that will have an Effect upon you. He claimed to be the lawful Son of Lord Altham; you will conſider whether that might have been an Inducement. If you ſhould be of opinion that the Story on each hand carries an equal Degree of Probability; this of the Tranſportation ſhould, in my Apprehenſion, add great Weight to the Caſe of the Plaintiff: If, on the other hand, you ſhould not think them equally probable, you will conſider how far the Tranſportation will make you give Credit to a Fact you ſhould otherwiſe think improbable. The ſame may be ſaid in reſpect of the Attempt in England, in relation to the Proſecution of him there. I have mentioned before, that ſeveral of the Witneſſes on both Sides cannot be very well depended upon; and therefore I think the Probability or Improbability of the Thing may be of great Weight in determining the preſent Queſtion.

Then the Jury withdrew, and in about Half-an-hour brought in their Verdict for the PLAINTIFF.

This James Anneſley, Eſq. died January 5, 1760. He was twice married; firſt, to a Daughter of Mr. Cheſter, at Staines-Bridge in Middleſex; by whom he had one Son and two Daughters. The Son, James Anneſley, Eſq. died November 1763, S. P. and the eldeſt Daughter is married to Charles Wheeler, Eſq. Son of the late Captain Wheeler in the Guinea Trade: Secondly, to a Daughter of Sir Thomas Th' Anſon of Bounds near Tunbridge in Kent, Gentleman-Porter of the Tower, by whom he had a Daughter and a Son, who are both dead; the Son, aged about ſeven Years, died about the Beginning of 1764; and the Daughter, aged about Twelve, died in May 1765.

XXVII. The Trial of Mrs. Mary Heath, (a Witneſs examined on the Trial in Ejectment in the Court of Exchequer in Michaelmas Term, 1743, in the Cauſe wherein Campbell Craig, Leſſee of James Annesley, Eſq. was Plaintiff, againſt the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Anglesea, Defendant) for Perjury, at the Bar of the Court of King's-Bench in Ireland, on Friday the 8th Day of February, 1744.

Publiſhed by Permiſſion of the Right Honourable the Lord Chief-Juſtice Marlay, Mr. Juſtice Ward, and Mr. Juſtice Blennerhaſſet.

[The ſeveral Proceedings had upon the Indictment againſt Mary Heath, for Perjury, previous to her Trial.]

The Bill was found by the Grand-Jury of the County of Dublin, at a Seſſion of the Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, on the 24th Day of October 1744; and there ſhe traverſed the Indictment, and removed the Record by Certiorari into the Court of King's-Bench, returnable the firſt Day of laſt Michaelmas Term.

On the ſixth Day of November 1744, the Traverſer appeared in the Court of King's-Bench, and the Court appointed the Trial to be at the Bar of the Court on the Fourteenth Day of November, with Liberty for either Party to apply in the mean time to put off the Trial, for reaſonable Cauſe, to be made appear by Affidavit.

The Traverſer did apply to put off the Trial on the following Affidavit, ſworn the 10th of November 1744.

The King againſt Mary Heath. } THE Traverſer, Mary Heath, came this Day before me and made Oath, That James Anneſley having, as Deponent heard and believes, brought an Ejectment in the Exchequer for Recovery of the Poſſeſſion of Part of the Eſtate whereof Arthur late Earl of Angleſea died ſeized in this Kingdom; and the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Angleſea having taken Defence to ſaid Ejectment, the ſame came to be tried at the Bar of ſaid Court in laſt Michaelmas Term; which Trial continued and was adjourned from Day to Day for upwards of ten Days, on which Trial Deponent was produced and examined as a Witneſs on Behalf of ſaid Earl. That Deponent is well informed and verily believes, that on ſaid Trial the only Point tried was, whether ſaid James Anneſley was the Son of Arthur late Lord Altham by his Wife Mary Lady Altham; that ſhe is well aſſured and believes, that Examinations were laid before the Grand-Jury at laſt Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer for the County of Dublin for Perjury, alledged to be committed by Deponent on ſaid Trial; and that a Bill of Indictment was found on ſaid Examinations againſt Deponent the 24th Day of October laſt, and not before, as ſhe is informed and verily believes. Saith, She is informed and believes, the Points in ſaid Indictment, and on which Deponent is indicted, are relative to ſaid Lady Altham's having a Child by ſaid Lord Altham, and in ſome meaſure the ſame as that tried in the Exchequer as aforeſaid. Saith, ſhe is informed and believes, that a Suit was inſtituted in the Chancery of England by ſaid James Annesley for Recovery of the Engliſh Eſtate, whereof ſaid Arthur Earl of Angleſea died ſeized, or Part thereof; and has been informed and believes, ſaid James has alſo filed a Bill in the Chancery of Ireland for Recovery of the ſaid Iriſh Eſtate, whereof the ſaid Arthur died ſeized, or Part thereof; and ſaith, That a Commiſſion is now ſpeeding at Wexford in ſaid Engliſh Cauſe, and that the ſame was opened before ſaid Indictment was found; and Deponent was examined on behalf of the ſaid Earl upon ſaid Commiſſion, and the Examination of ſaid Commiſſion is ſtill going on, as Deponent believes. Saith, ſhe is informed and verily believes, that the Title of the ſeveral Eſtates is the ſame, and that the Point to be determined as to ſaid Eſtates between ſaid James Annesley and ſaid Earl of Angleſea, and the other Parties intereſted is, whether ſaid James is the Son of ſaid late Lord Altham by his ſaid Lady. Saith, ſhe is adviſed and believes, the ſame Evidence, in a great Meaſure, will be neceſſary for Deponent's Defence on the Trial of ſaid Indictment, and in the Defence of ſaid Suits, and therefore Deponent believes (being ſo adviſed) that preparing for Deponent's Defence on ſaid Indictment, will take a conſiderable Time, there being many Witneſſes neceſſary for Deponent's Defence, living in different Parts of this Kingdom as well as in England. Saith, there are ſeveral Perſons, whoſe Place of Reſidence is in London and other Places in England, and who are now there, as ſhe verily believes, who are material Witneſſes for Deponent's Defence on ſaid Indictment, and without whoſe

Teſtimony Deponent cannot with Safety ſtand her Trial, and whom Deponent could not poſſibly get from England ſince ſaid Bill of Indictment was found; and in particular, Mrs. Mary Judd of the County of Eſſex, and Mrs. Sarah Bonner of London, Mrs. Sarah Heath of London, and Thomas Rolph of Marybone in England, and ſeveral other Perſons who reſide in England, are very material Witneſſes for Deponent upon her ſaid Trial, and whom Deponent could not poſſibly get over to attend this Term, and whom Deponent believes and doubts not but ſhe can get to attend the next Term. That there are ſeveral Perſons in the Counties of Cork, Wexford, and Galway, who are very material Witneſſes for Deponent; ſeveral of whom are wrote to, but they cannot, as Deponent is informed and believes, attend this preſent Term. Saith, that Sarah Weedon, Widow of John Weedon, who was Coachman to Lord Altham (at the Time when the ſaid James Anneſley alledges he was born), and lived at that Time near Dunmaine-houſe (where ſaid James Anneſley alledges he was born), and was frequently at Dunmaine-houſe, now lives at Colonel John Blakeney's at Abbort in the County of Galway, which, as Deponent is informed and believes, is ſeventy Miles from Dublin, and is a moſt material Witneſs for Deponent; and Deponent having cauſed Application to be made to the ſaid Sarah, is informed and believes, ſhe is ſo infirm, that ſhe cannot travel without a Carriage, and therefore is not come up to Dublin, tho' Deponent has good Reaſon to believe, and doubts not but ſhe will be able to get her to attend the next Term. Saith, ſhe is credibly informed and verily believes, that James Anneſley and thoſe concerned for him (who Deponent believes are the Perſons that carry on the Proſecution againſt Deponent), are ſo ſenſible that the ſaid Sarah is a material Witneſs for Deponent, that they, or ſome of them, have lately, by Bribes and otherwiſe, attempted to ſeduce and carry off the ſaid Sarah from ſaid Colonel Blakeney's, and had a Horſe and Pillion for that Purpoſe at Abbort, but were diſcovered, and prevented by ſaid Colonel Blakeney's Means. That Anthony Dyer, now of Cork, was Gentleman to the ſaid Lord Altham when he dwelt at Dunmaine aforeſaid, and is a very material Witneſs for Deponent upon ſaid Trial, who Deponent cannot get to attend this Term, but believes ſhe will be able to get him to attend next Term. Saith, that from the Number of Witneſſes, material for her to produce on ſaid Trial, and the different Parts of this Kingdom and Great-Britain, where they reſide, it will not be poſſible for Deponent to get them to attend this Term, nor can Deponent be in any ſort prepared to defend herſelf in a proper Manner, unleſs reaſonable Time be given her; and is ſatisfied in her Conſcience, it is not, nor was it in her Power, or in the Power of any other Perſon, to get the ſeveral Witneſſes, material for her Defence, to attend this Term; but believes and doubts not but ſhe will be able to get them to attend the next Term.

In order to oppoſe this Motion, the following Affidavit was ſworn the 13th of November, 1744.

The King against Mary Heath. } DANIEL MAC KERCHER, Eſq. came this Day before me and made Oath, that the Traverſer, Mary Heath, was, as he believes, apprehended in Auguſt laſt upon a Warrant, granted againſt her for wilful and corrupt Perjury; and ſaith, That in expectation of ſaid Heath's Trial coming on at the laſt Sitting of the Court of Oyer and Terminer held for the County of Dublin, on the 24th of October laſt, Deponent ſent to England and to ſeveral Counties of this Kingdom for ſeveral Witneſſes, to be produced and examined againſt ſaid Heath; and ſaith, a great many of ſaid Witneſſes came to Dublin from England and ſeveral remote Counties of Ireland, to be examined on Behalf of his Majeſty on ſaid Trial; but the Indictment being removed by Writ of Certiorari to the Court of King's Bench, Deponent ſent many of ſaid Witneſſes, who live in this Kingdom, out of Town; and ſuch other of ſaid Witneſſes as are old and infirm, and live in remote Parts, and alſo the Witneſſes, who came from England, Deponent hath kept in Dublin at conſiderable Expences. Saith, he was at very conſiderable Expences in bringing ſaid Witneſſes to Dublin, in Expectation that ſaid Heath's Trial would have come on at ſaid Sitting of the ſaid Commiſſion. Saith, that the Trial of ſaid Heath being appointed to come on, on Wedneſday the 14th of November Inſtant, Deponent hath, ſince the ſaid Day for Trial was appointed, ſent to ſeveral Counties of this Kingdom for ſeveral of ſaid Witneſſes that were before in Dublin, to give Evidence on behalf of his Majeſty againſt ſaid Heath upon ſaid Trial; and ſaith, ſome of ſaid Witneſſes, who are material to be examined on ſaid Trial againſt her, have a Call to England upon Buſineſs of great Importance; and others, who are very material Evidences againſt her, are very old and infirm; ſo that Deponent ſaith, if the Trial of ſaid Heath ſhould be put off from this Term to next, it will put the Proſecutors to very conſiderable Expences and Hardſhips; and not only ſo, but it will be highly inconvenient to, and almoſt impoſſible for ſeveral other Witneſſes (who are obliged as ſoon as they can to go for England) to attend in this Kingdom next Hillary Term, without neglecting Affairs of the greateſt Conſequence; and ſeveral other very material Witneſſes, who are old and infirm, may die, or become ſo weak and infirm as not to be able to attend next Term. Saith, that the Application on Behalf of ſaid Heath to put off her Trial to next Term is intended, as Deponent verily believes, not only to put the Proſecutors to great Expence, but alſo for other Ends and Purpoſes, and to avoid or poſtpone, as much as ſhe can, her being tried. Says, if ſaid Heath's Trial ſhould be put off to the next Term, ſhe will not, nor can ſhe be ſo effectually proſecuted as ſhe would now be, in regard that ſeveral material Witneſſes againſt her will be under a Neceſſity of being next Term in England, and ſaid Heath may, for want of the Evidence of ſuch Witneſſes, be acquitted. Whereas, if ſuch Witneſſes could and did attend to give Evidence againſt her, ſhe would be found guilty of Perjury, as Deponent verily believes. And believes ſaid Heath had Time ſufficient to prepare for and have any Witneſſes material for her. Saith, he is credibly informed and believes, ſaid Heath, or any one for her, did not, ſince ſhe was apprehended for ſaid Perjury, iſſue any Summons or Subpœnas for any Witneſſes to come to attend and give Evidence on her Trial; nor has ſhe, or any other Perſon on her Behalf, as Deponent believes, ſince ſhe was taken for ſaid Perjury, uſed any Means to have any Witneſſes ready to appear for her, in expectation and upon an Aſſurance given her, as Deponent is informed and believes, by ſome of her Managers, that ſaid Trial would be put off. Doth not know or believe, that Mary Judd, Sarah Bonner, and Sarah Heath, mentioned in the Affidavit of ſaid Mary Heath, or any of them, were examined on the Trial in Ejectment, had in the Exchequer laſt Michaelmas Term between the Leſſee of James Anneſley and the Earl of Angleſea. Saith, he doth not know or believe that Sarah Weedon, mentioned in ſaid Heath's Affidavit, is a material Witneſs for her; but, on the contrary, is informed, ſaid Sarah is a material Witneſs againſt her. Saith, Deponent being informed ſaid Sarah Weedon was a material Witneſs againſt ſaid Mary, he, for that Reaſon, and for no other Ends, ſent Edward Weedon, Son of ſaid Sarah, to the County of Galway, to Colonel John Blakeney's, where Deponent was informed ſaid Sarah was, in order to bring her to Dublin, to give Evidence againſt ſaid Mary; and ſaid Edward, on his Return, informed Deponent, ſhe was by Force detained in the Houſe of the ſaid Blakeney, and that (tho' ſhe declared her Willingneſs to give her Teſtimony) ſaid Blakeney would not permit her to go, but forcibly kept her in his Houſe, notwithſtanding her Endeavours to come away. Whereupon, Deponent cauſed a Subpœna to iſſue, requiring ſaid Sarah to attend to give Evidence on the Trial of ſaid Mary, which Deponent ſent to be ſerved on ſaid Sarah, to oblige her to attend, purſuant to ſuch Subpœna. Saith, Deponent intended, before he ſent ſaid Subpœna to be ſerved on ſaid Sarah, to apply to this Court for a Writ of Habeas Corpus for her, ſhe being confined and detained by Force in the Houſe of ſaid Blakeney, as Deponent was informed; and accordingly, ſaid Edward and John Weedon, another Son of ſaid Sarah's, made ſeverally an Affidavit, as Deponent believes, on the eighth of November Inſtant, in order to ground a Motion thereon for a Writ of Habeas Corpus for ſaid Sarah; which Motion Deponent would have made, but Deponent afterwards thought it more proper to try whether by Service of a Subpœna, ſaid Sarah would be permitted to come to Dublin, to give Evidence on the Trial, Deponent believing, ſaid Blakeney would not oppoſe an Obedience to ſaid Subpœna. Saith, the Perſon ſent by Deponent to ſerve ſaid Subpœna is not yet returned, that Deponent knows or believes: Denies, he, or ſaid James Anneſley, or any other concerned for him, or who carry on the Proſecution againſt ſaid Mary Heath, to Deponent's Knowledge or Belief, have lately, or at any Time, by Bribes, or otherwiſe, attempted to ſeduce or carry off ſaid Sarah from ſaid Blakeney's, to prevent her from being examined on the Trial of ſaid Mary, as is untruly inſinuated by the Affidavit of ſaid Heath; nor doth Deponent know or believe, nor does ſaid James Anneſley, or any other Perſon concerned for him, as Deponent believes, know or believe, ſaid Sarah is a material Witneſs for ſaid Heath upon her Trial. Verily believes, ſaid Sarah is detained in the Houſe of ſaid Blakeney, merely becauſe ſhe is a material Witneſs againſt ſaid Mary, and to prevent her from being produced as a Witneſs; and Deponent is convinced, ſaid Mary could, if ſhe pleaſed, have had ſaid Sarah Weedon to attend on the fourteenth Inſtant upon her Trial. Saith, Deponent's Intention to ſend for and bring ſaid Sarah to Dublin, was to give Evidence againſt ſaid Mary, and not to prevent her giving Evidence, as is falſely inſinuated by ſaid Mary's Affidavit; and denies he, by himſelf, or any other, attempted to bribe ſaid Sarah; nor did Deponent, ſince he embarked in the Affairs of the ſaid James, attempt to bribe, or by any unfair or unlawful Means, to ſeduce or prevail upon any Perſon to give Evidence in Behalf of ſaid James; nor doth Deponent know or believe, that any Attempts of Bribery or other unlawful or unfair Means were made uſe of (by ſaid James Anneſley or any Perſon concerned for him) to give Evidence for him in the Suit between him and ſaid Earl of Angleſea, or to ſtifle or prevent the Evidence of any Perſon who could give Evidence for ſaid Earl or for ſaid Heath; but, on the contrary, Deponent hath all along, ſince he engaged in the Affairs of ſaid James Anneſley, carried on the ſame with all legal and fair Ways and Methods, and Deponent is determined ſo to do in the Conduct of ſaid James's Affairs. Believes, and is convinced by very ſufficient Proofs, that Deponent has had of the ſame, that many unfair and illegal Endeavours and Attempts have been made uſe of by Perſons concerned for ſaid Earl and ſaid Mary Heath, not only to bribe and corrupt Witneſſes, but alſo, by very unfair and illegal Means, to intimidate and ſeduce ſeveral Perſons from giving Teſtimony on Behalf of ſaid James, and to have ſaid Mary acquitted of the Perjury of which ſhe is indicted.

On the thirteenth of November the Matter was debated by Counſel, and the Court were of Opinion the Trial ought to be put off. And afterwards, by Conſent of all Parties, the Day of Trial was appointed to be Monday the fourth Day of February 1744.

On the twentieth of November 1744, the Counſel for the Proſecutors moved the Court for an Attachment againſt Colonel John Blakeney, for his Contempt of the Court, in not permitting Sarah Weedon to attend the Court on the fourteenth Day of November, in obedience to a Subpœna, with which ſhe was ſerved; and grounded this Motion on the following Affidavits.

Thomas Carter, Eſq. Attorney and Coroner of the Lord the King againſt Mary Heath. } JAMES MAGRATH, of the City of Dublin, came this Day before me and made Oath, That on the thirteenth Day of this Inſtant November, this Deponent accompanied Andrew Roſs, of Maryſtown in the County of Roſcommon, Gentleman, to Abbort in the County of Galway, where John Blakeney, Eſq. lives, the ſaid Andrew Roſs being employed to ſerve Sarah Weedon with a Subpœna, commanding her to attend in his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench on the fourteenth Day of this Inſtant November, to give Evidence in this Cauſe. And this Deponent ſaith, That the ſaid Andrew Roſs did, as this Deponent believes, on the thirteenth Day of November ſerve the ſaid Sarah Weedon with the ſaid Subpœna; and this Deponent having ſtood at a little Diſtance from the ſaid John Blakeney's Houſe, to wait for the ſaid Andrew Roſs, the ſaid Andrew Roſs, in ſome ſhort Time after he went into the ſaid Houſe, returned to Deponent, and deſired this Deponent to get off as faſt as he could; and that when the ſaid Andrew Roſs turned the Corner of the Avenue he would change Horſes with Deponent. That Deponent thereupon believing the ſaid John Blakeney intended to have this Deponent very ill treated for coming with the ſaid Andrew Roſs to have the ſaid Sarah Weedon ſerved with the ſaid Subpœna, this Deponent therefore rode off, and at ſome Diſtance from the ſaid Houſe exchanged Horſes with the ſaid Andrew

Andrew Roſs, and, in ſome time, Deponent looking behind, perceived ſeveral Perſons on Horſeback purſuing, as this Deponent apprehended, the ſaid Andrew Roſs and this Deponent; and therefore this Deponent rode forward as faſt as his Horſe could carry him, and by that means Deponent eſcaped any Inſult or Danger intended him; and this Deponent verily believes the ſaid Perſons were ſent in Purſuit of this Deponent and the ſaid Andrew Roſs by the ſaid John Blakeney, with Intent to treat them very ill, and to prevent their carrying the ſaid Sarah Weedon to Dublin, to give Evidence againſt the ſaid Mary Heath, as this Deponent verily believes.

Thomas Carter, Eſq. Attorney and Coroner of the Lord the King, againſt Mary Heath.

WHEREAS there iſſued forth of his Majeſty's Court of King's-Bench in Ireland, and under the Seal thereof, his Majeſty's Writ of Subpœna in this Cauſe, bearing Date the eighth Day of November Inſtant, directed to Sarah Weedon, commanding her to be in the ſaid Court of King's-Bench on Wedneſday the 14th Day of November Inſtant, to teſtify the Truth concerning a certain Trial between Thomas Carter, Eſq. Attorney and Coroner of the Lord the King, and Mary Heath: Now, Andrew Roſs, of Mary's-Town, in the County of Roſcommon, Gentleman, came this Day before me and made Oath, that on the thirteenth Day of this Inſtant November, in the Forenoon of ſaid Day, this Deponent perſonally ſerved the ſaid Sarah Weedon with the ſaid Subpœna, by delivering unto her, at the Houſe of John Blakeney, Eſq. at Abbort, in the County of Galway, a true Copy of the ſaid Subpœna, and at the ſame Time gave the ſaid Sarah Weedon a Britiſh Shilling in Silver, and ſhewed her the ſaid original Subpœna under Seal as aforeſaid; and this Deponent ſaith, That before this Deponent ſerved the ſaid Sarah Weedon as aforeſaid, this Deponent, as he was going towards the Houſe of the ſaid John Blakeney, met the ſaid John Blakeney, with a Gun in his Hand, coming towards Deponent; and Deponent told the ſaid John Blakeney, that Deponent had a Meſſage to deliver, which Deponent ſaid he did not think proper to deliver until Deponent had acquainted the ſaid John Blakeney therewith; and upon the ſaid John Blakeney's aſking what it was, Deponent told him, that Deponent had a Subpœna to ſerve upon Sarah Weedon; and Deponent having ſhewn and produced to the ſaid John Blakeney a Copy of the ſaid Subpœna, the ſaid John Blakeney having taken and read it, ſaid, the ſaid Sarah Weedon could not be there (meaning, as Deponent believes, in the ſaid Court of King's-Bench) in that Time; upon which Deponent ſaid, he had ſo provided for her, that Deponent would engage ſhe ſhould be there the next Day in Time: Whereupon, the ſaid Blakeney ſwearing, ſaid, he would take care the ſaid Sarah Weedon ſhould not be there the next Day. That Deponent thereupon begged he might ſee the ſaid Sarah Weedon; to which the ſaid John Blakeney in anſwer, ſaid, with an Oath, that Deponent might ſee her, but that he, this Deponent, ſhould not take her away; but this Deponent ſaith, That he, this Deponent, went into the ſaid John Blakeney's Houſe, and there ſerved the ſaid Sarah Weedon with the ſaid Subpœna, as aforeſaid. And upon this Deponent's ſerving the ſaid Sarah Weedon, as aforeſaid, ſhe ſaid ſhe thought ſhe was to have been ſent for a-Thurſday; upon which, Deponent ſaid, ſhe, the ſaid Sarah Weedon, might then come, for it would be Time enough, and that Deponent would take her very ſafe to Dublin. That thereupon, the ſaid John Blakeney, who was preſent at the ſaid Service and Diſcourſe between the ſaid Sarah Weedon and Deponent, ſaid, That ſhe the ſaid Sarah Weedon ſhould go, and that he would take care to ſend her in a proper Time. And this Deponent ſaith, That the ſaid John Blakeney having behaved and expreſſed himſelf in a very angry Manner, and being greatly diſpleaſed, as this Deponent underſtood by him, and as this Deponent verily believes, that Deponent had come on the aforeſaid Errand to ſerve the ſaid Subpœna; and the ſaid John Blakeney having declared, with Proteſtations and Oaths, that he would ſend James Magrath to Galway Goal, and that he would let the ſaid Magrath know, that there were Courts in the Country as well as in Dublin; the ſaid John Blakeney having ſeen the ſaid James Magrath with Deponent, when Deponent firſt met the ſaid John Blakeney, as aforeſaid; this Deponent was greatly affrighted; and finding it to no Purpoſe to expect to bring the ſaid Sarah Weedon to Dublin, to give Evidence in purſuance of the ſaid Subpœna, by Means of the Obſtruction and Oppoſition of the ſaid John Blakeney, though this Deponent verily believes, were it not for ſuch Oppoſition of the ſaid John Blakeney, that the ſaid Sarah Weedon would readily have come with this Deponent in Obedience to the ſaid Subpœna; this Deponent therefore went away. And when Deponent came up to the ſaid James Magrath, who waited for Deponent at a little Diſtance from the ſaid John Blakeney's Houſe, this Deponent apprehending from the Declarations and Threats of the ſaid John Blakeney towards the ſaid James Magrath, that it would be moſt prudent and ſafe for the ſaid James Magrath to get off as faſt as he could, this Deponent therefore deſired the ſaid James Magrath to make the beſt of his Way; and that when Deponent turned the Corner of the Avenue, Deponent would change Horſes with the ſaid James Magrath, Deponent believing the Horſe that Deponent rode to be better than that rode by the ſaid Magrath; and accordingly the ſaid John Magrath and Deponent rode off, and Deponent changed Horſes with the ſaid Magrath when they got ſome Diſtance from the ſaid John Blakeney's Houſe. And Deponent ſaith, That when the ſaid Magrath and Deponent had gone forward for ſome Time, this Deponent, looking behind him, perceived ſeveral Perſons on Horſeback purſuing, as this Deponent apprehended, the ſaid James Magrath and this Deponent, which gave this Deponent the greater Reaſon to fear ſome Danger, and thereupon Deponent puſhed forward as faſt as his Horſe could carry him, and by that Means eſcaped any Danger or Inſult that might be intended by the ſaid Perſons, who, Deponent verily believes, were ſent in Purſuit of this Deponent, or of the ſaid James Magrath, by the ſaid John Blakeney. And this Deponent ſaith, That by the aforeſaid Means of ſaid John Blakeney, this Deponent could not carry the ſaid Sarah Weedon to Dublin, to give Evidence in purſuance of the ſaid Subpœna; and this Deponent verily believes, the aforeſaid Oppoſition and Behaviour of the ſaid John Blakeney was merely to prevent the ſaid Sarah Weedon's coming to Dublin to give Evidence againſt the ſaid Mary Heath.

But the Court made no Rule.

On the twenty-firſt Day of November 1744, the Counſel for the Proſecutors moved the Court for a Writ of Habeas Corpus to be directed to Colonel John Blakeney, requiring him to have the Body of Sarah Weedon before the Court; and grounded this Motion on the following Affidavits: Sworn the 8th of November.

The King againſt John Blakeney, Eſq.

JOHN WEEDON, of the City of Dublin, came this Day before me and made Oath, That Sarah Weedon, this Deponent's Mother, is now detained againſt her Will, and without any legal Proceſs at Law or Warrant againſt her, at the Houſe of John Blakeney, Eſq. at Abbort, in the County of Galway. And this Deponent ſaith, That on Tueſday the Thirtieth Day of October laſt, this Deponent was at the ſaid Houſe of the ſaid John Blakeney, with Deponent's ſaid Mother, in order to carry her away from the ſaid John Blakeney, but this Deponent could not. And this Deponent further depoſeth, That in the Evening of the ſaid Thirtieth Day of October, this Deponent went with his Brother, Edward Weedon, to the ſaid Houſe of the ſaid John Blakeney, in order, if they poſſibly could, to carry their ſaid Mother away; but the Gates of the ſaid John Blakeney's Yard, and the Doors of his Houſe having been ſhut and locked, this Deponent and his ſaid Brother knocked at the Gate, and the ſaid Sarah Weedon looking out of a Window up one Pair of Stairs in the ſaid Houſe, deſired this Deponent and his ſaid Brother to go off as faſt as they could, for that the Doors were locked upon her, and ſhe could not get out; and that if this Deponent and his ſaid Brother did not immediately go away, they would be knocked on the Head. Whereupon this Deponent and his ſaid Brother went away, being afraid of Danger if they ſtaid any longer; and this Deponent verily believes, the ſaid John Blakeney will, for ſome unlawful Ends and Purpoſes, continue to detain the ſaid Sarah Weedon againſt her Will, and by Force and Dureſs, and without any Authority for ſo doing.

The King againſt John Blakeney, Eſq.

EDWARD WEEDON, of the Gravelly-Hill, in the County of Carlow, came this Day before me and made Oath, That Sarah Weedon, this Deponent's Mother, is now detained againſt her Will, and without any legal Proceſs at Law or Warrant againſt her, at the Houſe of John Blakeney, Eſq. at Abbort, near Caſtle-Blakeney, in the County of Galway. And this Deponent further depoſeth, That in the Evening of the Thirtieth Day of October laſt, this Deponent went with his Brother, John Weedon, to the Houſe of the ſaid John Blakeney, in order, if they poſſibly could, to carry their ſaid Mother away; but the Gates of the ſaid John Blakeney's Yard, and the Doors of his Houſe having been ſhut and locked, this Deponent and his ſaid Brother knocked at the Gate; and the ſaid Sarah Weedon looking out of the Window up one Pair of Stairs in the ſaid Houſe, deſired this Deponent and his ſaid Brother to go off as faſt as they could, for that the Doors were locked upon her, and ſhe could not get out; and that if this Deponent and his ſaid Brother did not immediately go away, they would be knocked on the Head. Whereupon, this Deponent and his ſaid Brother went away, being afraid of Danger if they ſtayed any longer. And this Deponent verily believes, the ſaid John Blakeney will, for ſome unlawful Ends and Purpoſes, continue to detain the ſaid Sarah Weedon againſt her Will, and by Force and Dureſs, and without any Authority for ſo doing.

Mr. Thomas Blakeney, Attorney, informed the Court, That to his Knowledge the material Facts mentioned in the foregoing Affidavits were falſe; and offered that Colonel Blakeney ſhould anſwer thoſe Affidavits, if thoſe concerned for the Proſecutors would agree he ſhould do ſo at Peril of Coſts, and would undertake to pay the Coſts. This Offer Mr. Mac Kercher, then preſent in Court, declined. Mr. Blakeney then deſired, that Edward and John Weedon, who made the Affidavits, ſhould be ordered to attend, and undertook to falſify their Affidavits, by Affidavits. And accordingly, the Court put off the Motion till next Day, and ordered the ſaid Edward and John Weedon to attend then, and Mr. Blakeney to make Affidavit in the mean time.

On the twenty-ſecond Day of November 1744, the above Affidavits of John and Edward Weedon were read; and the following Affidavits of Mr. Thomas Blakeney and Edward Kilkelly were produced and read.

The King againſt John Blakeney, Eſq.

THOMAS BLAKENEY, Gent. maketh Oath, That he very well knows John Blakeney of Abbort, in the County of Galway, Eſq. that he is this Deponent's near Relation, and lives within two Miles of this Deponent's Place of Reſidence in ſaid County; and that he, his Family, and this Deponent's Wife and Family frequently viſit each other. Depoſeth, That on the Day but one after a Verdict was given in the Court of Exchequer on a Trial, which was had between the Leſſee of James Anneſley, Eſq. and the Earl of Angleſea, this Deponent received a Letter from this Deponent's Wife, wherein ſhe mentioned that old Mrs. Weedon, who then lived at Abbort, ſaid, That ſhe lived for many Years with Lord and Lady Altham, and that ſaid Lady never had a Child while in Ireland; but that one Juggy Landy had a Child called James Annesley, and that Lord Altham was ſuppoſed or deemed to be his Father, or to that Purpoſe; which Letter Deponent ſhewed to ſeveral Gentlemen, and was the firſt Account Deponent ever had of ſaid Mrs. Weedon's knowing any thing of that Matter, or of her living in ſaid Lord Altham's Family. Depoſeth, that ſome time about laſt Chriſtmas Holidays this Deponent was at Abbort aforeſaid, and there ſaw the ſaid Mrs. Weedon, and aſked her, whether ſhe lived with Lord and Lady Altham, and if ſaid Lady ever had a Son? And Mrs. Weedon declared that ſaid Lady never had any Child whatſoever ſince her coming into Ireland, to the Time that ſhe and Lord Altham had ſeparated. That Deponent aſked ſaid Mrs. Weedon if ſhe knew Jemmy Anneſley, or whoſe Son he was; that ſaid Mrs. Weedon ſaid ſhe did know Jemmy Anneſley, and that he was the Son of Juggy Landy, and not of Lady Altham; wherefore Deponent always did and does believe, that ſaid Mrs. Weedon is a material Evidence for the Earl of Angleſea, and not for the ſaid James Anneſley. Deponent further depoſeth, That the ſaid Mrs. Weedon has been for ſeveral Years paſt Servant to the ſaid John Blakeney, and lived with him at Abbort aforeſaid; and depoſeth, That on Saturday the third Day of November Inſtant, this Deponent called upon the ſaid John Blakeney at Abbort, in this Deponent's way to Dublin, and there ſaw the ſaid Mrs.

Mrs. Weedon, and depoſeth, That ſhe was ſo far from being confined, or under any Manner of Reſtraint, that ſhe was at full Liberty; that the Doors of the Houſe were open, and that ſhe might have gone in or out, or to any Place ſhe thought proper. And depoſeth, That Deponent was at the ſame Time informed by the ſaid John Blakeney and his Lady, which he believes to be true, that at 12 o'Clock at Night the Tueſday before, ſome People came about his Houſe, and that they had taken or ſtolen away his Servant John Weedon, and that he alſo believed, they alſo intended to take away the ſaid Mrs. Weedon; for that he was informed they had a Horſe with a Pillion, and that ſaid John Weedon rode or travelled on the ſaid Pillion. Depoſeth, That this Deponent met ſaid Mrs. Weedon in the common Hall of ſaid Houſe at Abbort on the Saturday aforeſaid; and that ſhe begged of this Deponent to enquire for her Son Jonny, as ſhe called him, as ſoon as Deponent ſhould arrive in Dublin, and to ſend him Home, for that ſhe was very ſure he would return to his Service, if he got but once ſober, but that ſhe very much feared they would keep him always drunk; and ſeemed greatly troubled at his being taken away. That Deponent promiſed to enquire for him, the ſaid John, and to tell him what ſhe deſired. Depoſeth, That on Thurſday, the eighth Day of November inſtant, the ſaid John Weedon, together with Deponent's Servant, called upon this Deponent at a Houſe, where Deponent was at Dinner in Dublin; that Deponent told ſaid John Weedon, he was ſorry he had quitted his Service without his Maſter's Leave, and alſo told him what his Mother ſaid to this Deponent as aforeſaid, and that ſhe expected he would go back. Whereupon the ſaid John ſaid, he never would, for that he was to be much better provided for. And Deponent having aſked him by whom? he, the ſaid Weedon, ſaid, it was by the young Earl of Angleſea. Whereupon Deponent ſmiled and ſaid, he was not Earl as yet. That ſaid John thereupon ſaid, that whether he was to be Earl, or not, he would provide for him, and, at the ſame Time, wiſhed that his Mother would come up, for that, if ſhe did, ſhe would be much happier, and have much eaſier Bread than ſhe had where ſhe lived. Depoſeth, That he very well knows that the ſaid John Weedon has been for ſeveral Years paſt Servant to the ſaid John Blakeney, and lived with him in his Houſe at Abbort aforeſaid, until he quitted him in the Night of the thirtieth of October laſt; and Deponent verily believes, the ſaid Mrs. Weedon never was, nor is ſhe now, as this Deponent verily believes, under any Manner of Reſtraint, or in any Sort confined by the ſaid John Blakeney, or any other Perſon; but verily believes, ſhe is at full Liberty to go where ſhe thinks proper. And ſaith, he knows that the ſaid Mrs. Weedon has been applied to, on Behalf of the Earl of Angleſea, to attend at Wexford, there to be examined as a Witneſs on his Lordſhip's Behalf, on a Commiſſion, which Deponent believes, is, and has been ſpeeding there for ſome Time, in a Cauſe depending in the High Court of Chancery in England, wherein the ſaid James Anneſley is Plaintiff, and the ſaid Earl of Angleſea is Defendant.

The King againſt John Blakeney, Eſq. } EDWARD KILKELLY, of Liſs, in the County of Galway, Cooper, came this Day before me and made Oath, That on Friday ſevennight this Deponent was at the Defendant's Houſe at Abbort, in the County of Galway. And this Deponent ſaith, That as he was going to the ſaid Houſe he ſaw Mrs. Sarah Weedon, who is, and for a conſiderable Time hath been, Servant to the Defendant, and whom Deponent knows very well, without the Gates of the ſaid Defendant's Yard, as if ſhe was returning from the Place where the Cows were milking, and had, as Deponent apprehended and believed, ſome Milk in her Hands carrying into the Houſe. And this Deponent ſaith, ſhe the ſaid Sarah Weedon was alone, and not in any Sort of Reſtraint or Confinement; and Deponent afterwards, on the ſame Day, ſaw the ſaid Sarah Weedon going about her Buſineſs in the ſaid Houſe, and in no Reſtraint or Confinement; and Deponent converſed with the ſaid Sarah at that Time about ſeveral Matters, and ſhe did not mention any Sort of Reſtraint or Confinement, but told Deponent her Son John Weedon was gone away, and ſeemed much concerned at it. And this Deponent is very ſure the ſaid Sarah is not, nor was not at any Time put into any Sort of Reſtraint or Dureſs by the Defendant.

Court.] Call John Weedon.

JOHN WEEDON.

Mr. Harward offers to ſpeak.

Court.] We have nothing to do with the Birth of James Anneſley; here is Affidavit againſt Affidavit, we muſt hear which of theſe Affidavits is true. We are impoſed on by one Affidavit or other; the Honour of the Court is concerned, and therefore, before we do any Thing, we will hear what John Weedon has to ſay.

Mr. Har.] With humble Submiſſion, I conceive the hearing of us after this Perſon is examined is not a proper Time; this is now my Time to offer what I have to ſay; I ſhall have no Occaſion to ſpeak after the Examination is ended, and therefore beg leave to ſay a few Words now, which are, that if this Perſon is to be examined, I do apprehend it muſt be on the Foot of ſome ſuppoſed Tranſgreſſion that he hath committed.

Court.] No, Sir, it is to diſcover the Truth. We will have no concealing of the Truth in this Court. Swear him.

Mr. Har.] I do not oppoſe your Lordſhip's Right to examine this Witneſs; but———

Court.] Read the Affidavit to him.

Court.] Are you the Son of Sarah Weedon, that lives with Mr. Blakeney? Edward Weedon.] Yes.

Q. What time in October laſt did you go there?---A. The thirtieth.

Q. What time of the Day?---A. In the Evening.

Q. What time?---A. About ſeven or eight o'Clock.

Q. Were the Gates ſhut?---A. They were.

Q. Was it dark?---A. It was dark, my Lord.

Q. Did you ſee or ſpeak to her that Night?---A. I did not.

Q. Did any body elſe?---A. My Brother did.

Q. What did ſhe ſay?

A. She deſired him to go off about his Buſineſs, and bring me with him, or elſe I'd be knocked on the Head, my Lord.

Q. Did ſhe ſay ſhe could not go?—A. She did, my Lord.

Q. For what Reaſon?---A. Becauſe the Doors were locked.

Q. Did ſhe ſay ſhe had a mind to go with you?

A. No, ſhe ſaid no more.

Q. Did you or your Brother aſk her whether ſhe would go, and what did ſhe ſay?

A. She ſaid no more than deſired him to go off, and bring me with him, for if we ſtayed there, I would be knocked on the Head.

Q. Was ſhe kept as a Priſoner?---A. As far as I underſtand, ſhe was.

Q. How come you to underſtand ſo?---A. Becauſe the Gates were ſhut.

Q. What Time was this?---A. About ſeven or eight o'Clock.

Q. Were the Gates open when you came there firſt?

A. No, they were not. My Brother went up firſt to bring her out, and he told her that I was there, come from her; and ſhe was coming out, and he came firſt, and he thought ſhe was following him.

Q. How do you know this?---A. My Brother told me this.

Q. Is it uſual for Gentlemen to ſhut their Gates at Night in the Country?

A. It is in the Country; my Mother ſaid ſhe was ſhut up.

Q. Did ſhe ſay that ſhe was ſhut up, or only that the Gates were ſhut?

A. She ſaid as this, She ſhould not come out, and deſired my Brother to go off and take me along with him, for I'd be knocked on the Head.

Q. Did you hear her ſpeak?—A. I heard her ſpeak.

Q. What did you hear her ſay?

A. I heard her bid my Brother go off and bring me with him, for I ſhould be knocked on the Head.

Q. Did ſhe ſay nothing more?

A. She ſaid no more, but ſhut the Window.

Court.] Read the firſt Part of his Affidavit.

Clerk of the Crown reads it.

Court.] How did your Mother know you were there?

A. My Brother knocked at the Gate.

Q. Did any Body come to the Gate?

A. Nobody; but my Mother opened the Window.

Q. Was ſhe a Servant at that time?—A. She was.

Q. When did you ſee her before that time?

A. I went to her before that by myſelf, about a Month or five Weeks before, and ſhe aſked me if I heard any thing concerning Mr. Anneſley and my Lord Angleſea; I told her I did; and ſhe ſaid, For your Life, do not ſpeak a Word, for you are in the midſt of your Enemies here.

Q. Did you carry a Horſe with you the 30th of October?

A. I did, my Lord.

Q. Did your Mother ſay any thing to you more, the time that you was with her before?

A. She ſaid, I would be very deſirous of ſeeing Mr. Anneſley, if I was in Dublin.

Q. Whoſe Horſe and Pillion was it that you were furniſhed with?

A. I hired them by the way.

Q. Who ſent you to hire them?

A. I hired them by Mr. Anneſley's Orders.

Q. Who gave thoſe Orders to you?---A. Mr. Annesley himſelf.

Q. Your Mother ſaid no more the time you went by yourſelf, but that you were among your Enemies there?---A. No more, my Lord.

Q. Was ſhe a Servant in the Houſe?

A She was a Servant-Maid in the Houſe, and, as far as I underſtand, ſhe was forced.

Q. Who told you ſhe was forced?---A. The Doors were all locked.

Q. Were they locked when your Brother went there?

A. They were open when my Brother came, my Brother went in.

Q. Where did you meet your Brother that Evening?

A. At a Place called Glentane.

Q. How long did your Brother ſtay before he came to you again?

A. He came out to me again in about three Quarters of an Hour.

Q. How ſoon after that did you return?

A. He told me that his Maſter followed him out with a Whip for to kill him.

Q. Did he tell you ſo?---A. He told me ſo.

Q. Did he venture to go back afterwards?

A. When he went back the Gates were ſhut, and he went round to the Backſide of the Houſe, where there was a Door, and knocked at it; my Mother looked out of the Window, and ſaid ſhe could not go: And, ſays ſhe, go your way and bring your Brother with you, for he will be knocked on the Head.

Q. Did ſhe tell you that ſhe was confined or impriſoned?---A. She did not.

Q. Are you or your Brother in any body's Service?

A. We are in Nobody's Service.

Court.] Read the Affidavit.

Clerk of the Crown reads it.

Court.] How long is it ſince you lived at Gravelly-Hill?

A. I left it about two Months ago.

Q. Were you a Houſe-keeper there?

A. I lived there with a Friend of mine.

Q. Can you write?---A. No, my Lord.

Q. Nor read?---A. No.

Q. How came you to make this Affidavit?

A. Them that examined me, drew it.

Q. Who were they?---A. Mr. Geoſtrey.

Q. Is he here?---A. No.

Q. Did you tell him that your Mother was detained?

Q. I told him as thus, that the Doors were locked, and ſhe ſaid ſhe could not come.

Q. Did you tell him theſe Words that are in your Affidavit?

A. I told him no more or leſs than what I have given on my Oath here.

To JOHN WEEDON.

Q. Did your Mother tell you that ſhe was confined?

A. She did not tell me that ſhe was confined.

Q. Nor you do not know it?---A. No, my Lord.

To EDWARD WEEDON.

Q. Did your Mother tell you ſhe was confined?

A. She did not tell me ſhe was confined.

The Matter was then debated by Counſel, after which the Court delivered their Opinion, as follows.

LORD CHIEF JUSTICE MARLAY.

WE are of Opinion, in the firſt place, That no Habeas Corpus can be granted in this Caſe. A Habeas Corpus for the Liberty of the Subject is a Writ of Right, and may be applied for without an Affidavit of the Party, and was done in the Caſes of my Lord Leigh, Sir Robert Viner, and Sir Robert Howard. In the Caſe of Sir Robert Viner, an Habeas Corpus was ſued for, to obtain the Liberty of a Woman confined in his Houſe; the Woman ſaid ſhe was not confined by him, but choſe to ſtay with him. But this does not appear to us at all to be the Caſe here, that there is the leaſt Reſtraint upon Sarah Weedon; but, on the contrary, that ſhe is at her full Liberty; for notwithſtanding theſe Affidavits of theſe Men, it does appear ſo. Edward Weedon of the Gravelly-Hill in the County of Carlow maketh Oath, that Sarah Weedon is now detained (ſworn the 8th of November) by Colonel John Blakeney at Abbort, near Caſtle-Blakeney, in the County of Galway. John Weedon of the City of Dublin maketh Oath, that Sarah Weedon is now detained at the Houſe of John Blakeney, Eſq. at Abbort, in the County of Galway; in Terminis terminantibus the ſame; both illiterate Perſons, and yet both make theſe poſitive Affidavits of her being under Reſtraint, when it appears ſhe was at her full Liberty, not only before, but after theſe Affidavits were made. Theſe Affidavits were made by Markſmen, and therefore the Court ſent for the Perſon that drew the Affidavits, to know why he drew them in the Manner they appear to us; for, upon the Table, theſe Men have declared that they do not know, nay, they cannot ſay they believe, that ſhe is reſtrained of her Liberty. Can we then, when they have declared that their Affidavits are not true, grant the Habeas Corpus? By no means. Conſider the Conſequence of theſe things: By taking a Horſe in a Replevin, a Man may be guilty of Felony, if a Perſon has a mind to knock down every body that ſtands in his way, and procures others to impoſe upon the Court by Affidavits in order to prevent all Oppoſition; in that Caſe the Court will exert their Authority, and puniſh the Perſons that impoſed upon them. We are of Opinion, there is not the leaſt Colour of granting the Habeas Corpus; for, to whom muſt it be directed but to Mr. Blakeney? If Mr. Blakeney does not obey the Habeas Corpus, he muſt be attached: If he does, he muſt come to Dublin; and the Proſecutor has declined to pay the Expence of all this.

The next Point to be conſidered is, whether theſe Men could be attached for falſifying their Affidavits? I am amazed to hear it ſaid, there are no Precedents of Perſons being attached for Prevarication and impoſing on the Court: May be not in this Caſe, but in moſt great Cauſes, that have been long depending, ſuch things have happened. Suppoſe a Man in an Affidavit to put off a Trial, ſhould ſwear, that ſuch a Bond was perfected, and he explains himſelf, when he comes to be examined, that he heard ſuch a one ſay ſo; is not he guilty in Conſcience of Perjury, and ought he not to be puniſhed for Prevarication and for the Impoſition? I can give Inſtances, where Perſons have endeavoured by artful Affidavits to extort exorbitant Bail, for which they have been committed by the Court.

Now as to theſe two Perſons, they have ſworn in the moſt expreſs Terms in their Affidavits, every thing which is neceſſary to induce the Court to grant an Habeas Corpus. I muſt own, if there was an Inducement to do this from filial Piety, I ſhould be very tender how I committed them; but it is plain they are not induced by that Motive; what they did, they did it, that they might be employed, as well as others, by Mr. Anneſley, not out of filial Piety to free their Mother, whom they knew to be at Liberty, nor is there the leaſt Appearance that they had ſuch a Motive. Therefore, as they have endeavoured to impoſe upon the Court, and injure an innocent Perſon, Mr. Blakeney, I think they ought to be committed.

Mr. Juſtice WARD.

THE only thing to excuſe them is their Ignorance. But as the Matter now ſtands, it is plain that the Perſon who drew the Affidavits, knew they were falſe, knew that theſe Men ſwore to a Fact they did not know to be true. Really, a Man of Buſineſs muſt know the Practice in drawing Affidavits, and what kind of Affidavits will ſerve the End propoſed by them; but theſe Men ſwear further, and ſay, that they told him the ſame Story they did now: If that be true, he drew theſe Affidavits moſt falſely; falsely; he led them into Perjury, and is as guilty as they are, and should as certainly be punished, if we had him; but I find on Inquiry, he is not here; therefore, as we have Nobody else to punish, we must punish these Men, who have thus prevaricated and imposed upon the Court.

LORD CHIEF JUSTICE.

IT is a most wicked, profligate Thing in an Agent, to make an illiterate Man swear an Affidavit he knows to be false: Whether that be Goostrey's Case or no I will not say, because he is not here to clear himself, but it looks very like it.

Monday, the 4th of February.

Motions in Behalf of the Crown for putting off the Trial till next Term *.

[Mr. Solicitor General, for the Crown.

" MY Lord, the High Sheriff has been applied to several Times to " give a Copy of the Pannel, according to Custom, to the Agent " for the Prosecutors; but he has not hitherto been able to procure one, " though the other Party has."

" Lord Chief Justice.] The Sheriff could not give it without Leave of " the Court."

" Mr. Solliciter General.] The Court is seldom or never applied to on " that Account, the Sheriff usually gives Copies of the Pannel to the " Parties, without any Application to the Court, two or three Days be- " fore the Trial; but supposing an Application to the Court necessary, " why should he give it to one Party, and refuse it to the other?"

" Mr. Spring, for the Traverser.] The Gentlemen concerned for the " Prosecution have served us with Notice of a Motion to put off the " Trial, and therefore we hope they will make their Motion."]

And desired the Notice might be read.

Clerk of the Crown reads the Notice, as follows, viz.

Counsel in Behalf of his Majesty will move the Court on Monday Morning next, to put off the Defendant's Trial 'till Friday next; which Motion will be grounded upon Affidavits this Day filed in the proper Office, and upon the Affidavits of Mary Heath and of Daniel Mac Kercher, Esq. made in this Cause in the last Michaelmas Term, and the Nature of the Case and Reasons to be offered.

Dated this second of February, 1744.

[" Mr. Solliciter General. We desire first to see if there be a Jury; we " have a Right also to know if the Jury have been rightly summoned."

" The Bailiffs being called to prove the summoning the Gentlemen mentioned " in the Pannel, they appeared, were sworn, and the Pannel was called " over."

" Mr. Solliciter General.] I observe, my Lord, that several of the Gen- " tlemen mentioned in this Pannel are out of the Kingdom, and well " known by all of us to be out of the Kingdom; several others live in " distant Counties, out of the County of Dublin; some are old and in- " firm, and uncapable of serving on Juries for several Years past; others " have been dead several Years; and some are Six-clerks in Chancery, " and Officers in the Custom-house, who neither can or are obliged to " attend."

" Lord Chief Justice.] All Persons summoned ought to appear, and then " shew Cause why they should be exempted from serving."

" The Jury being called over twice, eight of their Number only appeared."

" Mr. Solliciter General.] My Lord, I see only eight Gentlemen of " the Jury attend, and if eight more of these in the Pannel had been in " the Kingdom they would not have attended. Members of Parliament " are exempted, and so are Officers in the Court of Chancery, and Cu- " stom-house. Others are disabled from attending by Absence, the Infir- " mities of old Age, and Death; so that if both Sides were prepared, as " there is no Jury, there can be no Trial this Day; for Talesmen are " not admitted on Trials of this Kind: Therefore we are under no Ne- " cessity of making our Motion for putting it off to Friday next."

" Court.] We had some Thoughts of bringing on the Trial next Wed- " nesday, but there is a Sitting of Nisi prius that Day, and other Suitors " are not to be injured. Let the Trial therefore be put off 'till Thurs- " day, if it should be put off longer there would not be Time for Judg- " ment that Term; but the Attornies should consent. Mrs. Heath, do " you consent it should be put off?

" Mary Heath.] Yes, my Lord.

" The Agent for the Prosecutors was asked whether he would consent to " bring it on a Thursday; but he said he would not come into any such " Consent, nor had he any Authority so to do."]

The Counsel for the Traverser informed the Court, that their Witnesses were in Town at great Expence, and hoped the Counsel for the Prosecutor would agree to prosecute at the Day prefixed, and not then move to put it off longer.

[" Lord Chief Justice. The Reasons given To-day for putting off the " Trial, I can tell you, will not be sufficient next Thursday for putting " it off any further; if the great Expences attending the Trial are to be " saved, the sooner the Trial comes on the better."

" Mr. Solliciter General.] We intended to have tried this Question To- " day; but Mr. Mac Kercher, who conducts this Affair, and is the only " Person that thoroughly knows the Evidence proper to be produced to " prove the Indictment, is on the other Side of the Water, detained by " contrary Winds; and so likewise are some of our most material Wit- " nesses, who are daily expected: There are seven Packets due. If Mr. " Mac Kercher and our Witnesses come, we will immediately go to Trial; " if not, we cannot."

" Mr. Bradstreet, for the Traverser.] I hope, my Lord, that both " Parties shall be confined to particular Hours to examine their Wit- " nesses in; for if the Prosecutors, who examine first, should take up a " long Time, the Traverser might be thereby stinted in Time for the " Examination of her Witnesses: I humbly conceive both Parties should " examine an equal Number of Hours in Turn."

" Mr. Harward.] Such a Rule was never made, my Lord, I am pretty " certain, on Trials of this Kind."

" Mr. Justice Ward.] I have had the Honour of being a considerable " Time on the Bench; I cannot now pretend to bear Fatigue as well as " formerly; but I hope I shall take care that the Jurors, or myself, " shall not be in Danger of being destroyed."

" Lord Chief Justice.] Examining by Hours is not so unprecedented. " It was the old Custom among the Romans, to examine by the Hour- " glass. Gentlemen, I think proper to mention to you, That no Witness " shall be examined, unless his Evidence be previously opened to the Court, and " that one Counsel of a Side only is to examine."]

Thursday Morning, February 7th.

[The Court being sat,

" MR. Sollicitor General, for the Crown.] My Lord, I mentioned to " your Lordship last Monday, that Mr. Mac Kercher and several of " our most material Witnesses were on the other Side of the Water wait- " ing for a Passage; if they had arrived, we should willingly have tried " this Traverse To-day; but it has so happened contrary to our Expecta- " tion that they are not yet arrived, and therefore as we are not yet fur- " nished with our material Evidences, or with any Person acquainted " with the Evidence proper to be applied to prove the Facts in the Indict- " ment, we cannot with Safety go to Trial. Colonel Weldon, my Lord, " who is known to be a Gentleman of great Worth and Reputation, has " been served with a Subpœna, but is extremely ill of the Gout in his " Bed, and though a very material Witness and willing to give his Evi- " dence, he is not able to travel to Town without endangering his Life, " and the Prosecutors, without the Benefit of his Testimony, cannot pro- " perly proceed to Trial. I therefore only move your Lordship that this " Trial may be put off 'till the first Day of next Easter Term."

" Mr. Serjeant Marshall, for the Crown.] The Traverser, my Lord, re- " moved this Indictment in October last by Certiorari from the Commission " of Oyer and Terminer into this Court on the very Day it was to have " been tried, after she had put the Gentlemen for the Prosecution to all " the Expence of a Trial, for Want of giving them previous Notice of " her Intentions to put it off. And on the 7th of November when she ap- " peared on her Traverse in this Court, on her bare Allegation that she " was not prepared to take her Trial, she was farther indulged, and had " 'till the 14th given her, to prepare herself for it, though the Gentle- " men were then also ready for Trial.

" On the 13th, the Day immediately preceding this last Day appointed " by the Court for her Trial, the Counsel for the Traverser again moved " to put off her Trial on her single Affidavit, that she had some material " Witnesses in England, and in remote Places of this Kingdom, and upon " that Foundation alone her Trial was put off 'till this Term. We, my " Lord, have given regular and timely Notice to the Agent for the Tra- " verser, that we would apply to your Lordship to put off the Trial. " Affidavits we have to shew that we are not prepared to come to Trial, " and therefore we hope we shall have the like Indulgence with the Tra- " verser to put it off 'till next Term, especially as this is the first Appli- " cation of that Kind we have made, and as we have formerly been put " to so great Inconveniences and Charges by the Traverser's affected " Delays.

" If your Lordship pleases that Mr. Mac Kercher's Affidavit sworn the " 13th of November last, which was read upon the Traverser's Motion " to put off her Trial last Term, may be now read."

" Court. Let Mr. Mac Kercher's Affidavit be read."]

Mr. Marshall.] I pray, my Lord, that Mr. Nelson's Affidavit may be read.

Court.] Read his Affidavit.

The King against Mary Heath. } RICHARD NELSON, of the City of Dublin, Gent. maketh Oath, That he, this Deponent, being employed as Agent on Behalf of the Prosecutors, he prepared Briefs for Counsel, and sent several Subpœnas for Witnesses to several Parts of this Kingdom, to give Evidence on Behalf of his Majesty against the Traverser on her Trial, which was, as Deponent believes, appointed to be had on the 4th Day of February Instant. Saith, That by a Letter, which this Deponent lately received by Post from Mr. Mac Kercher, dated London, the 10th of January last, this Deponent verily believes said Mr. Mac Kercher did on or about the 17th Day of January last leave London, in order to come to this Kingdom, to carry on the Prosecution against the Traverser, the said Mac Kercher being one of the principal Persons concerned in carrying on said Prosecution; and verily believes, the said Mac Kercher is, and has been, at Park-gate or Holyhead for some Days past, and would have been here before this Time, if the Wind had served for a Passage; and this Deponent expects him in this Kingdom as soon as the Wind becomes fair for a Passage from Holyhead or Park-gate. Says, He believes that William Goostrey is a material Witness to be produced against Defendant, and believes said Goostrey and others, who are Witnesses, as Deponent believes, to be produced against the Traverser, are waiting with said Mac Kercher at Park-gate or Holyhead for a Passage, and believes, that an effectual Prosecution cannot be carried on against said Heath until said Mac Kercher comes to this Kingdom.

Sworn the 2d of February, 1744.

Mr. Marshall.] I pray, my Lord, that the Affidavit of Robert Kennedy may be likewise read, which will inform your Lordship of Colonel Weldon's State of Health.

Court.] Read his Affidavit.

The King against Mary Heath. } ROBERT KENNEDY, of the City of Dublin, maketh Oath, That on the 27th Day of January last he, this Deponent, served Arthur Weldon, Esq. with a Subpœna, issued out of and under the Seal of this Court, dated the 28th Day of November last, by delivering unto the said Arthur Weldon, at his House in Raheen, in the Queen's County, a Copy of said Subpœna, and at same Time shewed him the Original, and offered him a British Shilling in Silver, which he refused to take. By which Subpœna, said Weldon, and others therein named, were required to be in this Court on Monday, the 4th Day of February then next, between the Hours of seven and eight of the Clock in the Forenoon, to testify on Behalf of his Majesty concerning a certain Perjury, whereof Mary Heath stands indicted. And saith, That at the Time this Deponent ſerved ſaid Weldon, he told Deponent he would moſt willingly attend in purſuance of ſaid Subpœna, but that he was ſo ill of the Gout, that he could not ſtand, or ſcarce ſtir, and that he would not venture his Life; and that the Week before he had the Gout in his Stomach. And ſaith, ſaid Weldon then appeared to this Deponent to be very weak and ill, and was not, as Deponent believes, able to walk one Step, nor was he, as he believes, able to travel in a Coach or Carriage from his Houſe to Dublin without great Danger and Hazard of his Life; and verily believes, ſaid Weldon is not, nor has ſince been able, without the greateſt Danger to his Life, to travel in a Carriage or otherwiſe to Dublin; and verily believes, ſaid Weldon is a material Witneſs to be produced on behalf of his Majeſty againſt the Traverſer, on the Indictment for Perjury againſt her; and verily believes the ſaid Mary Heath cannot be effectually proſecuted upon ſaid Indictment without the Teſtimony of ſaid Weldon; and believes ſaid Weldon would readily attend to give Evidence on the Trial of ſaid Mary Heath, if he could do it without endangering his Life; and verily believes, and doubts not but ſaid Weldon will attend to give Evidence on behalf of his Majeſty on the Trial of ſaid Heath, in caſe the Trial be put off to next Term, and that ſaid Weldon will be then able to travel with Safety to his Life.

Which was accordingly read, as likewiſe the others to oppoſe the ſaid Motion.

The Traverſer Mary Heath, as Page 432.

The King against Mary Heath. } THE Traverſer, Mary Heath, maketh Oath; That her Place of Abode is in London, in the Kingdom of Great Britain, and Deponent having lived for ſeveral Years with Mary Lady Altham, wife of Arthur late Lord Altham, was prevailed upon to come to this Kingdom in the Month of October 1743, in order to be examined as a Witneſs upon a Trial, that was had at the Bar of the Exchequer in this Kingdom in Michaelmas Term 1743, between Campbell Craig, Leſſee of James Annesley, and the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Angleſea; and Deponent was examined on ſaid Trial on behalf of ſaid Earl. And ſaith, That after ſaid Trial was over, Deponent was prevailed upon to continue in this Kingdom, in order to be examined as a Witneſs on behalf of ſaid Earl in a Cauſe depending in the Chancery in England between ſaid James Annesley and ſaid Earl of Angleſea; and Deponent was examined as a Witneſs in ſaid Cauſe in or about October laſt, by virtue of a Commiſſion from England, which was then ſpeeding at Wexford; but ſome time before Deponent was ſo examined, ſhe was arreſted upon a Warrant for Perjury, alledged to be committed by her in her Evidence on ſaid Trial; and the Doors of the Houſe, in which Deponent lodged in Latten's-Court, Dublin, or Liberties thereof, were broke open when Deponent was ſo arreſted by a Parcel of Bailiffs or Setters, ſome of whom declared they had waited for an Opportunity to find Deponent alone. And when Deponent was ſo arreſted, ſhe was brought from her ſaid Lodgings to Henry-Street, and from thence towards ſaid James Annesley's Houſe or Lodgings in College-Green; and in the Road, ſome of the Perſons that arreſted Deponent, or attended them, directed that Deponent ſhould be brought to Caſtle-Street; and Deponent was accordingly brought to a Tavern in Caſtle-Street, and from thence to a Publick Houſe, as Deponent believes it to be, in Chriſt-Church-Yard; where the Perſon, before whom Deponent was brought, declared, he believed it was not a bailable Offence; and ſeveral Perſons that appeared as Agents for ſaid James Annesley, ſeemed to doubt whether Bail could be taken for Deponent; but at length ſaid Perſon bound Deponent in Recognizance of one Thouſand Pounds, and each of the Securities in five Hundred Pounds, to the beſt of Deponent's Remembrance, and bound Deponent to appear at the Seſſions of Kilmainham, and refuſed to bind Deponent to appear at any other Place. And Deponent is informed and believes, that there were not any Examinations returned to Kilmainham againſt Deponent, but Deponent was bound over to appear at the Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer held in or about October laſt, and was obliged to give Security for Deponent's Appearance there. And depoſeth, That Deponent's Buſineſs and Affairs require her Attendance in London, and her being obliged to ſtay longer in this Kingdom will be very inconvenient and prejudicial to her; and ſaith, that the Attempt to put off Deponent's Trial is made, as ſhe verily believes, with Intent to harraſs and diſtreſs Deponent, and the ſaid Earl of Angleſea and Charles Annesley. And Deponent is informed, and verily believes, there are at this time in this City at leaſt fourſcore Perſons that have been Subpœna'd and brought hither from different Parts of this Kingdom at great Coſts and Expences to attend and be examined as Witneſſes on behalf of Deponent upon her Trial. Saith, That ſeveral of ſaid Witneſſes are old and infirm, and believes in her Conſcience, that if her Trial ſhould be put off to another Term, ſeveral of her moſt material Witneſſes may die; and verily believes it will not be poſſible at a future time to get her ſaid Witneſſes together, if they are once diſperſed, or go to their reſpective Places of Abode. And ſaith, there are two Perſons lately dead, that were very material Witneſſes for Deponent.

The King against Mary Heath. } MICHAEL LACY, of Camolin, in the County of Wexford, Gent. maketh Oath, That he, this Deponent, has been employed by the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Angleſea in bringing ſeveral Witneſſes to this City from ſeveral Parts of the Country, to give Evidence on behalf of the Traverſer upon her Trial in this Cauſe; and ſaith, there are now, and for ſome Days paſt have been, in this City upwards of eighty Witneſſes, who have been brought from different Parts of this Kingdom, in order to give Teſtimony on behalf of Defendant on her Trial, many of whom are Perſons of Figure and Fortune, and have been brought and kept here at the Expence of ſaid Earl and Charles Annesley, Eſq. And ſaith, he hath made the exacteſt Computation he poſſibly could of the Expences of bringing ſaid Witneſſes and keeping them in this City, and the neceſſary Expence that muſt attend their being ſent to their reſpective Places of Abode; and ſaith, the ſame, upon the moſt moderate Computation, will amount at leaſt to ſeven hundred Pounds.

The King against Mary Heath. } EDMOND BOURK, of Collumkill, in the County of Kilkenny, Farmer, maketh Oath, That ſince the Beginning of December laſt he, this Deponent, has been employed to ſerve Subpœnas to teſtify and give Notices to Witneſſes to attend and give Evidence on behalf of the Traverſer, on the Trial appointed to be this Day; and that he attended ſeveral of ſaid Witneſſes to Dublin for that Purpoſe. And Deponent knows there now are in and about the City of Dublin upwards of thirty Perſons, and believes there are upwards of ſixty Perſons attending as Witneſſes on the Part of the Traverſer, ſeveral of whom are Perſons of Diſtinction and Fortune, and have brought with them ſeveral Servants and other Perſons and Horſes. And ſaith, he verily believes, and is ſatisfied in his Conſcience, that Two Hundred Guineas will not defray the Expences of the Witneſſes ſo in Town, their Lodgings, Servants, Horſes and other Attendants for the Space of four Days. And ſaith, he attended the Execution of the Commiſſion for the Examination of Witneſſes at Wexford, in the Months of September and October laſt paſt, between the Earl of Angleſea and James Annesley, and was himſelf examined as a Witneſs on that Commiſſion, relative to the Parentage and Birth of ſaid James Annesley, and the Iſſue or ſuppoſed Iſſue of Arthur late Lord Altham by his Lady; and ſaith, he was credibly informed and believes, that Dean Hughes, late of Eniſcorthy, Gent. and Henry Giffard, late of Roſs, Gent. and the Reverend William Hervey, of Bargybridge, Clerk, were examined on ſaid Commiſſion, on behalf of ſaid Earl, and believes ſaid Dean Hughes, and Henry Giffard are ſince dead, and that the ſaid Mr. Hervey was about Michaelmas laſt taken ill and his Life deſpaired of; and ſaith, that ſeveral of ſaid Witneſſes now in Dublin attending ſaid Trial, are antient and infirm Perſons, and live diſperſed in ſeveral Parts of this Kingdom.

The King against Mary Heath. } JOHN CAMPBELL, of maketh Oath, That on the thirtieth Day of January laſt this Deponent left Park-gate, where he had been waiting for a Wind eight Days, and during his ſtay at Park-gate aforeſaid, he heard nothing of Daniel Mac-Kercher or Mr. Gooſtrey's being there, and believes, if they had been there, he could not but have heard of them. That Deponent went from Park-gate aforeſaid, acroſs Land to Holyhead, where he ſtaid but one Night, and got his Paſſage in the Packet, and arrived at Skerries the fourth Inſtant in the Evening; and that Deponent heard nothing of them at Holyhead; and believes they were neither at Park-gate or Holyhead at the time aforeſaid.

The King against Mary Heath. } ROBERT KENNEDY, of the City of Dublin, maketh Oath, That he, this Deponent, having received from Mr. Richard Nelſon ſeveral Subpœnas for Witneſſes to appear on the fourth Day of February Inſtant, to give Evidence on behalf of his Majeſty againſt the Defendant upon her Trial, this Deponent accordingly ſerved a great many of ſaid Witneſſes with ſaid Subpœnas reſpectively in the ſeveral Counties in this Kingdom, in which they live, and ſaith, a great many of ſuch Witneſſes are come to this City in order to give Evidence againſt ſaid Heath on her Trial.

[" Mr. Recorder, for the Traverſer.] The Bill was found in October by
" the Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer; and the Reaſon of moving the " Indictment by Certiorari was, that it was impoſſible for the Traverſer,
" in ſo ſhort a Warning, to prepare for her Trial; and it ſo happening,
" that Michaelmas Term was ſo cloſe on the Heels of finding the Indict-
" ment, ſhe could not, notwithſtanding all her Efforts, collect all her
" Witneſſes from the remote Parts of this Kingdom, and from England,
" to prepare for this Trial. And therefore could it be imagined that it
" was to delay Juſtice, when the Traverſer was only endeavouring to " have an Opportunity of Defence? The Proſecutors then ſaid they were " ready; and pray why not the ſame Reaſon now of being prepared? I
" they put themſelves to unneceſſary Expences laſt Term in preparing " for Trial, the Fault of that is to be imputed to themſelves; they had
" notice given them that Application would be made to poſtpone the " Trial."

" Counſel for the Crown.] It clearly appeared to the Court laſt Term,
" that the Traverſer had not made the leaſt Effort, or taken one Step to " prepare for her Trial; and that we had very ſhort Notice of her

" Intentions,

" Intentions, and that only after they knew all our Witneſſes were ſent " for and come to Town."

" Mr. Recorder, for the Traverſer.] The Traverſer is at great Expen- " ces, her Witneſſes being now in Dublin; and the Reaſon that was of- " fered laſt Term for putting off the Trial, cannot ſubſiſt now, becauſe " both Parties have had ſufficient Time to make the neceſſary Preparations " for Trial. Pray, my Lord, what Foundation have they now to put off " this Trial?"

" As to Mr. MacKercher's Affidavit, wherein he ſays, that Mrs. Weed- " en is a material Witneſs for the Proſecutor; he never ſaw her, yet he " ventures to ſay this; ſhe is here to be examined, and will clear up that " Matter, and obviate the Objection."

" Counſel for the Crown.] Mr. MacKercher was informed of it by her Sons, " and by many others to whom ſhe had declared herſelf on that head."

" Mr. Recorder.] The next thing to be conſidered, my Lord, is the Affi- " davit of Robert Kennedy, who ſwears, That Mr. Weldon is a material Wit- " neſs, without giving any Account that he knows him to be ſo; this " Perſon, who is only a Server of Subpœnas, ventures, from his own " Knowledge, to know what is or what is not material. If the Agent in " the Cauſe would ſwear it, there might be ſome Reliance on it. If this " Trial is put off, my Lord, another Witneſs may be found next Term, " which might be thought as equally material; ſo that this Gentlewoman, " before ſhe can have an Opportunity of juſtifying herſelf, may die in the " mean time, under the Imputation of the Indictment.

" If they had produced the Affidavit of any Phyſician who attended " Mr Weldon, to certify his Illneſs and his Inability to come to Town, it " would be more proper than the Aſſertion of the Server of Subpœnas: " Beſides, my Lord, a Man in the Gout, though he cannot walk, might " be able to travel. But how a Perſon who is neither Attorney or Agent in " the Cauſe, and who is not to be preſumed to be in the Secrets of the " Proſecutor, can ſwear Mr. Weldon a material Witneſs, is ſomewhat very " extraordinary; beſides, my Lord, ſince the Time of Service of the Sub- " pœnas, which was the 27th of January, he may have ſo recovered as to " be able to come to Town, though indiſpoſed then. But why was not " this Gentleman thought of laſt Term, when the Proſecutors ſaid they " were ready? Therefore, conſidering the Circumſtances of this Caſe, I " hope your Lordſhips will not put off the Trial."

" Mr. Sol. Gen.] My Lord, it appears that the Bill of Indictment was " found againſt this Woman the 24th of October, yet Application was " made on the 13th of November laſt to put off her Trial; ſhe had that " Interval of three Weeks time to prepare; but becauſe ſhe ſwore ſhe had " ſome material Witneſſes who were wanting on her Trial, it was put " off. I hope, my Lord, the Reaſons which we offer will have the ſame " Weight, 'till we can be properly prepared. Mr. MacKercher, who is " one of the principal Managers of this Proſecution, and without whoſe " Preſence it cannot be carried on effectually, is detained on the other Side " of the Water by contrary Winds, and if this Cauſe ſhould be put off " 'till the next Term, he may and probably will be here then; ſo that I " hope we ſhall have the ſame Indulgence that the Traverſer had, and that " this Trial may be put off 'till the next Term."

" L. C. J.] In the Affidavit of Robert Kennedy, there is no Addition to " his Name, which is not very common in Affidavits."

Robert Kennedy was called and ſworn.

Mr. Daly.] Do you know Colonel Arthur Weldon?

Robert Kennedy.] Yes, I do, Sir.

Q. How do you know that he is a material Witneſs in this Cauſe? Who told you ſo?---A. I ſaw him ſworn to what he could ſay.

Q. Where?---A. Before a Maſter in Chancery.

Q. Have you any other Reaſon?---A. I have not.

Court.] Did you read his Affidavit?---A. I read his Affidavit, my Lord.

Mr. Daly.] What Affidavit did you read?---A. An Affidavit ſworn before a Maſter in Chancery at Maryborough Aſſizes.

Q. Was you preſent?---A. I was.

Court.] In what Cauſe was it?

A In the Cauſe of Richard Earl of Angleſea and James Anneſley, Eſq.

Mr. Daly.] Was there any Cauſe depending at Maryborough?

A. No, I went there, and met him there and the Maſter in Chancery; Mr. Morton was preſent, and his Teſtimony was wrote; he ſwore to it, and I witneſſed it.

Court.] In what Cauſe?

A. They ſay, it was to be laid before the Attorney General of England.

Q. Are you uſed to Buſineſs?—A. I am not bred to the Law Buſineſs.

Q. Do you underſtand what is material in a Proſecution for Perjury, and what not?

A. I think, what appeared in that Teſtimony was very material.

Q. Did you ſhew that Affidavit to any of the Agents of Mr. Anneſley?

A. Mr. Morton read it.

Q. Did you ſhew it to any Agent of Mr. Anneſley?

A. I brought it to Dublin, and gave it to Mr. MacKercher.

Q. Do you know what is material Evidence in a Trial for Perjury, and what is in another Cauſe?

A. As far as my Reaſon directs me, I do.

Q. What Employment do you follow?—A. I keep a Beer-houſe and Shop, my Lord. I do import a great deal of Beer, my Lord.

Mr. Daly.] I am ſorry for it. Are not you a Peruke-maker by Trade?

A. No, I am not.

Q. Did you ever ſee Mr. Welden before that Day you ſaw him at Maryborough?—A. I did.

Q. Where?——A. In Dublin, often.

[" Lord Chief Juſtice.] He is not a proper Perſon to diſtinguiſh materi- " al Evidence, and I obſerve that no Affidavit was made 'till Yeſterday, " that Mr. Weldon was a material Witneſs."

" Mr. Tiſdall.] The Public is concerned in this Proſecution; Trials are " put off frequently in behalf of the Crown, on Affidavits of Witneſſes " not being able to attend: We hope the Crown and the Publick are at " leaſt intitled to the ſame Indulgence as was given laſt Term to the Tra- " verſer on her Application to the Court; why ſhould ſhe, my Lord, " who by affected Delays put off her Trial ſo often before, be ſuffered to " take advantage of our Weakneſs at preſent?"

" Mr. Daly.] I would obſerve to your Lordſhips, that Mr. Levingſtone, " on the 11th of November laſt, ſwore an Affidavit before a Maſter in " Chancery, in the Suit of Mr. Anneſley againſt Lord Angleſea, that Colonel " Weldon was in ſo bad a State of Health, that it was feared the Plaintiff " would loſe the Benefit of his Teſtimony, unleſs he was examined de bene " eſſe; yet on the 13th, two Days after this Affidavit, Mr. MacKercher " puſhed to have the Trial brought on; ſo that it is plain they then thought " they might proceed without Mr. Weldon's Evidence. My Lord, we " have the Copy of Mr. Levingſtone's Affidavit, which we beg leave may " be read."

" Mr. Harward objects to the reading of Mr. Levingſtone's Affidavit, " which was made in the Court of Chancery, and ſays it is not an Affida- " vit in the Cauſe of his Majeſty againſt Mary Heath; therefore he hopes " it won't be admitted to be read. Beſides, this is only a Copy of an Affi- " davit."

" Court.] You do not object then to the reading the Affidavit, but a Co- " py of the Affidavit. Pray is not the Affidavit of Record, and ought not " the Copy of a Record to be admitted to be read? Pray in the Exchequer " Chamber would not the Copy of a Record be admitted to be read?"

" Mr. Daly.] Suppoſe an Affidavit charging Perjury was made in the " Court of Chancery, could it not be laid before the Grand-Jury?"

" Court.] Gentlemen for the Proſecutor, ſhew us ſome Precedents why " a Copy of Mr. Levingſtone's Affidavit ſhould not be read."

" Mr. Harward mentioned the Caſe of Edworth againſt Edgeworth " againſt reading the Affidavit: And moreover, my Lord, tho' Col. Wel- " don was in ſuch a State of Health, as made it prudent to examine him to " preſerve his Teſtimony; yet he might have been well enough to attend " the Trial laſt Term."

" Lord Chief Juſtice.] Are not Affidavits in the Spiritual Court read here " on Prohibitions? There are no Precedents ſhewn why the Copy of Mr. " Levingſtone's Affidavit ſhould not be read."

" Arthur MacGuire ſworn to prove he compared the Copy which he had " in his Hand with Mr. Levingſtone's Affidavit on Record, and that it was " a true Copy thereof, which was read."]

The King against Mary Heath. } ARTHUR MAGWIRE, of the City of Dublin, Gent. came this Day before me and made Oath, That he compared the above Copy of an Affidavit with the Original Affidavit in the Uſher's Office of his Majeſty's High Court of Chancery in Ireland, and ſaith, the ſame is a true Copy, and that he ſaw Hugh Swiney, the Clerk in the ſaid Office, ſign the Name *Ste. [" Mr. Walſh, for the Crown.] My Lord, if there was no other Founda- " tion to put off this Trial but the Affidavit that has been made of Mr. " Welden's being a material Witneſs, I humbly apprehend, it would be a " ſufficient Reaſon. The Perſon who made the Affidavit was examined " before your Lordſhips. He has mentioned why he was a material Wit- " neſs; and though he is not a Perſon of great Diſtinction, as Mr. Re- " corder would have him, he is a very creditable, honeſt Man, and has a " Right to be believed on his Oath, as well as any other Man.

" My Lord, there are ſeveral other Witneſſes who are very material to " attend on this Trial, who cannot poſſibly attend if it comes on now, " and not proper to diſcloſe who they are, or whether they are or are not " material, it is ſufficient that they are ſworn to be material. We were " ready to come to Trial laſt Term, and tho' we ſhould not then have " had the Attendance of Mr. Weldon there, we might have had other " Witneſſes to prove the Point for which we now want his Evidence. " Thoſe Witneſſes we have not at preſent, therefore conſidering the Diſ- " abilities we are under at this Time, we hope we ſhall be indulged for " once, as well as the Traverſer has been before."

" Lord Chief Juſtice.] Gentlemen, did you ever know of a Trial under " theſe Circumſtances to be put off without paying Coſt?"

" Counſel for the Proſecutors.] There was the ſame and ſtronger Reaſon " laſt Term for the Traverſer's paying Coſt, and yet it was denied us."

" Mr. Harward.] My Lord, this Bill of Indictment comes here as well " ſupported as any Indictment that was ever brought into this " Court. I ſay it is ſupported by a Verdict found by twelve Gentlemen " of as great Repute and Character as ever were upon any Jury, who had " it for fifteen Days under their Conſideration. There is no Imputation, " my Lord, of its being an idle or wanton Proſecution. This Indictment " was removed by Certiorari. It is no Writ of Right that the Subject " has, but in reality it is an Indulgence to the Subject. The repeated

" Indulgence

" Indulgence given to the Traverſer in not bringing on her Trial laſt " Term, has been mentioned already, and as this Proſecution is in behalf " of the Crown, we hope an equal Hand will be carried between his Ma- " jeſty and the Subject. Mr. Mac Kercher has ſworn in his Affidavit, " that ſome material Witneſſes to be examined in this Cauſe had neceſſary " Calls to England; and that if the Traverſer's Trial ſhould be put off to " this Term, that it would be almoſt impoſſible for them to attend, nay " it was plainly told the Court they could not attend: We find he is not " here, and other material Witneſſes are at the other Side of the Water " waiting for Wind; which I ſay adds more Credit to Mr. Mac Kercher's " former Affidavit, for it is fallen out as he ſaid, that if the Trial was " poſtponed, it was next to an Impoſſibility that they could attend.

" Mr. Nelſon has mentioned a Letter he received from Mr. Mac Ker- " cher, that he expected him with the firſt fair Wind. Kennedy has men- " tioned in his Affidavit the ill State of Health of Colonel Weldon, and " that he was a material Witneſs.

" As to the Objections that Kennedy was not Agent, and therefore " cannot know whether he was a material Evidence, I humbly rely " on it, my Lord, that it can have no manner of Weight; for Kennedy " has told your Lordſhips, that he was preſent when Mr. Weldon " ſwore his Affidavit, and had the Cuſtody of it, and therefore muſt " know the Purport thereof, and how far his Teſtimony might be " relative to this Trial. I beg leave to ſay, that the ſingle Teſtimony of " Mr. Weldon, as he is a Gentleman of an unexceptionable Character, " might be put in the Scale againſt many Witneſſes, not ſo well eſtabliſh- " ed in point of Reputation; and the Want of his Evidence is a ſufficient " Motive to poſtpone the Trial.

" I muſt further obſerve to your Lordſhips, that laſt Monday there ap- " peared in the Box only eight of the Jury mentioned in the Pannel; ſo " that if both Parties were prepared, the Trial could not have come on " that Day; and as this Day's Application is the firſt and only one on " our Part for putting off the Trial till next Term, I hope your Lord- " ſhips will indulge us in it."]

[" Mr. Robbins mentioned, that the ſame Cauſe of putting off the Trial " laſt Monday ſtill ſubſiſts, and urged very ſtrongly ſome of the Reaſons " offered by the other Counſel for putting off the Trial."

" Mr. Mac Manus.] My Lord, it fully appears from the ſeveral Pro- " ceedings, the affected Delays given by the Traverſer to poſtpone her " Trial to this Term.

" The Bill of Indictment (as has been already obſerved) was found " in October laſt; and the Traverſer, to poſtpone her being tried at the " then Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, brought a Certiorari; ſo that I " beſeech your Lordſhips to conſider, that the Indictment comes into this " Court at the Prayer of the Traverſer. The Court were bound of right " to avoid it at the Inſtance of the King; becauſe every Indictment be- " ing at the Suit of the Crown, he has a Prerogative of ſuing in what " Court he pleaſes; but at the Requeſt of the Defendant a Certiorari is " ſeldom grantable for the Removal of an Indictment before the Juſtices " of Goal Delivery, and very rarely if ever for removing an Indictment " for Perjury, Forgery, and other heinous Miſdemeanours, where the " Publick is ſo nearly intereſted, in regard ſuch Crimes deſerve all poſſi- " ble Diſcountenance; and the Certiorari might delay, if not wholly diſ- " countenance the Proſecution, and ſo delivered in 1ſt Syder. 54.

" It is likewiſe delivered there as Law, if a Cauſe be moved out of an " inferior Court, it ought to be tried the ſame Term that it is removed, " that the Party may not be delay'd by Certiorari. My Lord, after it " was removed, and the Traverſer appeared on her Traverſe in this " Honourable Court, the 7th of November, ſhe had Time given her 'till " the 14th; when the 14th came, ſhe again moved to put it further off " 'till this Term.

" The Proſecutors very juſtly oppoſed the Motion laſt Term, of delay- " ing this Trial any further, 'till this Term, in regard they were at great " Expences, and had ſeveral times prepared for it; yet on the Affidavit " of Mrs. Heath, that ſhe had not ſome of her material Witneſſes ready, " it was poſtponed: ſo that I ſay, my Lord, this Trial was put off, at " her Inſtance, at a Time when by Law ſhe ſhould and ought to have " been tried, and thoſe Gentlemen had a Right to demand a Trial.

" There have been Affidavits read to your Lordſhips how material Mr. " Weldon's Evidence is, and that he cannot now attend, but that the " next Term it is hoped he will be able to give his Attendance, which is " a ſtrong Motive to put off this Trial in behalf of the Crown. I beg " leave, my Lord, to ſay, that the Caſe of an Indictment is not like that " of an Information. The Promoters of an Information may be guilty of " a Default, but no Latches or Default can be imputed to the Crown, " at whoſe Inſtance all Indictments are ſuppoſed to be.

" My Lord, it is equally odious to puniſh the Innocent as to let the " Guilty go free: your Lordſhip put off the Trial laſt Term, leſt the " Innocent ſhould be puniſhed, upon a Preſumption of Innocence till the " contrary appeared; and I am ſure, my Lord, you will be equally care- " ful this Day not to let the Guilty go free, which may be the Caſe if " the Proſecution be now hurry'd on, in the Abſence of ſeveral material " Witneſſes, who by Sickneſs and other Accidents are now prevented at- " tending at this Trial, and in the Abſence of the Perſon who conducts " it. From theſe Circumſtances I hope your Lordſhip will put this " Trial off 'till next Term."

" Mr. Callaghan.] In all Caſes, my Lord, where any Indulgence is to " be ſhewn, it is granted to the Crown; yet I do not ſay but publick " Juſtice ſhould be properly and equally adminiſtered: The Accuſation " founded on this Indictment carries a great Degree of Preſumption, tho' " not Conviction; the Objection of Kennedy's not knowing whether Mr. " Weldon is a material Witneſs or not, with great Submiſſion, can have " no Force; other Perſons may ſometimes know who are material Wit- " neſſes as well as Men of Buſineſs. If a Perſon ſtands unimpeached in " his Character, there can be no Objection to his Teſtimony. It is every " Day's Experience to put off Trials, if it appears that a material Wit- " neſs is viſited with a Diſorder, and can't attend; in the preſent Caſe " it appears ſeveral are abſent.

" As to what is offered on the other Side, that this may be a Foundation " for finding out other material Witneſſes that cannot be preſent next " Term; That, my Lord, will have no great Weight, for by the ſame " Reaſon no Trial could ever be put off for want of material Evidence. " Moreover, my Lord, if the Trial be put off 'till next Term, and the " Traverſer ſhould then happen to be acquitted, it will be ſo much the " more to her Honour; but if ſhe eſcapes for want of due, proper, or " effectual Proſecution, ſhe will not ſtand as unimpeached from publick " Cenſure as otherwiſe ſhe would.

" It has been already mentioned what Expences we have been put to " laſt Term, which might have been ſaved if we had known in time that " her Trial was to be delayed; but Care was taken that it ſhould not be " known, 'till the Proſecutors had been put to as great Charges as if the " Trial had come on: And as great Miſchiefs muſt ariſe if this Trial " ſhould not be poſtponed, I hope, my Lord, it will not be brought on " 'till next Term."

" Mr. Harding.] All Queſtions are to be determined by the Import- " ance of Evidence: I ſay, my Lord, in a Caſe of this kind, that on the " Weight of material Evidence all Queſtions muſt ultimately depend. If " it appears that we have material Witneſſes, who cannot attend at pre- " ſent, and if it ſo happen that we muſt loſe the Benefit of their Teſti- " mony if this Trial comes on, this Matter muſt ſtill remain in the dark; " and if the Traverſer ſhould be acquitted for want of ſuch important " Evidence, ſhe will in that reſpect ſtand under an Imputation. And I " muſt beg leave to ſay, that I admire why Gentlemen from ſuch Cir- " cumſtances ſhould be fond of trying this Traverſe now, ſince the Pro- " ſecutors are not prepared; and that Mrs. Heath's preſſing on the Trial " this Day, when ſhe knows the Proſecutor is not ready, is an Argu- " ment that ſhe knows herſelf guilty. My Lord, the Gentlemen of the " other Side have laid great Streſs upon the Objection that Robert Kennedy " could not know that Colonel Weldon was a material Witneſs. The " Charge in the Indictment is, that Lady Altham was not with Child, " nor never had a Child at Dunmaine. Surely, my Lord, he may know " how far this Charge may be collected from the Affidavit of Mr. Weldon, " which he had ſeen, and had in his Cuſtody, and which muſt be relative " to this Matter. Beſides, my Lord, from the Converſation that Kennedy " had with Mr. Weldon, that he would willingly attend, but that he was " ſo ill that he could not then venture his Life to travel; I ſay, with " humble Submiſſion, from this very Declaration he might know he was " a material Witneſs. Pray, my Lord, if Mr. Weldon was not a mate- " rial Evidence, would not he have told Kennedy at that time that there " was no occaſion for his Teſtimony?

" This is a Matter of very great Conſequence; and if the Proſecution " cannot be effectually carried on, the Traverſer muſt be acquitted. The " Public have a Right to a fair, impartial Enquiry into this Affair; and " as it can be of no Inconvenience to Mrs. Heath that this Trial ſhould " be poſtponed, but will be of the greateſt Service to her if ſhe be ac- " quitted with Honour on an effectual Enquiry, but not ſo much to her " Honour if ſhe be now acquitted; therefore we hope her Trial will be " poſtponed 'till next Term."]

[" It was further obſerved by the Counſel for the Proſecution, that the " Traverſer had put her Trial off three ſeveral Times; that theſe affected " Delays on her Part, were by ſo much the greater Hardſhip on the " Gentlemen who carry on the Proſecution in behalf of the Crown, as " they had not only poſtponed Buſineſs of the higheſt Conſequence to " them in England, in order to attend it; but as the Traverſer's In- " tention of moving for Delay has always been induſtriouſly concealed " from them until the very Day that her Trial ſhould have taken place, " or the Day immediately preceding it; by which means they were each " of theſe three Times put to the ſame Trouble and Expence as if they " had actually tried her with Effect. This Proceeding, my Lord, to all " diſintereſted Perſons, muſt appear not only vexatious, but calculated " to promote the oppreſſive Syſtem of this unfortunate Gentleman Mr. " Anneſley's too powerful Enemies, of worrying him and his Friends out " by unneceſſary Expence and Delay. This Woman muſt have known " her own Intention of putting off her Trial to this Term, early enough " to have given Notice of it to thoſe Gentlemen, ſo as to have prevented " the great Expence of Money and Time, and the great Trouble that " they and their Witneſſes have been at in preparing ſo often for her " Trial; while ſhe remained in a ſupine Security of having her Trial " delayed, and relied on the Indulgence of this Court, without taking " one Step to prepare for it. We therefore hope, my Lord, that for " theſe and many other Reaſons already mentioned, we ſhall this Day, for " once, meet with the ſame Indulgence of putting off this Trial till next " Term, eſpecially as this is the firſt Application of that kind we have " made, and as we have ſo good a Right to expect it."]

After which the Court deliverd their Opinion as follows.

Mr. Juſtice BLENNERHASSET.

The Proſecutor has moved on two Affidavits to put off this Trial till next Term.

On Monday laſt he moved to poſtpone the Trial till Friday, which Motion was granted.

The Affidavits now moved on are, one of Kennedy, an Ale-ſeller and a Server of Proceſſes.

And the Affidavit of Mr. Nelſon, who is the Agent and Attorney for the Proſecutor.

The Strength of Kennedy's Affidavit conſiſts in this, that one Mr. Weldon is a material Evidence.

I muſt obſerve, that upon the Motion to poſtpone the Trial 'till Friday only, there was no Affidavit made concerning Mr. Weldon; for Kennedy's Affidavit, in which only Mr. Weldon's Name is mentioned, appears to have been ſworn Yeſterday.

There was an Affidavit of Mr. Mac Kercher's, which he made the laſt Term, in oppoſition to the Motion to put off the Trial then made by the Traverſer.

This Affidavit has been this Day read.

There Mr. Mac Kercher ſwears, that he had a great number of Witneſſes attending, and that he was ready to proſecute.

At this time Mr. Weldon was not thought of; he has been ſummoned ſince, but to this Hour he is not bound over to proſecute.

Nor was he examined on the Trial in the Court of Exchequer.

Now, as to the Affidavit of Kennedy, though it has all the Parts which generally make up Affidavits to put off Trials; for he ſwears to the Summoning

moning of Mr. Weldon, and to his being a material Witneſs, and that he was not well when he was ſummoned; yet he goes, in my Opinion, ſo far, that he cannot well receive Credit.

For he takes upon him to ſwear alſo, that the Traverſer cannot be convicted without his Teſtimony.

So that Mr. Weldon is the only Perſon who can give Evidence to convict this Woman, if we believe Kennedy.

But if we believe Mr. MacKercher, he ſwears he had a Number of Witneſſes ready to proſecute the Traverſer to Conviction, the Term before Mr. Weldon was thought of.

As to Mr. Nelſon's Affidavit, it relates to Mr. Gooſtrey only, that he has given Examinations in this Cauſe, and that he is in England; and to Mr. MacKercher.

I need not remark on this Affidavit, it is made by a Man of Credit in his Profeſſion, and I believe it to be true.

But the Force of this Affidavit is taken away by an Offer made by the Traverſer, who ſays, ſhe will conſent to have Gooſtrey's Examinations read in Evidence againſt her upon the Trial, and that ſhe will waive any Benefit which ſhe might have by a Croſs-Examination.

As to that Part of Mr. Nelſon's Affidavit which is relative to Mr. MacKercher, it has no Weight with me; he ſays Mr. MacKercher is abſent, and is a Manager in this Cauſe; he does not ſay he is a Witneſs, ſo that there is no Pretence to put off the Trial on that Account.

But the Counſel for the Proſecutor object that there is no Equality kept, if this Trial be not put off; ſay they,

The Traverſer put it off laſt Term, and we ſhould have the ſame Indulgence now.

The Caſe on the Traverſer's Motion widely differs from the Caſe made by the Proſecutor on this Motion.

The Bill of Indictment was not found 'till the twenty-fourth Day of October, at the Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer.

The Traverſer afterwards obtained a Certiorari to remove it to the King's Bench, which was not returnable 'till the firſt Day of Term. She then appeared, and immediately informed the Proſecutor, that ſhe could not be ready for her Trial; ſhe afterwards moved on Affidavits to put it off, and ſuggeſted that a Number of Witneſſes were in England, and many diſperſed in remote Parts of this Kingdom; ſhe named many of them by Name; ſhe ſwore they were material, and that it was not poſſible to have them that Term, but that ſhe hoped to have them by this.

Upon theſe Affidavits the Trial was put off, and a Day of Trial appointed for this Term.

The Proſecutors oppoſed this warmly, made Affidavits that they were ready to proſecute, that their Witneſſes were all in Town at great Expence to them, and they do not ſay now, by any thing they have ſworn, but that they have every Witneſs now which they then had, except Gooſtrey.

This was ſufficient Notice to them to be prepared; they were not hurried as the Traverſer muſt have been, if her Trial had been brought on before ſhe could, from the Circumſtances of her Caſe, have been prepared.

The Court, in my Opinion, ſhould conſider the prodigious Expence the Party is put to; I think it is ſworn, that no leſs than fourſcore Witneſſes are now attending to give their Evidence in behalf of the Traverſer, and that the preparing for this Trial has coſt her already above ſeven hundred Pounds.

I conſider alſo the heavy Imputation which lies on her Character, which ſhe ought to have an Opportunity of clearing up, if ſhe can.

And for theſe Reaſons think ſhe ought to have her Trial; but I ſubmit to the Opinion of the Lord Chief Juſtice and Mr. Juſtice Ward.

Mr. Juſtice WARD.

The Progreſs of this Cauſe is eaſily recollected. The Bill of Indictment was found the twenty-fourth of October, at the Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer for the County of Dublin, againſt the Traverſer for wilful and corrupt Perjury; notwithſtanding which, and although the Verdict in the Exchequer was contrary to her Evidence, I ſhall ſuſpend my Opinion until the preſent Jury have found her guilty, or acquitted her. Juſtice and the publick Good require, that Witneſſes upon their Oaths ſhould always ſpeak Truth; yet I am apt to believe, were not private Perſons affected in the Event of this Proſecution, every Circumſtance, whether material or not, would not be ſo ſtrenuouſly contended for.

Many Reaſons made it improper to try this Indictment at the Commiſſion; therefore my Lord Chief Juſtice granted a Certiorari to remove it into this Court; it is owing to that I ſee many Gentlemen upon this Jury, who could not have been ſo there, being Judges; it was fit the beſt Gentlemen for Fortune and Character in the County ſhould be had to try a Cauſe of this Conſequence; it was incumbent on the Sheriff to return ſuch, and I believe he hath done his Duty.

The ſeventh of November the Traverſer, called upon her Recogniſance, appeared, and the Court appointed the fourteenth for her Trial; but on the tenth ſhe moved the Court to put it off to this Term, on her Affidavit of ſeveral material Witneſſes, naming them, being in ſeveral Parts of England, and remote Parts in Ireland, whom ſhe could not poſſibly have in Time to make her Defence. This Motion was ſtrongly oppoſed; but her Affidavit was ſo full, that it could not be refuſed her; and I muſt ſay, that in a common Caſe it would have required no longer Time than to read the Affidavit; and the Court appointed the fourth of February for the Trial. On this Motion Mr. MacKercher made an Affidavit, which now is become neceſſary to be conſidered; he ſwears that he is embarked in this Cauſe, and, as I underſtand him, an Agent; that he was then ready to proſecute and go on with the Trial of the Traverſer. As it was obvious to object, if he was then ready, why ſhould he not be ſo this Term? to anſwer which he goes on and ſwears, that ſeveral Perſons intereſted, and Witneſſes, were going to England, whom he apprehended he could not have next Term, and could not bring on the Trial without them. This looks like giving Notice he could not be ready this Term, and I confeſs if he, or the viſible Agent on this Side the Water, had applied the Beginning of Term, and made the Neceſſity of their Witneſſes going to England appear, and that they were not returned, and if the Traverſer had been at no Expence, I ſhould have gone as far as the Practice of the Court would allow to delay the Trial. But inſtead of this, Mr. MacKercher, in his Affidavit, did not mention the Name of any one of his Witneſſes that were going to England, which renders it impoſſible to examine whether they did or did not go there, or were ſince returned, or ever would; beſides, they ſeemed to acquieſce, and continued ſilent until the ſecond of February, when Notice was given, the Proſecutors would move on the fourth to put off the Trial to Friday following. No other Notice hath been ſince given; nor did the Proſecutors move to put off the Trial on Monday, until the Jury was called; and only eight appearing, it muſt go off on Courſe to the next Day, on which they only preſſed that it ſhould be put off to Friday, without aſſigning any Reaſon from Mr. Weldon's Diſability to attend, or indeed any Reaſon at all that I know of. However, through much Importunity, the Counſel on both Sides agreed to put it off to this Day, when a full Jury appearing, they now move on new Affidavits to put it off to next Term, and aſſign for Reaſons the Abſence of Mr. MacKercher the Agent, and alſo of Mr. Gooſtrey and Colonel Weldon, two Witneſſes. As to Mr. MacKercher, he was here laſt Term, and might have been here now; for though Mr. Nelſon ſwears he acquainted him by Letter that he would be here, yet Campbell ſwears he came laſt Week from Parkgate and Holyhead, and heard nothing of Mr. MacKercher at thoſe Places; beſides, Mr. Nelſon has always appeared to us as the known Agent, and is of known Abilities and Sufficiency to conduct any Cauſe. As to Mr. Gooſtrey, the Counſel for the Proſecutors ſay he was here laſt Term about the End of it, when Edward Weedon and his Brother, being examined in Court, charged him on Oath with drawing Affidavits for them, being illiterate, to ſwear to their Mother Sarah Weedon's Impriſonment by Colonel Blakeney, when they only told him, as they, with great Simplicity, ſwore in Court, that Mr. Blakeney's Gates were locked at the uſual Hour of the Night, and they never looked on their Mother as a Priſoner there; and when the Court required Mr. Gooſtrey's Attendance, they were told he was then in England; he is bound over to proſecute, and ought to have attended: However, the Traverſer hath abſolutely removed this Objection, by conſenting his Examinations ſhould be read againſt her. But the main Objection reſts upon Colonel Weldon's Abſence, who, as Kennedy ſwears, was ſerved with a Subpœna the twenty-ſeventh of January, and was then ſo ill of the Gout, that he could not attend, and that the Traverſer cannot be convicted without him. Kennedy appearing in Court, acknowledged himſelf to be a Beer-Seller, and, by his Appearance, he is a Man of low Station and little Knowledge. I think him very ſufficient to ſwear to what he ſees and hears; but I muſt ſay I do not think his Judgment or Belief any way ſufficient to ground mine on. An Attorney or Agent is the proper Perſon to ſwear a Witneſs to be a material one to convict the Traverſer, but the Agent and Attorney, who certainly muſt be informed of the Witneſſes for their Clients, have declined this. Kennedy, indeed, told us on the Table, he read an Affidavit of Colonel Weldon's at Maryborough, and thought it material; but to obviate this, the Traverſer's Counſel have conſented this Affidavit be read in Evidence againſt her, ſo that if it be material, it will have its Weight. In the next Place, how comes Colonel Weldon to be now ſo material a Witneſs, when laſt Term Mr. MacKercher preſſed to go on to Trial without him? and I preſume he knew what he could ſay, the Affidavit he made being, I think, at the Summer Aſſizes preceding.

Beſides, though Colonel Weldon was ſubpœna'd the twenty-ſeventh of January, and Kennedy made an Affidavit the ſecond of February, in that he is ſilent as to Mr. Weldon's Illneſs, nor was it mentioned by the Counſel on Monday; but when nothing elſe would do, on the ſixth of February he ſwears to his Illneſs, and ſomething like his being a material Witneſs; this I have conſidered already: But I muſt obſerve, what has miſſed the Counſel, that though Colonel Weldon ſhould be ill of the Gout on the twenty-ſeventh of January, it no ways appears but he may be now on the ſeventh of February well recovered, or at leaſt able to travel; 'tis admitted he lives but one Day's Journey from Dublin, why then was not a Meſſenger ſent down to bring us an Account in what State of Health he was a Day or two paſt? Since they have neglected this, I ſhall not look upon him as a neceſſary Witneſs. The Counſel for the Proſecutors alledge they have above ſixty Witneſſes, and the Traverſer's eighty in Town; I think it is full Time to go on with the Trial, and I ſee no Reaſon for putting it off. I ſhould not have been ſo tedious, but for the great Earneſtneſs with which the Counſel have preſſed this Motion.

Lord Chief Juſtice MARLAY.

I am of their Opinion, that we muſt not put off this Trial. I will mention the ſeveral Steps taken in this Proceeding. It appears here by Affidavit, That on the tenth of Auguſt Mrs. Heath was arreſted on a Warrant, grounded upon Examinations of Perjury committed by her in her Evidence on the Trial in the Court of Exchequer; fifteen Witneſſes are firſt bound over to proſecute at the Seſſions of Kilmainham, and afterwards at the Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer. The Commiſſion ſat on the 23d of October, and a Bill of Indictment was found againſt her the next Day, which ſhe traverſed, and the Traverſer moved for a Certiorari to take her Trial in the King's-Bench, upon Affidavits ſo full, that it was not to be refuſed without the greateſt Injuſtice; there being an Eſtate depending of ſix thouſand Pounds a Year, and that there were Examinations carrying on in the Chancery here, and in England. I do believe that neither Side can ſhew, where the Teſtimony of Witneſſes has been anticipated by an Indictment of Perjury, but ſomething like that Step was taken in this Cauſe. The Certiorari was granted by the Court upon an Affidavit of the Traverſer, and the Trial put off upon her Affidavit of the tenth of November. The Affidavit of Mr. MacKercher is ſworn afterwards on the 13th of November, ſhewing Cauſe for bringing on the Trial the next Day, but no Court could poſſibly bring on the Trial when that Affidavit was offered. The Traverſer ſwore that ſeveral Witneſſes, whom ſhe named, were in England; and that Mrs. Weedon in particular, was a material Witneſs, and lived in a remote Part of this Kingdom. Mr. MacKercher ſwears, that Mrs. Weedon was a material Evidence for the Proſecutor, that ſhe was detained by Force, and moved for an Habeas Corpus to bring her hither. That Motion was brought on, and Examinations were taken after the Day appointed for the Trial, and a Motion made to attach Mr. Blakeney for detaining this Mrs. Weedon. It appears, that ſhe was ſummoned to attend here on Behalf of the Proſecutor on the 14th of November, juſt the Day before; and that the Place ſhe then lived at is above 70 Miles from Dublin. There came two Witneſſes upon the Table, who had ſworn Affidavits, in order to found an Habeas Corpus and an Attachment againſt Mr. Blakeney, and they having ſworn falſe, they were both committed. Both thoſe illiterate Witneſſes ſwore her, in their Affidavits, to be under a Reſtraint, when it appeared ſhe was at Liberty. This they confeſſed, and alſo, that thoſe Affidavits were prepared by Gooſtrey, the Perſon now ſaid to be in England. This is a very extraordinary Proceeding, and a Sort of Indictment not uſually brought into this Court. The firſt Trial was put off, on the Affidavit of the Traverſer, that ſhe was not prepared for her Defence: The Queſtion now is, whether the Reaſons offered for putting off this Trial to Eaſter Term be of equal Force. It appeared then by the Affidavit of Mrs. Heath, that ſeveral Witneſſes, neceſſary for her Defence, could not poſſibly attend at the Day prefixed for Trial; the Bill of Indictment was found the twenty-fourth of October; the Trial was to be on the fourteenth of November; how could Witneſſes in England be brought by that Time to appear here? But Mr. Mac Kercher ſwears that Mrs. Weeden was a material Evidence for the Proſecutor, and not for the Traverſer, as ſhe inſinuated. She is now here, you have no want of her, if ſhe be that material Witneſs; and then the Queſtion is, whether the Affidavits made now can put off this Trial. The Affidavit of Mr. Nelſon is general, and only ſays, that he had a Letter from Mr. Mac Kercher, dated the tenth of January, acquainting him that he would leave London on the ſeventeenth of that Month. There are ſeveral Affidavits made on the Side of the Traverſer, and one in particular, that there was no ſuch Perſon upon the Road from London to this Place; but however, as he is no Evidence in the Cauſe, there can be no Colour for his Abſence to put off the Trial. Then the whole Matter is reduced to the Affidavit of Kennedy. He ſwears thoſe three Things that are material to put off a Trial; but I muſt obſerve that this Affidavit is in fact contradicted by the Affidavit of Mr. Mac Kercher, who ſwears on the thirteenth of November, he was ready to bring on the Trial the next Day, and yet Mr. Weldon is not one of the Witneſſes for that Trial, and he is not bound over to proſecute; Mr. Mac Kercher knew his Evidence, for he had then his Affidavit in Chancery; therefore that Part which is neceſſary to put off the Trial, that a material Witneſs to be produced cannot attend, is wanting in Kennedy's Affidavit, for it appears that it is not well grounded by Mac Kercher's Affidavit. There's another Objection againſt Kennedy's Affidavit: He ſwears, he does believe Mr. Weldon is to be had the next Term, and that he believes he is a material Witneſs. Conſider, that though this be proper if it comes from the Agent, yet it is not proper, when an Ale-ſeller makes this Affidavit, and a Man that confeſſes he was never bred to Buſineſs. You know, that if a Perſon be accuſed for a violent Aſſault, in caſe there be no Danger of Death, there is Bail taken; but if inſtead of ſending for a Surgeon, the Perſon who applies for Bail, ſends for a Cobler, and the Cobler ſwears he had ſearched the Wound and found it not dangerous, Nobody can ſay, but the Court would refuſe Bail upon the Affidavit of this Cobler. Therefore Kennedy's Affidavit is of no Conſequence. As to Gooſtrey, his Examinations are here, the Counſel for the Traverſer deſire they may be read againſt her. But I muſt tell you, that his Examinations are no more, than that Mrs. Heath did ſay ſuch and ſuch Words on the Trial in the Exchequer. I have the Trial here, and Mr. Gooſtrey can prove no more than what all preſent at that Trial can prove; and therefore, Gentlemen, upon account of Mr. Gooſtrey, I think not proper to put off the Trial. But what makes me think it improper to put it off is, the great Expence on the Side of the Traverſer. It appears by the Affidavits on account of the Traverſer, that they have been at a vaſt Expence; one Perſon ſwears to 700*l.* another ſwears to 300*l.* beſides a 50*l.* Bill. Now, if you can delay Trials, and put Traverſers to this Expence, you will ſoon have what you deſire in carrying on this Cauſe, for Nobody will dare to appear as a Witneſs, when they know it is ſo dangerous and expenſive. But it has been urged by Mr. Harward, that ſhe ſhould have a full and fair Trial; and let me tell you, it is as much for the Credit of the Proſecutors that there ſhould be a full and fair Proſecution, and that where Witneſſes bound over may be had to appear, and do not, it creates a Suſpicion of the Juſtice of the Proſecution; People will be apt to ſay, that Jugglers cannot play ſo well the ſame Trick twice. There is no doubt but a Verdict was found for the Proſecutor by a Jury of undoubted Credit; but it does not follow that the Traverſer is guilty, and the beſt and the wiſeſt Jury may be deceived. This Matter can be delayed no longer, becauſe by this Delay there can never be any Time fixed for a Trial; but as this Motion has taken up a great deal of Time, ſo it would be impoſſible to go through it this Day, therefore we will defer it till To-morrow Morning.

The Jury prefixed over to Friday the eighth of February at eight o'Clock.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall.] I beg leave to obſerve, that the Examination of Mr. Gooſtrey does not go to all Parts of this Indictment.

The Indictment on which this Trial was had is as follows, viz.

The King againſt Mary Heath, County of Dublin, to wit. } THE Jurors for our Lord the King upon their Oaths ſay and preſent, That in a certain Bill of a Plea of Treſpaſs and Ejectment of a Farm depending as of the Term of the Holy Trinity, in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Years of the Reign of our ſaid Lord, the now King George the Second, of Great-Britain, and ſo forth, and in the Year of our Lord, one thouſand ſeven hundred and forty-three, in our ſaid Lord the King's Court of Exchequer in Ireland, then being at the King's Courts in the ſaid County of Dublin, before the Barons of our ſaid Lord the King, of the ſaid Court, and brought into the ſaid Court, and proſecuted by Campbell Craig, Gent. Debtor of the ſaid Lord the King, Plaintiff, againſt the Right Honourable Richard Earl of Angleſea, Defendant; who was preſent then in the ſaid Court, by his Attorney, Thomas Burroughs, for thirty Meſſuages, thirty Tofts, fifty Cottages, two Mills, fifty Gardens, eight hundred Acres of Arable Land, three hundred Acres of Meadow, ſix hundred Acres of Paſture, fifty Acres of Furze and heathy Ground, fifty Acres of moory Ground, with the Appurtenances, in Great Stramine, otherwiſe Stameen, Little Stramine, otherwiſe Stameen, Little Donacarney, Shallon, Killcarvan, otherwiſe Killſharvan, Cruffey, Annager, otherwiſe Annager, and Little Gaffney, ſituate, lying and being in the County of Meath; all which ſaid Premiſſes were formerly the Eſtate of the Right Honourable James Earl of Angleſea, deceaſed; and lately the Eſtate of the Right Honourable Arthur Earl of Angleſea, alſo deceaſed; and which had been demiſed to him, the ſaid Campbell Craig, by James Annesley, Eſq. and had been alſo demiſed to him the ſaid Campbell Craig, by the Right Honourable James Earl of Angleſea, and had been alſo demiſed to him, the ſaid Campbell Craig, by the Honourable James Annesley, only Son and Heir of Arthur late Baron Altham of Altham, deceaſed, otherwiſe the Right Honourable James Baron Altham of Altham, on the firſt Day of May, one thouſand ſeven hundred and forty-two, at Trim in the County of Meath aforeſaid, for the ſeveral Terms of twenty-one Years, to commence from thence in Manner and Form as in and by the Declaration of the ſaid Campbell Craig, in the ſaid Bill of the ſaid Plea of Treſpaſs and Ejectment of a Farm, is mentioned and ſet forth; in and to which ſaid Bill of a Plea of Treſpaſs and Ejectment of a Farm, he the ſaid Richard Earl of Angleſea, by his ſaid Attorney, took Defence in due Form of Law, and for Plea thereto, ſaid that he was not guilty of the Treſpaſs and Ejectment aforeſaid, in Manner and Form as the ſaid Campbell Craig complained; and of that he put himſelf on the Country, and the ſaid Campbell Craig likewiſe; and Iſſue being ſo joined in ſaid Plea of Treſpaſs and Ejectment, in due Form of Law, by and between the ſaid Parties, it was afterwards ſo proceeded upon thereon that the ſaid Iſſue afterwards, to-

to-wit, on the Second Friday after the Morrow of All Souls, in the Term of St. Michael the Arch-angel then next, that is to say, on the 11th Day of November, in the seventeenth Year of the Reign of our said Lord, the now King, in the Court of Exchequer aforesaid, before the said Barons of the said Court, at the King's Court aforesaid, in the County of Dublin aforesaid, was tried by a certain Jury of the Country, for that Purpose, in due Form of Law, then and there elected, tried and sworn in said Court, to try the said Issue; and on the said Trial, it was then and there admitted, as well by, for and on behalf of the said Campbell Craig, as by, for and on behalf of the said Richard Earl of Anglesea, that the said Lands and Premisses, mentioned in the said Plea of Trespass and Ejectment and Declaration of the said Campbell Craig, were the Estate of Inheritance of Arthur Lord Baron Altham of Altham, late deceased, and that he died seized of the said Lands and Premisses; and the said Campbell Craig, then and there, upon said Trial, produced Witnesses on his Part, who being then and there duly sworn on God's Holy Evangelists, by the said Barons of the said Court of Exchequer, to testify the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth, in the said Plea of Trespass and Ejectment so depending, the said Barons having sufficient Power and Authority to administer the said Oath to them on that behalf, gave in Evidence, and then and there swore, and deposed upon their Oaths aforesaid, to the Jurors of the Jury aforesaid, before the Barons aforesaid, that James Annesley aforesaid, the Lessor of the said Plaintiff, Campbell Craig, was the only Son and Heir of the said Arthur late Lord Baron Altham of Altham, by his Wife, Mary the late Lady Altham; and that the said James Annesley was born and christened at Dunmaine, in the County of Wexford, in the Kingdom of Ireland. And the said now Jurors so sworn for our said Lord the King, upon their Oaths, further say and present, that Mary Heath, of the City of Dublin, in the County of the said City, Widow, upon the Trial aforesaid, in the Court of Exchequer aforesaid, before the Barons aforesaid, at the King's Court aforesaid, in the County of Dublin aforesaid, being then and there produced as a Witness, by and on behalf of the said Richard Earl of Anglesea, on the said Trial of the said Issue, she the said Mary Heath was then and there sworn, upon God's Holy Evangelists, in due Form of Law, by the said Barons of the said Court of Exchequer, to testify the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth, in the said Plea of Trespass and Ejectment, the said Barons of the said Court of Exchequer having sufficient Power and Authority to administer the said Oath to the said Mary Heath in that behalf; and the said Mary Heath being then and there so sworn, then and there falsly, voluntarily, knowingly, wilfully, maliciously, corruptly and illicitly swore and deposed upon her Oath aforesaid, to the said Barons and to the Jurors of the said Jury, who then and there were in due Form of Law elected, tried, and sworn as aforesaid, to try the said Issue as aforesaid, that Lady Altham, that is to say, the aforesaid Mary Lady Altham, who was Wife of the said Arthur late Lord Baron Altham of Altham, never was with Child, while she the said Mary Heath lived with the said Mary Lady Altham. And,

Further, the said Mary Heath then and there, before the said Barons of the said Court, gave in Evidence and swore upon her Oath aforesaid, to the said Barons and to the Jurors of the said Jury, that the said Mary Lady Altham never had a Child at Dunmaine, that is to say, Dunmaine aforesaid, in the said County of Wexford, in the Kingdom of Ireland. And,

Further, the said Mary Heath then and there, before the said Barons of the said Court, gave in Evidence and swore upon her Oath aforesaid, to the said Barons and to the Jurors of the said Jury, that there never was a Child, as the Child of that Family, that is to say, of the said Arthur late Lord Baron Altham of Altham, and the said Mary Lady Altham his Wife, either christened or living at Dunmaine House, that is to say, the aforesaid Dunmaine House, in the said County of Wexford, while she, that is to say, the said Mary Heath, was at Dunmaine aforesaid. And,

Further, the said Mary Heath then and there, before the said Barons of the said Court, gave in Evidence and swore upon her Oath aforesaid, to the said Barons and to the said Jurors of the said Jury, that she, that is to say, the said Mary Heath, never saw a Child in the Hands or Care of Joan Laffan, while she, that is to say, the said Joan Laffan, was at Dunmaine House aforesaid. And,

Further, the said Mary Heath then and there, before the said Barons of the said Court, gave in Evidence and swore upon her Oath aforesaid, to the said Barons and to the Jurors of said Jury, that the said Mary Lady Altham did not miscarry of a Child at Dunmaine aforesaid. Whereas really and in fact, the said Mary late Lady Altham, who was Wife of the said Arthur late Lord Baron Altham of Altham, was with Child while she the said Mary Heath lived with the said Mary Lady Altham. And whereas also really and in fact, the said Mary Lady Altham had a Child at Dunmaine, that is to say, Dunmaine aforesaid, in the said County of Wexford in the Kingdom of Ireland. And whereas really and in fact, there was a Child, as the Child of that Family, that is to say, of the said Arthur late Lord Baron Altham of Altham, and the said Mary Lady Altham his Wife, christened and living at Dunmaine House aforesaid, in the said County of Wexford, while she the said Mary Heath was at Dunmaine House aforesaid. And whereas also really and in fact, the said Mary Heath did see a Child in the Hands and Care of Joan Laffan, while she, that is to say, the said Joan Laffan, was at Dunmaine House aforesaid. And whereas also really and in fact, the said Mary Lady Altham miscarried of a Child at Dunmaine aforesaid. And so the now Jurors sworn for our Lord the King as aforesaid, upon their said Oaths say and present, that the said Mary Heath on the said Trial of the Issue aforesaid, upon her Oath aforesaid, before the Barons aforesaid and Jurors of the said Jury, elected, tried and sworn to try the said Issue between the Parties aforesaid, in the said Court of Exchequer at the King's Courts aforesaid, in the County of Dublin aforesaid, in Manner and Form aforesaid, did falsly, voluntarily, knowingly, wilfully, maliciously, corruptly and illicitly, commit wilful, voluntary, malicious and corrupt Perjury, in great Contempt of the said now King and of his Laws, and contrary to his Majesty's Crown and Dignity.

Court.] You, Gentlemen of Counsel for the Traverser, offered Yesterday that Mr. Goostrey's Examination should be read in Evidence against the Traverser, and that you would waive her Right to cross-examine him; you must admit it now.

Mr. Daly.] Admitted.

Court.] (On Motion for separating the Witnesses.) The Witnesses were ordered to be separated, and not to come into Court till they are sent for; Nobody is to be admitted to them, but each to have a Guard on the other's Witnesses.

Court.] Gentlemen, for the Ease of the Jury, and Necessity of finishing the Trial, I must tell you, that we will not, on either Side, have a Multiplicity of Witnesses; the Meaning of the Law is, that the Trial should be had in one Day, and we won't sit here to hear any Evidence that is immaterial. Whoever protracts a Trial, is by the Law supposed to dare not to stand it.

Mr. Recorder.] My Lord, we shall endeavour to make the Trial as short as we can, but there are many Cases that depend upon Circumstances, which must be made appear, and wherever your Lordships find that it is a necessary Defence, you cannot think it is too long.

Mr. Justice Ward.] It is in the Power of the Gentlemen of the Bar to shorten this Trial, and I hope you will observe the Rule laid down Yesterday, for one Gentleman to confine himself to each Witness.

L. C. J.] I make no doubt of laying that down as a Rule.

Mr. Sol. Gen.] Our Resolution is to observe it; and we will shorten the Trial, in all respects, as much as we can.

The Lists of the Witnesses are given in to the Court, that they may be separated, and the Clerk of the Crown numbering them, there were 80 on the Side of the Traverser, and 86 on the Side of the Prosecutor.

Court.] Do you imagine, that the Law supposed that any body should produce fourscore Witnesses? Two Witnesses are enough to prove any Fact, if it be a good one, for by the Mouth of two Witnesses shall a thing be established; and 200 will not prove any Fact, if it be a bad one.

The Officer of the Court charged the Jury with the Indictment in the usual Form, and was directed by the Court to take out the five Points or Assignments of Perjury, and give them to the Jury; which was done.

1. That Mary, Wife of the late Lord Altham, never had a Child, while the Traverser lived with the Lady Altham.

2. That Lady Altham never had a Child at Dunmaine.

3. That there never was a Child christened, or living at Dunmaine, as the Child of Lord and Lady Altham, while the Traverser was at Dunmaine.

4. That the Traverser never saw a Child in the Hands or Care of Joan Laffan, while the said Laffan was at Dunmaine.

5. That Lady Altham did not miscarry of a Child at Dunmaine.

["Mr. Sol. Gen. (Counsel for the Crown.) May it please your Lordships, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, I am of Counsel in this Case for the Crown, against the Traverser Mary Heath, who stands indicted for wilful and corrupt Perjury, a Crime of the deepest Dye, on the Discountenance and due Punishment whereof the Lives, Liberties and Properties of all Men, nay the very Being of Society depend; for no Man's Life, Liberty, or Property can ever be safe, if such are either countenanced, or escape for want of due Prosecution. And before I proceed to state the Case, I must beg leave, my Lord, first to mention, that by hurrying on this Trial so prematurely, in the Absence of our principal Witnesses, in the Absence of the Gentlemen who carry on the Prosecution, particularly of Mr. Mac Kercher, who has the conducting of it, who alone is acquainted with the Nature and Strength of the Evidence, and the due Application thereof, and is now detained on the other Side of the Water by contrary Winds, we proceed to it under manifold and great Disadvantages: Yet under these Circumstances, I make little doubt but we shall be able to convict the Traverser, to the Satisfaction of all unprejudiced Persons, if the Witnesses to be produced are able to prove the Matters contained in my Instructions. I shall therefore proceed to state the Case as briefly as I can.

"Arthur Annesley, first Earl of Anglesea, (so created by King Charles the Second, with a Limitation to the Heirs Male of his Body) had Issue five Sons, James his eldest, Altham his second, Richard his third, Arthur his fourth, and Charles his fifth Son.

"The first Earl having made very large Acquisitions, sufficient to support two distinct Families, procured the Baronage of Altham for his second Son Altham, and his Issue Male, with a Remainder over to his third Son Richard.

"As to the Altham Title, Altham, the first Lord Altham, died without Issue Male, whereupon that Dignity became vested in his Brother Richard, who had Issue Arthur, afterwards Lord Altham, and Richard now in Possession of the Anglesea Titles and Estates.

"With regard to the eldest Branch, James, eldest Son of the first Earl, was, in his Father's Lifetime, married to a Daughter of the Earl of Rutland, on which Marriage, a Settlement was made in common Form, and the Estates limited to Lord James for Life, Remainder to his first and other Sons in Tail Male, Remainder to the other Sons of the said first Earl in Tail Male, Remainder to his right Heirs.

"The said first Earl was accordingly succeeded, both in the Title and Estate, by his said eldest Son James, who afterwards also died, and left Issue three Sons, James, John and Arthur.

"James, the eldest of these, and third Earl of Anglesea, levied Fines and suffered common Recoveries of his Estates, and thereby docked the Entail created by his Father's Marriage-settlement, and made himself absolute Tenant in Fee-simple; afterwards he made several Wills and Codicils, and having no Issue Male of his own, he thereby limited his Estates, upon the Failure of Issue Male of his Brother Arthur, to go to the Altham Branch.

"Accordingly it happened that the said Arthur, who was afterwards Earl of Anglesea, died in 1737, without Issue; so that if Arthur Lord Altham had been then living, he would undoubtedly have succeeded to the Anglesea Honours and Estates: But as he happened to die in November 1727, it is indisputable, that if he had left a Son, such Son would have been entitled to those Honours and Estates.

"The principal Question therefore at the late Trial at Bar, and the single Question now is, Whether the said Lord Altham left a Son or "not?

" not? We that are concerned for the Crown, did then maintain the " Affirmative, and this we shall now endeavour to prove, though a Fact " already established by the solemn Verdict given at that Trial, by twelve " Gentlemen of the greatest Characters for Integrity, Capacity and For- " tunes in this Kingdom. A Verdict not precipitately given, but after " fourteen Days Attention and Deliberation, and which therefore ought " to carry the greatest Weight.

" Had the Person, who claims to be the Son of Arthur Lord Altham, " been in the Kingdom, when Arthur Earl of Anglesea died, he might " have asserted his Right, while many of his Witnesses were living, and " the Facts recent. But he had the Misfortune, Gentlemen, not only " to be out of the Kingdom, but out of Europe.

" But as we are not at Liberty to lay that Fact before you, I shall not " presume to observe upon it any further."

" Lord Chief-Justice.] No such Evidence ought to be opened here.— " Prove that the Lord Altham had a Son."

" Mr. Daly.] The Evidence offered by Mr. Sollicitor is quite illegal, " and I will shew it to be so."

" Mr. Recorder.] I have a great Regard for whatever Mr. Sollicitor General says, but no Fact should be opened to the Jury, but what pro- " perly relates to the Matter of the Indictment."

" Court.] The Matter of Perjury contained in the Indictment, is the " single Question before us; what Mr. Sollicitor mentions might be pro- " per to be shewn in the Court of Exchequer, in an Action for the Re- " covery of the Estate: But we are not now to try the Right to an Estate, " but a single Fact: If Lady Altham had a Child, Mary Heath is per- " jured, and this the Jury are to try."

" Mr. Archdale.] (one of the Jury) I apprehend the Question before us " is, whether Mary Heath is perjured or not?"

" Court.] Yes, that is the Point, Gentlemen."

" Mr. Sollicitor General.] Mr. Annesley brought an Ejectment in the " Court of Exchequer, in order to try his Title to an Estate in the County " of Meath, which Action was accordingly tried in Michaelmas Term, " 1742. The sole Question on that Trial was, by the Admission of all " Parties, Whether Mr. James Annesley was the lawful Son of Arthur " Lord Altham? and the Jury, who were Gentlemen of undoubted Cre- " dit and Fortune, after fifteen Days Trial and Deliberation, found " upon their Oaths, that Mr. Annesley was the legitimate Son of Arthur " Lord Altham: Upon this Trial, Gentlemen, Mrs. Heath, the Tra- " verser, was examined, as a principal Witness, on the Part of the De- " fendant the Earl of Anglesea, and it is for the Evidence she then gave, " that she now stands indicted for Perjury, in the five following Parti- " culars:

" First, That she swore, that Mary Lady Altham, who was Wife of " Arthur late Lord Altham, never was with Child, while she Mary Heath " lived with the said Mary Lady Altham.

" Secondly, That she swore, that the said Lady Altham never had a " Child at Dunmaine in the County of Wexford.

" Thirdly, That she swore, that there never was a Child, as the Child " of the Family of Lord and Lady Altham, either christened or living at " Dunmaine House in the said County of Wexford, while she Heath was " at Dunmaine.

" Fourthly, That she swore, she never saw a Child in the Hands or Care " of Jean Laffan, while the said Jean Laffan was at Dunmaine House.

" Fifthly, That she swore, that the said Lady Altham never miscarried " of a Child at Dunmaine aforesaid.

" And although it will be enough for us to prove Mrs. Heath guilty of " Perjury, in any one of the said Points, yet notwithstanding the great " and many Advantages gained against us by our being surprised, and " hurried on to Trial at this Juncture, I doubt not of our being able to " convict her of the whole. We shall begin, by proving, that Mrs. " Heath, at the Trial at Bar, swore the several Particulars mentioned in " the Indictment, and then shall proceed to shew, that those Particulars " are false."]

Court.] The first Assignment of Perjury is, that Lady Altham never was with Child while the Traverser lived with her.

Mr. Serjeant Marshall.] My Lord, we shall first produce the Record. Upon the Trial in the Court of Exchequer the single Point was, Whether the Lessor of the Plaintiff was the Son of Lady Altham, Wife of Arthur late Lord Altham? and there was a Verdict found for him.

Mr. Daly.] We admit the Record, and we admit Mary Heath was produced as a Witness upon that Trial, and that she swore that Lady Altham had not a Child, whilst she the Traverser lived with her.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Do you admit the several Assignments of Perjury?

Mr. Daly.] We do.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] My Lord, the next Thing that we shall lay before your Lordship is a Person [Mrs. Cole] to prove, that after Lady Altham's Arrival in this Kingdom, in the Year 1713, she came to the House of Mr. Briscoe, in Bride-street, in this City; that after staying there some short Time, she removed to the House of one Mrs. Vice, in Essex-street; that from thence she went to the late Lord Altham's House at Dunmaine, in the County of Wexford; and it will appear to your Lordship and to the Gentlemen of the Jury, that at the late Lord Altham's House at Dunmaine she was with Child, and did miscarry of a Child.

Mr. Daly.] We admit, if you please, that Mrs. Heath came over with my Lady Altham in October 1713, and lived with her to her Death in the Year 1729.

Court.] Gentlemen, call your Witnesses.

1. Mrs. Henrietta Cole.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Mrs. Cole, did you know Arthur late Lord Altham?

Mrs. Cole.] Yes, Sir.

Q. Did you know Mary Lady Altham, his Lady.---A. Yes.

Q. At what Time did you first become acquainted with her?

A. In the Year 1713.

Q. Do you know any Place in the County of Wexford, where they lived?---A. Yes, at Dunmaine.

Q. Were you at any Time at that House, and when?---A. I was, Sir.

Q. Can you recollect about what Time, Madam?

A. I believe it might be about February that my Mother and I went there.

Q. In what Year?---A. In the Year 1713.

Q. Do you know of any remarkable Accident that happened while your Mother and you were there?---A. Yes, I do.

Q. Give an Account to the Court and the Jury, what that Accident was.

A. My Lord was in a very great Passion one Day, at some Sawcers being brought to the Table; his Passion was very great, and he had ordered them never to come upon the Table on any Score, for they were not fit for modest People to see; and all on a sudden he threw them between my Lady and me, and put my Lady into a violent Fright.

Court.] What were they?---A. China Sawcers, my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Pray, Madam, what happened upon that Occasion?

A. My Lady fell a-trembling; into a violent Fit of Trembling and Tears.

Q. Was there any, and what Consequence from this Accident?

A. My Lady was exceedingly ill in the Night.

Mr. Edm. Malone.] My Lord, before she goes on any further, I hope she will say what she knows of her own Knowledge, and nothing more.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Whatever may be an Inducement to the material Point is necessary for her to say.

Court.] Go on.

Mrs. Cole.] I say it from Mrs. Heath the Person coming to my Mother, and I in Bed with my Mother.

Court.] Then you heard Mrs. Heath tell your Mother my Lady was very ill?---A. I heard her, my Lord.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Did any and what Consequence happen from that Illness?---A. My Mother told me in the Morning——

Court.] Stop you there. You must only tell what you know yourself did happen.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Well, tell what did happen of your own Knowledge.

A. My Lady miscarried, as I understand.

Q. From whom were you informed that my Lady was so sick?

A. From Mrs. Heath.

Q. Where was you at that Time that you was informed of it?

A. In Bed with my Mother.

Q. What did she say to your Mother then?

A. She came to the Door, and said, For God's Sake, Madam, get up, my Lady is exceedingly ill, make haste and get up.

Q. Pray, Madam, do you know what was the Consequence of that Illness?---A. My Lady miscarried, as I take it.

Q. Why do you apprehend that she miscarried?

A. I saw an Abortion in the Bason the next Day.

Q. Where did you see it, Madam?---A. In my Lady's Closet.

Q. Who shewed it to you?

A. I believe, my Mother; as to that Particular I cannot be positive.

Q. Where was Mrs. Heath at that Time?

A. Indeed, I cannot be positive as to that; but she was ever at my Lady's Elbow whenever she was ill.

Q. How was she in that Family, a Servant or Relation?

A. She was a Servant, I think; I cannot tell whether she was a Relation or not.

Q. Was she my Lady's Woman?---A. She was deemed as such.

Q. Had you any and what Discourse with the Traverser concerning my Lady's Sickness at that Time?

A. Indeed, I cannot charge my Memory with having any; we might have had Discourse about it, but I cannot charge my Memory.

Q. How long was Lady Altham confined afterwards to her Chamber?

A. That is a Question I cannot exactly tell you.

Q. Was she confined to her Chamber after that Accident of the Sawcers?

A. She was confined to her Chamber; my Lord wanted her down to Supper that Night, and sent for her several Times; and my Mother went up for her, and she was too ill to come down.

Mr. Recorder.] What Night?

A. The Night of the Day that the Sawcers were thrown.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] You say, Madam, that my Lady was confined, pray how long was she confined?

A. Whether it might be a Fortnight or Three Weeks, I cannot positively say, but she was confined to her Chamber.

Q. In what Manner was she confined, in Bed, or up, or how?

A. She kept her Bed for some Time, and sat up in her Chamber at other Times.

Q. Did you give an Account of this Affair to any Body whatsoever since the Time this Accident happened?

A. I have spoke of it frequently, and my Mother has spoke of it.

Q. To whom, Madam, can you recollect?

A. Indeed, I believe there is Mr. Monck's Family, that I believe may remember it perfectly well; there is in Gorey several that may remember it from my speaking of it before ever this Affair happened.

Q. Where was Mrs. Heath during the Time that Lady Altham was confined in her Chamber?

Mr. Recorder.] Oh! she said already, that she was about her.

Q. Pray, Madam, did Mrs. Heath know any Thing of that Matter, or not?

A. She was in the House, she was immediately at her Elbow, she was the Person that came to my Mother.

Court.] Did you go into my Lady's Room when she called your Mother?

A. I did not, my Lord, I lay in my Bed.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] But she desired your Mother to make haste, for that my Lady was exceedingly ill?---A. She did, Sir.

Jury.] What Time of the Night was it that Mary Heath came to your Apartment?---A. I really cannot recollect.

Q. When was it that you went into the Closet, and saw this Abortion you mention?

A. The next Morning about 9 or 10 o'Clock, I believe; to be certain I cannot.

Q. Do you take upon you to say, that at the Time when your Mother shewed you the Abortion, that the Traverser was in the Closet?

A. I cannot say, she might or might not.

Q. Did Mrs. Heath constantly attend Lady Altham?

A. She did constantly.

Q. Did you ever see her attend her?

A. I have seen her, and was often sent to call her.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] When she called your Mother up, did she express any and what Apprehension concerning my Lady's Illness?

A. I cannot say that she expressed any at all, only that she said, For God's Sake, Madam, get up, my Lady is exceedingly ill.

Q. Do

Q. Do you know how it was underſtood in that Family, what the Occaſion of that Sickneſs was?---Court. Suppoſition or Hearſay is nothing.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Recorder. Pray, Madam, do you remember the Time that my Lady Altham came to Ireland, the Month I mean?---Mrs. Cole. About October.

Q. Where did ſhe lodge when ſhe came to Dublin? Did not ſhe come to your Father's Houſe?---A. She came to my Father's Houſe.

Q. How long did ſhe continue in your Father's Houſe before Lord Altham came?---A. Whether a Month or ſix Weeks in Town, before he came to Town, I cannot tell.

Q. Pray, Madam, where was it that my Lord and ſhe firſt met?

A. At my Father's Houſe.

Q. Can you recollect the Month that was in?

A. I cannot be very certain; but I think that it muſt have been in November, the latter-end of November, or in the Beginning of December, which I cannot tell.

Q. Do you fix it in November?

A. I cannot fix it more than what I ſay.

Q. I aſk you now, Madam, did my Lord and Lady Altham lodge at your Houſe 'till they went to Dunmaine?---A. I do not believe they did.

Q. I aſk you, upon your Oath, did they lodge in your Father's Houſe 'till they left Town?---A. I think they did not.

Q. It is a material Queſtion, and you muſt anſwer it; I aſk you, did they or did they not? for you that remember things ſo well, muſt know whether they did or no. Did not they lie there the Night they were reconciled?---A. They did, and ſome Nights after.

Q. Did not they till they left Town?

A. No, Sir, I do not believe they did.

Q. Cannot you ſay whether they did or not?---A. I cannot ſay poſitively.

Q. Can you ſay they did not lodge there while they ſtaid in Town? You that know they were reconciled by your Father's Means, cannot you recollect whether they left your Father's Houſe before they left Town?

A. I do not think that they ſtaid there while they lived in Town.

Q. You do not think; but can you ſay whether they did or not?

A. I tell you, Sir, my Father was uneaſy at their being in his Houſe; my Lord was a Man that had a great many Freaks, and my Father prevailed on him to take Lodgings.

Q. And did he take Lodgings?

A. I think I may ſay it, I am not certain; but I think I may be poſitive that they did not lodge at my Father's Houſe 'till they went to the Country.

Q. Well, then, Madam, do you recollect their going away from Town? Did the Coach come to your Father's Houſe to carry them away?

A. I do not remember.

Q. Were they at your Father's Houſe when they went away?

A. I do not believe they were.

Q. Did the Coach come for them?---A. I remember no Coach coming for them. Indeed I do not remember any Equipage.

Q. Now, Madam, you ſay that your Mother and you went to Dunmaine; what Time was it that Lord and Lady Altham left this City?

A. I cannot aſcertain the Time of their going.

Q. You did not go with them?---A. I did not.

Q. I think you ſaid your Mother and you went to Dunmaine in February?---A. I believe it was.

Q. Pray, Madam, when my Lady was at your Houſe, did ſhe hire any Servants to go down with her?---A. I do not remember one.

Q. Do not you remember that ſhe hired one Mrs. Setwright?

A. I remember Mrs. Setwright at Dunmaine, but do not remember my Lady's hiring a Servant in the Houſe.

Q. Were you a Goſſip to Mrs. Setwright at Dunmaine?

A. I know ſhe was brought to Bed.

Q. Did you ſtand to the Child?---A. Indeed I do not remember I did; if I did, it is more than I know, or can remember.

Q. Was your Mother ſick while you were at Dunmaine?

A. Not to my Knowledge.

Q. You do not remember that neither?---A. Indeed I do not.

Q. Was ſhe ſo ill as to take Vomits there?

A. I do not remember any Vomit ſhe took, nor do I remember her to have taken two Vomits in all her Life.

Q. Did not you lie with your Mother at Dunmaine?

A. Part of the Time I was Bed-fellow to Mrs. Heath, and part to my Mother; for my Father was there for a while, and as ſoon as he went, I lay with my Mother.

Q. Pray, Madam, did your Father go with you there?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Was your Father in the Houſe when theſe Sawcers were thrown down?

A. He was not.

Q. Did that happen before or after he was there?

A. It was after he was there.

Q. How long was you there before your Father came?--A. I cannot tell.

Q. How long, a Fortnight?

A. I believe we might; more or leſs I cannot tell.

Q. Was it the Beginning of February, or the latter-end, that you went down?---A. I believe towards the Beginning; I cannot tell.

Q. I ſee you can tell nothing but one Point. Was it the Beginning, the Middle, or the latter-end of February that you went there?

A. I cannot ſay; but I believe it was in February.

Q. Well, but I aſk you now, what Time was it that this Accident of the Sawcers happened?---A. I cannot tell whether in March or April.

Q. Which Month was it?----A. If I could remember the Day, the Hour, or the Minute, I would tell you.

Q. How long was it before your Father came?---A. I think it was after.

Q. How long did he ſtay there?---A. He ſtayed but a very ſhort Time.

Q. Can you ſay how long he ſtayed?

A. Whether a Week or ten Days I cannot ſay.

Q. How long after he went away did it happen?

A. I cannot tell how long.

Q. Were not you examined in this Cauſe once before; can you recollect what Time you fixed then for your going to Dunmaine?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Did not you ſay it was in March or April?

A. I do not know whether I did or not.

Court.] Did you ſay in February or March then, or when?

A. I cannot tell, my Lord, whether I did or not.

Mr. Recorder.] When you were examined on the Trial in the Exchequer, did you ſay, you went in February, March or April?

A. I ſaid that my Lady miſcarried in March or April.

Q. Did not you ſwear that it was in March or April that you went down?

A. Not to my Knowledge.

Q. Why, had not you as good a Knowledge then as now?

A. I might; if I ſaid it I miſtook.

Q. Pray, Madam, I'd aſk you another Queſtion; you ſay, you miſtook if you ſaid ſo; upon your Oath, how long after you went down was it that this Accident happened?

A. It was ſome Time after; it either was in March or April, but I believe rather it was in April.

Court.] You do remember you were examined in the Court of Exchequer; by Virtue of your Oath, did you ſwear then, it was in the Beginning of Spring that you went to Dunmaine?

A. I do ſay, that I believe I ſaid that it was the Spring.

Q. Do you call the Month of February Spring?

A. I might miſtake in that.

Mr. Mac Manus.] My Lord, I apprehend it is an improper Queſtion to aſk a Woman now, what ſhe ſaid another Day; to examine her at this Time to what ſhe ſwore then.

Court.] I aſk your Pardon, Mr. Mac Manus, it is very proper.

Mr. Recorder.] Recollect the Time; how ſoon after you got down did this Accident happen, for it is a moſt remarkable one, in a Fortnight, or three Weeks, or a Month, or how long?

A. It was more than a Fortnight, three Weeks, or a Month; as I take it, it was about two Months after we got down.

Q. Can you recollect the Month?

A. It might be ſomething more than two Months, I cannot be poſitive.

Q. And might not it be ſomething leſs?

A. No, I do not think it was.

Q. Can you recollect the Company there at the Time of this Accident?

A. I have endeavoured my Recollection as much as I could. There were four Gentlemen at the Table beſides my Lord, my Lady, my Mother and I; but to tell one of their Names I cannot, and whether dead or alive, I do not know.

Court.] Was your Father there?--A. No, he was not at the Table.

Mr. Recorder.] Was there any Quarrel between my Lord and my Lady at this Time?---A. There was none that I know of, for it was the Sawcers that occaſioned the Quarrel.

Q. How were the Company placed at the Table; I ſuppoſe my Lord ſat at the lower End of the Table?

A. My Lady ſat at the upper End, my Mother ſat by her, and I on the other Side, and I do believe, as well as my Recollection can ſerve, I believe my Lord ſat the very next Perſon to me; I am not poſitive, but I think he did.

Q. Were theſe four Gentlemen that were at Dinner, People of any Faſhion?---A. I ſuppoſe ſome were, and ſome were not

Q. Can you be poſitive whether my Lord ſat next you?

A. Upon Recollection, I think he did ſit next me.

Court.] Where did my Lady ſit?

A. At the upper End of the Table, and the Chimney was behind me.

Mr. Recorder.] Did you ſit the next to her?

A. I ſat the very next to her.

Q. On which Hand?---A. The Right Hand.

Q. Was your Mother there?---A. My Mother was there.

Q. And did you ſit on the Right Hand of my Lady?

A. I can give you a very good Reaſon for it.

Q. Tell it.——A. It is, that my Mother had got ſome Cold, and her Eyes were weak, and ſhe did not care to face the Light.

Q. What Room was it you dined in? Deſcribe Dunmaine.

A. I have not been at Dunmaine lately; but however, the Room, as you come in at the Street-door, was on the Right Hand; there was a Bed in the other Room oppoſite to it.

Q. What was the Uſe of thoſe Sawcers?

A. There was ſomething upon every one of them.

Q. How were they brought to the Table?---A. They were brought in on a Diſh, a Deſert, and thoſe Sawcers were intermixed with other Things.

Q. What had they upon them?

A. I believe there were Sweet-meats upon them.

Q. Were you daubed with them when my Lord threw them by you?

A. He took them in this Manner, and emptied them all; and as he emptied them he threw them between my Lady and me, he would empty a Sawcer and throw it, and ſo one after another till he had thrown them all.

Q. Where did he empty them into?

A. In the Diſh that they were ſtanding on.

Q. Did he know that my Lady was with Child?

A. I believe he did; and I am pretty ſure he did.

Q. And yet he threw thoſe Sawcers directly between you?

A. Sir, my Lord was unaccountable in his Temper.

Court.] Do you ſay that my Lord knew my Lady was with Child?

A. I do believe he did know it.

Q. What is your Reaſon for that Belief?

A. I have no Reaſon, only becauſe of the Abortion.

Q. But had you any Reaſon to believe he knew it before that Time?

A. I do ſay thus far, that the very firſt Words that Mrs. Heath ſaid to my Mother——

Court.] You are only to ſay what you know yourſelf.

Mrs. Cole.] I heard my Lord ſay that my Lady was with Child before the Accident.

Mr. Recorder.] Did you hear him ſay ſo?---A. I did hear him ſay ſo.

Q. And yet he threw the Sawcers in this Manner; how did he throw them?---A. My Lady put her Head one Way, and I put my Head the other, as they were throwing.

Q. Now, Madam, you ſay you went into the Cloſet the next Morning, your Mother carried you there?----A. No, ſhe did not.

Q. Who carried you there?---A. I went of myſelf.

Q. Was your Mother there?---A. She was in the Cloſet.

Q. And your Mother ſhewed you this Abortion?——A. She did.

Q. Now, how old were you at that Time?

A. I believe this will ſhew (holding a Bit of Paper in her Hand); when I was here before I was quite uncertain as to my Age.

Q. You then ſaid you were twelve or thirteen?

A. There is a Fault in that Trial, for I was aſk'd my Age, and I could not be certain; I was aſked why I could not, and I ſaid I could not, becauſe there was always———

Q. What did you ſay your Age was then? Did you ſay how old you was?———A. Forty-five or thereabouts.

Q. Did not you ſay you were then twelve years old?

A. I was led into it; I ſaid I was, and could not tell how much more; I was aſked how old then was I, ten, twelve, fourteen, or ſixteen; and ſaid I might be ten, twelve, fourteen, or ſixteen, which I cannot determine.

Q. How old was you at the Time of the Trial; did you not ſay forty-five or thereabouts?

A. Here is my Age (ſhewing the Paper); I have now got it, and it is vaſtly more.

Q. When was you born?

A. I was born in the year 1691, but then I did not know.

Court.] What is your Reaſon for ſaying you were born in the year 1691?——A. I got my Age out of the Regiſtry.

Q. What Regiſtry?———A. Of St. Nicholas.

Q. What Pariſh of St. Nicholas?——A. St. Nicholas, Dublin.

Q. Which, there are two Pariſhes called St. Nicholas?

A. This St. Nicholas next us here.

Q. Whereabouts is the Church, in what Street?

A. St. Nicholas hereabouts, I do not remember the Street.

Court.] That is St. Nicholas Within.

Mr. Recorder.] Why then you were twenty-two at that Time?

Court.] There is ten Years difference, and that is a great while to be miſtaken in.

Mrs. Cole.] I tell you, that here was the Thing juſt as I was aſked; when they aſked me my Age, I ſaid I cannot tell, take ſo many out of ſo many, and then you will know; there was ſome of the Lawyers immediately talking, ſhe's perjured, and that ſtruck me to the Heart, that I did not know what I ſaid.

Court.] Were you aſked that Queſtion but once on the Trial, or twice, or thrice?

A. I know I was aſked it once, and when I was on the Table the laſt Time, that was the ſecond Time, I had then recollected myſelf.

Mr. Recorder.] Was not you aſked how it came that your Mother ſhewed you the Abortion when ſo very young?

A. I do not know indeed.

Q. Do you remember when you came to the Age of one-and-twenty? Did you never reckon your Years?—A. I did not, and there was a conſtant Diſpute and Debate what Year I was born.

Q. Were you of Age when you went to Dunmaine?

A. To be ſure I find by this Regiſtry I was.

Q. That is no Evidence; were you one-and-twenty when you went to Dunmaine?———A. I was to be ſure.

Q. You ſay it poſitive?———A I do ſay it poſitive.

Q. How came you to miſtake ſo prodigiouſly?

A. I do believe every one of you may remember that I ſaid, take ſo many out of ſo many, and then you may know.

Q. Well, Madam, when your Mother ſhewed you this in the Baſon, had it any Figure or Shape?———A. It ſeemed to me to have it.

Q. What Figure had it?—A. It had Head and Limbs, Sir.

Q. Could you diſtinguiſh them plainly?—A. It was but very little.

Q. Did you take and examine it?

A. I do believe my Mother ſhewed me the Limbs, I did not take it to examine it; I looked at it as it lay there.

Q. Did your Mother do any more than ſhew it to you as it lay?

A. I do not know but ſhe might, to ſhew the Limbs.

Q. Did ſhe take it in her Hand?—A. I do not remember that ſhe did.

Q. Did ſhe ſtir it in the Baſon?

A. She might ſtir it with a Feather.

Q. Did ſhe, or did ſhe not?——A. I cannot ſay.

Q. Had ſhe a Feather in her Hand?—A. I cannot ſay that ſhe had.

Q. Had it all its Limbs?

A. I might ſee the Limbs and the large Eyes.

Q. What did you take it to be when you ſaw it firſt?

A. My Mother told me it was an Abortion.

Q. That was in the Cloſet?——A. In the Cloſet.

Q. Is there a Window in the Cloſet?—A. There are three Windows.

Q. Did your Mother ſpeak to you about it before you went into the Cloſet?

A. Before I went into my Lady's Room my Mother told me ſhe had miſcarried.

Q. Was that all ſhe told you?———A. That is all, Sir.

Q. Did your Mother or you go into the Cloſet firſt?

A. When I went into the Cloſet my Mother was there; we went into the Room together, and I believe my Mother went into the Cloſet before I did.

Q. Did your Mother ſpeak before ſhe went into the Cloſet about the Abortion?

A. I don't recollect; my Mother told me my Lady had miſcarried.

Q. But did ſhe tell you of the Abortion before ſhe went in; did ſhe ſay that there was one in the Cloſet?—A. No, ſhe did not.

Q. You are ſure it was not before ſhe went in?

A. Indeed I really do not know, Sir, ſhe told me there was one, but whether before or after I cannot be poſitive.

Q. Did you, when you were formerly examined, ſay it was before or after, or that you could not tell.

A. My Confuſion was ſo great, I did not know what I ſaid.

Q. Did ſhe, or did ſhe not tell you before ſhe went into the Cloſet?

A. She told me my Lady had miſcarried before I went in, and when I went in I ſaw the Abortion.

Q. What carried you into the Cloſet if you did not know it was there?

A. My Mother and I went in; my Mother was there, and I might go to her; when ſhe had made her Compliments to my Lady, ſhe went in, and I followed her.

Q. When you were aſked before how you came to go into the Cloſet, did you not anſwer this, That your Mother told you the Abortion was there, before you went in?

A. I believe I did ſay it, I might miſtake in the Term.

Q. Did you, or did you not ſay ſo?—A. I believe I did ſay it. I know my Mother told me my Lady had miſcarried.

Q. Pray, Madam, when did you leave Dunmaine?

A. We left it, I believe, the latter-end of May, or Beginning of June, which I cannot tell, and went to Burton-Hall.

Q. Did not you ſwear upon the former Trial, that my Lord ſat at the lower End of the Table, oppoſite to my Lady, for now you place him next yourſelf?

A. I believe I did ſay it. But I ſay that I was in that Confuſion when I was here before, that I might; I might miſtake in that, for not a Mortal had ſpoke to me what I was to be examined about; but when I came on the Table, I was in the greateſt Confuſion that any body could poſſibly be. If I did ſay it, it was owing to downright Confuſion.

Court.] What time did you leave Dunmaine?

A. We left it the latter-end of May, or Beginning of June, I cannot be poſitive which.

Q. That was in the Year 1714?

A. In 1714, my Lord.

Mr. Recorder.] When did you come to Town?

A. We did not come 'till the latter-end of July, for we ſtayed at Burton-Hall.

Q. How long did you ſtay there?

A. I cannot tell whether Six Weeks, or how long.

Q. Recollect as near as you can.

A. I believe till quite the latter-end of July.

Q. And you came to Town when?

A. The latter-end of July, as near as I can recollect it.

Q. When did my Lady come to Town? Was ſhe in Town when you came?———A. I do not know whether ſhe was or not.

Q. Did not my Lady and you viſit after?

A. When I came to Town a Siſter of mine was in the Small-pox, I never had it, and my Mother ſent me out of the Houſe directly, which makes me as to any thing after that quite uncertain; and I was not at home after in my Father's Houſe 'till the Year 1718, but with one Relation or other.

Q. Pray, Madam, when you came to Town, was not the firſt News you had of the Death of the Queen?

A. I know I was not at my Father's Houſe at the Death of the Queen.

Q. Where was you then?

A. At Mr. Monck's in Dawſon-Street.

Q. Was not it ſoon after you came to Town that you heard of the Queen's Death?—A. It was ſoon after; I believe it was.

Q. How ſoon after was it that you heard that News?

A. Indeed I will not be certain, nor cannot.

Q. Was not it the firſt Publick News you heard?—A. It might.

Q. Do you believe it was?———A. I do believe it was.

Q. Did not you aſcertain your time of coming to Town by that?

A. I believe I did; I do not know whether I did or not, but I know by my Siſter's being in the Small-pox.

Q. Was Lady Altham in Town then?

A. Indeed I cannot ſay whether ſhe was or no, for I tell you I left the Houſe; my Lady might be in Town and I not know it, for I left the Houſe on my Siſter's being ill.

Q. Can you ſay whether ſhe was in Town when you heard of the Queen's Death?

A. I cannot tell; but I believe ſhe was not in Town.

Q. Pray, Madam, when my Lady came to Town, where did ſhe lodge the ſecond time? Did ſhe come ſoon after you?

A. I ſaw her in Town to be ſure, but what time of the Year I cannot be certain; but I think it was at Mrs. Vice's.

Q. Did not you ſwear upon the laſt Trial that you were poſitive that my Lady went to Vice's after the Reconciliation?

A. I do not know whether it is poſitive or not, or whether I ſwore it poſitive or not.

Q. Did not you ſwear it, that they went to Vice's before they went to Dunmaine?——A. I believe I did.

Q. Can you now be poſitive?

A. I can ſo far, that they ſtayed but a few Days at our Houſe, and did not go from our Houſe to Dunmaine.

Q. How many Days did they ſtay in your Houſe; was it three, or ten, or how many?—A. I believe about four or five Days after the Reconciliation, indeed I cannot tell.

Q. But you are ſure my Lady went to Mrs. Vice's?

A. She went to my Lord's Lodgings, wherever that was.

Q. Did you viſit there before ſhe went out of Town?

A. I did ſee my Lady once.

Q. Was it before or after Chriſtmas that they went to the Country?

A. I believe it was before; I cannot tell.

Court.] Did you ever ſee my Lord and Lady at my Lord's Lodgings?

A. I did, my Lord.

Q. Did you go there?—A. I went.

Q. Where was it they lodged?—A. It was a Houſe, as near as I can remember, next to the Slip, at Temple-Bar.

Q. When was it that you ſaw them there?

A. It was after the Reconciliation, before they went to the Country.

Q. Did you viſit them a ſecond time?—A. I did.

Q. Was it at the ſame Houſe?—A. To the beſt of my Knowledge it was.

Q. Whoſe Houſe was that?

A. They call it Vice's Houſe, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Mr. Recorder.] Now, Madam, what time of the Year was it you ſaw them the ſecond time at Vice's, in what Month? Pray recollect, for it is very material.—A. Indeed I cannot tell.

Q. You came to Town you ſay in July, and the firſt News you heard was the Death of the Queen; was it before or after that you ſaw her there?

A. It was after that I ſaw her.

Q. How

Q. How long after?—A. I cannot ſay.
Q. Was it that Year?
A. I believe it was that Year, but I cannot aſcertain the Month.
Q. Are you ſure it was that Year? See and recollect the Month, if you can.—A. It was that Year, but I cannot aſcertain what Month.
Q. Was Mrs. Setwright at Dunmaine when you were there?
A. She was.
Q. What was ſhe there?—A. She was Houſe-keeper.
Q. Did you know Sarah Weedon there?
A. I knew nothing of Sarah Weedon at all.
Q. Did not you know John Weedon the Coachman's Wife?—A. I never knew that John Weedon the Coachman was married 'till of late.
Q. Was John Weedon the Coachman there at that time?
A. He was there.
Q. Who was Houſe-maid there then?—A. I do not know.
Q. Do not you remember Nelly Thomas?---A. No, I do not.
Q. Do you know Bourk the Poſtillion?---A. I do not know him.
Q. Did not you go abroad and ſtay a Fortnight at Mr. Boyde's Houſe, and Bourk carry you?
A. I went abroad, but how long I ſtayed I cannot tell.
Q. Where did you go?——A. To Mr. Boyde's.
Q. And did not Bourk carry you there?
A. I do not know who carried me there.
Q. Was not it one of my Lord's Servants?
A. It was, but which I cannot tell.
Q. How ſoon after your being at Dunmaine was it, that you went to Mr. Boyde's Houſe?
A. I cannot tell; but it was while I was at Dunmaine.
Q. How long did you ſtay at Mr. Boyde's?
A. I cannot tell that neither; but I believe a very ſhort Time.
Q. What Boyde was it?——A. Boyde of Roſlar.
Q. Pray, Madam, who was Butler at Dunmaine when you were there?
A. Rolph.
Q. Did you know Anthony Dyer?---A. No, I did not.
Q. Who was my Lord's Gentleman?---A. Indeed I cannot tell.
Q. Had my Lady a Page?—A. Indeed I do not know that I ever ſaw any thing in the Equipage that was a Page.
Q. Had my Lady a Page or not?
A. She might have a Page for aught I know, but I do not remember.
Q. Was this Viſit to Boyde's before or after you ſaw the Abortion?
A. Indeed, I cannot tell.
Q. Were you at Dunmaine in the Month of April?---A. I was there.
Q. On St. George's Day?---A. I cannot tell.
Q. Were there any Races while you were there?
A. There might be, but I cannot tell.
Q. Was you at any Races with Lady Altham?
A. Indeed I do not remember.
Q. Did any Girls run for a Smock there? Was there a Smock-Race?
A. To my Knowledge, I never ſaw any ſuch thing in the Country.
Q. Do you know Mr. Mark Whyte?---A. Yes, I have ſeen him.
Q. Had you any Diſcourſe with him at any time?---A. Yes, he was at Gorey, and we had ſome Diſcourſe, I cannot particularly tell what.
Q. Cannot you remember what you ſaid to him?
A. I told him ſome Servants Names that were at Dunmaine; and he aſked me if I remembered my Lady to be ever with Child; I told him I did, and that ſhe miſcarried; and his Anſwer was, as to her Miſcarriage we do not go upon that, for we do not ſuppoſe my Lady a barren Woman.
Q. Was that all that paſſed between you?
A. Mr. Mark Whyte aſked me, if I remembered any of the Servants of the Family; I told him I did, and named all I knew.
Q. Did not you tell him that you'd ſwear for my Lord Angleſea if he would renew your Huſband's Leaſe?---A. Indeed I deny it abſolutely.
Q. Did you aſk the Renewal of the Leaſe?
A. Yes; I'll tell you how it was aſked. Mr. Cole had been employed for Captain Anneſley for a long time, and had a Promiſe for a Leaſe from him long before that; and when Mr. Whyte was ſpoke to upon this former Promiſe of this Leaſe, I deſired the Captain would make good his Promiſe.
Q. Do you know Mr. Frank Anneſley of Ballyſax?
A. I have very little Acquaintance with him.
Q. Did not you tell Mr. Whyte that you could be a very material Witneſs for my Lord, but that you would not tell him what you could ſay 'till your Leaſe was renewed?
A. I did not, unleſs in this Manner; if the proving a Miſcarriage can prove of any Service to my Lord, I can prove the Miſcarriage.
Court.] And did you ſay no more?
A. No indeed, I cannot ſay that I did.
Mr. Recorder.] Had you any Diſcourſe with Mr. Frank Anneſley?
A. He came one Day to Siſter Briſcoe's Houſe, and wanted to ſpeak to her, and ſhe was not ready for going down, and deſired that I would; and I went down Stairs to him, and a little while after ſhe came down, and I ſhewed him the Subpœna that I was ſerved with.
Jury.] Madam, do you recollect the Night that Mrs. Heath awakened your Mother in order to ſee my Lady?—A. I do not, Sir.
Q. Do you remember that ſhe came to awaken her?
A. I do remember that ſhe came.
Q. Was there a Light in the Room?---A. There was not.
Q. Had Mrs. Heath a Light with her?
A. She might have a Candle in her Hand.
Q. Was there Light or not?
A. There was not, I believe there might be a Fire.
Q. Had ſhe a Candle in her Hand?
A. Indeed I cannot tell, I had been aſleep and ſhe awakened me, and I cannot tell.
Q. Was there Light of any Kind in the Room?
A. There might be a Candle, and there might not.
The Reaſon of the Queſtion is this; look at that Woman.
The Witneſs looks at Mrs. Heath.
Q. Will you ſwear poſitively, that that is the Woman that came into the Room to call your Mother?
A. Mrs. Heath was the Perſon, and I believe that is the ſame.
Q. How can you tell it was her, when there was no Light?
A. I knew her Voice.
Mr. Recorder.] Did you ſee Lady Altham in Dublin in the Year 1715?
A. I don't think I did; I do not know that I did at all; if ſhe was in Town I ſaw her; but I cannot tell whether ſhe was or not.
Court.] Did your Mother ſhew you the Abortion?
A. I went into the Cloſet and ſaw it.
Q. Did your Mother call you to ſee it?
A. I do not know that ſhe did.
Q. Did ſhe deſire you to look at the Abortion?
A. I do not know that ſhe did.
Q. When was you married?---A. I was married in the Year——— I ſhall be next March 14 Years married.
Q. Can you recollect your Age when you were married?
A. Indeed I cannot, except I count.
Court.] I only aſk, becauſe young Women generally keep Account of their Age.
Mrs. Cole. Well, I never did, and I tell you the Reaſon, there was a conſtant Debate about my Age, the Leaf was torn out of the Bible.
Q. Did you ever ſee an Abortion before that time?
A. No, nor for ſome time after.
Mr. Recorder.] Did any body attend my Lady on this Miſcarriage?
A. I cannot remember one.
Mr. Solicitor.] My Lord, I only beg Leave to make one Obſervation on the Examination of this Witneſs; it ſeemed to be apprehended by the Court, that we concerned for the Crown had a mind to lengthen out this Trial unneceſſarily; you will pleaſe to recollect what little time we took in the original Examination, and how much the Recorder has ſpent in croſs-examining her, and I beg leave to ſay, that he did not aſk one improper Queſtion.
Court.] Since you acknowledge he did not aſk one improper Queſtion, you cannot think the time has been taken up unneceſſarily.
Mr. Solicitor.] I only mention this, to ſhew how neceſſary it is for us to take up as much time in our Examinations, if we find it material.
Court.] You ſhall have all the time you can deſire, to examine any Witneſſes that are material.
N. B. The Examination of Mrs. Cole held from 6 Minutes before Nine, to 20 Minutes after Eleven.
Court.] Call your next Witneſs.
Cryer.] Doctor Jemmat.
Mr. Spring. My Lord, I deſire, before Doctor Jemmat comes upon the Table, what he is to be examined to may be opened.
Mr. Serj. Tiſdal.] My Lord, the next Witneſs we ſhall produce is Doctor Jemmat, a Doctor of Phyſic, who attended Lady Altham in the Year 1714, at Mrs. Vice's, at the time ſhe was with Child.

Doctor SAMUEL JEMMAT.*

Mr. Daly.] I deſire to aſk a previous Queſtion, which is this; Did not you make an Affidavit of the Teſtimony you could give in this Cauſe?
Dr. Samuel Jemmat.] Do you mean in this Court, or any other?
Court.] Before any Perſon?
A. Before a Maſter in Chancery I gave in an Examination.
Mr. Daly.] Upon what Occaſion, Doctor?
A. They aſked me what I had to ſay in this Affair, and I told them.
Q. Who aſked you?---A. One Mr. Cooper, a Maſter in Chancery.
Court.] What Cooper do you mean, Doctor Cooper?
A. He was a Stranger to me.
Q. Where was it that you were examined?
A. It was in the Queen's County, my Lord.
Q. What time was this?
A. I cannot tell whether in Auguſt, or September, or July the laſt Year.
Mr. Serj. Tiſdal.] Did you know the late Lord and Lady Altham?
A. I did.
Q. Was you employed in that Family in any Capacity, and what?
A. I was employed by Arthur Lord Altham, as his Phyſician for ſome Years.
Q. Pray, Sir, did you ever attend Lady Altham as a Phyſician?
A. I did attend her Ladyſhip.
Court.] Do you remember when ſhe came from England into this Kingdom?
A. I did not know when ſhe came firſt, but I think about the latter End of November 1714, Lord Altham came to my Houſe in Angleſea Street in a Chariot, and deſired I would go with him to ſee my Lady, for he was afraid ſhe had a Fever.
Q. And did you go?
A. I went in the Chariot with Arthur Lord Altham, to one Mrs. Vice's in Eſſex Street, where they then lodged.
Mr. Serj. Tiſdal.] And did you viſit my Lady then?
A. I did, and found her very hot and feveriſh, and I aſked how long ſhe had been ſo; and my Lord told me, (for only he, and ſhe and I were in the Room) he told me that they had been out late at Night, whether at a Ball, or Play, or Muſic-meeting I do not remember, and he was apprehenſive my Lady had got cold that way; but I forget whether he ſaid it was at a Play, or Concert of Muſic, or any other Diverſion.
Q. Pray, Sir, did you preſcribe for her?
A. I did; I told her, I thought a little Blood taken away would be proper, and a gentle Puke neceſſary; but her Ladyſhip calling for a Baſon,

* This Doctor Jemmat was a Gentleman of a Suſſex Family, and in his younger Years, practiſed as a Phyſician in England; but ſome private Affairs calling him over to Ireland, he met with ſuch Encouragement, as induced him to continue there, and was long ſettled at Dublin, where he was choſen an Honorary Fellow and Preſident of the College of Phyſicians, and attended Lady Altham in the Winter 1714, when her Ladyſhip was ſuppoſed to be with Child, and preſcribed for her; and would have been a material Witneſs for Mr. Anneſley, in the remarkable Trial 1743, had he been known to him, or Mr. MacKercher, who, in ſome meaſure, conducted the Cauſe; but they not knowing of him at that time, were deprived of his Teſtimony; but the Doctor being afterwards found out, came over in 1752, with ſeveral others to England, to be examined in relation to the Angleſea Title and Eſtate. He for many years had a Complication of Diſeaſes, and was troubled ſo violently with the Gravel, that he rarely quitted his Bed, or could be moved without exquiſite Torture; nevertheleſs, when he was acquainted with the Conſequence his Teſtimony would be of, he determined, though at that Seaſon of the Year, and ſo late in Life, to undertake the Journey. But he died at Briſtol the ſecond Night after his Landing, in the 78th year of his Age, November 1752, and retained his Senſes to the laſt. [In a Letter from Briſtol, dated 21 November 1752, printed in the public Papers at that time.]

I thought

I thought she had an Inclination to vomit; but instead of that, she made what the understanding Women call, Long Spits, as if she was with Child. I asked her Ladyship then if she was with Child; she told me she had all the Reason in the World to believe that she was so: I then asked how long, and she said three Months. I asked her Ladyship upon that, if she had been regular; she told me that she had as any Woman living, 'till about three Months before that Time my Lord came for me. Upon which, I altered the Prescription I had before given, and ordered such mild Medicines, to mitigate the Fever, as might not endanger her Ladyship, or the Infant within her.

Q. Do you remember whether Mrs. Heath lived there with my Lady?

A. My Lords and Gentlemen, whenever I was sent for to any Noble Family, or Gentleman's House, my Business was to attend what I was sent for about, and I never took Notice of any Servant.

Q. Do you know whether Lady Altham was with Child then, or not; have you any other Reasons?

A. Upon her telling me this and examining of her, I had Reason to believe she was; I had breakfasted with them before, but I found her Countenance change, and she had yellow Spots and livid Spots came out upon her; and I felt her Breasts, and found they began to grow turgid; upon which, I found that she was with Child, and that made me alter the Prescriptions, that they might not hurt the one or the other.

Q. Do you know whether she went on in her Pregnancy?

A. I gave her Directions how to manage herself; but her Disorder being what we call a Febris Ephemera, which lasted but three Days, my Wife and I dined with them at a third Place, and after Dinner, my Wife, who saw her Condition, went out with her, and returned again in a few Minutes; and my Lady told my Wife——

Court.] You are not to say what my Lady told your Wife, but only what you know yourself of her being with Child.

Doctor Jemmat.] But I say, I gave her Directions how to manage herself, and my Lord told me——

Court.] You are not to say what Lord or Lady or any Body told you. Do you believe her to have been then with Child?—A. I do.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] My Lord, I must insist that we have by Law a Right to ask that Question; in the very Chapter of Perjury in Hawkins you will see it laid down as a Rule, that Hearsay-evidence, that serves to illustrate what is the proper Evidence to be given before the Court, shall be admitted.

Court.] Hearsay-evidence may be made use of to introduce material Evidence, but when a Witness has said all that is material, we shall not admit that.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Spring.] As well as I recollect, you said, Sir, that Lord Altham carried you to see his Lady?

A. He called upon me, and I went into the Chariot with him; he did not carry me in, I assure you.

Q. Well, Sir, if he did not carry you, you went with him?---A. I did.

Q. You said, I think, that you made an Affidavit before Mr. Cooper, to what Purpose did you make that Affidavit?

A. I had given in an Examination; I do not know to what Purpose.

Q. Do you recollect what you have said there with respect to the Manner and Time of attending my Lady Altham?---A. I believe I might.

Q. Did not you say there that it was in November?---A. I say so now.

Q. Did not you say that the Chariot was sent for you?

A. I believe not; if the Master in Chancery put it down that I was sent for he mistook me, for I remember that my Lord came for me himself; and I will tell you why I remember it. I was then in Mourning for Queen Anne, and I had only one Weeper on when he came; and he came into the Parlour and sat by the Fire 'till the other was put on.

Q. Would you have this understood, that if it was mentioned in the Affidavit that the Chariot was sent for you, it was a Mistake?

Court.] He says the Master was mistaken.

Mr. Spring.] Did not you read it before you swore it?

A. I believe I might.

Mr. Walsh.] Pray, Sir, how long have you been a Physician?

A. I took my Degree of Doctor of Physic in the Year 1711, and I think that is about 33 Years; I have been 27 Years a Fellow of the College of Physicians, and an Honorary Fellow above four Years.

Mr. Spring.] Upon your Oath, Sir, are there any Rules in your Profession, by which a Pregnancy can be discerned from a Tympany, or any the like Disorder?

A. By Virtue of my Oath, that Question would puzzle not only the Colleges of Physicians of England and Ireland, but the Royal Society too.

Jury.] Is there such a Thing as a false Conception?

A. Very often, a Mola there is.

Q. There is such a Thing?---A. No Doubt of it.

Q. Are the Symptoms the same? Have Women grown big with a false Conception?---A. They have done it.

Mr. Walsh.] The next Witness that we shall produce to your Lordship is one Hellena Moncrieffe. We produce this Witness, to shew that in the Year 1714, she was recommended by Sir Chamberlaine Walker, a famous Man-Midwife of this City, to my Lady Altham, whilst she lodged at Mrs. Vice's, for a Nurse; that she was hired and agreed with her Ladyship; had been several Times with her on that Occasion; and will give your Lordship an Account that my Lady was then with Child, and the Reasons of her Knowledge.

3. Hellena Moncrieffe.

Mr. Walsh.] Pray, what Business do you follow?

Hel. Moncrieffe.] My Business is to attend Ladies that lye-in.

Q. How long have you followed that Business?

A. Twenty-seven Years next March.

Q. Tell what Ladies you have attended that Way.

A. The Honourable Mrs. Mary Moore; Mrs. Ludlow, Counsellor Ludlow's Lady, of eight Children; Lady Mountjoy; Lady Antrim; Lord Bristborough's Family entirely.

Q. Well, did you know Sir Chamberlaine Walker?---A. Very well.

Q. What Profession did he follow?---A. Midwifery.

Q. Do you remember to have met him in the Year 1714 any where?

A. I did, Sir.

Q. Where?---A. In Stafford-street.

Q. When did you meet him there?

Q. To the best of my Knowledge, in and about November, or Beginning of December, 1714.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. In Stafford-street, at a Jew's House, one Solomon.

Q. Had you any Discourse with him there?

Mr. Malone.] My Lord, I object to that as an illegal Question.

Mr. Walsh.] I insist upon it to be a legal Question according to the Evidence opened, that she was recommended to my Lady by him; is not it proper to ask what Discourse he had with her on that Occasion?

Mr. Malone.] It is proper to examine her to that Fact, but they have opened it a great deal further.

Mr. Walsh.] Did you see Lady Altham?

A. I had the Honour of seeing Lady Altham.

Q. Where did you see her?

A. I saw her first at Doctor Walker's at that Time, he was Doctor Walker then, and was after knighted in the Duke of Grafton's Time, and he spoke to me, and recommended me to her Ladyship; and said if I had a Mind to nurse, he would recommend me to a very good one. I made very little of it then; I was giving Suck in January to a Child of six Months old.

Q. Did you go to my Lady Altham?

A. I was three different Times with her; the last Time she talked to me a good deal about her being with Child, and what Time she reckoned. Says she, I am at a Loss, as I have had some Illness, how to reckon; and then she lifted up her Night-gown, it was of Sattin, with Green Flowers in it, and shewed me her Belly: Your Ladyship, says I, seems to be as big as any Woman gone seven Months.

Q. And did she say she was?---A. She said, she believed not.

Jury.] What Time was this?---A. In January 1714-15.

Court.] How many Times were you with my Lady?

A. Three different Times I was with her.

Q. Did she lift up only her Night-gown, or all her Cloaths?

A. Only her Night-gown.

Q. What was it you said to her then?

A. I told her that I thought she was as big with Child as any Lady that was six or seven Months gone; and she said herself that she was not so long with Child as seven Months.

Q. What were you recommended for to her?---A. A Nurse.

Q. By whom?---A. By Doctor Walker.

Q. A wet Nurse or dry Nurse?---A. A wet Nurse, Sir.

Q. How came you not to accept of that Nursing?

A. As I went there the last Time I met two or three Friends, and they asked me where I was going; I told them where; says one, Moncrieffe, take my Advice, Lord Altham is a bad Man, you have no Necessity, and do not engage; and for that Reason I went unto her no more, but heard she went out of Town.

Q. What Reason had you to believe she was with Child?

A. By her Appearance and Conversation, and the laying my Hand upon her Belly, I had Reason to believe she was with Child.

Q. From these Circumstances, as you are now a Woman of Skill, can you positively say she was with Child?

A. Upon my Word, I do not know either of the Gentlemen, it was Mr. Arthur Hill brought me into this by telling it by Accident above two Years ago; but upon the Word of a Christian, both by the Judgment that I have had since and before, my Lady Altham was as much with Child as ever I was, and I have had one-and-twenty Children.

Mr. Walsh.] Do you know Mrs. Heath?

A. So far I have recollected, that the last Time I breakfasted with my Lady, there came in a Gentlewoman they called my Lady's Woman, she looked opposite to me, and she was a thin-faced black Woman at that Time; and there came Mrs. Tilby, a Mantua-maker, an eminent Mantua-maker at that Time, and brought a Gown with her, but whether my Lady's or no I cannot tell; but she staid at the Dining-room Door, and asked me what I was doing there.——

Q. Tell the Discourse you had with Mrs. Heath.--A. I had none at all.

Q. Did you see her there?

A. I saw her come to tell the Mantua-maker was come to her Ladyship.

Q. Do you remember what Lady Altham called her?

A. I do not remember upon my Word, I know she was a thin black Woman, very swarthy, and had black Hair.

Mr. Daly.] We admit that Mrs. Heath was my Lady's Woman.

Mr. Walsh.] Do you remember on what Occasion Mrs. Tilby came?

A. To alter a Suit of black Silk.

Q. To let them out, or take them in?

A. I cannot tell that; it was the Queen's Mourning.

Q. How do you know it was Mourning for the Queen?

A. The Child I was giving suck to was born the 20th of July, I have it in my Bible, and the Queen died in August following.

Q. How many Times did you go to visit my Lady?

A. Three different Times in Essex-street; the first Time she was indisposed.

Q. Every Time that you came there did you see this Lady?

A. Never to my Knowledge but once; I had no Reason to retain it.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Daly.] You waited of Lady Altham, had you ever seen her before that Time?

A. I had, as I had been Woman to Lady Louth, they were intimate, and I had seen her.

Q. Where did you wait on her first?

A. First I waited on her in Dr. Walker's House, in Capel-street.

Q. Where did you wait on her at the Time you conversed with her and handled her Belly?

A. At Mrs. Vice's, in Essex-street.

Q. What Year was that in?

A. In the Year 1714.

Q. What Time?

A. Between

A. Between the Beginning and 23d of January, becauſe I put out my own Child to Nurſe the 22d, and it was my ſecond Child.

Q. Who ſhewed you into my Lady's Room the firſt Time?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge a Man Servant.

Q. Name him.

A. Indeed I cannot. I go very often to Ladies now, and do not know their Servants.

Q. What Sort of Man was he?

A. He was an elderly Man, I have ſeen him afterwards.

Q. What Time was it that Lady Altham and Lady Louth were intimate, and you ſaw her there?

A. It was when they were in Dublin.

Q. Where did Lady Louth lodge?

A. She lodged at one Farrel's upon the Quay.

Q. Did you ſee Lady Altham there?——A. I did.

Q. At what Time?——A. I cannot recollect my Lady's Viſitors.

Q. What Year was it?--A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, it was 1713.

Q. Pray, how often did you ſee her there?

A. I believe three or four or five Times, I know they were very intimate.

Q. Was there any Servant of my Lady's preſent, when you were in the Room and handled her Belly?

A. I cannot tell; there was no Servant, it is not common now, and let alone at that Time: Yes, there was a Woman that went with me, and ſhe was by.

Q. Was ſhe preſent?——A. She was.

Q. Had ſhe any Trade or Calling?

A. She was a creditable Man's Wife.

Q. Did ſhe underſtand Midwifery?——A. She did not.

Q. And though it is not common for a Servant to ſee her Lady's Belly handled, yet a Lady that went with you was preſent, you ſay?

A. Yes, ſhe was.

Q. Can you recollect what Time of the Year 1713 it was you ſaw my Lady Altham at Lady Louth's?——A. I cannot indeed.

Q. Was it in Summer?

A. I believe it might be in Summer; I am not poſitive as to that.

Q. What was the Woman's Name that was preſent with you when you handled my Lady's Belly?——A. Her Name was Claſſon.

Q. But you do not know the Servant that ſhewed you up Stairs?

A. Indeed I do not.

Q. And none were preſent?——A. None that I ſaw.

Q. Do you know any Perſon in the Houſe that has ſeen you there?

A. Mrs. Vice's Servant ſaw me there.

Q. What was her Name?——A. Her Name was Peggy.

Q. Did Mrs. Vice ſee you there?

A. She did; I ſat half an Hour in her Room.

Q. Had ſhe any Children?——A. I think a Girl or two.

Q. You ſaw her Daughter?

A. I believe ſo; they were little, and her Children.

Q. Upon your Oath, did you ſee Lady Altham before Michaelmas 1713?

A. I cannot tell, becauſe it was no way material to me to recollect that.

Q. When did you leave Lady Louth?——A. In the Year 1713.

Q. About what Time?

A. I believe it might be February, for I lay-in of my firſt Child in February.

Q. Did you make any Affidavit concerning this Affair?---A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Before whom?

A. I was brought by a Gentleman to Eſſex-Street to a Commiſſion, I think it was, for I know nothing about it: I think about two Years laſt Summer Mr. Arthur Hill began a Diſcourſe about this Mr. Annesley. He aſked me if ever I ſaw my Lady Altham; I told him I did, and ſaw her with Child, and he told it to ſomebody that ſent for me.

Q. What Age were you in 1713?

A. I was born the 12th of March 1688.

Q. Was not it in Summer before that that you left my Lady Louth?

A. No, Sir, it was in February.

Q. Did not you ſay it was in Summer?

A. I ſay, that it was in Summer that my Lady Altham viſited Lady Louth.

Court.] You have attended a great many Women, pray, can you tell the Difference between a falſe Conception and a real one?

A. Yes, Sir, by the Converſation of the Woman.

Q. But can you any otherwiſe?

A. No, really, but by Diſcourſe.

Q. Did you feel the Child ſtir?

A. No, really, my Lord, I did not; but I remember my Lady, when I ſaid, ſhe ſeemed to be ſeven Months with Child, ſaid, No, ſhe was not.

Q. What Child was you nurſing at that Time?

A. My ſecond Child I nurſed then.

Jury.] You ſay, Madam, that when you waited upon Lady Altham, ſhe told you ſhe was gone about ſeven Months?——A. I told her ſo.

Q. How came you to tell her ſo?

A. Becauſe ſhe aſked me the Queſtion; ſhe told me ſhe had ſome Illneſs, and could not tell how to reckon, but ſaid ſhe found herſelf very big and uneaſy; I ſaid ſhe ſeemed about ſix or ſeven Months gone with Child.

Q. But why ſhould ſhe aſk you, if ſhe could not tell herſelf?

A. There are a great many Queſtions aſked by Ladies, when they are with Child.

Q. You were unexperienced then. Was your Hand upon her naked Belly?——A. No, above her under-Petticoat.

Q. I think you ſaid you felt nothing ſtir?—A. I never ſaid I did.

Q. What was the Occaſion of putting your Hand upon her Cloaths?

A. To judge by her Bulk; it is a mighty common Thing.

Q. You were at Mrs. Vice's?——A. I was.

Q. You ſay you ſat there above an Hour?—A. I ſaid half an Hour.

Q. Did you ſee any of her Children?—A. I think I ſaw Children.

Q. What were they?——A. It was a Girl.

Q. How old might it be?

A. Why indeed very little, about five or ſix Years old; I do not know whether they were hers or the Neighbours Children, but they came into her Room.

Mr. Daly.] How long have you been a Nurſe?

A. Seven-and-twenty Years very near, not all out till March next.

Court.] Do you know whether you would know my Lady's Woman now?

Witneſs looks at Mrs. Heath, and ſays, I cannot ſay that I have any Knowledge of the Gentlewoman's Face at all; the Woman then was a thin, ſwarthy Woman with black Hair.

4. Mrs. MARGARET BUSHE.

Mr Harward.] We call this Witneſs, my Lord, to the ſame Purpoſe; ſhe was an intimate Acquaintance of my Lady Altham, and will prove that ſhe was with Child, and afterwards was delivered of a Child.

Q. Pray, Madam, did you know my Lady Altham?

Mrs. Margaret Buſhe.] I did; I was acquainted with her.

Q. Pray, Madam, did you ever ſee her at New Roſs?—A. I did.

Q. When you ſaw her at New-Roſs, in what Condition was ſhe?

A. She ſeemed to be with Child, pretty big.

Q. Was this, Madam, at New-Roſs?——A. At New-Roſs.

Q. Pray, Madam, did you ſee her but once there, or more frequently?

A. I ſaw Lady Altham three Times at New-Roſs, to the beſt of my Memory.

Q. Pray, Madam, in what Year, or about what Time was it that you ſaw her there?

A. To the beſt of my Recollection and Memory, it was February, in the Year 1714-15.

Q. Have you any particular Reaſons that induce you to recollect that it was about that Time?

A. Yes; I was at that Side of the Country 'till a little before Chriſtmas that Year. It was about half a Year after the Death of Queen Anne, they were all in Mourning when I viſited her, except one or two that went out, and I do not know whether they were in Mourning or no; and I do believe it was for Queen Anne.

Q. Pray, Madam, did this Lady ſtay for any Time at Roſs, or go any where elſe?

A. The Day I viſited her I ſaw her twice then, firſt at Captain Butler's; there Mrs. Butler introduced me to Lady Altham.

Q. Where did Captain Butler live?——A. He lived in Roſs.

Q. Where did you ſee my Lady next?

A. A Day or two after I viſited my Lady at her own Lodgings in Roſs.

Q. Pray, Madam, did ſhe continue for any Time there, or did ſhe leave it ſoon after?

A. The Day I viſited her, ſhe talked of going out of Town next Morning.

Court.] Did ſhe go?

A. I do not know, I left the Town in a few Days myſelf, and did not ſee her in Roſs after.

Mr. Harward.] How ſoon did you return to New-Roſs?

A. I was frequently there to and fro, for I lived at my Father's within three Miles of it, and I cannot tell how ſoon; but I am ſure towards the latter end of the Month of April, and to the beſt of my Memory, either the Saturday in Eaſter Week, or early the next Week it was, that I went there.

Q. Pray, Madam, recollect whether this Lady was a Lady far gone with Child, or was early in her Pregnancy.

A. She looked big, and that is all the Memory I know of it, and I aſked her no Queſtions.

Q. Did not you inquire about her being with Child?

A. Several Gentlemen were by, and I did not think it proper.

Q. Do you know of her being delivered of that big Belly?

A. I was at my Father's, and ſome of his Servants went to Town——

Court.] You muſt only ſpeak from your own Knowledge, Madam, not what you heard from any body.

Mrs. Buſhe.] I wiſhed my Lord Joy of that Child on the Quay of Roſs.

Mr. Recorder.] That is nothing.

Mrs. Buſhe.] I know nothing more of myſelf, but they both told me ſo.

Court.] Madam, you come here to declare the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth; and if you ſwear to what you heard from other People, you may ſwear falſe, for they might deceive you.

Mrs. Buſhe.] I may be deceived, but I will ſwear the Truth, and nothing but what I know.

Mr. Harward.] I ſhall put to her a legal Queſtion. Pray, Madam, you ſay you ſaw her big-bellied, did you ever ſee her afterwards when ſhe wanted that big Belly?——A. I did.

Court.] How ſoon after?

A. To the beſt of my Recollection, I will not be poſitive, I ſaw her here in Dublin towards the latter end of the Month of June that Year.

Q. What Year?——A. In June 1715.

Q. In June 1715?

A. To the beſt of my Recollection, about the latter end of June, in the Year 1715.

Mr. Harward.] How did ſhe appear then, was ſhe with Child or not?

A. She was very ſlender, and looked pale when I ſaw her.

Q. Give an Account of what happened when you ſaw her in Dublin?

A. I went to viſit her; I was juſt upon leaving Town, and thought proper to viſit her before I went; I found her undreſſed, and ſhe told me ſhe had been buſy packing up into the Country, and was going to Dunmaine. It is to no Purpoſe, I find, to tell you what ſhe told me.

Mr. Harward.] The Nature of all Evidence muſt be to diſcover the Truth, and there is no Way of coming at the Truth but by the eſſential and circumſtantial Parts of every Fact; ſhe now ſays ſhe viſited my Lady Altham in Dublin.

Court.] That is material.

Mr. Harward.] I aſk her then, my Lord, whether Lady Altham gave any Account of what became of that big Belly of her's? I have a Right, I think, to know that; or otherwiſe our Ears are to be ſhut againſt the Truth.

Court.] If you were upon a Trial of who was Heir to the Eſtate, your Queſtion would be proper; but in a Caſe of Perjury, your Queſtion is not proper, for what Lady Altham ſays is no Evidence for or againſt the Traverſer.

Mr. Harward.] I would always be in your Lordſhip's Judgment about the Legality of any Queſtion, but I beg Leave to mention what I underſtand I have a Right to inſiſt on; I humbly apprehend I have a Right to introduce the material Part of Evidence by every Thing that precedes it and is relative to it.

Court.] You have the material Part of your Evidence already; the Witneſs ſays ſhe ſaw Lady Altham big-bellied at Roſs, and ſoon after in Dublin without a big Belly; that is all ſhe knows, or has to ſay that is material; if Lady Altham told a thouſand People ſhe had a Child, that's no Evidence againſt Mrs. Heath.

Mr. Harward.] What do you apprehend became of that big Belly?

Mr. Daly] My Lord, I muſt inſiſt upon it, that the Witneſs's Apprehenſions are no Evidence.

Mr. Howard.] I am pretty confident I cannot be miſtaken in this Point, I have a Right to have the Apprehenſions of every body, on Oath.

Court.] I beg your Pardon, Mr. Harward, ſhew your Authority.

Mr. Harward.] I will, my Lord: I beg leave to lay it down as an eſtabliſhed Rule, ſince I am called upon, and I hope they will indulge me to give Account of myſelf. My Lord, I lay down this as a Rule of Evidence, that in all Crimes whatever, the Apprehenſions of a Witneſs are admitted as Evidence; ſuppoſe if a Man was indicted for Murder, and a Witneſs againſt him gave account of Facts that he had ſeen concerning that Murder, it is every Day's Experience to aſk that Witneſs what he apprehended upon thoſe Facts. This is the Law, and I muſt humbly ſubmit it to be ſo, that when a Witneſs gives account of particular Facts, he is aſked what he apprehended upon thoſe Facts; but he cannot tell what he apprehended, unleſs he lays Facts before you, which are the Ground of that Apprehenſion.

Mr. Recorder.] It is the firſt time that ever I heard that a Man is ſaid in a Court of Law to be examined to his Apprehenſion of Facts by the Proſecutors of a criminal Cauſe; the Plaintiff can never aſk Belief or Apprehenſion; I may, but you cannot.

Court.] I ſee the Doctrine, and whither it tends; I tell you how I apprehend the Law to be, and to be very clear in the Point. The Apprehenſion of a Witneſs is aſked, where no other Evidence can be had in capital Caſes; as where a Witneſs is produced to prove a Wound given, he is aſked whether he apprehends that Wound was the Cauſe of Death. That muſt be aſked, for he cannot tell otherwiſe. It is the beſt Evidence that can be had in that Caſe. But as to a Fact, if you make the Apprehenſion of a Witneſs neceſſary, it takes away all Proof of Fact.

Mr. Harward.] Then I underſtand I am not to aſk her any thing concerning this big Belly.

Court.] Yes, if ſhe knows any thing of it, you may aſk her.

Mr. Harward.] Aye, but not from Lady Altham.

Court.] No, not as to that.

Mr. Harward.] Since I am debarred of aſking that Queſtion, I hope I ſhall have better Luck in the next.

Q. Pray, Madam, what was the common Reputation of the Country concerning Lady Altham's being brought-to-bed?

Mr. Smith.] I object to that Queſtion, my Lord.

Court.] You have much more Reaſon to object to that, after what I have juſt now ſaid.

Mr. Harward.] I acquieſce alſo in that, becauſe that will ſettle what hereafter will be a very great Debate, when theſe Gentlemen come to produce their Witneſſes.

Court.] The Reputation of the Country is not Evidence here. You lay down your Rules too large, Mr. Harward.

Court.] Pray, Madam, where in Dublin did you viſit Lady Altham?

A. At whoſe Houſe I do not know, for I never was there but once; the Chairmen knew where ſhe lodged, and carried me there; and I did not know the Name of the People where they lodged; it was in Eſſex-Street I know, a little beyond the Poſt-Office; between that and Fleet-ſtreet, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Mr. Harward.] Do you know, Madam, whether there were any Preparations made for her Lying-in?

A. I know, when I was in Roſs, the Midwife that was ſaid to lay Lady Altham, came to the Houſe where ſhe lodged, and ſent out ſome Wines to my Lady.

Court.] Do you know that theſe Wines went out to Lady Altham?

A. Indeed I did not ſend out the Wines myſelf.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Spring.] Pray, Madam, you ſaid you ſaw my Lady Altham at Roſs?

A. I did, Sir.

Q. I think you ſay it was in the Year 1714 or 1715?

A. In 1714-15, in February I firſt ſaw her.

Q. Where did ſhe lodge then?---At Mr. Samuel Stephens's.

Q. How long did ſhe remain in that Town during that Time?

A. I cannot tell, for I do not know whether ſhe or I went away firſt.

Q. Do you know one Mrs. Butler, that lives on the Quay in this Town?

A. I do.

Q. Had you any Converſation with her?

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall.] My Lord, I muſt object to that Queſtion.

Court.] What the Witneſs has ſaid to any body is Evidence againſt her on Croſs-examination; but not what others have told her.

Mrs. Buſhe.] There was ſome Converſation.

Q. What did you tell this Miſs Butler in relation to Lady Altham's having or not having a Child?

A. I tell you what I ſaid on that Head. I told her that upon Inquiry after this Child, ſome Years after my Lord and Lady parted, I was told it was dead, and never hearing any thing to the contrary that could convince me, I always thought he was dead.

Q. Did you never tell her, upon your Oath, that Lady Altham had had no Child?

A. I never did; but I told her that I was a good while before I could think, after Mr. Anneſley's coming over, that he was my Lady Altham's Child.

Court.] Gentlemen, call your next Witneſs.

Mr. Robins.] My Lord, the next Witneſs we produce is Alice Betts, to prove Lady Altham was with Child, and the Traverſer's whole Account to her of her being with Child.

5. Alice Betts.

Court.] Was you examined on the former Trial?

Alice Betts.] Yes, I was.

Mr. Robins.] Did you know Arthur Lord Altham?---A. Yes, I did.

Q. And Lady Altham his Wife?---A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Do you know any thing of my Lady's being with Child?

A. Yes, Sir, I did.

Q. Tell what you know of your own Knowledge.

A. Why, I went to ſee my Lady at Mrs. Vice's in Eſſex-ſtreet, and my Lord met me and clapp'd me on my Back, and ſaid, By G—d, Alley, Moll is with Child.

Q. What do you know of your own Knowledge concerning her being with Child?

A. I know, by ſeeing of her with Child, and that is all I can tell, by ſeeing of her big, and joked with her, and wiſhed her much Joy, and ſhe did not deny it.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Heath?

A. I knew Mrs. Heath that waited on my Lady, but I cannot tell at this Diſtance whether it be her; I am near-ſighted. [The Witneſs goes nearer to her, and ſays] I think it is her, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. Had you any Diſcourſe with her about my Lady? Tell when and where.

A. I uſed to joke with her about my Lady's being with Child at Mrs. Vice's.

Q. When?——A. In November, and after.

Q. In what Year?——A. In the Year 1714.

Q. Was it before or after Queen Anne died?---A. After the Queen died.

Q. What did ſhe ſay?

A. We uſed to be talking and joking that Way, we were glad my Lady was with Child; but I never uſed to aſk Mrs. Heath ſeriouſly about it. It is no more than Jeſt.

Q. Do you know any thing more of this Matter?

A. My Lady came one Day to our Houſe.

Q. Whoſe Houſe was that?---A. Captain Briſcoe's.

Q. Was you Servant there?

A. I waited on Mrs. Briſcoe. And my Lord and Lady had a little Falling-out, and ſhe came in a little Pet to our Houſe, and went into Mrs. Briſcoe's Room and cried; ſhe cried moſt terribly; and a little after Mrs. Heath came in with a blue Box in her Hand with my Lady's Head-cloaths, for my Lady came undreſſed in a long ſcarlet Cloak; and I helped Mrs. Heath to dreſs and undreſs her, and ſhe had a long Silk Coat upon her.

Q. What were the Words Mrs. Heath ſaid about my Lady's being with Child?

A. I cannot remember the particular Words, any more than that we were jeſting in a little way.

Q. How?

A. Why, we were pleaſed to ſee that my Lady was with Child; Mrs. Heath knows it herſelf; Mrs. Heath knew me mighty well, we were intimately acquainted, and always in my Lady's Room together, dreſſing and undreſſing her together, and I attended my Lady with her very often.

Q. Did Mrs. Heath ever tell you that my Lady was not with Child?

A. No, ſhe did not, for I never asked her ſuch a Queſtion.

Q. What did ſhe, from her Diſcourſe to you, appear to think of my Lady?

The Queſtion objected to.

Court.] Had you any other Diſcourſe with her, about my Lady's being with Child?

A. No, indeed.

Mr. Robins.] Can you remember the Words Mrs. Heath ſpoke to you?

A. I cannot remember the Words; but we uſed to joke with my Lady; little common way of talking that way with my Lady; and Mrs. Heath and I went once to the Change to buy Muſlin together, and there we were talking of my Lady; and Mrs. Heath knows very well of an Affair that happened to her and me there.

Q. What do you know of Mrs. Heath's Knowledge about my Lady's being with Child?

A. I have no more to ſay than that.

Q. What is that?

A. That ſhe did know that my Lady was with Child.

Q. How do you know ſhe knew it?

A. Becauſe we joked about it, and we were praiſing my Lady, as it is the way of Waiting-maids to pleaſe their Ladies oftentimes: indeed it is.

Court.] My Lady, you ſay, was in Bride-ſtreet, at Mr. Briſcoe's, when you dreſſed her?

A. It was there my Lady was dreſſed.

Q. You ſay that ſhe was dreſſed there; did ſhe lodge there then?

A. No, at Mrs. Vice's, ſhe came there in a Pet, becauſe ſhe had a Falling-out with my Lord; ſhe called Mr. Briſcoe Father, and came to him with all her Grievances.

Q. How did ſhe come there?

A. In a long Velvet Hood and ſcarlet Cloak, Mrs. Heath came with the Box, a little blue Band-box.

Q. And was it there that this Jeſting with her was?

A. There and at Mrs. Vice's too.

Mr. Robins.] Did you make any Obſervations about my Lady's Size?

A. She was a middling Woman, full-breaſted here, and ſwarthy.

Q. How did her Belly appear?

A. As a Woman with Child, and it was very eaſily ſeen.

Q. That was in November you ſaw her?

A. It was, when my Lord told me ſhe was with Child; I ſaw it then, and I ſaw her all the time ſhe was in Dublin.

Court.] Was ſhe a broad Woman?

A. She was a full-made Woman, very full-breaſted and high-hipp'd.

Mr. Robins.] Did her Belly alter?

A. I never obſerved any way, but that ſhe was growing big.

Court.] How ſoon did you ſee her again after ſhe went from Dublin?

A. Never again.

Q. How long did ſhe ſtay in Town from the firſt time you ſaw her?

A. I believe juſt before Chriſtmas, or after, ſhe went out of Town.

Q. Can you tell how long after you firſt ſaw her, it was that ſhe ſtaid in Town?——A. I cannot indeed.

Q. Can you name the particular Times you ſaw her?—A. I cannot.

Mr. Robins.] Did you ever ſee my Lady undreſs'd?

A. Twenty times, dreſſed and undreſſed.

Q. Who uſed to dreſs and undreſs her?

A. Mrs. Heath, and I with her, when ſhe lodged at Captain Briſcoe's firſt.

Q. How did my Lady's Belly increaſe?

A. That is a thing impoſſible for me to tell.

Q. Did

Q. Did you observe a Difference?
A. Yes, I did, that she rather grew bigger than otherwise.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Recorder.] When did my Lady come to Captain Briscoe's first?
A. In the Year 1713, I believe in October.
Q. When did she go away from Briscoe's?
A. I think she went to the Country with my Lord just before or just after Christmas, I cannot tell exactly, in the Year 1713.
Q. Now I ask you, did she go from Briscoe's to the Country?
A. No, she did not; they went from Captain Briscoe's to Mrs. Vice's, for our House was too little, and my Lord had a vast Number of People after him.
Q. How long did they stay at Captain Briscoe's after their Reconciliation?
A. I do not know whether they staid four or five Days, I cannot tell that itself.
Q. Did they stay two or three Days?--A. Two or three to be sure they did.
Q. And they went from your House to Vice's?
A. They went to Mrs. Vice's.
Q. When did my Lady return again to Dublin?
A. She came up the latter end of the Summer.
Q. What do you call the latter end of the Summer?
A. My Lady was in Dublin at August 1714, when the Queen died.
Q. Did you ever dress my Lady but at Captain Briscoe's?
A. I never did at Mrs. Vice's.
Q. But at Briscoe's you did?
A. I dressed her after she left Captain Briscoe's.
Q. When?---A. That Day that she came to our House that my Lord and she had a Pique.
Q. Never but that time?---A. That was the time.
Q. And you did not undress her at Vice's?
A. I was then but a Stranger; when I went to Mrs. Vice's it was only to visit her.
Q. Did you ever dress or undress her at Mrs. Vice's?---A. I never did.
Court.] I thought you said you dressed her twenty times at Captain Briscoe's?---A. Yes, and so I did.
Q. When was that?---A. That was some time before Christmas, in short dirty Days; for before we had done Dinner it would be Night.
Mr. Recorder.] So that the time you dressed and undressed her was about Christmas?--A. I cannot justly tell the Month; it was in the short dirty Days.
Q. But was it in December?
A. I cannot tell the Month. Is not it a long time to remember 30 Years?
Q. Was it after the Quarrel that my Lady came to Mr. Briscoe's House?
A. It was.
Q. When did that happen?
A. Before or after Christmas, I cannot tell the time.
Q. Do you know the Reason of that Quarrel?
A. My Lord gave her a Slap on the Face; Mrs. Heath knows.
Q. Was you by?---A. No; but my Lady said so.
Q. How long then did my Lady stay in Town?
A. She went out of Town in the Year 1713, before Christmas.
Q. When did she leave Town the second time?
A. Either just before or after Christmas she went from Mrs. Vice's to Dunmaine, and I never heard of her since till now lately.
Q. Did you ever speak to Mrs. Heath about this big Belly?
A. Nothing but what I told you, I never asked her seriously.
Q. Did you ever put the Question to her, whether my Lady was with Child or not?---A. No, I did not ask her seriously about it.
Q. Had you no other Discourse about it?
A. We had none but what I told you, and that was joking; telling and pleasing my Lady that she was with Child; and Mrs. Heath and I laughing, and pleased it was so.
Court.] Did you ever see my Lady after she went into the Country the second time?---A. Never after; and that was the Year 1714.
Mr. Recorder.] You say my Lady came to Town in August?
A. She was in Town in August.
Q. Did you see her in August?---A. I cannot be positive to the Month.
Q. When you saw her in November was her Belly big?--A. Not very big.
Court.] Had you had a Child at that time?
A. No, but I was with Child, for I was married the 24th of August, and quicken'd at that very time, and that makes me remember November.
Mr. Recorder.] Was my Lady's being with Child so visible in November, that any body might know she was with Child?
A. Indeed I believe so; I saw it, I know.
Q. Did Miss Henrietta Briscoe visit my Lady at this time, in November?
A. I believe so, I know she came home before then, and the Small-pox was at our House, and she left the House.
Q. What sort of Girl was Mrs. Cole then?
A. A pretty young Lady of a good Size.
Q. What Size?---A. Not so big or tall as she is now.
Q. Did she grow much afterwards?---A. To be sure she did.
Q. I ask you again, did not she grow much after?---A. She did.
Court.] Was you a Servant in the same House with her?---A. I was.
Mr. Recorder.] What Age might she be then?
A. I cannot justly tell you, she was not at her full Growth.
Q. About what Age do you think she was?
A. I cannot tell. How can I tell?
Q. Was she thirteen, or fourteen, or twenty?
A. Twenty! no, she was not twenty.
Q. Was she fourteen?---A. Yes, to be sure she was.
Q. Did Mrs. Cole visit my Lady at that time?
A. They all visited her, and my Lady came constantly to our House; but she was at her Aunt Monck's at the Green, because of the Small-pox.
Q. Did she stay there all the time my Lady was in Town?
A. She used to come now and then.
Q. Was my Lord Altham in Town in August 1714?
A. Yes, he was along with my Lady.
Q. And was he here in November?
A. Yes, he was in November; it was in November I saw him.
Q. Was it in November he told you that my Lady was with Child?
A. It was in November, after the Queen's Death, that he told me my Lady was with Child.
Q. I ask you, upon your Oath again, was my Lord in Town in August?
A. Yes, he was. He was in Town all the while that my Lady was in Town.
Court.] They came to Town together?
A. Yes, they did, as well as I can remember.
Q. Now, you say my Lord came to Town in August; did not you swear upon the former Trial, that my Lord never was in Town from the time he went into the Country after the Reconciliation, 'till November 1714?
A. I assure you the Trial is not right, it is wrongly, falsely printed.
Jury.] Did you ever find the Lady out of Order, as Women commonly are, when they are with Child, when you were dressing and undressing her at Captain Briscoe's?—A. I never did.
Q. You say you thought she was with Child?—A. I did.
Q. Did you see her out of Order?—A. Yes, Sir, I saw her big Belly.
Q. Did you put on her Shift?
A. I helped to put it on, and her Stays too.
Court.] Call your next Witness.

6. Mary Sutton.

Mr. Mac Manus.] The next Witness produced to your Lordship, is to the same Point, to prove my Lady Altham's being with Child.
Mr. Mac Manus.] Did you know the late Lord Altham?
Mary Sutton.] I did indeed.
Q. And the Lady Altham?—A. I did, upon my Word.
Q. Where do you live now?—A. In the County of Kilkenny.
Q. Where there?—A. In a Place called the Rowree.
Q. Pray, Madam, were you ever at Dunmaine?—A. I was indeed once.
Q. Where did you live then?—A. In a Place called ————
Q. When did you first know Lady Altham?
A. I knew her when first she came to Dunmaine.
Q. What Year was that in?---A. I cannot exactly tell the Year, but I knew her with Child, and saw her with Child.
Q. What were you at that time?
A. I was a Farmer's Wife, living in the Neighbourhood.
Q. How came you to go to Dunmaine?
A. My Lord frequented my House, and often invited me there.
Q. How far distant was your House from Dunmaine?
A. About two Miles.
Q. Did you ever dine there?---A. I dined there that Day.
Q. What Day?---A. That one Day that I visited my Lady.
Q. Did any thing particular happen that Day?
A. When I went in first, there was none but my Lord and Lady in the Room; I was glad of it, as I was but a Farmer's Wife, that there was no more Company; and after Dinner the Glasses were laid round, and a Bottle of Wine brought upon the Table. They called for my Lady's Toast first; and she toasted Church and King. They then called for mine, and I toasted the Boy in the Basket, meaning my Lady Altham's being with Child.
Q. Pray, can you recollect what Year this was in?
A. I cannot well tell, but as well as I can remember, it was after the Queen died, for I was in Mourning for the Queen.
Q. Do you know of any Inquiry made by my Lady about hiring a Nurse?
A. After Dinner, as we were drinking the Wine, I sat by my Lady; and she said, Mrs. Sutton, as you are acquainted with the Country, can you recommend me to a good Nurse. I told her————
Mr. Daly.] What she told my Lady Altham is no Evidence.
Mr. Mac Manus.] My Lord, this is very full Evidence; she is telling of a Conversation that passed between my Lady and herself concerning my Lady's being with Child, and her Inquiry after a Nurse.
Court.] Did you see Lady Altham at that time?---A. I did.
Q. What did you observe about her?
A. I observed her to be big with Child.
Q. When was this?---A. It was the Monday or Tuesday before Shrovetide.
Q. In what Year?---A. I cannot exactly tell the Year, but it was one of them two Days.
Mr. Mac Manus.] My Lord, I apprehend this Question to be a proper and material one.
Court.] The Question is, whether I will examine the Witness to what my Lady said, whether she was with Child or not?
Mr. Serjeant Tisdall.] My Lord, any Circumstance of my Lady's making Baby-cloaths, or Inquiry about a Nurse, is Evidence to prove that she was with Child.
Court.] Not at all, in this Case.
Mr. Mac Manus.] I apprehend that presumptive and circumstantial Evidence is the strongest Evidence that can be given in this Case.
Court.] You say that you have positive Witnesses to this Point; if you have, we shall readily hear them. Have you any other that are positive Testimony to Lady Altham's having a Child, or that she miscarried? The first Assignment of Perjury is, whether Lady Altham ever was with Child while the Traverser lived with her? The Question then is, whether my Lady's saying she was with Child is Evidence upon that Point? If you will argue the Question, I will hear you.
Court.] Might not the Woman appear to you to be with Child, and might not be so?---A. To all Appearance she appeared to me to be so.
Q. And might not she be not with Child?
A. I cannot tell, Sir, she appeared to me to be big with Child.
Q. Was it certain that she was?
A. There was so much Certainty of it, if one can believe their Eyes.
Q. Do you know that she hired a Nurse?
A. Indeed I do not know it; I cannot say that.
Mr. Serjeant Tisdall.] My Lord, we apprehend we have a Right to have this Question answered. The Question proposed is, Whether she knows any Inquiry to be made by Lady Altham to hire a Nurse?
Mr. Daly.] Indeed if you had asked whether Mrs. Heath made such an Inquiry, there would be something legal in it, but Inquiries of a third Person are most illegal Evidence.

Court.]

Court.] We are not trying the Filiation of this Family, who is Heir to the Eſtate of it, but whether Mrs. Heath is guilty of Perjury. There is much more Reaſon to keep to the ſtrict Rules of Evidence in this Court than ever was; the Time of Trial is ſhort, and we cannot adjourn. Have you any real, poſitive Evidence?

Mr. MacManus.] We have produced poſitive Evidence that my Lady appeared to be with Child.

Q. Pray, Madam, in what Degree did ſhe appear to be with Child?

A. Very big with Child.

Mr. MacManus.] Why then the next natural Queſtion is, whether there was an Inquiry about a Nurſe?

Mr. Daly.] My Lord, is this a legal Queſtion in this Caſe? I have not an Opportunity to croſs-examine what a third Perſon ſays, and ſhall that be Evidence to deprive me of my Eſtate? Aſk if Mrs. Heath made any Inquiry about a Nurſe.

Mr. Serj. Tiſdall.] The Queſtion propoſed is, whether ſhe knows of any Inquiry made by Lady Altham for hiring of a Nurſe, of her own Knowledge?

Jury.] Do you, of your own Knowledge, know any thing of the hiring a Nurſe?

A. No, Gentlemen, I do not.

Mr. MacManus.] Did my Lord and Lady ever viſit you?

A. They did, upon my Word, and had the Child with them.

Q. What Child?---A. A Boy, Maſter James we called him.

Q. Pray, whoſe Child was it?

A. It was their Child in all Appearance, for my Lady was very fond of the Child as any Mother could be.

Q. Give an Account of what paſſed about that Child, as to any particular Inſtances of Fondneſs.

Mr. Daly.] You cannot aſk that Queſtion; it is Res inter alios acta, and foreign to this Woman's Proſecution.

Mr. MacManus.] Pray, how old was he?

A. I believe a Year and half, and if a Month more I cannot exactly tell.

Q. When was this Viſit made you?

A. I cannot exactly tell, it was a very fine Day.

Q. What Time of the Year was it?

A. In Harveſt, the latter-end of Harveſt.

Q. How long was it between the Time you ſaw my Lady with Child, and the Time you ſaw him at your Houſe?---A. It was more than a Year.

Q. How old was the Child when you ſaw it?

A. It was a Year and half old when I ſaw it.

Court.] How did my Lord and Lady treat that Child?

A. As a Father and Mother would treat their Child; and my Lady was as fond of him as a Mother could be of a Child, kiſſing and embracing him, and calling him Dear.

Q. In what Year was that?—A. Nay, faith, it is hard to tell.

Q. You muſt tell.---A. I believe the Child was born in the Year 1715, I think he was, as well as I can remember.

Q. What Reaſon have you for thinking ſo?

A. By the latter end of April after I was to viſit her, I heard next Day that ſhe was brought-to-bed of a Son.

Q. Was you by at his Birth?

A. I was not. I heard there was great Joy and Bonfires.

Q. Did you ſee the Bonfires?—A. No, I was not there.

Mr. MacManus.] How came they to bring ſo young a Child to your Houſe?

A. When my Lady came, ſhe ſaid, Mrs. Sutton, ſince you would not bring your Daughter to ſee my Son, I brought my Son to ſee your Daughter.

Mr. Recorder.] I inſiſt that the Declaration of my Lady is no Evidence at all.

Court.] Gentlemen, we are of Opinion that the Declaration of Lady Altham is not Evidence againſt Mrs. Heath, and therefore do not let us waſte our Time ſo to no Purpoſe.

Mr. Soliciter.] We are miſtaken if we would put the Declaration of Lady Altham as Evidence, but we have a Right to know the Witneſs's Apprehenſion of her Declaration.

Mr. MacManus.] This Witneſs has ſpoke very materially, that my Lady had a big Belly, and was with Child; I hope the Jury will take notice of it, that being one of the Aſſignments of the Perjury.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. R. Malone.] I think you have ſaid that Lord Altham frequently invited you to Dunmaine?—A. He did.

Q. And you were never there but once?——A. Never but once.

Q. You ſaid that Nobody was there in the Room but them two?

A. Yes.

Q. And that you were glad of it?——A. Yes.

Q. And that a Bottle of Wine and Glaſſes were brought, and my Lady toaſted Church and King?—A. I did.

Q. You gave a Toaſt after of the Boy in the Baſket?—A. I did.

Q. Now I aſk you, before your giving that Toaſt, was there any Converſation about her being with Child, or any thing ſaid about it?

A. Not at all.

Q. Was you told in the Parlour that ſhe was with Child?

A. Not at all; there was no Diſcourſe of it but after.

Q. What Condition of Life was you in?

A. My Huſband was a Farmer indeed.

Q. Who did he derive his Intereſt under?---A. Madam Pigot.

Q. How much Land did he hold?

A. He paid 10*l.* a Year to Madam Pigot at that Time.

Q. How much Land had you?

A. It was an old Leaſe, we held above 200 Acres.

Q. What was the Land worth an Acre?

A. Why, really, at that time it might be worth four Shillings an Acre.

Q. You ſay that they frequently viſited you?

A. My Lord did, but my Lady never was there but once.

Q. When they viſited you, what Time of the Year was it?

A. As well as I can remember, the latter-end of Harveſt.

Q. Do you know the Year?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was it the Harveſt after you viſited them?---A. No, not at all.

Q. Was it more than one?---A. It was more than one.

Q. Or two, three, or four after?

A. O dear! it was not ſo much; the Child was about a Year and half old, or within a Month or two, I cannot exactly tell.

Q. Can you ſay in what Reign it was?

A. Really, I believe it was after Queen Anne died.

Q. In what manner did they go to your Houſe?

A. My Lady rode in the Chariot, and had a Maid that carried the Child, and my Lord rode with Servants.

Q. What was the Servant's Name in the Chariot?

A. She was a good tight, clean, well-dreſſed Girl, and that is all I know.

Q. In what manner was the Child dreſſed?

A. He had a red Coat, and Cambrick Frock, and fine quarter'd Cap, and I think, a red Ribband in it.

Q. Was it a Coat and Breeches?

A. Not a Coat and Breeches; a Frock.

Q. Where do you live now?---A. I live now in the County of Kilkenny.

Q. Where there?---A. In the Pariſh of Rowree, at Ballyvally.

Q. Is your Huſband living?---A. My Huſband is not living.

Q. Do you live by yourſelf there?

A. I live with my Daughter, and we live under my Lord Mountgarret.

Q. What Harveſt is this you ſpeak of when my Lord and Lady went to your Houſe?---A. It is ſo long ago, it is hard to know, I muſt ſtudy a while to think of it.

Q. How can you recollect to the being at Dunmaine to a Day, and not now recollect the Year they went to ſee you?

A. As it did not meddle with me, I did not mind it.

Jury.] Do you know any thing of Mrs. Heath?---A. I never had any Acquaintance with her, I heard my Lady had ſuch a Woman.

Court.] Who do you call next?

Mr. Callaghan.] My Lord, we will now produce one Evan Thomas; he is a Boſket-maker; he ſaw my Lady with Child, ſaw her increaſe in her Pregnancy, and made the Cradle after ſhe was brought-to-bed, and was paid for it.

7. Evan Thomas.

Mr. Callaghan.] Pray, did you know the late Lord Altham?

Evan Thomas.] Yes, and pleaſe you.

Q. Did you know my Lady?---A. I knew her very well.

Q. Where did you live in the Year 1713?

A. In that Year I lived in Roſs.

Q. Where did you live in 1714?

A. I worked in Roſs the moſt of the Year 1714.

Q. Did you ſee my Lady in thoſe two Years?

A. I have ſeen her at our Church ſome ſeveral times; in the Year 1714 I have ſeen her there, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. How often did you ſee her there?

A. I ſeen her two or three times, to the beſt of my Knowledge; but ſhe might be there oftener, for any Thing I know.

Q. Did ſhe appear to be a ſlender Woman, or with Child?

A. She appeared to me as if with Child, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. Did ſhe appear to be big with Child?

A. Not ſo very big becauſe of their Hoops; I ſaw her handed into the Coach, or the Chariot, or one of them.

Q. What Trade do you follow?---A. I am one that makes all Sorts of Baſket-work that are made in the Kingdom.

Mr. Daly.] What, all Sorts of Baſket-work?

A. I do not ſay the beſt of all Sorts.

Mr. Callaghan.] Did you ever do any Work for Lady Altham?---A. I did,

Q. Tell what it was.---A. She ſent a Servant to me.

Court.] How do you know ſhe ſent him?---A. He told me——

Q. Did you carry any Work to her Houſe?——A. I did not.

Q. What was it you made?

A. I made in the Year 1715, to the beſt of my Knowledge, a Cradle.

Q. Did you carry it to Lord Altham's Houſe?

A. No, pleaſe your Lordſhip, I did not.

Q. Who did you deliver it to?---A. I delivered it to a Man.

Q. Name him.

A. They told me he was one Rowley, a Houſe Steward.

Q. Did you know him?

A. I was nothing acquainted with the Man, but he told me——

Q. Do you make the ſame kind of Cradles for poor People as for People of Faſhion; what Sort of Cradle was it?

A. A good Cradle, I delivered it to the Servant, as I ſuppoſe, his Name was Rowley, I was told ſo.

Q. Did you ſee the Cradle carried to any particular Place?

A. No, he took it from me out of the Houſe, and gave me two Crowns for it.

Jury.] What became of the Cradle?

A. I do not know, but he took it away.

Court.] Where is Rowley?---A. I do not know.

Mr. Callaghan.] For whom did you make that Cradle?

A. Why, the Man came to me——

Q. Do you know who you made it for?

A. He beſpoke it for my Lady Altham.

Mr. Harward.] It is ſtrange to my Imagination, my Lord, that it ſhould be ſuſpected, that a Man employed 30 Years ago, to make a Cradle, could be guilty of any Contrivance.

Court.] But this Contrivance may be within theſe four Months, theſe ſix Months, or theſe twelve Months, and if Hearſay-evidence will convict a Perſon of any Crime, it may of Treaſon, and who is or can be ſafe?

Mr. Juſt. Blennerhaſſet.] If you have Rowley, there would be ſomething.

Mr. Harward.] With Submiſſion, my Lord, the Court cannot know whether we are out of the way or not; whatever Secrets are in this Caſe are only revealed to us by the Managers of it, and we adviſe them in the beſt manner we can to proſecute it.

Court.] As the Time is far ſpent, we only beg of you to go on in your own way. Call your next Witneſs.

8. Martha Tenant.

Mr. Harding.] My Lord, I am inſtructed that this Witneſs was in Company with Lord and Lady Altham the Winter after the Queen's Death, and ſaw my Lady with child, and that ſhe was quick with Child at that Time.

Court.]

Court.] I never heard that there was Safety in a Multitude of Witneſſes; I have heard it, read it, and you know it, that in a Multitude of Counſellors there was Safety, but never in a Multiplicity of Witneſſes.

Mr. Solicitor.] For my Part, my Lord, I think we have eſtabliſhed very fully the firſt Part of this Indictment, not to take up any more Time; but Curioſity makes People glad to ſee the Bottom of it.

Mr. Harding.] Pray, did you know Arthur late Lord Altham?

Martha Tenant.] I did not know him, I ſaw him once, and to my Knowledge never ſince, nor before.

Q. Did you know his Wife?---A. I ſaw her at the ſame Time at Dinner.

Q. Where did you ſee them, and when?---A. I ſaw them at one Arthur French's in Fleet-ſtreet, they lodged in Fleet-ſtreet.

Q. When was it you ſaw them there?

A. I will tell you how I came to viſit there——

Q. What Year was it you ſaw them there?

A. Well! I cannot juſtly tell the Year, but it was about the Time that they were Whig and Tory, and that way.

Q. Pray, recollect yourſelf.----A. I believe it was about——I cannot exactly tell; I believe the Year Queen Anne died, there or thereabouts.

Q. Was it before or after the Queen's Death?

A. And that I cannot tell you neither; but I'll tell you the Time of the Year, it was about Chriſtmas, but I cannot tell whether 1714, or 1715.

Q. Did you obſerve whether my Lady was or was not with Child?

A. I will tell you what brought me there; the whole Truth is this: Mr. French, every one knew, married my Lady Davis's Daughter, and ſhe was a Relation of mine; and upon the Marriage I entruſted him Money, and went to dunn him, and when I came there I ſaw a great Dinner and Preparations making, and aſked the Reaſon of it. Says I, what is the Meaning of all theſe Doings, and you have not got your Wife's Fortune into your Hands yet? It is very ill done of you——

Q. Tell what you know of Lady Altham there. Tell what you know yourſelf.

A. I will tell you all I know myſelf. I ſtaid there, and when Dinner was over I ſaw in the Drawing-room my Lady Altham, as they ſaid ſhe was.

Q. Did you know her?---A. Not I indeed.

Q. Can you ſay it was her?---A. They ſaid it was.

Q. But you muſt only ſay what you know?

A. Well, I cannot tell you any more then.

Q. Did any remarkable Incident happen while you were at Dinner there?

Court.] Did ſhe take the Title of Lady Altham?

A. She did, and my Lord was there.

Q. Did you ever ſee them before?---A. I never ſaw them before or after, nor knew none of thoſe Lords or Ladies.

Mr. Harding.] What ſort of a Woman was ſhe?

A. A luſty Woman, but my Lord had two Eyes at that Time, and they ſay he had but one after.

Q. What did you obſerve of my Lady that Day?

A. She came out after Dinner and was ſick; ſhe came into the Drawing-room, and they unlaced her.

Q. Who?---A. My Lady Altham, ſhe was called ſo.

Mr. Harding.] Inform the Court and the Jury, whether any remarkable Incident happened while you were at Dinner there.

A. She was taken ſick after Dinner, and came out into the Drawing-room, and we unlaced her, and my Lord ſaid, Mrs. French, it will be your Turn ſoon to be in the ſame Condition; and that is all I had to ſay.

Q. What was the Occaſion of his ſaying ſo?

A. The Occaſion was, that Mrs. French was a new-married Woman.

Mr. Recorder.] She ſays ſhe did not know either Lord or Lady.

Martha Tenant.] Nor the young Man, nor the old Man.

Mr. Harding.] Inform the Court, whether any Body fainted away, and whether any Account was given of that.

A. My Lady was ſick, and unlaced, and my Lord ſaid, Mrs. French, it will be your Turn next; and that is all I know.

9. Anastace Toole.

Mr. Morton.] We produce this Witneſs, my Lord, who is a Mantua-maker by Trade, to prove that ſhe made a Silk Gown for Lady Altham, and fitted it on in the Preſence of the Traverſer, and that my Lady was then with Child.

Mr. Morton.] Did you know my Lady Altham?

Anaſtace Toole.] I did, Sir.

Q. What Buſineſs did you follow?---A. Mantua-making.

Q. Were you at any Time, and when employed by her to do any Work for her?

A. I lived with Mrs. Wright the Year that Queen Anne died, for my Huſband went to live in the County of Carlow; I went to her the latter-end of the Year 1714, Queen Anne died in Auguſt, and the Candlemas following—

Q. What Year?---A. The Candlemas after Queen Anne died. And my Miſtreſs ſent me with the Coat.

Q. To what Place?---A. To Dunmaine.

Q. What did you obſerve, when you went there?

A. That her Ladyſhip was big-bellied.

Q. Did you ever fit any Gown upon her?---A. I did.

Q. Who was preſent when you fitted the Gown?

A. Her own Maid, Mrs. Heath.

Q. Would you know her, if you ſaw her?---A. Yes, that is ſhe, I believe.

Q. Now, pray, what Condition did my Lady appear to be in then?

A. Her Ladyſhip ſeemed to be in her laſt Quarter, or pretty nigh it, for ſhe was a tall Woman, and carried her Belly very well.

Court.] You obſerved that ſhe was big-bellied?---A. I did.

Q. Had you had a Child at that Time?

A. I had had a Child and had buried it.

Q. Was you an Apprentice Girl then?---A. No, my Huſband was gone to Mr. Wall's in the County of Carlow, and I worked with Mrs. Wright.

Mr. Morton.] Was you married at that Time?---A. Yes, Sir, I was.

Q. You were not an Apprentice?---A. I was not.

Q. Do you know any more of my Lady's being with Child?

A. I ſaw my Lady in Roſs with the Child, and made a Coat for the Child.

Q. How long was it after that you ſaw the Child in Roſs?

A. I cannot tell how long.

Q. Who gave you the Stuff to make the Coat for the Child?

A. My Lord himſelf, he bought it at Mr. Harvey's.

Q. What Stuff was it?

A. One Side was a blue Sattin, and the other a Yellow.

Q. How long after you fitted the Gown on my Lady was it that you ſaw this Child at Roſs?

A. After my Lady came to my Miſtreſs to lodge in Roſs.

Q. Was it three Months, or four Months, or ſix Months?

A. Oh! it was more to be ſure.

Q. Can you tell how long?---A. I cannot tell more than what I know.

Q. Was it a Year after you fitted the Gown that you ſaw the Child at Roſs?---A. It was.

Q. Was it any more?

A. Indeed I cannot juſtly tell you as to that Part of the Story.

Q. Was Mrs. Heath preſent when you fitted on the Gown?

A. She was by, and gave me a Piece of white Ribband to tye the Shoulders of it.

Q. Had my Lady left my Lord at this Time when you made the Gown for the Child?---A. She had.

Q. Was it a new Gown you made for my Lady, or did you alter an old one?---A. It was a new one, a new white Damaſk.

Q. How often did you ſee the Child, and where?---A. Never but once.

Q. Where was that?---A. At my Miſtreſs, Wright's.

Q. Where is that?---A. At her own Houſe in Roſs.

Q. Was that before or after the Coat was made for him?

A. It was after.

Q. Did you never ſee him before?

A. I never ſaw him before, but that one time.

Court.] Did you ſee the Child at the Time my Lord gave you the Silk to make the Coat?---A. No, my Lord, I did not.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Recorder.] How long after you made the Gown was it you ſaw a Child?---A. I cannot juſtly tell how long.

Q. Did you not ſay it was a Year?---A. I believe it was.

Q. Was it more, a Year and half, or two Years?

A. I cannot tell whether a Year and half, or two Years.

Q. Was the Child weaned?---A. He was at that Time.

Q. I aſk you, upon your Oath, was it two Years after you made the Gown?

A. I cannot juſtly tell you how long; it was two Months after my Lord gave me the Silk.

Q. But I muſt know how long after you made the Gown for my Lady?

A. I cannot tell that.

Q. When was it that my Lord gave you the Gown for the Child?

A. After my Lady came to Roſs.

Q. When did ſhe come to Roſs?---A. I do not know when ſhe came to it; I know ſhe came on a Sunday Evening.

Q. Where did ſhe lodge when you ſaw the Child?

A. She lodged at Roſs then.

Q. Where there?---A. At Mrs. Wright's.

Q. Did you hear of the Separation of my Lord and Lady?---A. I did.

Q. Was it before or after they parted that you ſaw this Child at Mrs. Wright's?---A. It was after they parted.

Q. Who brought him to Wright's?---A. I cannot tell who brought him.

Q. Did my Lady lodge at any other Place before ſhe went to Wright's?

A. Yes.

Q. Where, and how long?

A. At Captain Butler's, I believe ſix Weeks or two Months.

Q. Where did ſhe go from Captain Butler's?

A. She then came to my Miſtreſs's.

Q. How long did ſhe ſtay there?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, a Twelvemonth.

Q. When was it that this Child came?

A. After ſhe had been a conſiderable Time at Mrs. Wright's.

Q. How long?---A. I cannot tell how long.

Q. How old was he?---A. About two Years old.

Q. Was it half a Year after my Lady came to Wright's that you ſaw the Child?---A. I cannot juſtly tell you.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Heath?

A. I have ſeen her before; yes, I know her.

Q. Where was the firſt Time you ſaw her?

A. The firſt Time I ſaw her was at Dunmaine, and every Day after ſhe came to lodge at my Miſtreſs's.

Jury.] You ſay you ſaw a Child at Wright's about two Years old?

A. I did.

Q. Whoſe Child was it you ſaw there?---A. My Lady's, Sir.

Q. Who told you it was my Lady's Child?

A. My Miſtreſs, Mrs. Wright.

Q. Did my Lady herſelf tell you it was her Child?

A. I had no Converſation with my Lady. I was working at Doctor Elliot's on the other Side of the Way—

Court.] Are you going, Gentlemen, to the ſame Point?

Mr. Mac Manus.] I believe, my Lord, every Evidence that goes to the firſt Point, will go to the ſecond.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] The next Evidence that we ſhall produce is Anne Bennet; ſhe was a Servant to Mrs Giffard of Ballyſop, a Lady who appeared at a former Trial; ſhe lived with her ſome Years, and often ſaw my Lady with Child, and heard her Miſtreſs talk of her being big-bellied.

10. Anne Bennet.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] Did you know my Lord and Lady Altham?

Anne Bennet.] Yes, I did.

Q. When did you know them?---A. The latter End of the Year 1714.

Q. Where did they live when you knew them?---A. In Dunmaine.

Q. And where did you live then?

A. I lived at Ballyſop.

Q. With whom there?---A. Mrs. Giffard.

Q. Can you ſay in what Circumſtances Lady Altham was, in reſpect to her Health, when you knew her?

A. When I ſaw her firſt of all, Gentlemen, it was about Chriſtmas Time, whether before or after I cannot tell; and the next Time it was after Chriſtmas, and ſhe looked pretty round; and I ſaid to my Miſtreſs, Had my Lord and Lady never a Child? No, ſays ſhe, ſhe never had.——

Court.] Did you ſee my Lady with Child?

A. I thought ſhe looked very round, my Lord.

Q. Can you ſay whether ſhe was with Child or not?

A. Indeed I believe in my Heart ſhe was.

Q. For what Reaſon did you think ſo?

A. Becauſe I was the Mother of a Child myſelf, and knew how ſhe was, ſhe took a Diſtaſte to Victuals at the Table.

Q. How old was you then?

A. Twenty Years of Age, I was the Mother of a Child, and a married Woman too.

Q. You do not appear now to have been that Age at that Time?

A. Indeed then I am fifty-two Years of Age.

Q. Do you know any more than that?---A. No.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Le Hunte.] You ſay you lived with Mrs. Giffard?---A. I did.

Q. How often did my Lady Altham viſit Mrs. Giffard?

A. She viſited three Times while I was there.

Q. And how often did your Miſtreſs viſit my Lady?

A. She viſited my Lady twice.

Q. Was there any great Intimacy between them?

A. There was no great Intimacy, more than that.

Q. Did your Miſtreſs lie-in while you were in the Service?

A. She never did, nor I do not believe ſhe had a Child after I left her.

Q. When did you leave her?---A. I left her in February, 1714.

Q. And how long before had ſhe had a Child?

A. I cannot tell, the Child was running about.

Q. Was ſhe with Child in your Time?

A. I cannot tell whether ſhe was with Child, for I did not waſh for her.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] What Reaſon had you to induce you to believe Lady Altham was with Child?

A. Becauſe ſhe took a Diſtaſte againſt Victuals, and was very round.

Q. Did you ſee her after in any Place?

A. Never ſaw her before or after.

Court.] Who do you call next?

Mr. Soliciter.] I have taken up a Witneſs, one Edmond Howletts, who brings the Matter directly Home to the Traverſer. My Lord, he is a Pedlar, a Man that ſells Diaper, and other Cloths about the Country, and he will ſhew that ſhe bought Diaper for the Child's Uſe juſt before the Birth.

Mr. Edmond Malone.] Every one knows that the material Perjury is the Birth, and if they had not a Mind to raiſe a Duſt, they would go to that directly.

11. Edmond Howletts.

Mr. Solicitor General.] Did you know my Lord and Lady Altham?

Edmond Howletts.] Yes, I did, Sir.

Q. Do you know any Thing of a Child that they had?

A. Yes, I did, Sir.

Q. Give an Account of what you know about it.

A. The firſt Time I was reſorting that Houſe with Goods on my Back, and the firſt I ſold there, there was a Woman there, a Waiting-maid, they called Mrs. Heath.

Q. Do you know her?---A. I do not know whether I would or no.

Q. Well, go on and tell your Story.

A. And ſhe bought a Piece of Diaper from me for my Lady's Service againſt her lying-in. There is a Brogue upon my Tongue, Sir, I cannot ſpeak very proper.

Q. What did ſhe buy the Diaper for?

A. The Diaper was provided for lying-in, for Clouts.

Q. For whoſe lying-in?---A. Lady Altham's.

Q. Who told you ſo?---A. The Woman they called Mrs. Heath.

Q. Would you know her if you were to ſee her?

A. I did not ſee her theſe many Years.

Q. Do you know that Gentlewoman there?

A. She is fatter now than ſhe was at that Time.

Q. Is that ſhe?---A. Why, Sir, I could not ſwear.

Q. Is that Woman like her?

A. Why then, ſhe is like her ſure enough, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. How often did you ſee her before that Time?

A. Several Times after that.

Q. What Time was that? Recollect as near as you can.

A. Why then, Sir, it was a little after Chriſtmas.

Q. What Year?

A. I believe it is thirty Years now, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. Do you keep any Book of your Buſineſs?

A. I do not keep a Book, nor I do not know how.

Q. What Goods did you carry to ſell?

A. I carried Linen Cloths, and Cambricks, and Holland, and Handkerchiefs.

Q. Do you follow that Trade now?

A. I left off that Trade about ſeven Years ago.

Q. How long did you follow it?---A. I followed it five-and-thirty Years, and I was a Cuſtomer at that Houſe that time.

Q. Did you ſee any thing relating to this Child at any time after that?

A. After that, I was there, Sir, and my Lady Altham, and her Maid, and the Nurſe, and the Child were coming out of the Pleaſure-Garden, and when they ſaw me they went back, and they bade me come in and open my Pack there; and my Lady bid the Nurſe aſk what ſhe would have; and ſaid, Mrs. Heath, we will ſee if he has a white ſilk Hood or Handkerchief, and ſhe bought a white Silk Handkerchief, and red Border about it.

Q. Was it bought for the Nurſe?---A. It was.

Q. Who bought it?---A. Mrs. Heath cut it off of my Piece, and paid me the Money that my Lady gave to her.

Q. And who gave it to the Nurſe?

A. Mrs. Heath gave it to the Nurſe before my Face, and my Lady bought a Ribband, and Mrs. Heath put it on the Child.

Q. Pray, give an Account, do you know any thing elſe about the Child? Do you remember that my Lord and Lady parted?

A. They parted to my Sorrow, Sir.

Q. How ſo?

A. There was four Pounds two Shillings due to me: my Lady bought a Piece of Holland for five Pounds five Shillings, and ſhe gave me a Guinea in part; and the Day the Diſpute came between them I was going that Way about ſome Affair of my own, and I heard of it within half a Mile of Dunmaine.

Q. How far did you live from Dunmaine?

A. About two Miles I lived from them; and I was going about my Buſineſs, and I heard the Noiſe, there was a great deal to do; and on account of my Money due to me, I went to the Houſe to ſee after it, if I could get it; and when I came near the Houſe, all the Servants were going to and fro, and I was looking on them, and I ſaw my Lady in a Coach or Chariot, I do not know which it was. God forbid I ſhould wrong my own Soul.

Court.] Take care that you do not; have a care what you ſay.

E. Howletts.] I ſtood there, and ſaw my Lady, and Mrs. Heath, and the Child in the Coach. My Lord came down Stairs in a great Paſſion, and aſked Where was the Child? And ſome of the Servants ſaid, My Lady has it in the Coach; and juſt as he was going to throw down every thing about him, he took the Child from her. And my Lady ſaid, Pray, my Lord, did not you give me your Word and Honour that you would let the Child go with me wherefoever I would go? ſays ſhe; and took her white Silk Handkerchief out of the Place where it was, and wiped her Face, and kiſſed the Child at parting.

Q. Did you ſee Mrs. Heath there; was ſhe preſent at this Tranſaction, or was ſhe not?

A. She was the ſame Perſon that was with my Lady Altham that Day.

Court.] Did the Child go in the Coach?---A. Not at all, Sir.

Jury.] What Day was it that this happened?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, it was Sunday.

Q. I aſk you the Day of the Month?

A. I do not keep the Month at all, I am no Scholar.

Q. What Time of the Day was it?---A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, about Ten or Eleven o'Clock in the Morning.

Q. Was it a Coach or a Chariot?---A. I cannot tell.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Spring.] How long have you been a Dealer in the Linen Trade?

E. Howletts.] I believe theſe five-and-thirty Years.

Q. How old are you?---A. I am five-and-fifty Years old.

Q. Where did you live at the time you ſaw this Child?

A. At Ballyteſkin, within three Miles of Roſs.

Q. Where in 1713 did you live?---A. I cannot tell; I am no Scholar.

Q. Where in the Year 1718?

A. I cannot tell that Year; I do not underſtand your Years that way.

Q. Where did you live twenty Years ago?---A. In the Town of Roſs.

Q. Do you know one Eleanor Murphy?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. What Relation is ſhe to you?

A. I have one Nelly Murphy a Siſter of mine.

Q. How long has ſhe been married?

A. I believe ſhe is married theſe twenty Years, or near it.

Q. Is not ſhe married thirty Years?

A. I cannot tell whether ſhe be or no.

Q. Is ſhe married nine-and-twenty Years?

A. Indeed I cannot tell, Sir, whether ſhe be or no; I was not by when ſhe was married; ſhe married in the County of Dublin here.

Q. What Name did ſhe go by thirty Years ago?

A. Only her own Name.

Q. What was that?---A. Howletts.

Q. What Name did ſhe go by nine-and-twenty Years ago?

A. I believe Howletts.

Q. Can you write or read?---A. No, I cannot, Sir, and I am ſorry for it.

Q. Was you ever Agent to any Gentleman in the County of Wexford?

A. I am after looking after ſome Land belonging to Mr. Baily.

Q. Was you ever Agent to him?—A. No.

Q. Did you ever make an Affidavit by the Name of Agent to Mr. Benjamin Baily?—A. Hah!

Q. Did you ever call yourſelf Agent?

A. My Lord, it was a Miſtake if I called myſelf ſo.

Q. Who drew that Affidavit for you?

A. I cannot tell any ſuch thing.

Court.] Now tell me truly, who wrote that Affidavit? Did you make an Affidavit?—A. Only what I ſwore before the Commiſſioners.

Q. Who were they?—A. Upon my Word, I cannot tell.

Mr. Spring.] Was there a Paper wrote for you to ſwear, or put your Mark to it?——A. Hah!

Q. Did not you ſwear an Affidavit before Dr. Stopford in Auguſt laſt?

A. Yes, I do not know but I did.

Q. But you know whether you did or not?—A. Why, I believe I did.

Q. Was it read to you before you ſwore it?

A. It was read to me ſure enough.

Q. Who read it?—A. There was a Gentleman there.

Q. What is his Name?—A. Somebody belonging to Mr. Anneſley.

Q. What is his Name, Man?—A. Upon my Word, I cannot tell.

Q. Upon your Oath, who was he?

A. Upon my Word, I cannot tell the Perſon.

Court.] Gentlemen, this Man was aſked whether he made an Affidavit by the Name of Agent to one Mr. Baily, he would not anſwer for a great while, but ſeemed to prevaricate, and at laſt ſaid it was a Miſtake if he called himſelf an Agent. He then was aſked if the Affidavit was read to him, and after ſome Heſitation owned it was read, but does not ſay by whom, but ſays he was ſworn by Dr. Stopford, in Auguſt laſt.

Mr. Spring.] Upon your Oath, Sir, who was it that read the Affidavit to you?—A. I cannot tell you, upon my Oath.

Q. Was it drawn in Dublin, or the County of Wexford?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, in Dublin.

Q. Where was it drawn?—A. I told you all I had to ſay.

Q. Who wrote it for you?

A. If I knew that, I would tell you. There was a Clerk there.

Q. Who was he?—A. Somebody that was belonging to Mr. Anneſley.

Q. Did

Q. Did you tell all you knew in the County of Wexford, or City of Dublin?——A. In Dublin.

Q. Did you likewiſe tell it in the County of Wexford?

A. I did not till I told it here.

Q. Was your Affidavit read to you?——A. Yes, it was.

Q. Who read it?——A. I cannot tell.

Q. Were you there called Agent to any Body, and whom?

A. It was a Miſtake, if I was.

Q. Was you called ſo, or not?

A. I told them I minded ſome Land belonging to Mr. Baily.

Court.] Did they call you Agent, or not?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, they did not call me ſo. All the World knows I was no fit Man to be an Agent to a Gentleman.

Mr. Spring.] Had the Coach two Wheels, or four Wheels, you ſaw my Lady go away in?——A. There was four Wheels.

Q. Was it open like a Chair, or cloſe?——A. It was cloſe.

Q. Do you know the Difference between a Coach and a Chariot?

A. I cannot tell the Difference.

Q. You ſay it was not open?——A. I know it was not open.

Q. How many Horſes were there?

A. I cannot tell, I think there were four or two, I cannot tell which.

Q. Was it four, or two, or ſix?

A. Two or four, I cannot tell which.

Q. Who was Coachman?——A. One Dennis Caunton.

Q. How many Brothers and Siſters have you that are Witneſſes in this Cauſe? Have you ever a Siſter that lived with one Macnamee?

A. I cannot tell whether it was or not.

Q. Did your Siſter Eleanor Murphy live with Macnamee?

A. I cannot tell whether it was or no.

Q. Do you know any Body ſhe lived with?——A. It was from Captain Butler's at Roſs that ſhe went to Lord Altham's.

Q. Do you know the Time that ſhe went there?—A. Indeed, if I had known this Trouble, I would know a great deal more of it.

Q. Was it before or after you ſold the Linen that your Siſter went to the Service?——A. She was not there the firſt Time I ſold the Clouts, and ſhe went there a little after.

Court.] Did you travel the Kingdom round with your Linens?

A. Only the County of Wexford.

Court.] I am ſurprized then, that you do not know the Difference between a Coach and a Chariot.

Mr. Spring.] Do you know the great Eclipſe of the Sun?—A. I do.

Q. Where did you live then?

A. I lived then at Ballyteſkin. I do not know but I was in the Houſe of Dunmaine that Day, and coming home within Half a Mile of my own Houſe when the Eclipſe came upon me.

Q. Was not you in Dunmaine Houſe that Day?

A. I am not ſure I was there, I was very near them I am ſure in the Road home.

Q. Say upon your Oath, whether you were not in the Houſe of Dunmaine the Day of that Eclipſe?—A. I cannot tell whether I was or not.

Q. Was it before or after that Eclipſe that your Siſter went to live there?——A. Why, it is about May the Eclipſe came, or the latter End of April; it was before that ſhe went to live there; it was before.

Q. Where did ſhe go to live after ſhe left Lord Altham's?

A. I think to one Frank White.

Q. And where from thence?

A. The Time ſhe left Lord Altham's ſhe went to her own Father's.

Court.] This Witneſs has ſworn very materially, if he has ſworn true.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall.] The next Witneſs I am inſtructed to produce, is one Newton Ricketts, a Coach-maker, and he will prove to your Lordſhip that Lady Altham was very big with Child; that he after was at Dunmaine, and employed by Lord Altham to make a four-wheeled Chaiſe, and at the ſame time my Lady employed him to make a little Chair for the Child.

12. Newton Ricketts.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall.] Did you know Arthur late Lord Altham?

Newton Ricketts.] I did.

Q. Did you know his Lady?

A. I did ſee her, Sir, and was acquainted with her by Name.

Q. Where did you ſee Lady Altham?—A. I ſaw her at Dunmaine.

Q. Can you recollect at what Time you ſaw her there?

A. About two-and-thirty or one-and-thirty Years ago.

Q. Which was it?—A. It is two-and-thirty Years ago.

Q. How long was you acquainted with her at Dunmaine?

A. I was acquainted with her for three Years.

Q. Recollect as near as you can, how long ago it is.

A. It was three-and-thirty, or two-and-thirty Years ago.

Q. Do you recollect when Queen Anne died?

A. I do not know how long ago it is.

Q. Can you be ſure how long ago it is ſince you knew my Lady at Dunmaine?——A. I think it is one-and-thirty Years, I cannot remember the Years, or Months, or Weeks.

Q. What Trade do you profeſs, Friend?

A. I profeſs to be Wheel-wright and Coach-maker.

Q. Were you ever employed by Lord Altham, and when?

A. Oftentimes, for two or three Years, working at the Houſe from Time to Time.

Q. Did you do any particular Piece of Work for him?

A. I made a little Toy-Chair for a Child that was there, that was called Maſter James Anneſley that Time in the Houſe.

Q. Who beſpoke that Chair?—A. The Lord Altham deſired I ſhould make it; and my Lady and he both came to the Coach-houſe where I uſed to work, and deſired me to make it.

Q. Where was my Lady at that Time?——A. At Dunmaine.

Q. Was it he or ſhe that ordered you to make the Chair for the Child?

A. My Lord directed me to make it at the Time my Lady was at Dunmaine.

Jury.] Did my Lord ſpeak to you himſelf?

A. He ſpoke to me himſelf.

Court.] Did he tell you whoſe Child this was?

A. I never aſk Queſtions when I go to Gentlemen's Houſes; when I ſee Maſters and Miſſes, I gueſs they are their own.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall.] Whoſe Child did you take it to be?

A. The Lord and Lady Altham's Child.

Q. What did my Lord Altham call him?

A. He called him Jemmy Anneſley.

Q. How was the Child dreſſed?——A. Dreſſed as a Gentleman's Son, or young Maſter ſhould be dreſſed.

Q. Did you ſee the Child frequently?

A. I ſaw him very often at Dunmaine, and at ſeveral Places beſides.

Q. How did my Lady behave to the Child?

A. I think as a Mother behaves to a Child.

Mr. Smith.] Her Behaviour is not more material than her Words. Words are expreſſive, but Behaviour doubtful.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Daly.] How many Years ago is it ſince this Chair was beſpoke?

A. I believe about eight-and-twenty and a Half; eight-and-twenty and ſix Months, or nine-and-twenty, I cannot tell indeed which.

Q. Did you ſee the Child at that Time for whom it was to be made?

A. I ſeen the Child; I did, Sir.

Q. Could he walk?——A. He juſt began to walk that Time, about two Years and Half, or Quarter old.

Q. In whoſe Care was he?

A. One Joan Loffan took care of him, I believe.

Q. You will conſider at the Time this Chair was beſpoke from you, the Child was in the Care of Joan Loffan?

A. Yes, Joan Loffan took care of it, I think.

Q. Pray, will you tell me another Thing, can you name any Servant in the Houſe at that Time?

A. I believe there was one Martin Nieff, and Anthony Dyer, and ſome other Servants that are dead and gone.

Q. Was Nieff preſent?——A. I believe he was, and Charles Magher.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall.] Are you ſure of that?

A. I am ſure, I think they were.

Q. And Joan Loffan was the Perſon that took care of the Child?

A. I think ſhe did.

Mr. Daly.] Do you know one Mr. George Nixon of Newton, in the County of Wexford?——A. I do.

Q. Now I aſk you upon your Oath, had you any Diſcourſe with him concerning the Birth of this Child?

A. Upon my Oath, I do not remember it.

Q. Had you with Mr. Henry Miller?—A. I do not remember I had.

Q. Was ſhe brought-to-bed then?---A. No, Sir.
Q. How ſoon after was it?
A. I do not know, it may be the May following.
Q. And it was in March or April he was at your Houſe?---A. It was.
Court.] Gentlemen, have you any other Witneſſes?
Mr. Serj. Tiſdall.] We have, my Lord.
Court.] Pray then ſend for them.

15. James Fitz-Patrick.

Mr. Harward.] Were you acquainted with Lord and Lady Altham?
James Fitz-Patrick.] I knew them particularly well, Sir.
Q. Pray, Sir, did you know them at Dunmaine?---A. I did, Sir.
Q. Did you live in that Country?
A. Within five or ſix Miles of them, Sir.
Q. Were you frequently at Dunmaine?—A. I was pretty often there.
Q. Did you know one Mrs. Mary Heath?——A. I have ſeen her at Dunmaine. I cannot tell whether I ſhould know her again.
Q. Do you think if you ſaw her you ſhould know her again?
A. I do not think I ſhould know her again.
Q. Do you remember the Name Mary Heath?
A. I do remember Mary Heath very well, Sir.
Q. Now you that were intimately acquainted with my Lord and Lady, as you ſay, did you obſerve any Child in the Family?
A. Why really, Gentlemen, I ſaw the Child very often after my Lady parted Dunmaine, and to the beſt of my Memory, I ſaw the Child there one Day in the Forenoon while my Lady was there, and Mrs. Mary Heath, I ſaw her; and Lord Altham was pleaſed to be towzing and kiſſing her, and ſhe told him, if he would not give over, ſhe would call to my Lady; and I ſaw a clean dreſſed Woman with a Child in her Arms come to the Place where I was, to the beſt of my Memory, I cannot ſay poſitively.
Q. Whoſe Child was it?—A. I cannot tell, I took it to be my Lord's.
Q. What Reaſons had you to take it to be his?
A. Becauſe my Lord had introduced the Child to me ſome time before.
Q. Introduced him! How? What did my Lord ſay?
A. I cannot tell the Words, but he introduced him to me after a friendly Manner.
Q. How did my Lord behave to that Child?
A. He was very fond of him, as fond as of his Eyes, and kept him like a Gentleman's Child.
Court.] Did you ſee him in my Lady's Time?
A. I cannot ſay poſitively that I ſaw him in my Lady's Time; the greateſt Freedom I had with my Lord Altham was after my Lady's Departure.
Q. Can you take upon you to ſay that the Child you ſaw was my Lord's Child?

A. I

A. I took him to be Lord Altham's, and my Lord had that Regard for me, that he would not introduce an illegitimate Child to me.

Q. When you firſt ſaw this Child, did you ſee it before the Separation?

A. To the beſt of my Memory, I did once.

Q. Can you ſwear poſitively you did?

A. I cannot ſwear poſitively.

Q. Now, at the Time that you ſaw this Child to the beſt of your Memory before the Separation, did you ſee Mrs. Heath?——A. I did, Sir.

Q. Had ſhe the Care of any body upon her at that Time?

A. Not as I know of.

Q. Did ſhe take Notice of any Child?

A. I cannot tell whether ſhe did or not.

Q. Did you ever ſee this Child in my Lady's Company?

A. I never did, Sir.

Q. How did my Lord treat this Child, did he uſe him with any particular Fondneſs?—A. I know my Lord was very fond of him.

Mr. Harward.] There can be no legal Evidence, I find, but one that was actually preſent at his Birth.

Court.] You miſtake the Court, Mr. Harward.

Mr. Harward.] My Lord, I am ſure I would not willingly miſtake the Court, but what I contend for is, that I have a Right to aſk this Queſtion; I humbly apprehend I have, for it is a Point of the Perjury, that there was a Child taken to be my Lady Altham's Child at Dunmaine. And this being the Caſe, I would aſk him whether there was any Child in the Family as the Child of the Family?

Mr. Smith.] My Lord, this is not the Point, the Point is——

Court.] Aſk him in the very Words of the Indictment, if you will aſk him.

Court.] Was there a Child of Lord and Lady Altham's living at Dunmaine while Mrs. Heath was there, to your Knowledge, as the Child of that Family, while my Lady was at Dunmaine?

A. Really, my Lord, there was no doubt upon me but there was ſuch a Child.

Q. Can you ſay poſitively you ſaw a Child there while my Lady was there?

A. To the beſt of my Memory, I did ſee the Child while my Lady was there.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Where do you live?---A. At Cloughleagh.

Q. How long have you lived there?--A. Theſe four-and-thirty Years.

Q. Was you examined on the late Trial in the Court of Exchequer?

A. No.

Q. Did you know of that Trial?---A. I did hear of it.

Q. When was it you firſt diſcovered your Knowledge of this Tranſaction?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was it before the Trial? How came you to be a Witneſs now and not then?

A. Becauſe I was ſubpœna'd now, and was not then.

Q. Did you ever ſee Mr. MacKercher?

A. I have ſeen him very often.

Q. Did you ſee him before the Trial in Ejectment in the Exchequer?

A. I never did.

Q. When did you firſt ſee him?

A. I cannot exactly tell you when I ſaw him.

Q. You know you are a ſkilful Man at the Aſſizes, why did you not diſcloſe this Matter before?

A. It was ſore againſt my Will that I was brought in at all.

Q. Do you know Mr. William Sutton?---A. I do.

Q. Is he a Man of Honour?---A. He is, I believe.

Q. Had you any, and what Diſcourſe with him about this Matter?

A. I never had any Diſcourſe with him.

Jury.] You ſay you never ſaw my Lady Altham take Notice of the Child?---A. I never ſaw them together.

Q. Did not you ſay that you were at the Houſe before my Lord and Lady parted, and ſaw that Child then?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. Did you know whoſe Child it was?

A. I believed it was Lord Altham's.

Q. Was you told ſo?---A. I do not know whether I was or no.

Q. How did you know then that it was their Child?

A. I took it for granted.

Q. How old was the Child when you ſaw it firſt?

A. Really, I cannot tell; about eighteen Months, or thereabouts.

Q. Pray, Sir, was it running about?

A. It was in the Arms of a Maid or Woman.

Q. Was ſhe in the Habit or Dreſs of a Servant of the Family?

A. She was very clean.

Q. How was the Child dreſſed?---A. Oh, the Child was very clean.

Q. So you know no more of this than that you took it to be their Child of your own Accord?---A. I was not, nor did not doubt it at all.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Are you ſure my Lady was at Dunmaine when you ſaw the Child there?

A. I ſaw it at Dunmaine after the Separation I know, my Lady I believe was not there.

Q. Was my Lord fond of it at that Time?

A. Aye, and introduced him to me.

Q. Did he mention the Mother of the Child?

A. He did not mention the Mother.

Q. Who was Butler then?

A. I cannot tell any of the Servants, nor what Servants I kept myſelf at that Time. I ſaw Taylor and Sutton.

16. Jane Murphy.

Mr. Robins.] My Lord, this Witneſs was ſent for by my Lady Altham to be a Nurſe, and in the Preſence of my Lady gave the Child ſuck, and would have been hired to nurſe the Child, but her Huſband would not let her ſtay in the Houſe, and my Lady would not let the Child go out.

Mr. Robins.] Did you know my Lady Altham?

Jane Murphy.] I ſaw her but once in my Life.

Q. When was that?

A. It is about nine-and-twenty or thirty Years this May coming, there or thereabouts.

Q. What was the Occaſion of your going to ſee her?

A. My Lord ſpoke to me two or three Times to go nurſe this Boy.

Q. Did you ſee ever a Child there?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. How old was that Child then?

A. About a Month or three Weeks; there or thereabouts.

Q. Who was preſent when you ſaw the Child?

A. My Lady, and the Woman that brought the Child into my Lady's Room.

Q. Do you know who that Woman was?

A. I do not know who ſhe was, I knew no Servant but Bryan MacCormack.

Q. Where did you live then?

A. I lived then at the Salt Mills of Tyntern, by the Sea-ſide.

Q. How far is that from Dunmaine?

A. Four Miles from Dunmaine, never reckoned but four.

Q. What was it you did or ſaid to my Lady?

A. I told my Lady that my Lord ſent a Meſſenger for me to nurſe the Child.

Q. And did you nurſe the Child?---A. Indeed I did not nurſe him.

Q. What was the Reaſon you did not?

A. My Lady would not let me have the Child out, and I would not ſtay in the Houſe.

Court.] Did you ever ſee my Lady before?---A. I never did.

Q. Nor ſince?---A. No.

Q. Would you know the Woman, if you ſaw her, that brought the Child into the Room?

A. I cannot tell whether I would know her or no.

Q. Did you ever ſee her ſince?---A. I never ſaw her ſince.

Jury.] Who nurſed the Child the firſt three Weeks?

A. I did not examine, nor cannot tell.

Mr. Daly.] Whoſe Cloak is that?---A. It is my own.

Mr. Daly.] I do not believe you.

Jane Murphy.] Faith, and you may, and I've wore a better before now.

Mr. MacManus.] The next Witneſs is Dennis Redmond. This Witneſs will prove to your Lordſhip that Lady Altham was with Child, and brought-to-bed of a Child; that he was the Perſon ſent for the Midwife on that Occaſion; that he brought one Mrs. Shiel, a Midwife of Roſs, to Dunmaine; and that my Lady was delivered of a Child.

17. Dennis Redmond.

Mr. MacManus.] Did you know the late Lord and Lady Altham?

Dennis Redmond.] I did, I knew them both.

Q. How came you to know them?---A. Becauſe I was a Servant.

Q. Where did they live then?---A. At Dunmaine.

Q. Did you frequently ſee my Lady Altham?---A. I did.

Q. Was ſhe, or was ſhe not with Child during the Time of your Service?

A. She was, and all the Servants round ſaid that ſhe was, ſhe looked big.

Q. Was there any young Child in that Family?---A. There was.

Q. Whoſe was it?---A. It was reputed to be Lord and Lady Altham's.

Q. Was you ſent to Roſs on any, and what Occaſion?

A. I was, for a Midwife.

Q. Who ſent you?---A. Mrs. Heath.

Q. Do you know her?---A. I ought to know her.

Q. Look about and ſee if you know her.

A. Upon my Word, I cannot ſwear directly that that is Mrs. Heath, but that was my Lady's Maid.

Q. Who ſent you of that Errand?---A. My Lady's Maid did.

Q. Did you go for the Midwife?---A. I went for her.

Q. And did you bring her?---A. I got the Midwife.

Q. Who was ſhe?---A. One Mrs. Shiels.

Q. What did you then do?---A. I fetched her home to Dunmaine.

Q. What happened after ſhe came to the Houſe of Dunmaine?

A. Why, after I brought her home, that Night it was a Noiſe with them all, every one, that my Lady was brought-to-bed of a Son.

Q. Did you ſee the Child?---A. I ſeen him afterwards.

Q. How ſoon after the Midwife left the Houſe?

A. I cannot tell how ſoon.

Q. Did you ſee him the next Day?---A. Not the next Day.

Q. Did you in five Days, or ten Days?---A. No, I believe not.

Q. Did you in a Month?---A. I did in a Month.

Q. In whoſe Care was it?

A. I cannot tell, I ſeen it among the Girls, among the Servants as they were.

Q. Did you know Joan Laffan?---A. I did.

Q. And Mrs. Heath?---A. Yes.

Q. In whoſe Care did you ſee it? Name them particularly.

A. I ſeen the Child with both one and the other ſeveral Times.

Q. Name them.

A. Mrs. Heath and Joan Laffan, and with other Girls that I cannot remember.

Q. Were there any Rejoicings the Night you brought the Midwife?

A. There was the Night after.

Q. What was the Nature of that Rejoicing?

A. There was a Fire there up in the Avenue among the Trees.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Daly.] Did you know one Mrs. Heſther that lived in this Family?

A. I did, very well.

Q. Did not they call her my Lady ſometimes?

A. I never heard her called ſo in my Life.

Q. Was not ſhe with Child while you were a Servant, upon your Oath?

A. Upon my Oath, I cannot tell whether ſhe was or not.

Q. Did not you go, upon your Oath, for a Midwife to lay her?

A. Upon my Oath, I never did.

Q. Do you know one Mr. William Sutton of Longrainge?---A. I do.

Q. What was he?---A. He is a Gentleman.

Q. Had you ever any Diſcourſe with him concerning your going for a Midwife, and for whom?

A. Upon my Oath, I never had with Mr. Sutten concerning going for a Midwife for any Perſon, not that I know of, Sir.

Q. Do you know Captain Orfeur?---A. I do.

Q. Had you any Diſcourſe with him?

A. I had Diſcourſe with him.

Q. Who is he?---A. He is Colonel Palliſer's Son-in-law; I was there one Night after riding a Horſe for him.

Q. What Servants lived at Dunmaine at this Time? Name them; who was the Butler?---A. It is hard for me to remember at this Time.

Q. Upon your Oath, who was the Butler?---A. One Magher, to the beſt of my Knowledge, and there was one Dyer there.

Q. Was his Name Anthony?---A. Anthony.

Q. Was he or you in the Service firſt?

A. I was in the Service before he came there.

Q. What other Servants can you recollect; do you know Mrs. Setwright?

A. If ſhe was there I knew her; ſhe may be there for me, it is out of my Mind.

Q. Who was the Houſe-keeper?

A. I do not know as for that, becauſe there was a Cook there ſtill.

Q. Do you remember the Name of Setwright?

A. I think I remember to hear talk of her.

Q. Who was Coachman?---A. John Weedon.

Q. Was his Wife there?

A. His Wife was living at the Bridge below at this Time.

Q. Did Joan Laffan live in the Houſe at this Time that you brought the Midwife?---A. Upon my Oath, I cannot tell now.

Q. What do you believe?---A. I do not know whether ſhe was or not, for there were ſeveral Servants there, and a great many that I do not know now.

Q. Pray, did you ever ſee this Child in the Hands or Care of Joan Laffan?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. Was not that after my Lord and Lady parted?

A. It was after they parted.

Q. Was he ever in her Care before they parted? In her Care or Hands?

A. How could I mind all theſe Things?

Q. You muſt recollect.---A. Upon my Word, I cannot tell.

Q. What Service were you in?---A. After the Hounds and the Hunters.

Q. After them?---A. Aye, taking care of them, and hunt them too, and would to this Day, and ride a Horſe too.

Q. When was it my Lord and Lady parted?---A. I cannot be exact.

Q. When did you bring the Midwife there?

A. I cannot keep a Memory of what Year, nor I am no Scholar to keep that in my Head.

Q. Do not you remember the Separation?-----A. I remember the Time they parted, but cannot tell what Day of the Week, but I think a Holyday.

Q. What Time of the Day was it? Was it in the Morning?

A. I cannot remember whether it was or not now.

Q. Did my Lady go in a Coach, or on Horſeback?

A. In a Coach or Chariot.

Q. How long did you continue in the Service after they parted?

A. I did not ſtay long there after.

Q. How long?

A. I cannot tell how long, becauſe my Father and Mother were in the Town of Dunmaine, and I went to them; upon my Word I cannot tell how long.

Q. Where did my Lady go?---A. To Roſs.

Q. How long did you live in the Service in all?---A. About three Years, or full three Years, or ſomething better, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. Had not Joan Landy a Child a-nurſing at her Houſe?

A. She had my Lord's Child a-nurſing.

Q. Was not that Child brought into the Houſe of Dunmaine after my Lord and Lady parted?---A. He uſed to come in before and after.

Q. But did not he come in for good and all after they parted?

A. He did come for good and all, and was put into the Care of Joan Laffan.

Q. How came he to be taken from Joan Landy?

A. I cannot tell, without he had done nurſing.

Q. How long did you live at Dunmaine before my Lady came there?

A. I was there before either of them came.

Q. How long was you in the Service?---A. About three Years or better.

Q. What Time did my Lord and Lady come down?

A. I cannot remember.

Q. How long had you been a Servant before my Lady firſt came down?

A. I cannot tell how long, but it is three Years I ſerved in all.

Q. How long was you in the Service before ſhe came, and how long after?---A. Let me never go but I cannot remember.

Q. Did not you ſwear when you were examined on the former Trial that you were two Years in the Service before my Lady came to Dunmaine?

A. I was there; I cannot be exactly how long.

Q. And how long of that three Years was you there after they came down?

A. Why, I believe, to the beſt of my Knowledge, a Year or ſomething better, I cannot be exact.

Q. Will you tell me how ſoon after they came down my Lady was delivered of this Child?---A. Indeed, I cannot remember.

Q. Was it a Year, or half a Year, or what Time?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was you a Servant when ſhe was delivered?---A. I was.

Q. Were you there when Sarah Weedon came down?

A. I was there before ſhe came into the Place at all.

Q. Did you and Mrs. Shiel diſcourſe as you were coming to Dunmaine?

A. How can I remember?

Q. Could ſhe ſpeak Engliſh?---A. She could, indeed.

Q. Is ſhe alive?---A. I cannot tell whether ſhe is or not.

Q. Was ſhe an Iriſh Woman?---A. I cannot tell whether ſhe was or not.

Jury.] You ſay, Sir, that you ſaw Joan Landy's Child in the Houſe of Dunmaine before the Separation?

A. In the Houſe I did backwards and forwards.

Q. Did any body take Notice of it?---A. Every one of the Family, one from another uſed to handle and play with it.

Q. Did you obſerve my Lord to play with it?

A. I did, and was as fond of him as could be.

Q. Now, you ſay that after my Lady was turned away, that Child was actually brought home to Dunmaine Houſe?---A. He was that very Time.

Q. And you ſaw my Lord fond of him then?

A. I ſaw him fond of him then and after.

Q. What became of my Lady's Child?

A. Why, I believe, this was my Lady's Child; they all ſaid ſo.

Q. Did not you ſay it was Joan Landy's Child that was brought to the Houſe?---A. He did come in, the Child ſhe nurſed.

Mr. Daly.] Had not Joan Landy a Child?---A. She had, ſure enough.

Mr. Daly.] Had not Joan Landy a Child?---A. She had, ſure enough.

Q. Was not he got by my Lord?---A. They ſaid it was.

Q. Who nurſed her Child?

A. I cannot tell, except herſelf nurſed her Child.

Jury.] Mr. Daly aſked him, my Lord, who was the Father of Joan Landy's Child, and he ſays my Lord was, and that ſhe nurſed that Child.

Mr. Sol. Gen.] This is a Matter ought to be well underſtood. The Jury apprehended the Child this Man meant, was the Baſtard-child of my Lord Altham by Joan Landy; I deſire to know which Child you meant?

Dennis Redmond.] I ſay, there was a Child that Joan Landy had by a Sailor, or my Lord, or ſomebody, but this Child did not come to Dunmaine.

Jury.] Had Joan Landy a Child?

A. I cannot tell whether ſhe had of her own Body.

Q. Was ſhe with Child at Dunmaine while you were a Servant there?

A. She was with Child in the Town.

Mr. Daly.] By the Virtue of your Oath, was ſhe or was ſhe not a Servant in the Houſe when my Lady came down firſt?

A. By virtue of my Oath, I cannot tell.

Q. Did ſhe live there?---A. She was in the Town, to be ſure.

Q. Where was Joan Landy when you went for the Midwife?

A. In her Father's Houſe.

Q. How near was that to my Lord's Houſe?

A. It was juſt below the Dog-kennel.

Jury.] Was not Joan Landy a Servant in the Houſe when my Lady came home?---A. I cannot tell whether ſhe was or not.

Mr. Daly.] Did not you ſwear on the Trial in the Exchequer, that ſhe was in the Houſe when my Lady came down?

A. She may come in and out, and I am not full ſure whether ſhe was or not.

Mr. Smith.] I hope the Jury will take notice that he refuſes to anſwer the Queſtion.

Mr. Daly.] Do you remember Eleanor Murphy and Mary Doyle?

A. Mary Doyle I remember; there were ſo many they went out of my Mind.

Q. Do you remember Nelly Murphy?

A. I cannot tell whether I do remember Nelly Murphy or not.

Q. Cannot you ſay whether you do or no?

A. It is impoſſible to remember, when there were ſo many of them.

Mr. Callaghan.] We ſhall now produce Eleanor Murphy.

Mr. Smith.] My Lord, this Witneſs has been here while Redmond was examined, and has heard what he ſaid upon the Table; and it was a Rule made by your Lordſhip, that they ſhould not examine any Witneſs that came into Court before they were called.

Mr. Nelſon.] My Lord, I ſent for her to have her ready, thinking the Croſs-Examination of Redmond would not hold long, and ſhe is but juſt come.

18. Eleanor Murphy.

Mr. Callaghan.] Did you know Lord and Lady Altham?

A. Eleanor Murphy.] Yes.

Q. Pray, was you ever at Dunmaine?---A. Yes.

Q. Did you live there as a Servant?---A. I did.

Q. With whom there?---A. With Lord and Lady Altham.

Q. Can you tell whether my Lady was with Child at any Time, or when?

A. I know ſhe was delivered of a Child.

Q. How do you know that?

A. Becauſe I ſeen her the Night ſhe was delivered.

Q. Give an Account of all you know of that Matter.

A. Mrs. Heath called me up, and deſired me to bring up a Saucepan of Water, and have it warmed.

Court.] Do you know that Mrs. Heath?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. What was ſhe?---A. She was my Lady's Woman, Waiting-maid.

Q. Well, go on.

A. I brought up the Water in the Saucepan, and ſet it upon the big Parlour Fire. Mrs. Heath called me a little while after to bring it up to the Room in a brown Pan, and I went to my Lady's Room with it, where my Lady was upon her Knees, and ſhe put her Finger in it to ſee whether it was too hot or cold; and ſhe teamed ſome Brandy in it to ſtrengthen the Water, as I ſuppoſe, to waſh the Child.

Mr. Callaghan.] Where was Mrs. Heath?

A. She was attending my Lady.

Q. Do you know of what my Lady was delivered?

A. It was a Boy, for I ſaw it waſhed, and Mrs. Shiels put her Hand in her Right-hand Pocket, and brought out her Sciſſars and cut his Navel-ſtring.

Q. Who were preſent at this Birth?

A. There were a great many Gentlewomen in the Room that I did not know; but I knew one of them, Madam Butler from Roſs was there.

A. Yes, the ſecond Night after the Child was born there was a Bonfire alighted by Mr. Taylor's Order and Mrs. Heath.

Q. Do you remember the Chriſtening of this Child?

A. I knew the Day appointed for it to be chriſtened; about a Month or five Weeks after there was a great Gathering for it of many Things.

Q. Was it chriſtened?

A. Doctor Lloyd came there I ſuppoſe to chriſten the Child.

Q. Who was he?

A. He was the Miniſter of Roſs, Sir; I knew him before and after.

Q. Was it Mr. Lloyd that chriſtened it?

A. It was he that chriſtened the Child.

Q. What Name was given to it?

A. Mrs. Heath came down to the Hall and told among the Servants, he was called James Anneſley.

Jury.] That was his Chriſtian Name?

A. Yes, James Anneſley was his Chriſtian Name.

Mr. Callaghan.] What Name was he chriſtened by?

A. He was chriſtened James Anneſley.

Q. Do you mean that he was chriſtened James or James Anneſley?

A. James Anneſley.

Q. Was that his Chriſtian Name only, or his Chriſtian and Sirname?

A. That was the Chriſtian Name and Sirname and all, and they [illegible]

Court.]

Court.] What was he called when he was chriſtened?
A. James Anneſley he was called indeed.

Mr. Callaghan.] Did you ſee the Child after at Dunmaine?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. How often, once or twice?
A. Several times, with Mrs. Heath a-dreſſing of him, when he would be ſent for; and there never was a Woman loved a Child better than ſhe did James Anneſley.
Mr. Le Hunte.] The Jury want to know if he was chriſtened James Anneſley?---Eleanor Murphy.] He was chriſtened James Anneſley.
Jury.] How do you know that?
A. This was what I heard Mrs. Heath tell to all the Servants in the Hall.
Mr. Callaghan.] Pray, how long did you continue after this Chriſtening at Dunmaine?——A. A good while.
Q. How long?——A. I believe a Quarter of a Year.
Q. Where was that Child during that Time?
A. He was ſent to Joan Landy's out to nurſe, ſhe took him with her.
Q. Do you remember the Time of my Lord and Lady's parting?
A. I was not there then.
Q. But do you remember the Time?---A. I do not remember the Time.
Q. Was it before or after that, that Joan Landy got the Nurſing?
A. She got the Nurſing the Day that he was chriſtened; ſhe came to nurſe him the Day before.
Q. Where did you go when you left Dunmaine?
A I went to Roſs, after I left Dunmaine.
Q. Did you ſee the Child after?—A. I never ſaw the Child after, only once that he came to Roſs with my Lord in the Coach.
Q. Do you underſtand what a Chriſtian Name and what a Sirname is?
A Yes.
Q. What was the Child's Sirname?---A. His Sirname is Anneſley.
Q. And what his Chriſtian Name?---A. His Chriſtian Name is James.
Q. Was Anneſley his Sirname or Chriſtian Name when he was chriſtened?---A. It was a Sirname, Anneſley.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Setwright the Houſekeeper?

A. I never knew her, I do not know what was her Name.

Q. Who was the Laundreſs?---A. There was Nelly Murphy and another over her, but I do not remember her.

Q. Who was Butler?---A. One Magher.

Q. Do you remember Bourk the Poſtillion?---A. Indeed I do not.

Q. How long before you left the Service did Dennis Redmond leave it?

A. He was there before me and after me.

Q. How long did you ſtay there after this Birth?

A. I ſtayed after the Chriſtening two or three Days.

Q. Do you remember the great Eclipſe of the Sun?

A. I do not remember it.

Mr. Morton.] The next Witneſs will be one Mary Freeman, who will prove to your Lordſhip and the Jury, that ſhe ſaw my Lady Altham at Dunmaine big with Child, and ſaw the Child in the Care of Joan Laffan; that Mrs. Heath was particularly fond of it, and that ſhe has ſeen the Child with my Lady in a Coach frequently afterwards.

20. Mary Freeman.

Mr. Morton.] Did you know the late Lady Altham?

Mary Freeman.] I did, Sir.

Q. Where did you firſt ſee her?---A. In Tyntern, at Madam Pigot's.

Q. At the time you knew her there, what Condition did ſhe appear to be in?

A. She appeared to me as a Woman in her Caſe, with Child.

Q. Did ſhe appear big?---A. She did indeed, Sir.

Q. At what time was this?---A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, it was a little before Chriſtmas in the Year that King George the Firſt came in.

Q. Can you recollect whether before or after Chriſtmas?

A. That was the time that Eſquire Pigot had the Bonfire in Tyntern.

Q. Was it before or after that Bonfire?

A. Before the Bonfire, for we had it at Michaelmas.

Q. Did you ever ſee my Lady afterwards, and where?

A. I ſeen her in Dunmaine very often.

Q. When you ſaw her there, did you ſee any Child in and about that Houſe?---A. I did indeed, upon my Word.

Q. What Child was it?

A. I ſeen the Child with Joan Laffan tending of it, at the time Madam Pigot ſent a Letter by me there; I ſeen it mighty well dreſſed with Joan Laffan in Dunmaine Houſe, at the time of the Letter I was ſent with to be delivered to my Lady Altham.

Q. Did you deliver the Letter?

A. I gave it to Mrs. Heath, into her own Hands, and ſhe went up Stairs with it to my Lady, and told me when ſhe came down, that my Lady was unwell, and could not give me an Anſwer.

Q. Did

Q. Did you see the Child at that Time?
A. I did see the Child that very instant in the Presence of Mrs. Heath.
Q. Was Mrs. Heath present?
A. It was in her Presence the Minute that I delivered the Letter: Joan Laffan was in the Kitchen with the Child in her Arms.
Q. What Time of the Year was this?
A. It was about this Time of the Year, I cannot tell what Time.
Jury.] Are you sure that Mrs. Heath was present and saw the Child?
A. Joan Laffan had the Child in her Arms in the Presence of Mrs. Heath, when I delivered the Letter to her.
Mr. Morton.] At the Time you saw this Child, then or any other Time, what Notice did you see Mrs. Heath take of it?
A. Why indeed, Sir, upon my Word, I know no more than that I was going to the Fair of Ross, and I saw her bring out the Child, and she put a Bundle of Cloaths into my Lady's Coach ——
Q. But I ask you, whether at the Time that you saw this Child when you went with the Letter, and then observed this Child in Mrs. Heath's Presence, you observed Mrs. Heath to take any Notice of it?
A. She did take Notice of it, particular Notice, and was playing with it; indeed she was.
Q. How old was the Child then?
A. It was about a Year and half old, to the best of my Knowledge.
Q. What sort of a Child was it?
A. It was a pretty light-headed Child.
Q. Did Mrs. Heath take Notice of it as the Child of a Person of Consequence?---A. She did indeed.
Q. As the Child of whom?——A. As a Gentleman's Child.
Q. Whose Child was it considered to be?
A. It was considered my Lady Altham's and my Lord's; as I heard, it was called the young Lord, young Jemmy Annesley; any other I cannot tell you.
Q. I ask you whether at any Time after this, you saw this Child in company with Lady Altham?——A. I did.
Q. Where was the next Place?
A. I did not see it after that Time, to the best of my Knowledge, 'till I seen him at Ross at Madam Butler's.
Q. Who did you see him with there?
A. He was in Madam Butler's Arms, for he was brought from Dunmaine that very Day, and she received the Child and carried it up Stairs to my Lady.
Q. Who brought it to Ross?——A. I cannot tell.
Q. At this Time in whose Company was it?
A. There was Nobody but Mrs. Heath that came down Stairs.
Q. Now I ask you whether the Child that you saw after at Ross was the same you saw at Dunmaine?
A. I cannot tell that, Sir, but the Child was there.
Q. Was Mrs. Heath present at Butler's?---A. She was indeed.
Q. Did she at that Place take any Notice of the Child?
A. I cannot tell you, Sir, it was at the Head of the Stairs, and I cannot tell that.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Ed. Malone.] Do you remember the Year that you saw my Lady with Child?
A. The Year King George the first came in.
Q. Was she big with Child then?---A. She was.
Q. You say it was the Year King George came in?
A. It was the Year he came in.
Q. Was it not about Christmas you said?
A. And was not that the Year King George came in?
Q. I ask you, if you did not say you saw my Lady big with Child about Christmas?——A. It was about Christmas.
Q. Where did you see her then?——A. At Tyntern.
Q. Was it before or after Christmas?——A. It was before.
Q. You went from Mrs. Pigot's with a Letter to Dunmaine?
A. I did, Sir.
Q. What Time of the Year was it?——A. In the Spring.
Q. Of what Year?——A. I cannot tell as to that.
Q. Was it the next Spring after you saw her with Child?
A. Indeed it was not, nor the Spring after.
Q. See if you can recollect the Year?---A. I cannot recollect the Year.
Q. You knew Counsellor Pigot?——A. I knew him very well.
Q. Had any Accident happened to him then?
A. No, Sir, it was after.
Q. How soon after?——A. I do not know.
Q. Did not he break his Leg in the County of Tipperary?
A. I cannot tell that.
Q. Do you remember the Time he broke his Leg?
A. I was not in the Family then, but in the Town.
Q. Was Mrs. Piget at home when he broke his Leg?---A. I believe so.
Q. Did she go to him?——A. She went to him.
Q. Did she go from Tyntern to him?——A. She did.
Mr. Serj. Marshall.] The next Witness is one Thomas Elton, by Trade a Glazier; he was called to Dunmaine upon some necessary Repairs of that House some time after the Birth of Mr. Annesley; and he will give your Lordship an Account that he saw this Child in the House, when he was there at Work, greatly taken care of by his Father and Mother, and I believe by the Prisoner at the Bar.
Court.] If you have any new Witnesses to any new Matter, produce them; you have produced Witnesses to all the Points of the Indictment already.

21. Thomas Elton.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Pray, Sir, what Trade do you follow?
Thomas Elton.] I am a Glazier.
Q. Do you know a Place called Dunmaine?---A. I do, Sir.
Q. Were you at any Time and when at that House?
A. I served my Apprenticeship in Ross to James Morris of Ross, and I was at Dunmaine House several times.
Q. In what Year?
A. To the best of my Memory, I was bound Apprentice in the Year 1715.
Q. And what Time was you at Dunmaine House?
A. I was there I believe at several Times.
Q. Name any particular Time.
A. I was there in that same Year, and in 1716 and 1717, and 'till the Separation of my Lord and Lady was.
Q. Who did you see there?---A. The Lord and the Lady was there.
Q. Whom else did you see?
A. I seen Arthur Lord Altham and his Lady, I seen Mary Heath.
Q. Do you know any other of that Family that were there?
A. I have remembered to see a Child there.
Q. What Child was that?
A. A Child as I thought was the Son of Arthur Lord Altham.
Q. Where was Lady Altham when you saw this Son?
A. In the House, Sir.
Q. In what Manner was this Child treated?
A. If you please I will tell you. I am a Glazier by Trade, and at Work in the House at several Times I was.
Q. What Year was this that you saw the Child?
A. In the Year 1716, to the best of my Knowledge; and upon the same, I was up in the Lady's Chamber at Work, and a Messenger came up, I did not turn my Face about, nor do not know who it was, and I heard a Messenger say, Young Master is below: in some time after my Lady called Mary Heath, and said, Go and bring up my Child. With that, I seen the Child coming up, and upon the same, my Lady embraced it as she was sitting upon the Bed.
Q. What Year was this?
A. I think it was 1716. And she kept it there, during the Time I was at Work, which was close upon an Hour.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Recorder.] Say in what time of the Year 1716 this was?
A. I cannot tell.
Q. Was it in Spring, or Summer, or Winter?
A. I cannot tell, upon my Word.
Q. Was it after, or before Christmas?---A. Indeed I cannot tell, Sir.
Q. Upon your Oath, was not it in the Year 1717?
A. Upon my Oath, it was not in 1717.
Q. Well then, what time was it in 1716?---A. I cannot tell, Sir.
Q. Upon your Oath, was it in 1716?
A. It was in 1716, but I cannot particularly guess at the Time; I cannot contain that, it is so long ago.
Mr. Proby, Juror.] How old was the Child?
A. As near as I can guess, a Year and half, or thereabouts.
Q. Did you ever hold any Discourse within these few Days with any body upon the Road?
A. I did not, upon my Oath.
Q. Did you see Nobody in a Finglass Chaise between Kilcullen Bridge and this?
A. I believe I saw your Face.
Q. Do you remember what you told me then about your Knowledge of this Affair?
A. I do not remember.
Mr. Proby.] You told me then you had a Subpœna the Day before, and thought it was very hard you should not know sooner what you had to swear; and swore by your Maker there, you knew nothing of the Matter. You said further, you were in so great a Passion you threw the Subpœna and Shilling into the Fire.
N. B. Witness Elton produced a Paper and said, Here is the Subpœna.
Mr. Solicitor General.] I am now, with some Satisfaction, to inform your Lordships that we shall call Mr. Higginson; he is a Person of some Reputation. We should not call him so early, but that he is falling sick and not able to attend any longer. This Gentleman will endeavour to prove that he was at Dunmaine at the Time of the Assizes of Wexford, and we will now produce him, though out of time, to shew where my Lady was at that time, and of her being then with Child. You will observe he is now called by way of Anticipation, and before his time.
Mr. Proby.] My Lord, I have something further to mention that this Man told me, which I had forgot.
Mr. Serj. Marshall.] I desire, my Lord, that Mr. Proby may be sworn.
Court.] You must be sworn, Sir.
Mr. Proby sworn to give Evidence to the Court, and his Fellow-jurors.] When he told me that it was very hard he should have such short Warning, and did not know what he had to swear, I desired him by all means to make haste, for the Trial would be very soon, to get to Town and be instructed there. So I will, says he; and immediately he set into a Gallop, and I never saw him 'till now since.
Mr. Serj. Marshall.] What were the Words he said to you?
A. He told me, that he was in such a Passion, that he threw the Subpœna and the Shilling into the Fire.
Mr. Solicitor.] It shews he was a most unwilling Witness.
Mr. Proby.] His Words were these, By G—d I know nothing of the Matter.
Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Do not you apprehend that the Man meant by that, that he did not know any thing of the Birth of this Child?
A. I cannot tell what he meant.
Q. Upon your Oath, Sir, what do you think he meant?
A. Upon my Oath, Sir, I believe from the subsequent Expressions, that he knew nothing at all of the Affair.
Q. Might not such a Person as you saw here clearly imagine, that his seeing a Child in that House was nothing material, if he knew nothing of the Birth of that Child?
A. He told me he was summoned on the Trial between the old and young Lord, and swore by G---d he knew nothing of the Matter.
Q. But might not he think that he knew nothing material?
Mr. Recorder.] The Jury will judge of that.

22. Mr. Thomas Higginson.

Mr. Solicitor.] Mr. Higginson, pray did you know the late Lord and Lady Altham?——Mr. Higginson.] Yes.
Q. Do you remember to have seen either of them, and when, in the Year 1714 or 1715?
A. I saw Lord Altham very often; I had the Honour to receive from the Year 1710, Arthur Lord Altham's Rents for Part of his Estate.
Q. You saw my Lord Altham very often?

A. I saw him very often

Q. Do you remember to have seen either of them about the Middle of April 1715?---A. Yes, the Middle of April 1715 I called at Dunmaine.

Q. How came you to call there?

A. I was Receiver to Arthur Lord Altham, and Arthur late Earl of Anglesea.

Q. Go on, and give an Account of what you know of this Family.

A. My Lady I saw when I called at Dunmaine, my Lord was not at home.

Q. Do you know any thing of her being with Child?

A. That time I saw her, I took her to be big with Child.

Court.] What time was that?——Q. In the Middle of April 1715.

Mr. Solicitor.] What time in April do you say?

A. The Middle, in Easter Week 1715.

Q. Where did you see her then?---A. At Dunmaine.

Q. Inform the Court and Jury what Look or Appearance she had of being with Child.

A. She appeared to be big with Child to me, and towards the last Month of her time.

Q. Tell us wherefore it is that you have made yourself sure it was then?

A. I had a Pocket-book in which I kept my Memorandums; I was receiving Rents for the Earl of Anglesea, and I sent my Son to receive the Rents of the Nanny-water Estate for Lord Altham; I knew he would be at home with the Money; and I called there for Lord Altham to send one to Enniscorthy with me for the Money.

The Witness's Voice being weak, Mr. Smith, an Officer of the Court, is directed to repeat what he should say.

Mr. Smith.] Tell what you say, Sentence by Sentence, and I will repeat it.

Mr. Higginson.] I called to see if Lord Altham was at home to send one with me to Enniscorthy, to get some Money for himself.

Q. Did you see my Lady or my Lord at that time?---A. My Lady only.

Q. How can you be particular concerning the time of your being at Dunmaine?

A. Because the Days that I received Lord Annesley's Rents I had it entered in my Pocket-book, and I gave the Book to the Prime Serjeant Malone at the last Trial.

Q. What were the Contents of that Book?--A. Lord Anglesea's Receipts.

Q. You say Lady Altham looked like a Woman big with Child?

A. She did.

Q. What Conversation had you with her then?

A. Very little, only that I asked for my Lord, and told her what I called for; for I dared not go into the House, for if I had, Lord Anglesea would have turned me out of the Receipt of his Rents.

Q. Tell what passed between my Lady and you.

A. I told her I called to get my Lord to send one with me to Enniscorthy; and my Lady came down and made me drink, and I drank a good Deliverance to her Ladyship in two Glasses of White-wine.

Q. Who did you see with my Lady?

A. The Maid was there, but I do not know her Name.

Q. Now tell us how did you dispose of yourself after you left Dunmaine?

A. I went to Enniscorthy, and dined with Major Rogers that Day there.

Q. Where did you go from thence?

A. To a Friend's House in Wexford early next Morning, Thursday Morning.

Q. Recollect the Day you were at Dunmaine?

A. I was there on Thursday going, and Tuesday coming back.

Q. What Day did you go from Dunmaine to Enniscorthy?

A. I came from Dunmaine to Enniscorthy on Tuesday.

Q. How long did you stay at Wexford then?

A. Not above an Hour I believe, we had but one Pint of Wine.

Q. Did you see Lord Altham at that Assizes?

A. Yes, he gave me the Receipt.

Q. Did you see my Lady there?---A. No, I did not, nor hear of her.

Q. Do you believe, if she had been there, you would not have known it? Could she be there, and you not see her?

A. She might be there for me.

Q. Pray, Sir, you say you were Receiver to my Lord Anglesea, did there come any Account to the Earl of Anglesea of the Birth of a Child?

A. Several of Ross Tenants did come to Lord Anglesea in July——

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Pray, Sir, do not you say that you were at Dunmaine on Easter-Tuesday?---A. I was there on Thursday and Tuesday.

Q. Was you there on Easter-Tuesday?---A. I was.

Q. What Year was it?

A. By my Books on Easter-Tuesday in the Year 1715.

Q. Where was you the Monday before?

A. I believe I was at Mr. Giffard's; I was at Houghton's; I know I was in that Neighbourhood on Easter-Monday.

Q. Upon your Oath, Sir, where were you on Easter-Monday?

A. I believe I was at Mr. Thomas Houghton's on Easter-Monday.

Q. How near is that to Dunmaine?---A. I believe four or five Miles.

Q. Why are you so certain of being at Dunmaine and at Houghton's on Easter-Monday and Tuesday?

A. Those were the Days I received Money, and they were entered in my Book, that is the Reason of my Certainty.

Q. Do you know a Place called Peppard's-Castle?---A. I do know it.

Q. How far from Dunmaine is Peppard's-Castle?

A. Which Way would you have me go?

Q. The common Road. How many Miles distant is it?

A. I believe sixteen Miles.

Q. Where were you upon Easter-Sunday?---A. I believe at Clomines.

Q. How near is that to Dunmaine?

A. Four or five Miles, I do not know well.

Q. How far is Clomines from Peppard's-Castle?

A. I believe as far as Dunmaine, it cannot be less than sixteen Miles.

Q. Look at that Paper and see if it be your Hand-writing; is that your Name?—A. I believe it is.

Q. When you gave Receipts, did you date them on the Days the Tenants paid you the Money?---A. Some I did, and some I did not.

Q. Explain yourself.

A. When I would go abroad, I would leave Receipts drawn according to the Days the Tenants promised to pay their Rents, some with my Wife, and some with my Son, and some with Timothy Murphy that received for me.

Q. Is that all your Hand-writing?---A. I believe it is.

Mr. Le Hunte.] I desire that Paper may be read against himself.

Clerk of the Crown.] Received from Mr. William White now and formerly the Sum of twenty-five Pounds Sterl. in full his last Michaelmas Rent, due out of Peppard's Castle, &c. to the Right Hon. Arthur Earl of Anglesea, received by his Lops Order this 18th April 1715.

25 l. 0 0 Tho. Higginson.

Court.] That is Easter-Monday that Year?

Mr. Higginson.] I will tell your Lordship how that was. I was to pay Major Rogers Money for Timber for my Lord Anglesea, and I left my Son the Receipt to get the Money, who was to meet me there with it.

Q. Is the Date your own Hand?---A Yes, I believe it is.

Q. And did you date Receipts before you received the Money?

A. Yes, very often.

Mr. Le Hunte.] What time did you enter this Receipt in your Book?

A. When I came home again.

Q. When was that?---A. I entered it on Wednesday, when he brought me the Money to Enniscorthy.

Q. What Money did he bring?

A. He brought me sixty odd Pounds; I gave him eight Receipts to call upon the People with them, and I got the Money on Wednesday.

Q. When did you enter those Receipts in your Book?

A. I believe I entered them before I went from home.

Q. How so?---A. Because they promised me the Payment.

Q. Did you draw this Receipt at the time that it bears Date.

A. I gave this Receipt to Tim Murphy or my Son before I went away, and they told me they would be there that Day with the Money.

Q. See if this be your Book and Hand-writing?---A. It is.

Q. Was this Book kept by you?---A. It was. I lent it to Mr. Wilson.

Q. Is that Entry your Hand-writing?---A. It is my Hand-writing.

Q. When was it entered?---A. It was entered when I came back.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Where was this Book kept?

A. When John Wilson came to receive the Rents of Lord Anglesea after me, I lent it to him.

Court.] Can you now say that it was the 18th of April, Easter-Tuesday, that you were at Dunmaine, since it appears by your Book you entered Receipts of that Date elsewhere?

A. I left eight Receipts for my Son and Murphy, to give the People that paid the Money.

Q. How came you to enter them the fifteenth and eighteenth?

A. Because they were to go there them Days.

Q. Since your Book shews your Hand-writing at another Place, the time you say you were at Dunmaine, can you, from any other Circumstance, recollect that it was Tuesday the 18th of April that you were at Dunmaine?

A. I believe it was Tuesday the 18th by my Pocket-book.

Court.] See and get an Almanack for the Year 1715.

Q. Does your Pocket-book and this Book contain the same things?

A. The Pocket-book is of different Things from this Book.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Did not you swear on the Trial in the Exchequer, that you received four Pounds from Mr. Houghton the Day before you went to Dunmaine?

A. I believe so.

Q. What Day did you receive that Money?

A. I believe it was on Monday Morning.

Q. What was the Denomination that Rent was paid for?

A. I do not know indeed, I know no Denomination now, but only Ballysop and Dunmaine.

Q. Did not you swear that you received from Mr. Giffard of Ballysop Ten Pounds on Tuesday?----A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was not that the Day you went to Dunmaine?

A. Yes, I believe I did that Morning.

Q. Did not you say, you received from Patrick Sutton twenty Pounds the Day before?

A. I received some on Friday, and Saturday, and wanted forty Shillings; and they sent it after me on Monday.

Q. Did you swear, or did you not, that you received Sutton's Money on Monday?

A. I did not on Monday. I wanted about forty Shillings, and I got that on Monday or Tuesday following.

Q. Upon your Oath, Sir, did you not swear that you received twenty Pounds from Colonel Sutton on Monday?

A. I do not know whether I did or no; I did receive twenty Pounds in all; but I said then as I say now, that there was forty Shillings behind, and he sent it after me on Monday.

Q. What Day did you receive the Money from Mr. Giffard?

A. On Monday I believe.

Q. What did you receive the Money from Mr. Sutton for?

A. It was for the Rent of Clomines.

Q. Look

Q. Look at that Book now; is that your Hand-writing?
A. The upper Part is, that is my Hand-writing.

Q. And whose is the other?
A. That is my Son's; I told Counsellor Ford so before at Wexford.

Q. Were you present at the Time it was entered?
A. No, he was at Ross, and Joe White the Merchant gave him a Bill for Thirty Pounds, and I allowed this as Cash, the Tenants all received it as Cash; they had a Share in it, and I allowed it as Cash.
Q. Why did not you make your Entries in your Book at that Period of Time?
A. I had not that Book with me; I had lent it to John Wilson.
Q. Was the Money paid by the Tenants at the Time set down in the Book?
A. That was the Bill that every one of them had a Share in.
Q. Was the 30l. received on the 5th of April?—A. The Bill was.
Q. Did not you swear you received the 30l. on Monday?
A. It was good 30l. to me, and so I swore I received it on Monday.
Q. Where is your Pocket-book?—A. I have it not now.
Q. Did not you swear upon your former Examination in the Exchequer, that you were Agent to my Lord Anglesea from the Year 1711, to the Year 1717.
A. No, not till the Year 1717; no, if it be 1717, it is wrong printed.
Q. Upon your Oath, was not you Lord Anglesea's Agent in the Year 1717?—A. I was not discharged till 1718 or 1719 for that matter, but Mr. Wilson came in before that.
Q. Did you continue Agent for my Lord Anglesea after the Year 1717?
A. No, nor that Year, but I received for him in 1716.
Q. You received in the Year 1716?—A. I did then in several Places.
Q. Upon your Oath, did you in 1717?
A. I cannot charge my Memory; I am sure I did in 1716.
Q. Look at this Bond, and see if it be your Hand-writing?
A. I did see it, it is.
Mr. Le Hunte.] My Lord, this Bond is to shew that he was discharged long before this Time, and we desire it may be read.
Mr. Marke Whyte reads part of the Bond, which bears Date the 26th Day of December 1715.
Mr. Le Hunte.] Did you ever settle any Account subsequent to the Account in this Book?—A. Yes, I did; six Months after.
Mr. Solicitor.] Would you be understood that that was the Book you carried about with you?
A. No, this was the Book that was left at home.
Q. What Book did you take with you commonly?
A. I carried a little Pocket-Book about me.
Mr. Recorder.] When you came home to that Book, did you make Entries different from your Pocket-book?——A. Some I did.
Q. How so? then you had no certain Guide for keeping your Accompts?
A. Whenever I was promised any Money, I entered it down in that Book the Day I expected to receive it, and left Receipts with my Wife or Son, for I was very much abroad.
Q. How could you enter the Day before you knew you would be paid?
A. They would keep the Receipts till they got the Money.
Mr. Serjeant Marshall.] My Lord, I desire the whole Conditions and all the Bond may be read; Mr. White read only a Part of it, and I must insist upon the whole being read, to shew that he might have received the Rents for a Year after the Date thereof.

Mr. Bowden reads the Bond as follows:

"Know all Men by these Presents, that I Thomas Higginson of Rahingurrin, in the County of Wexford, Gent. am held and firmly bound unto the Right Honourable Arthur Earl of Anglesea, in the Sum of one thousand Pounds Sterl. lawful Money of Great-Britain, to be paid to the said Arthur Earl of Anglesea, or his certain Attorney, Executors or Administrators, to the which Payment well and truly to be made, I do bind myself, my Executors and Administrators, firmly by these Presents, sealed with my Seal, and dated this twenty-sixth Day of December, Anno Dom. 1715."

"Whereas the above-named Arthur Earl of Anglesea did constitute and appoint the above-bound Thomas Higginson to be Collector and Receiver of his Rents, Arrears of Rents, Revenues, Duties and Profits of his Lordship's Estate in the County of Wexford for some Time past. And whereas the said Arthur Earl of Anglesea did on the first Day of May last annul and make void the said Power: Now the Condition of the above-written Obligation is such, that if the said Thomas Higginson, his Executors or Administrators, do and shall, on or before the first Day of May next ensuing the Date of these Presents, deliver up to the said Arthur Earl of Anglesea, his Heirs or Assigns, a just and true Account of all such Rents, Duties, Arrears of Rents, Fines, Issues, Goods, Chattels, Profits and Perquisites, as he the said Thomas Higginson hath at any Time heretofore levied or received for the Use of the said Earl, as his Collector or Receiver, and do and shall then pay, or cause to be paid unto the said Arthur Earl of Anglesea, his Heirs or Assigns, all such Sum and Sums of Money, as shall then appear to be and remain due to the said Earl, his Heirs or Assigns, on balancing of such Accompts; and also do and shall at any Time when demanded, well and truly account for, and pay unto him the said Arthur Earl of Anglesea, his Heirs or Assigns, any Sum or Sums of Money, that shall or may at any Time or Times hereafter, within the Space of one Year from the Date above-mentioned appear to have been received by him, the said Thomas Higginson, for the Use, or on the Account of the said Earl, and not accounted for with him by the said Thomas Higginson, on or before the said first Day of May next ensuing (if any such there be) that then the above Obligation shall be void, or else it shall stand in full Force and Virtue."

Sealed and delivered in Presence of us,

Den. Brien, Tho. Higginson.
John Wilson, Junior. 715.

Mr. Serjeant Marshall.] He had a Right, it appears, to collect all the Arrears that were due for a Year, he had a Year allowed him to gather them in.
Mr. Recorder.] The Bond says, if it shall appear within the Space of one Year, that he had received any Sum or Sums of Money; but there is no Power given him to receive any Rents.
Mr. Le Hunte.] Were not you Tenant to Part of Arthur Lord Altham's Estate?—A. Not at all.
Q. Did not you hold a House from him in Ross?
A. I never had a House in Ross.
Q. Who came into Possession of Lord Altham's Estate upon his Death?
A. I do not know, I was not employed then.
Q. Was you Receiver to Lord Altham till his Death?
A. No, till the Year 1717 or 1718.
Q. How far is Ballydaboy from Dunmaine?—A. I cannot tell.
Q. How near is it to Peppard's-Castle?—A. I believe within a Mile.
Q. Is that your Hand-writing?—A. Yes, I saw it before.
Q. Look at it again, was it entered the Time it bears Date?
A. I believe the Wednesday before I left home.
Q. How came you to enter it then?
A. There was a Fair to be on the 19th, and that was the Reason.

The Bond is given to the Jury.
Mr. Serjeant Marshall.] You will observe, Gentlemen, there are two Clauses in the Bond; the first that he shall account for all Sums received; and the next that he shall account for all Sums he should receive.
Court.] Not at all; he was superseded.
Court.] If you mean to produce other Evidence to the same Thing, I shall stop you; we have been near twelve Hours in Court, and cannot adjourn.
Mr. Edmond Malone.] And they said, my Lord, they would not take up eight Hours in ten, if the Trial should hold no longer.
Court.] Let us know your next Witness, and what to be examined to; say what they are.
Mr. Serj. Tisdall.] The next is one John Warren, produced to the same Purpose of several others.
Court.] Let him stay then. Is he a Man of Figure? What's his Addition?
Mr. Serjeant Tisdall.] He is a Gentleman, my Lord.
Court.] Let me tell you, there is no Safety in a Multitude of Witnesses.
Mr. Serjeant Tisdall.] A Multitude of People agreeing to the same Fact greatly corroborates it.

23. Mr. JOHN WARREN.

Mr. Serj. Tisdall.] Mr. Warren, was you ever at Dunmaine?
Mr. Warren.] I never lived at Dunmaine, but I belonged to one Mr. Chambers, that lived at ——————, and went there several Times about his Business; my Lord's Steward would buy fat Sheep from him---
Q. Were you ever at Dunmaine, Sir, while my Lord and Lady Altham lived there?---A. I was there several Times whilst they lived there.
Q. Did you see ever a Child there?---A. Indeed I did see a Child there.
Q. What Sort of a Child?---A. They called him Jemmy, he was a Boy.
Q. Whose Child was he?---A. I do not know whose Child, but my Lady called him her Child, and came one Evening and asked, How does my Child do? putting out her Hand to him.
Q. Who did you see the Child with?---A. With a Servant.
Q. Can you say whose Child it was?---A. It is impossible for me to know whose Child it was, my Lord called him his Son.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Le Hunte.] How do you get your Livelihood?
A. I have a Livelihood.
Q. Have you any Trade?---A. I have no Trade.
Q. Upon your Oath, are not you a Beggar?
A. I am not; I have something of a Livelihood.
Court.] Unless you can now tell us what your Witness will say, I assure you we won't have the Time of the Court taken up in this manner.
Mr. Archdale.] For my part, my Lord, if they bring a hundred such Witnesses, I'll never think it worth my while to listen to them.
Mr. Daly.] We'll bring but as few as we possibly can.
Mr. Recorder.] We shall bring very good Witnesses, and come to the Point as soon as we can, when we begin our Defence; but these Gentlemen, I perceive, will not give us an Opportunity.

Court.] Unleſs you have ſomething new to offer, or a Man of greater Figure or Honour to corroborate what theſe Witneſſes have ſaid, we ſhall not hear him. If you have any Perſon of undoubted Credit, in the Name of God produce him.

Mr. MacManus.] We have many more to examine, and thoſe Witneſſes of undoubted Credit, and I hope the Court will indulge us ſo far as to hear their Evidence. We have examined many, it is true, and I beg Leave to ſay there has been a great Conſiſtency of Truth in their Teſtimony, and they have ſworn very materially; and, my Lord, if we falſify the Traverſer in any one Point, we will falſify her in the whole; we have twelve Men of Honour to try her, and I deſire we may be permitted to call Robert Kennight, he is a very material Perſon in my Brief.

Court.] What is it that you produce him to?

Mr. MacManus.] He is a material Witneſs upon my Paper; he will prove to your Lordſhip that Lady Altham (which is the firſt Point before you upon this Perjury) was big with Child. My Lord, they will not let me open his Evidence any further, becauſe he is here.

Court.] Bring him up.

24. Robert Kennight.

Mr. MacManus.] Did you know the late Lord and Lady Altham?

Robert Kennight.] Yes, I did.

Q. Where did you live when you knew them?—A. In Garryduffe firſt.

Q. Did you know them while they lived at Dunmaine?—A. I did, Sir.

Q. How far from that did you live?

A. In the Bounds of Dunmaine, they joined together.

Q. Was my Lady, or was ſhe not with Child at any Time that you knew her at Dunmaine?——A. In my Opinion ſhe was.

Q. Have you any Reaſon for that Opinion?——A. All the Reaſon I have for it is, becauſe I ſeen her big, and like a Woman with Child.

Q. Did you ſee any Child in the Houſe of Dunmaine?—A. I did.

Q. Did you know of any Bonfires and Rejoicings upon any, and what particular Occaſion?

A. I did, for Joy about the young Child that my Lord and Lady had.

Q. Pray, do you know Mrs. Heath?

A. I never knew her, I made no Acquaintance with her.

Q. Do you remember to have ſeen her at Dunmaine?

A. I never did ſee her, or know her at all.

I ſhall aſk no more Queſtions.

Court.] How many Bonfires were there made?——A. None but one.

Q. Where was it?

A. At the great Houſe, in the Back-ſide in the Avenue.

Mr. Solicitor.] My Lord, we have examined ſuch a prodigious Number of Witneſſes to one Point, that, if my Judgment had prevailed, you ſhould have had an End of them long ago; but we ſhall now call our laſt Witneſs for the preſent, and trouble your Lordſhip no more, except in the Counter-Proof upon the Reply we ſhould have Occaſion to produce freſh Proof. This Witneſs is a Witneſs that was examined upon the laſt Trial in Ejectment in the Exchequer, her Name is Joan Laffan.

Court.] Why did not you call her firſt?

Mr. Solicitor.] We look upon her to be a very material one, and hope ſhe will ſatisfy your Lordſhip and the Jury of this whole Affair.

Court.] I was wondering what was become of her all this Time.

25. Joan Laffan.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdal.] Mrs. Laffan, did you know my Lord and Lady Altham?——Joan Laffan.] Yes, Sir.

Q. Was you ever a Servant there?——A. Yes, Sir.

Q. What was your Service?

A. I was Chamber-Maid when I came there firſt.

Q. What Time did you come there firſt?

A. The Year after the Death of the Queen: I was at Colonel Deane's at her Death, and came the Year after to Lord Altham's.

Q. Pray, how long did you continue in that Employment of Chamber-Maid?——A. About a Year and a Half, and then I was employed to nurſe Maſter Jemmy Anneſley.

Q. How old was he then?

A. Near upon a Year and Half, or thereabouts.

Q. Pray now, whoſe Child was he?—A. My Lord and Lady Altham's.

Q. By whom were you employed to nurſe him?

A. By my Lord and Lady Altham.

Q. Pray, what Time did you go into my Lord's Service?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, it is the Harveſt; I lived at Colonel Deane's till after King George the Firſt came in better than Half a Year, then I left it, and was a little while with my Friends, and then went to Lord and Lady Altham's.

Q. Pray, can you tell in what Month you went there?

A. I cannot recollect the Month, but, to the beſt of my Knowledge, bout Harveſt.

Q. In what Year was it?——A. I cannot exactly tell what Year.

Q. But you ſay it was the Year after the King came in?

A. The Year after, or thereabouts.

Q. How long after you lived as a Chamber-Maid was this Child put into your Care by my Lady?

A. Near upon a Year and a Half after, or thereabouts.

Q. Who was it put the Child into your Care?—A. Lady Altham.

Q. Pray, did Mrs. Heath know that you took Care of it?

A. She did, Sir.

Q. Where was the Child before he was put into your Care?

A. The Child was at Nurſe before; when he came from the Wet-nurſe, he was put into my Care.

Q. Pray now, how old was the Child when you were hired?

A. I believe the Child was three or four Months old when I was hired, there or thereabouts.

Q. How old do you ſay he was?

A. About three Months, or better, I cannot exactly tell that.

Q. How old was the Child when put into your Care?

A. Near upon a Year and Half.

Q. How long after you were hired was he put into your Care? About what Time of the Year?——A. About a Year and Half after.

Q. Was you a Year and Half Chamber-Maid before you had the Care of him?——A. Yes, I believe I was near upon it.

Q. How long did you attend this Child before my Lady went away?

A. Half a Year.

Q. How long did you attend the Child before my Lord and Lady parted?

A. About two Years old the Child was when they parted; ſo that I attended him Half a Year before my Lady went away.

Q. Before this Child was put into your Care, where was it?

A. At the Wet-Nurſe.

Q. You ſay, that before this Child was put into your Care, it was put unto the Wet Nurſe?——A. Yes.

Q. Was it ever brought up by her to Dunmaine Houſe?

A. Yes, it was; ſometimes my Lady would go on fine Days and fetch it in the Coach with her, and the Nurſe would bring it other Times.

Q. Was Mrs. Heath in the Service then?—A. She was indeed.

Q. Pray how did my Lady behave to it?

A. My Lady was very fond of it.

Q. Who uſed to dreſs the Child?

A. Mrs. Heath dreſſed it; its Day Cloaths were kept in the Houſe, and the Child was dreſſed by her and my Lady; and the Night Cloaths were kept with the Nurſe.

Q. How did Mrs. Heath treat this Child? Was ſhe employed in any Sort about it?

A. Sometimes to dreſs him, and take him in her Arms that Way, very fond. I know that when there were Jellies made, or Jellies left, it was given to the Nurſe, and put into her Whey and Broths to drink.

Q. Was you at Dunmaine at the Time of the Separation?

A. I was there.

Q. Where was this Child then?——A. In the Houſe.

Q. How did my Lady behave to the Child at parting?

A. She deſired very hard to take the Child with her, and my Lord would not let her have him.

Q. Pray, was there any thing happened particular to the Child at the Time of the parting?

A. My Lady deſired very hard to have the Child; ſhe ſent down for Mr. Taylor to come up and hand her down Stairs; ſo, when he came up, I hope, ſays ſhe, you had not a Hand in this wicked Plot contrived for me. He ſaid, No, he had not. Says ſhe, If you are ſo good as to prevail on my Lord to let me have the Child, I do not care if I never ſet my Foot in Dunmaine again.

Q. What happened upon that?——A. I know that ſhe ſaid ſo, for I ſtood at the Stair-head when Mr. Taylor handed her down Stairs.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Spring.] Where was you hired into the Service of Lord and Lady Altham?——A. My Lady hired me.

Q. Where?——A. In her own Houſe.

Q. Are you ſure my Lady hired you?

A. She did indeed, ſhe did not know me, and ſhe ſent to a Gentlewoman to get a Character of me, and ſhe ſaid ſhe would give her Word for a Character for me.

Q. Who was that Gentlewoman?

A. It was Mrs. Synnot, ſhe ſent her Footman to her.

Q. You ſay my Lady was at Dunmaine at that Time?—A. She was.

Q. Upon your Oath, did ſhe continue the whole Month of Auguſt at Home?——A. I cannot tell whether ſhe did or not.

Q. Was ſhe, or was ſhe not at Home the Month of Auguſt?

A. I cannot tell whether ſhe was at home or not.

Q. Did ſhe lye a Week abroad at any Time in Auguſt?

A. I cannot recollect.

Q. Was ſhe a Fortnight abroad in Auguſt?—A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was ſhe the whole Month of Auguſt abroad?

A. I cannot diſcharge my Memory.

Q. Was ſhe the whole Month of September?——A. I cannot diſcharge my Memory when ſhe was at home or abroad.

Q. Was ſhe the Month of October?—A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was ſhe in November?—A. I cannot tell.

Q. Or December?—A. I cannot tell.

Q. Was ſhe the Month of January?

A. I thought I did not come here to ſcold.

Q. Was ſhe abſent for three Months together?

A. I cannot tell but ſhe did go away for three Months.

Q. You ſay that my Lady uſed to go in a Coach to viſit this Child?

A. She did.

Q. Did not you ſay that the Child was brought every Day to the Houſe by the Nurſe?—A. Sometimes the Nurſe came up with him, and ſometimes my Lady went to the Nurſe's to ſee him.

Q. Did not this continue every Day during the whole Time that the Child was at Nurſe?

A. Sometimes, I do not ſay every Day; but ſometimes my Lady would go there, and ſometimes the Nurſe would bring him to the Houſe.

Q. To what Place did you go after you left that Service?

A. I went to Cheek-Point.

Q. Do you know Mr. William Bolton?——A. I do.

Q. Is he an honeſt Man?—A. I believe he is.

Q. Do you know Maynard Walker?——A. Yes.

Q. Is he an honeſt Man?——A. He has a very indifferent Character, and all the Family; I know they helped to ruin me.

Q. Do you know William Elms?——A. I do.

Q. What Character has he?——A. I ſee nothing by the Man.

Q. What Character did you give him when you were examined in the Exchequer?——A. What Character did he give me?

Q. Did not you ſwear then that he was an honeſt Man?

A. I do not ſay to the contrary now, do I?

Q. Did not you then ſay, that you could make him blacker than he could you?——A. I do not know but I did.

Q. You ſay, you ſaw the Child in the Coach with my Lady when ſhe was going away?——A. I did, and ſhe kiſſed the Child in the Carriage, and the Child was taken away from her.

Q. What Time of the Day was that?—A. It was after Dinner-time, between that and Evening; towards the Evening.

Q. Repeat that again.——A. It was towards the Evening.

Q. Who uſed to viſit at Dunmaine when you lived there?

A. I cannot tell the Company exactly.
Q. Did Mrs. Giffard visit my Lady?---A. She did sometimes.
Q. Did my Lady visit her?
A. My Lady visited her sometimes, I cannot tell exactly how often.
Q. Did you know Mr. Palliser at that House?---A. I did.
Q. How long did he use to stay there at a Time?
A. I cannot tell how long.
Q. Did he see the Child?---A. He did see it.
Q. Did he know whose Child it was?
A. He knew the Child was my Lord and Lady's.
Q. Had he ever the Child in his Arms?
A. I cannot swear he had the Child in his Arms.
Court.] Do you know Edmond Howlett?---A. I do.
Q. Did my Lady go away in a Coach or Chariot?
A. To the best of my Knowledge it was a four-wheeled Chair.
Q. Was any Body with her?---A. Yes, Mrs. Heath.
Q. Was there any Body else with her?
A. Nobody else that I know of.
Q. Was the Child in the Chair?---A. I seen the Child was taken to her, and she kissed the Child when it was taken from her.
Q. Did she desire to have the Child brought to her?
A. She desired the Child to be handed to her, and then she kissed it.
Q. How many Horses were there to the Chair?
A. To the best of my Knowledge there were two.
Q. Was the Chaise open before or at the Top?
A. Upon my Word I cannot give my Word for that.
Q. Was it an open Chair, or a Chariot?
A. I cannot give my Word for it, what Carriage it was.
Q. Was it before or after Dinner my Lady went away?
A. It was after Dinner, Sir.
Mr. Spring.] Was you ever in the House the Child was nursed in?
A. I was.
Q. Was the Wall a Mud or Stone Wall?---A. Stone and Mud, Mortar wall, Stone and Mortar mixed, Stone in the lower Part.
Q. Do you know Sarah Weedon?---A. I did.
Q. What did you tell Mr. Bolton concerning my Lady's having or not having a Child?---A. I never told him any Thing, for he never talked to me of the Subject at all.

Mr. Solicitor.] My Lord, I told you she should be the last Witness upon the direct Examination; we reserve a Power to reply to any new Points, if necessary.

Court.] You shall, to any new Facts.

Here the Evidence of the Prosecutor was closed.

Court.] How many Witnesses have you, Gentlemen of Counsel for the Traverser? Have you any Objection on either Side to the Jury having some Refreshment?

Counsel.] We have no Objection.

Jury.] My Lord, we chuse to go on, and will not have any Refreshment at all; but desire Mr. Recorder will consider how long we have been in the Box, and that he will shorten the Trial as much as is consistent with the Benefit of his Client.

Mr. Recorder.] My Lord, it is with the utmost Concern that I am to lay any Thing before the Jury at so late an Hour, but as this is a Matter of great Consequence, I am sure they will hear me with Patience, and I shall make it as short as possible in Ease of the Jury.

My Lord, there are two Points that now are in question; for though there are four or five Assignments of Perjury, yet they all end in two; one is, that Lady Altham was with Child while the Traverser, Mrs Heath, lived with her; and the other, that she was brought-to-bed of a Son.

My Lord, it appears from the Evidence of the Prosecutor, that my Lady Altham came first into this Kingdom in the Month of October 1713, and the Fact is so, and that she never was in this Kingdom before. This will be material when I come to speak to the Evidence, and remark upon the Particulars of it. It appears from the Evidence, that my Lady came to the House of Mr. Briscoe in this Town; there she stayed till some Time in December, that my Lord Altham came to Town and was reconciled to her, and though they have endeavoured to prove that they left Briscoe's, and went into Lodgings before they went down to Dunmaine, we shall prove that my Lord Altham remained at Captain Briscoe's with my Lady, and never went to Mrs. Vice's, the Place they pretend he removed to, till he went to Dunmaine in the County of Wexford. We shall prove that they remained there, and went from the House of Briscoe to Dunmaine. My Lord, we shall prove, though they swear that they stayed but three or four Days at Briscoe's after my Lord came, for so Alice Betts and the other Witnesses have sworn, that they stayed at Briscoe's during their Continuance in Dublin; and that my Lady, when she lodged at Mr. Briscoe's, hired Mrs. Seturight, the House-keeper, though those Persons could not remember her Name. We shall prove that Mary Waters was hired for the Chamber-maid, and Betty Doyle for Laundry-maid, and that my Lady sent these Servants down from Briscoe's to Dunmaine before her, two Days before my Lord and Lady set out; and these People will prove that two Days before they set out, my Lord and Lady lodged at Briscoe's, and that these Servants set out from thence to Dunmaine. We shall prove when they came to Dunmaine what Servants were there, for it will be material to the Jury to know who they were, because we shall not give Evidence of roving, straggling People. We shall prove by a concurrent Testimony of all the Servants of the Family, that my Lady never was with Child at Dunmaine, or any where else in Ireland. We shall prove, that in the Months of September, October and November 1714, when it is sworn she was in this Town sick, and visited by a Physician, that she was then in the County of Wexford. We shall prove that one Mrs. Giffard, a near Neighbour and Acquaintance of Lady Altham's, had Twins, and that my Lady was at the Groaning, and so far from being with Child, that she lamented her not having the Prospect of a Child; and we shall prove that my Lady, at the Time that these Witnesses for the Prosecutor swear that she was at Dunmaine, and near lying-in, and lay the Time in April or May 1715, we shall prove by a Cloud of Witnesses, that she went to the Spring Assizes of Wexford that Year, was at the Assizes, and at the Trial of one Masterson and Walsh for enlisting Pretender's Men. We shall prove by several Witnesses of undoubted Credit, and by the Person where she lodged, that she was there all the Time of the Assizes, and was there the 18th Day of April, and at the Trial of these People, when Higginson swore that she was at home and big with Child; and it will appear to your Lordship, that she was so far from being with Child, that she did not return to her own House till the twenty-second of April. We shall then prove, that after that she came to Dublin; that she came here in May following, which, if what they swear be true, could not be; for they say she lay-in then, and that it was above three Weeks before she got out of her Chamber. We shall prove that she was in Dublin the King's Birth-day, when the Fire-works were made on that Occasion, which was on the twenty-eighth of May. My Lord, one would imagine that when we shall have given you the concurrent Testimony of all the Servants of the Family, and other undoubted Witnesses touching these Facts, we should have little Occasion for further Proof; but we shall go to Facts that will overturn their Witnesses, and shew that all this is a made, contrived Affair. My Lord, they pretend that this Child was christened, and that Mrs. Pigot and Counsellor Cliff and Mr. Colclough were Godfathers and Godmother; they swear that they were all present at this Christening. These are Circumstances we shall shew to be false; and if we can prove that Mrs. Pigot was not in the County of Wexford from November in the Year 1714, till after the Separation in the Year 1716, all this Contrivance must fall to the Ground. My Lord, we shall prove it incontestably; we shall prove that Mrs. Piget came to Dublin from the County of Wexford in November 1714, that she was in Dublin in the Year 1715, that her Husband broke his Leg, and happened to lye ill in the County of Tipperary, and that she went to him and continued there, and never returned to the County of Wexford from November 1714, till some Time in the Year 1717, which was after the Separation; and we shall prove what will fix this, that the great Eclipse was the twenty-second of April 1715. Now, they lay that this Christening was in May or June that Year; for they say Lady Altham was brought-to-bed in May, so that Mrs. Pigot must have been in the County of Wexford, if at all at the Christening, in May or June. Now, my Lord, we'll prove that at the Time of the Eclipse, Mrs. Pigot was with her Husband, and was actually in the County of Tipperary the twenty-second of April 1715, and continued there many Months after. When we have proved this, we shall prove that Mr. Cliff was not in the County of Wexford in May or June 1715, the Time of his being sworn to be Godfather to this Child; we shall prove he was in Dublin during the Term, and continued sick here after, till the Middle of June. We shall prove, that at the Time of Mr. Colclough's being said to be Godfather, there was a particular Quarrel between him and my Lord Altham; besides that, Mr. Colclough was a Papist at that Time, and died one; and then you'll judge whether they would have chosen a Papist Godfather to a Child born to inherit so great an Estate and such Honours. When we have proved this, we apprehend that this concurrent Testimony of all the Servants of the Family of my Lady's having never been with Child, and the Proof of her being at Wexford at the Assizes, and after in Dublin, and other Circumstances, will convince any reasonable Man that this is all a Fiction. I could open many other Circumstances, but rather chuse to spare the Time, and let the Jury hear the Witnesses.

Mr. Smith.] My Lord, the first Witness we produce is Mrs. Vice; you have heard of one Vice in Essex-street, to whose House Lady Altham was supposed to go to lodge the first Time she was in Dublin, after my Lord and she were reconciled at Mr. Briscoe's: We have the Daughter of that Lady, and she'll give your Lordship a true Account of that Transaction, and the true Periods of Time concerning their lodging there.

The Examination of the Traverser's Witnesses began at a Quarter before Nine o'Clock at Night.

1. Mrs. LETITIA VICE.

Mr. Daly.] Mrs. Vice, I'd ask you a Question, Madam: Pray, do you remember when the late Lady Altham came first into this Kingdom?

Mrs. Vice.] I do remember her. Not when she landed; but I remember her being in the Kingdom.

Q. The first Time that you remember her being in the Kingdom, where did she lodge?—A. I heard she lodged at Capt. Briscoe's.

Mr. Serj. Tisdall.] I am to inform you, you are not to tell what you heard.

Mr. Daly.] Pray, Madam, where did you first see her?
A. I first saw her in my Mother's House in Essex-street.
Q. Pray, can you recollect the first Time that she came to lodge at your Mother's?—A. Indeed, Sir, I can't.
Q. Is it from the Country she came, or from England?
A. From the Country, I believe.
Q. Pray, Madam, what Time was it?—A. Indeed, Sir, I can't tell.
Q. Do you remember any thing of her living at Briscoe's?
A. Yes, I heard she lived there.
Q. Do you remember the Time, Madam, when she lodged there?
A. I only heard she lodged there; I never was to see her there.
Q. Do you know Mrs. Cole?---A. No, Sir.
Q. Do you remember whether my Lady came from the Country to your Mother's?---A. I believe from the Country.
Q. What Reason have you to believe so?
A. I have Reason to believe so.
Q. Why? Did you observe what People came with her?
A. I did not, Sir, I was then very young.
Q. Do you remember the Fire-works that were at the Birth-Day of King George the First; and were my Lord and Lady at your Mother's House then?---A. I remember them being at my Mother's House one Birth-day of King George the First.
Q. How often were they at your Mother's?
A. They were there twice, and I believe once was before the Birth-day; they were there at the Death of the Queen.
Q. Was that the first Time of their being there?
A. I cannot tell whether that was the first Time.
Q. Were they ever there lodging but twice?
A. But twice, to the best of my Knowledge.
Q. Was your Father living then?---A. My Father was dead.
Q. Will you please, Madam, to give a particular Account of the Times they were there?
A. I can't give a particular Account, but that they were there when the Queen died, and one Birth-day of King George the First.
Q. What Day of the Week was that Birth-day?

A. It was on a Saturday.

Q. Why do you remember it to be on a Saturday?

A. I remember the Reſtauration was on Sunday, and my Lady had a mind to have a Bonfire made before the Door, and my Mother was not willing there ſhould be one, and there was ſome Diſpute on that; and that makes me remember the Day of the Week.

Q. Do you recollect, Madam, whether there were any Fireworks that Birth-day?—A. I believe there was, Sir.

Q. Did you ſee any body at thoſe Fireworks looking at them?

A. We were pretty near the Cuſtom-houſe, and I believe I might ſee ſome of them there; but was not with my Lady to ſee them.

Q. But you ſay the firſt Time my Lord and Lady lodged at your Mother's, they came from the Country?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge they did.

Q. Pray, Madam, when firſt my Lady came from England, did they come to viſit at your Houſe or not?

A. My Lady dined with my Lord there; but I don't believe ſhe came to lodge till after ſhe came from the Country.

Mr. Morton.] There was a Direction of your Lordſhip's, that the Witneſſes ſhould be kept together till called for; but I am to inform your Lordſhip here are two of the Witneſſes walking about the Court.

Mr. Annesley.] I beg, my Lord, I may explain this Matter to your Lordſhip; I've been with them for theſe three Hours, and Mr. Hervey did not leave the Place till it was ſaid he was ſent for by the Court.

Mr. Daly.] My Lord, the Witneſs ſays, ſhe remembers, that when it was ſaid that my Lady came from England, that my Lord and ſhe came to dine with her Mother.

Q. Where did they lodge at that Time?

A. I heard they lodged at Capt. Briſcoe's.

Q. Did they lodge at your Houſe then?

A. Not when they came to dine there.

Q. Did my Lady ever lodge there before?---A. No.

Q. You remember thoſe Fireworks that were at the Time they lodged at your Mother's Houſe; how long did they continue in Town after?

A. I can't tell.

Q. Well, Madam, the laſt Time, which is the ſecond Time that they came to your Mother's, how long did they continue there?

A. I can't be exact to the Time; they were there a good while, but I can't tell how long, Sir.

Q. What Time of the Year was it?

A. I can't recollect the Time of the Year.

Q. What Time of the Year were they there the ſecond Time?

A. They were there the eight and nine-and-twentieth of May; but how long before that I can't tell.

Q. What Reaſon have you to be exact as to thoſe Days?

A. Why, the firſt being the Birth-day, Sir, and the Fire-works being at that Time, and my Lady's Deſire of having a Bonfire on Sunday Night, which was the Reſtauration.

Q. How long did they continue in Town after?

A. I can't be exact how long they continued in Town.

Q. Do you remember any thing of Twelfth-Night?

A. I do remember my Lady was there one Twelfth-Night, but what Year I cannot tell; and I remember there was a Twelfth-Cake.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] You ſay, you are ſure that Lady Altham was at your Houſe at the Death of the late Queen Anne?---A. I am, Sir.

Q. Pray, do you remember the 20th of October following that?

A. No, Sir, I don't.

Q. Do you remember any thing remarkable that happened that Day?

A. I don't.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] I tell you then, that was the Coronation of King George the Firſt.

A. I aſk you now, were there not the Fire-works on that Day in Dublin?---A. I don't know indeed.

Q. Do you remember any thing particular of the 20th of October?

A. I do not, Sir.

Q. Can you take upon you to ſay, that Lord and Lady Altham were not in Dublin in October 1714?

A. I can't take upon me to ſay whether they were or not.

Q. Can you, that they were not in November 1714?---A. I can't, Sir.

Q. You mentioned a Twelfth-Day; now I aſk you, can you ſay they were not here on the Twelfth-Day in 1714?

A. I can't ſay that; but my Lady was one Twelfth-day at my Mother's.

Q. Can you ſay it was not that Year?

A. I can't ſay whether it was or not.

Q. Pray, can you ſay, ſince the only Reaſon you give was, that there were Fireworks, that it was not the Fireworks on the Twentieth of October 1714?

A. I ſay it was not that Day that I remark; it was the Twenty-eighth of May, Saturday, and the Sunday was the Reſtauration.

Q. Can you ſay that that was not the twenty-eighth of May 1716?

A. Indeed I can't take it upon me to fix the Year; but believe that it was the Year 1715, and my Reaſon for it was, that it was Saturday.

Q. I aſk you, Madam, can you ſay that it was not May 1716?

A. I do not believe it was May 1716; I ſay it was on a Saturday, whatever was the Year it was in; whether it was the Year 1715, or 1716, it was on a Saturday, and that was the Year.

Court.] Saturday was the Day in 1715 by the Almanack.

Mr. Serjeant Marſhall.] Do you know one Catharine MacCormack?

A. I do, ſhe was my Mother's Servant.

Q. Was ſhe a Servant in the Family at the Time Lady Altham lodged there?---A. She was.

Q. Do you remember that there was any Diſturbance or Quarrel between Lord and Lady Altham, while at your Houſe?

A. I do not remember any Particulars of that Sort at all; I was too young to make Obſervations of that Kind.

Mr. Harward.] You muſt have been very young indeed at that Time, Madam!——A. Not ſo young, perhaps, as you may imagine, Sir.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] Pray, give me leave to aſk you how old you were then?---A. I am now three-and-forty, Sir.

Q. Did you never hear of my Lord's ſending for Mrs. Lucas the Midwife?---A. I never did.

Q. Was ſhe a noted Midwife at that Time?---A. I believe ſo, Sir.

Q. She lived near you, Madam?---A. She did ſo.

Q. Was my Lady at any Time confined at your Houſe?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did Doctor Jemmat ever viſit her?---A. I do not know but he might.

Q. And you do not know but my Lady was here in October, November, December and January 1714?---A. I do not know.

Q. What Cloaths did my Lord and Lady wear when they came to your Houſe firſt?

A. Indeed, Sir, I cannot tell. You could not tell, I ſuppoſe, what Cloaths I have on now at ſuch a Diſtance of Time.

Q. What Cloaths did they wear generally?

A. I do not know; I know my Lady was in Town in the Queen's Mourning. I have ſeen her too in Colours, in a yellow and ſilver Silk, a blue and a white Damaſk.

Q. What was your Reaſon for fixing the Birth-day to Saturday?

A. My Reaſon was, becauſe my Lady would have a Bonfire on Sunday, and my Mother was not willing there ſhould be one, and there was a Diſpute about it.

Q. What was the Objection your Mother had to the making it?

A. It was, that as ſhe was a Widow, ſhe thought ſuch a Thing as a Bonfire was not agreeable to her, and that was the Reaſon.

Q. What Day did the King's Birth-day happen on in the Year 1720?

A. I do not know; but my Lady could not be at our Houſe in the Year 1720, becauſe my Mother had left the Houſe.

Court.] The Witneſs ſaid that the Birth-day that Lady Altham was at her Mother's Houſe was on a Saturday, and whatever Year that happened on, that was the Year. And that was the Year 1715, by the Almanack.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] You mentioned a Twelfth-cake, I think?

A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Was that the firſt or ſecond Time Lord and Lady Altham were at your Mother's?

A. I cannot be particular whether firſt or ſecond.

Q. Pray, Madam, how long is it ſince you firſt recollected that this Birth-day was on a Saturday?

A. Since I was aſked whether my Lady was in Town on a Birth-day.

Q. How long is it ſince you looked into an Almanack about this?

A. I never looked into an Almanack 'till after I had told that it was on a Saturday, and the Reſtauration on Sunday, but never till then.

Q. Were not you in Town when the laſt Trial was in the Exchequer?

A. I was, Sir.

Q. Were not you then applied to?——A. I was applied to.

Q. And did you come?——A. I did not come.

Q. How ſo?

A. Becauſe I could not recollect any particular Paſſages at that Time.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] Why then it was not till after the Trial that you were ſet right.

Mr. Daly.] Who applied to you to appear at the Exchequer?

A. There came a Gentleman from Capt. Annesley to know if I knew any thing of this Affair. I ſent word I did not, and if there had not been a particular Queſtion aſked me about the Fireworks, I ſhould not have recollected.

Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] Who aſked that particular Queſtion about the Fireworks?---A. I cannot tell who it was.

Q. From whom were you aſked that Queſtion?

A. It was from Mr. Annesley's Family. Mr. MacKercher and Annesley before that came to me to know what I knew of my Lady's lodging at my Mother's; and I told them I knew nothing particular about it.

Q. Who aſked you the particular Queſtion about the Fireworks?

A. It was Capt. Annesley's and Lord Angleſea's Friends.

Q. Was this at the Time of the Trial?

A. I do not know when the Trial was.

Q. I tell you then, it began the 11th of November 1743, and laſted for twelve Days; did they aſk that Queſtion during that Time?

A. They only applied to me in general, to know if I knew any thing of the Time of my Lady Altham's lodging at my Mother's, and I told them I could not recollect.

Q. Did they at that Time put this particular Queſtion about the Fireworks?——A. They did not.

Q. Did they any Time before the Trial was over?

A. No, they did not. Mr. MacKercher came to me when he came over firſt, to inquire about my Lady's lodging at my Mother's. I told him I recollected nothing particular about it, and had nothing to ſay that could ſerve him.

Q. When was it that that Queſtion was put to you?

A. I cannot remember the Day.

Q. Recollect when that Queſtion was put to you, was it before the Trial at Wexford?——A. It was.

Q. Who was the Perſon that put the Queſtion to you?

A. I forget by whom, I was ſent to by Lord Angleſea's Friends; I do not know whether Mr. Colles did or not, but he was with me.

2. Mary Setwright.

Mr. Richard Malone.] Were you at any Time, and when, acquainted with Lord and Lady Altham?

Mary Setwright.] I was, Sir.

Q. When were you firſt acquainted with them?

A. When I was hired to them.

Q. When were you firſt acquainted?

A. Four Days before I was hired.

Q. When were you hired?

A. About five or ſix Days before Chriſtmas-day.

Q. In what Year?——A. The Year I cannot tell well.

Q. Where did Lady Altham lodge then?

A. At Captain Briſcoe's in Bride-Street.

Q. Do you know how long ſhe had been in Ireland, before you was hired?---A. Not long.

Q. You have ſaid that you were hired at Capt. Briſcoe's?--A. Yes, Sir.

Mr.

Mr. Le Hunte.] How ſoon did you go from Dublin after you were hired?
A. In four Days.
Mr. Malone.] Pray, after you were hired, did you leave Town, and when?
A. Four Days after.
Q. Where did you go?
A. To Dunmaine, to my Lord's Country-houſe.
Q. What time did you get there?---A. The Day before Chriſtmas-Eve.
Q. Were there any other Perſons that went with you?
A. Two Servants, the Chamber-maid and Laundry-maid.
Q. Who was the Chamber-maid?
A. The Chamber-maid was Mary Waters.
Q. And who was the other Woman?---A. Elizabeth Doyle.

Q. Now, I would aſk you, where did they lodge when you left Town?
A. At Captain Briſcoe's.
Q. In what Station were you hired?---A. Houſe-keeper.
Q. How long did you live with my Lady?
A. A Year and a Quarter, or thereabouts.
Q. What time did you leave her?---A. In February.
Q. What Year?
A. Indeed I do not know the Year; but the Eclipſe was the Year following.
Q. Do you remember, during the time you lived there, to have ſeen Mrs. Briſcoe or her Daughter there?
A. I did, Sir.
Q. Can you recollect how ſoon after my Lord and Lady went to Dunmaine, it was that they were there?
A. It was very ſoon, but I cannot tell how long.
Q. Now, I aſk you whether my Lady miſcarried, or kept her Room for any, and what Time?
A. Never to my Knowledge.
Q. Did you ever hear it?---A. No, indeed.
Q. Could ſhe have miſcarried at Dunmaine during the Time Mrs. Briſcoe and her Daughter were there, or kept her Room, without your knowing of it?
Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] I muſt ſtop Mr. Malone a little, becauſe it is a direct leading Queſtion.
Court.] Was my Lady ſick, or confined for any Time while they were in the Houſe?
A. No, not to my Knowledge, my Lord.
Mr. Malone.] You ſay that you were Houſekeeper?——A. Yes.
Q. What Things were under your Care, as Houſe-keeper?
A. I kept the Sugars, the Spices, and Bread, and all thoſe Things, every thing but only Liquor.
Q. Was you at any time, while Mrs. Briſcoe and her Daughter were there, called to for any thing under your Care for any Perſon that was ſick?
A. No, not that I know of.
Court.] Did you ſee my Lady every Day at that time?
A. Every Day in the Week, my Lord, to know her Commands.
Q. Was it poſſible that ſhe could miſcarry, and you not know of it?
Mr. Serj. Marſhall.] That, my Lord, muſt depend upon the Credit of Witneſſes, for a Gentlewoman of good Credit has ſworn ſhe did.
Jury.] Do you believe that my Lady was with Child at that time?
A. I believe not.
Mr. Malone.] Did Mrs. Briſcoe and her Daughter remain at Dunmaine for any and what time after my Lord and Lady got there?
A. Yes.
Q. How long?---A. I cannot exactly tell how long they ſtaid there.
Q. How long might it be?—A. I cannot ſay particularly.
Q. Pray, do you recollect what time they left Dunmaine, what time of the Year?---A. It was in Summer.
Q. Was it the Summer after my Lord and Lady went to Dunmaine?
A. Yes, it was.

Q. By whoſe Directions did you make that?
A. By my Lord's and Lady's Directions.
Q. When was it that they returned to Dunmaine?
A. It was in the Summer, it was a great while before Chriſtmas.
Q. Did you at any Time and when ſee them in this Town?
A. I did after I left them.
Q. When did you leave them?---A. I left them in February.
Q. Upon what Occaſion did you ſee them in this Town, and where, and I would know whether you were called to them for any and what Purpoſe?
A. They ſent the running Footman for me, for to prepare an Entertainment they made for Company.
Q. Where did they lodge then?
A. They lodged at Mrs. Vice's in Dirty-Lane.
Q. What was it they ſent to you for?
A. They ſent to me to ſerve the Entertainment, to manage it and ſee it properly done.

Q. Do you remember at what Time it was?
A. It was Chriſtmas, the Twelfth-day.
Court.] You lived a Year and Quarter and then left them; and ſaw them in Dublin after; how ſoon after was it?
A. It was about two Years after I left them that I ſaw them in Dublin; it was upon a Twelfth-day.
Mr. Malone.] As you were there that Night; do you recollect any of the Perſons in Company?
A. Mr. Colclough was one of the Company.
Q. What Colclough?—A. Mr. Cæſar Colclough.

Q. Were Mrs. Briſcoe and her Daughter there when you lay-in?
A. They were.
Q. Might not my Lady have miſcarried when you were laid up with your Child?----A. I never heard any Thing of it.
Q. Pray, did you ſee her every Day?---A. Every Day, but when I lay-in.
Q. You ſaid you ſaw her every Day, and therefore ſhe could not miſcarry unknown to you?---A. I was but a Fortnight in all lying-in.
Q. Is it uſual for Women to go out in that Time?---A. I did.
Q. Where was you brought-to-bed?---A. At the Dairy-houſe.
Q. How far diſtant was that from Dunmaine Houſe?
A. About a Field from the Houſe.
Q. Was my Lady confined to her Chamber at any Time while you lived with her?---A. She was not that I know of.
Q. Might ſhe not unknown to you?
A. I ſhould have heard of it, if ſhe had.
Q. Can you ſay, upon your Oath, ſhe did not miſcarry?
A. She did not to my Knowledge.
Q. Could ſhe not unknown to you?
A. I cannot ſay ſhe did to my Knowledge.
Q. Could not ſhe unknown to you, when you were out of the Houſe?
A. I believe not, my Lady came to ſee me when I was lying-in.
Q. Who kept the Keys when you were lying-in?--A. Mrs. Heath.
Q. Did you come to Town when my Lady came to Town, after ſhe was at Dunmaine?---A. I did not come to Town till I left them.
Q. When did my Lady come to Town, after you went down?
A. I cannot exactly tell how long after.
Q. When was it that ſhe came to Town? Recollect yourſelf.
A. I cannot tell the particular Time.
Q. Did ſhe come the February following?

A. It

A. It was in the Summer following.
Q. What time in the Summer?--A. I proteſt, I forget what Month it was.
Q. Was it in July?---A. No, it was not.
Q. Was it in Auguſt?--A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, it was Auguſt.
Q. How long did ſhe ſtay before ſhe returned?
A. Two Months, or thereabouts.
Q. Did ſhe go to Dublin after ſhe returned?
A. She returned in two Months.
Q. Did you live with her when ſhe returned again?---A. I did.
Q. In what time did ſhe return?--A. In about two Months ſhe returned.
Q. How long did you live with her after?---A. Not long.
Q. How long?---A. I left her in the February following.
Q. Now recollect and tell the particular time that ſhe returned to Dunmaine.--A. I cannot tell the Month; ſhe ſtaid about two Months away.
Q. Was ſhe in Dunmaine when you left her?---A. She was.
Q. When was that?---A. The February after ſhe returned.
Q. How came ſhe to diſcharge you?
A. Something that my Lord ſaid that I took ill made me leave it.
Q. What Reaſon have you to remember that my Lady returned in Two Months?--A. It was Summer-time when ſhe went and when ſhe came back.
Q. Now I aſk you a plain Queſtion, was not Lady Altham in this Town in November and December 1714?---A. Indeed I do not know.
Q. But you muſt anſwer that Queſtion; was ſhe in this Town the Months of November and December, before you left her?
A. She was in Dublin in the Summer.
Q. Was ſhe, or was ſhe not, here in November and December?
A. I cannot recollect.
Q. Can you ſay that when ſhe went to Town in Summer that ſhe returned in two Months to Dunmaine?---A. I cannot be poſitive ſhe did.

A. I believe they were, I cannot remember.
Court.] Was my Lady Altham at Dunmaine the November and December before you left her?---A. Yes, ſhe was, my Lord.
Mr. Walſh.] Do you know Mr. Neſbit, a Clergyman?---A. No.
Q. Do not you know Mr. Neſbit of St. Catharine's Pariſh?
A. I have ſeen him.
Q. Had you any Diſcourſe with him lately about this Matter?
A. Not lately.
Q. Had you ever any?---A. I had ſome.
Q. What was that Diſcourſe? Had you any in relation to Mr. Anneſley's being my Lady's Son or not?
A. He aſked me if I knew of her having a Child, and I told him that I never did, nor never heard ſhe had.
Q. Did not you tell Mr. Neſbit, that if Mrs. Heath ſwore that my Lady never had a Child, ſhe was a damn'd Bitch?---A. No, I never did.
Court.] Is that your Indictment that my Lady never had a Child? Your Indictment is, that ſhe never had a Child while Mrs. Heath lived with her.
Jury.] I think you ſaid you made ſome Preparations for Chriſtmas at Dunmaine?---A. I made Brawn in it.
Q. When did you make it?---A. The Chriſtmas I went down.
Q. When was it my Lord and Lady came to Dunmaine?
A. They came the very Day before Chriſtmas-day.
Q. And how then could you make the Brawn againſt Chriſtmas?
A. I made it that Year, but not the Day after I went down.
Q. Was it the Chriſtmas you went there that you made it?
A. It was that Chriſtmas.
Q. Who gave you Orders for making it?---A. My Lord did.
Q. Where was he when he gave you thoſe Directions?
A. He was at home at Dunmaine.
Q. Was my Lady there then?---A. She was.
Mr. Walſh.] Do you remember any Sawcers with ſmutty Figures on them?
A. I did not.
Q. Did you ever hear that any of them were broke by Lord Altham?
A. I never did; I never did hear of any ſuch at all.

3. Revd. Mr. William Hervey.

Mr. Edward Malone.] He is an antient Man, my Lord, and cannot ſtay any longer, which makes us produce him now, though out of time, and we are now going to ſhew that my Lady Altham was at the Aſſizes of Wexford in April 1715; we examine him out of time, becauſe he is falling ſick.
Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] My Lord, I muſt complain to your Lordſhip of his being in Court this ſome time, and not having been kept with the other Witneſſes.
Mr. Malone.] Call Mr. Thomas Bourk to ſhew when the Wexford Aſſizes were. I believe the Gentlemen will admit it for ſhortneſs Sake, that they were on the 16th of April 1715.
Court.] Do you admit that, Gentlemen?
Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] I proteſt I do not know what to ſay to it.

Mr. Thomas Bourk.

Mr. Malone.] What have you got in your Hand?
A. A Record; a Copy of an Eſtreat.
Q. Where did you get it? From what Office?
A. From Mr. Morryſon's Office.

Clerk of the Crown reads the Record, as follows, viz.

Mr. Spring.] We produce a Clergyman of the County of Wexford, a Man of as good Character as any in it, to ſhew that my Lady Altham was at that Aſſizes.
Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] I deſire, Sir, you will pleaſe to give an Account, whether you were not in Court the whole time that the other Witneſſes were examined, or were not informed of what paſſed here.
Mr. Hervey.] I was called about an Hour and half ago, and told that the Court wanted me; when I found they did not, I went into the Court of Chancery, and ſtaid there 'till I found the firſt Witneſs coming; afterwards I ſtood by the Clock, and I believe you will think it is impoſſible to hear there any thing that paſſed here; and not one Word was I informed of what was ſaid.
Mr. Malone.] Do you remember the time the Pretender's Men were tried at the Aſſizes of Wexford?
Mr. Hervey.] I remember when Mr. Walſh and Maſterſon were tried for enliſting Men for foreign Service.
Q. Were you at that Aſſizes?---A. I was there and heard the Trial.
Q. Pray, Sir, can you fix the Year when they were tried?
A. They were tried in Lent Aſſizes 1715.
Q. Was it Spring Aſſizes?
A. It was Lent Aſſizes; but I believe it happened in Eaſter that Year.
Q. Were you in Court at the Trial of Walſh and Maſterſon?
A. I was in Court.
Q. Who were the Judges?
A. My Lord Chief Juſtice Forſter, my particular Patron and Friend; his Brother was my Tutor when I was in the College.
Q. Who was the other Judge?
A. I do not remember any other Judge, but I know he was there.
Q. Was you in Court at the Trial?---A. I was.
Q. Then I aſk you, Sir, whether or no you ſaw my Lord Altham at that time in Town?
A. I did; I ſaw him at his Lodgings and at the Court-houſe, and had Diſcourſe with him in both Places, and never ſaw him before or ſince.
Q. In what Cloaths was he dreſſed then?
A. To the beſt of my Remembrance, he was in Black.
Q. Were there any Ladies in Court at that Aſſizes?
A. There were ſeveral Ladies in Court.
Q. Were they of any Faſhion or Rank in the Country there?
A. I ſaw a Lady of very good Appearance, though of homely Features, and I aſked who ſhe was, and I was told———
Mr. Serjeant Marſhall.] You are not to ſay any thing you were told, you muſt declare nothing but what you know yourſelf.
Mr. Hervey.] They ſaid it was Lady Altham.
Mr. Malone.] Did you know that Lady you ſaw to be Lady Altham?
A. I am morally aſſured it was her.
Q. Did you ever ſee her after?—A. I never ſaw her afterwards.
Q. You ſaw other Ladies there as well as this Lady?---A. I did.
Q. Did you know them?
A. I took notice of none but Mrs. Giffard, for ſhe was my Relation by Marriage; and I had another Reaſon why I took notice of her, which was, that I have often heard her blamed———
Q. Was Mrs. Giffard in company with that ſtrange Lady?--A. She was.
Q. Do you remember any Quarrel upon the account of beating a Man at the Aſſizes?
A. Yes, I remember it very well, and have Reaſon to remember it.
Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] My Lord, I do not ſee to what this Examination can tend.
Mr. Malone.] It is in order to fix the time particularly.
Court.] Go on, Sir.
Mr. Hervey.] I took a King's Evidence to Wexford, one Sinclare, he had gone to France with ſeveral others, and when he came home, he was afraid I would repreſent him to the Juſtice of Peace and have him proſecuted; to avoid which, he ſaid he would come in and make a Diſcovery if I would get him pardoned. I ſaid I would; and after I had him, I mounted him before my Portmanteau and took him to Wexford. While he was there ſome Servants of my Lord Altham fell upon him and beat him for being an Informer, and while they were beating him I catched them, and they had almoſt murdered him. I took them to Colonel Ram's Lodgings, and we went to my Lord Altham to his Lodgings, and ſhewed him the bloody Condition that this Fellow was in.
Q. How did you know where my Lord lodged?
A. I was informed that my Lord and Lady lodged at Mr. Sweeny's.
Q. Go on, Sir.
A. We went there to ſhew my Lord Altham the Treatment his Servants had given this Man, and my Lord ſaid he was aſhamed of their Behaviour, that they ſhould be puniſhed for it, and ſaid they ſhould come into Court.
Q. And did they come into Court?
A. There came but two into Court, the reſt made their Eſcape.
Q. Were they puniſhed for this Aſſault?
A. My Lord Chief Juſtice Forſter was very angry, but fined them only 5*l.*
Mr. Recorder.] My Lord, thus he aſcertains that Lord Altham lodged at Mr. Sweeny's.
Mr. Malone.] You ſay that you ſaw Mrs. Giffard in the Court-houſe, and that ſhe is your Relation?
A. Yes, her Brother and I took two Siſters in Marriage.
Q. Did ſhe ſit next to my Lady Altham that Day?

A. I

A. I do not know whether she was next to her, but she was very near her.

Q. Now I ask you, whether that Lady had any Signs of Pregnancy or not upon her?

A. I took particular Notice of her; she was, to the best of my Remembrance, dressed in Black, was a full-chested Woman, and had a fine, slender Waist.

Q. Did she appear to you as a Woman with Child?

A. She might be very young with Child, for aught I know; but there was no visible Appearance of her being with Child.

Mr. Harward.] This Evidence is founded upon a Supposition that the Lady he saw at Wexford was the Lady Altham; he says he was only told it was she, and cannot say it was of his own Knowledge.

Mr. Hervey.] I am pretty certain the Lady I saw was Lady Altham. I am told, Sir, that you are Counsellor Harward, am not I to believe you are? I am told that Gentleman is Counsellor Daly, I am morally assured of it, and I believe it.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Serj. Marshall.] Pray, Sir, did you see that Lady go into the Court-house, that you were so particular in your Observations about?

Mr. Hervey.] I cannot say I did; but I saw her in Court.

Q. Do you know Mr. Cæsar Coldclough?—A. Yes, I do very well.

Q. Did not he sit by that Lady a great Part of the Time?

A. I cannot charge my Memory; as I told you before, I took no notice of any but Mrs. Giffard.

Q. I ask you, Sir, whether Mr. Coldclough was there or not?

A. He might be there; and I cannot say whether he was or not.

Q. Who were the Persons tried?—A. Jack Walsh, and Mr. Masterson.

Q. They were tried that Day?——A. They were, Sir.

Q. Are you sure they were tried at that Assizes?

A. They were tried at that Assizes.

Q. You are positive they were tried at that Assizes?—A. I heard them both tried, and I believe at that Assizes; Walsh was tried first.

Q. Are you positive that they were both tried?

A. Indeed I have no Reason to doubt but they were; they were there, and appeared there at the Bar both of them.

Q. Were they convicted or acquitted?

A. Acquitted: Mr. Walsh made a very good Defence.

Q. Whereabouts were you in the Court?

A. I was very near the Judge.

Q. Did you or did you not see Mr. Coldclough there?

A. I cannot say I saw Mr. Coldclough.

Q. Did you see Colonel Loftus there?

A. I cannot say I saw Colonel Loftus.

Q. Do you recollect any Gentleman of the Country that you saw there?

A. Why, do you believe that I was not there?

Q. 'Tis no matter what I believe, but can you name any one Gentleman that was there?——A. Lawrence Esmond of Ballynastraw was there.

Q. And you remember that Mrs. Giffard was there very positively?

A. I do, Sir.

Q. Now, I ask you, was not Mr. Masterson tried the Summer Assizes?

A. Indeed I do not know, I know he was in the Dock then.

Q. Did not you say you were sure he was tried that Assizes?

A. I do not know whether he was tried then or no, but he was in the Dock.

Q. Did you see this Lady any where else but in the Court-house?

A. I saw her no where else but there, neither before nor since.

Q. Did she sit or stand during the Time you saw her?

A. I saw her both sitting and standing.

Q. Whereabouts?——A. Almost opposite the Sheriff's Box.

Q. Did you talk to Mrs. Giffard at that time?

A. I did not speak to either of them.

Q. Did you speak to her at that Assizes?

A. I do not remember I did; but if you please I'll give the Reason why I took notice of her more than another.

Q. Give your Reason.

A. She was a near Neighbour of Lord Altham, and was the most conversant there of any others of the Neighbourhood; and my Lady not bearing the fairest Character in the World, I heard Mrs. Giffard blamed for having such an Intimacy there; and therefore when I was told this Lady, that made a very good Figure by her Dress, was my Lady Altham, I took notice of Mrs. Giffard being in her Company; and whether Mrs. Giffard knew it or not I cannot tell, but I have heard her censured for being in it. And if they had lived within three Miles of me, as they did of her, I would not have had Converse with either of them.

Q. Was not there one Doyle, a Clergyman, tried at that Assizes?

A. I cannot tell whether he was tried or not, I saw him in the Dock; he was one I knew in the College.

Q. How came you to be seated so near the Judge?

A. I was near the Judge for two Reasons; for the sake of the Justices of the Peace and Grand Jury.

Q. Do you know Mr. Henry Bolton?——A. Yes, I do.

Q. Was he at that Assizes?—A. He might, but I do not remember.

Mr. MacManus.] I hope at this late Hour they will produce Witnesses to the Point.

Mr. Solicitor.] I desire, my Lord, to make one Observation; which is, that Mr. Hervey's Testimony will account for every thing that has been said concerning the bad Reputation of this Family.

Mr. Le Hunte.] My Lord, We shall now produce one Edmond Bourk, he was Postillion to my Lord Altham before my Lady came to Dunmaine. He will prove that he rode Postillion when the Chariot came to carry my Lord and Lady into the Country, and that they went from Captain Briscoe's, and not from Mrs. Vice's; he will prove that Mrs. Setwright, Elizabeth Doyle and Mary Waters were Servants in the Family, and that he continued in the Service 'till the Year 1716; that he drove my Lady in a Chariot in 1715 to the Spring Assizes of Wexford; that Mrs. Giffard went in the Chariot with her; that Mrs. Heath rode, and that he was one of the Servants mentioned in this Affray, and made his Escape from the Assizes; and he will also prove that my Lady was at a Hurling-Match at a Place called Rathimny Bogg, between Major Sutton and my Lord, at the Time of this pretended Pregnancy.

4. Edmond Bourk.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Did you know Arthur late Lord Altham?

Edmond Bourk.] I did, Sir.

Q. When did you first know him?—A. At his first coming to Ross.

Q. Did you ever live in his Service?——A. I did.

Q. When did you go to live with him?

A. I cannot exactly tell the Year, but I lived almost six Years and two Months with him.

Q. Where did my Lord live then?—A. At Dunmaine.

Q. Did you live there before my Lady came over?——A. I did.

Q. How long after you lived there did she come to live with him?

A. I cannot tell how long.

Q. What was your Service?

A. I was a Postillion, and came up for my Lady to Dublin.

Q. Where did my Lord and Lady go from Dublin?

A. They went from Dublin to Dunmaine.

Q. From what Place in Dublin did they go to Dunmaine?

A. From Captain Briscoe's in Bride-street.

Q. Are you certain that they went from Captain Briscoe's?

A. By the Virtue of my Oath, they did; we took them up there.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Mary Heath?—A. I did, Sir.

Q. What was she?

A. She waited on my Lady Altham as her Gentlewoman then.

Q. When did my Lord and Lady get to Dunmaine?

A. We got to Dunmaine in December, it was about Christmas-Eve.

Q. Who went along with you besides my Lord and Lady?

A. I cannot tell you; but the Chariot broke by Johnstown, and a great many were in Company, but I cannot tell who they were.

Q. Did Mrs. Setwright go with you?

A. Mrs. Setwright was sent down two Days before, and two Maids with her, Betty Doyle and Mary Waters.

Q. Do you remember any body visiting at Dunmaine for any Time?

A. There was Mrs. Briscoe there.

Q. Was any one along with her?—A. Her Daughter was.

Q. How long might they have staid there?

A. I cannot tell, but I was sent with Miss Briscoe to the lower Part of the County of Wexford.

Q. Do you know one Mr. Boyde?——A. I did.

Q. Where did he live?——A. He lived at Rosslare.

Q. Did not you go to his House?

A. We did call there, and stayed there a Night or two, to the best of my Knowledge.

Q. Do you know a Place called Rathimny Bogg?

A. I do; I was born near it.

Q. Did you know Major Sutton?—A. I knew him very well.

Q. Did you know of any Diversion or Sport at Rathimny-Bogg?

A. I remember a great Hurling there.

Q. What was the Occasion of it?

A. I was told it was between Major Sutton and my Lord Altham.

Q. Do you remember any Person that was at that Hurling?

A. My Lady Altham was there, Sir.

Q. Were you at the Assizes of Wexford at any time after this Hurling?

A. I do not know whether it was after or before.

Q. When was that Assizes?—A. Easter Assizes in the Year 1715.

Q. Did you go from the House of Dunmaine to the Assizes?

A. I did, Sir.

Q. Did any body go along with you?

A. My Lady went in the Chariot and one Mrs. Giffard.

Q. Who rode Postillion?——A. I did.

Q. Who was Coachman?—A. John Weedon.

Q. Do you know of any Quarrel that happened at the Assizes, and on what Occasion?——A. I do very well, I have a Reason to know it, Sir.

Q. Tell your Reasons.

A. Some Gentlemen of the County of Wexford were impeached with this thing of enlisting and harbouring Men for the Pretender at that time, and above all, there was the Parish-Priest that is living yet, one Father Michael Downes, and he was our Parish-Priest; and this Downes being impeached, my Lord's Servants, four or five of us, went to see the Priest, and his Prosecutors were with him at the House of one Hatchell's that kept the Swan; we fell out with the Prosecutors, because that we thought to make it up with them not to prosecute the Priest, my Lord; and upon that, when they would not make it up, a Quarrel happened between us, and please your Lordship, and to be sure we paid the poor People very sorely; but next Morning we were taken Prisoners by Mr. Hervey, Colonel Ram, and Mr. Symes, and kept in Confinement from Morning 'till about eight o'Clock at Night ———

Q. Was my Lord Altham at the Assizes?

A. My Lord Altham was there.——A little time after I came home he discharged me, because I made my Escape; but two were put on their Trial.

Q. Who were they?

A. They were Ned MacCormack and Bryan Neale, the Running-footman and the Groom.

Q. Where did you go after my Lord discharged you his Service?

A. I believe to Kilkenny, and lived with Alderman Barnes there some little time.

Q. Do you know Mr. Lambert?—A. I do very well.

Q. Did you ever live in his Service?

A. I lived with him after I left Kilkenny.

Q. How long did you live in Kilkenny?

A. I believe I did not live in Kilkenny above two or three Months.

Q. Do you remember any Quarrel between my Lord and Lady Altham in your time?—A. I do not remember any Quarrel.

Q. Did they continue to live together as long as you knew them?

A. They did, they were ſeparated after.
Q. Where did you live then?---A. I believe with Aaron Lambert.
Q. Where did he live then?---A. He kept a Houſe in Roſs then.
Q. How far is Roſs from Dunmaine?
A. Four ſmall Miles from Dunmaine.
Q. Did you ſee my Lady after the Separation?----A. I did.
Q. Where?---A. In Roſs.
Q. Do you recollect the Houſe that my Lord and Lady lodged in at Wexford at the Aſſizes?---A. I ſet her down at one Mr. Sweeny's.
Q. Pray, whilſt Mrs. Briſcoe was in the Houſe at Dunmaine, did you hear of any Miſcarriage that my Lady had?
A. I never did of any Miſcarriage, or of her being with Child 'till within theſe three Years.
Q. Did ſhe appear to you to be a Woman with Child?--A. She never did.
Q. Do you know Joan Landy?---A. I do.
Q. Do you know of her nurſing a Child?---A. I do.
Q. Was that after my Lady came to Dunmaine?
A. She was big with Child at the Time my Lady came.
Q. Where did ſhe live at that Time?---A. In my Lord's Houſe.
Q. Was ſhe brought-to-bed there?
A. No; ſhe went to her Father's Houſe to lye-in.
Q. How far was that from the Houſe of Dunmaine?
A. As near as I can gueſs, an Engliſh Mile.
Q. Did you ever ſee a Child nurſed by Joan Landy in the Houſe while my Lady was there?---A. I never did, by Virtue of my Oath.
Q. Did you ever ſee a Child of Lord Altham's with Joan Laffan?
Q. I never did, nor nobody elſe.
Mr. Mac Manus.] My Lord, he ſwears that nobody elſe ſaw that ſhe took care of the Child, as well as him.
Mr. Le Hunte.] Did you ever ſee any Child of Lord and Lady Altham's in the Care of Joan Laffan?---A. Never did, Sir.
Q. Did you ever ſee a Child that was Joan Landy's Child with Joan Landy?---A. Yes, I did, Sir.
Q. Did you live with my Lady at any Time after the Separation?
A. I did.
Q. How long after?---A. As near as I can gueſs, almoſt two Years after they parted I waited on her in the Town of Roſs.
Q. Did you ſee any Child there with her that was reputed her Child?
A. I never did.
Q. Did you ever ſee any other Child with her there?
A. Yes, I uſed to bring in Children myſelf to her; ſhe was very fond of them.
Q. What Lodging was you at there?---A. At one Mrs. Wright's.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Serj. Tiſdall.] How long did you live with my Lord Altham?
A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, about ſix Years with my Lord and Lady.
Q. Did they live together during the whole Time you lived with them?
A. They did not, Sir,
Q. When were you firſt hired into the Service?---A. I cannot tell.
Q. When did you leave my Lord?---A. I left him in the Year 1715.
Q. What Time of that Year?---A. I cannot tell.
Q. How ſoon was it after they came from Wexford?
A. I cannot tell how ſoon.
Q. Was it a Fortnight, three Months, or a Year, or how long?
A. No; it could not be a Year, or a Quarter of a Year.
Q. What was the Occaſion of your leaving the Service?
A. The Occaſion was that I made my Eſcape from Wexford, and my Lord promiſed he would not keep them that eſcaped.
Q. Recollect how long you were at Dunmaine before you were diſcharged.---A. I might have been at Home a Fortnight or three Weeks.
Q. How long before you left my Lord, did he and my Lady come to live together?
A. My Lady came in December 1713, to the beſt of my Knowledge.
Q. Where was you then?---A. In Dunmaine, and they met in Dublin.
Q. How ſoon after did you come for her?---A. I was not long in Town.
Q. How ſoon after they met, did you come for her to Town?
A. I cannot tell how long.
Q. Was you in Town with my Lord that Winter before they met?
A. I was not.
Q. Did you live with them again after you left them in the Year 1715?
A. I did.
Q. What Time?---A. I cannot tell.
Q. Were they ſeparated before you came to live with them?
A. They were; my Lady was at Roſs at that Time.
Q. When you returned to live with my Lord, was there any Child in the Houſe?---A. Never a Child that I know of.
Q. How long did you live with him after you returned?
A. I cannot tell how long.
Q. Did you live a ſecond Time with them before the Separation?
A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, I did.
Q. Did you return to the Service before my Lord ſeparated from my Lady?---A. I am not ſure whether I did or no.
Q. Was you in the Houſe at the Separation?---A. I was not.
Q. Where was you at that Time?---A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, in Roſs with Mr. Aaron Lambert.
Q. Were you in his Service then?---A. I was.
Q. How long did you live with him?---A. I cannot tell; but my Lady was ſome Time in Roſs before I came to live with her.
Q. Did you return to my Lord's Service after you were diſcharged that Time after the Aſſizes?---A. Indeed, I cannot tell.
Q. Cannot you tell whether you lived with him after at Dunmaine?
A. I am not poſitive; I cannot tell you, Sir, whether I ever lived with my Lord again at Dunmaine.
Q. You ſay, you were turned away after the Aſſizes?---A. I was.
Q. Upon your Oath, did you return to live with my Lord again?
A. Upon my Salvation, I cannot tell whether I returned again to him.
Q. Recollect how often you have lived with him.
A. I remember I lived with him once, becauſe he owed me ſome Wages.
Q. What Wages?---A. I believe two Years Wages.
Q. When were thoſe Wages due to you?
A. They were due after the Aſſizes.
Q. Can you anſwer or not, whether you returned again to the Service?
A. I cannot anſwer whether I did or no.
Q. Do you know Mr. Amias Buſh?---A. I do.
Q. Had you any Converſation with him?
A. Not as I can remember, Sir.
Q. Or with any other Perſon, that my Lord had a Child by his Lady?
A. By the virtue of my Oath, I never did declare it to Mankind.
Q. Did you ever declare that you would go and ſwear for Lord Angleſea, and be made a Man of?
A. By the virtue of that Oath I have taken, I never did.
Q. Did any body offer you any Money for ſwearing in this Cauſe?
A. Yes, Mr. Mac Kercher did.
Q. What did he offer you?---A. He offered me 300*l.* for ſwearing.
When the Witneſs ſaid this, there was a loud Huzza in the Court.
Q. Who was the Agent that offered you 300*l?*
A. Have Patience and I will tell you the Man, one Paul Keating, he offered me 300*l.* in private between me and himſelf, if I would join his young Lord, as he called him.
Q. When was this Offer made you?---A. About this Time two Year.
Q. Why did not you appear and declare this on the former Trial?
A. I kept off from the laſt Trial, and from this 'till I was compelled by Law.
Q. Was you ever in Company with Mr. Mac Kercher?
A. I was in the Room with Mac Kercher, and he ſent for me, and Mr. Bob Snow carried me up Stairs to an upper Room.
Q. What is it you can ſay of Mr. Snow?
A. Nothing of him, but that I was in Mr. Snow's Room along with Mac Kercher.
Q. When was this?
A. About this Time two Year, to the beſt of my Knowledge.
Q. What was the Converſation that paſſed between Mr. Mac Kercher and you?
A. Why then I will tell you that, Gentlemen. I came in the Evening to Mr. Snow's; Mr. Snow was fee'd as an Attorney againſt me in a Cauſe between a Man and me---
Q. Give an Account what paſſed in Converſation in the Preſence of Mr. Snow.---A. Mac Kercher and Snow went up from the Company, they were to ſup there.
Q. Where?
A. At Mr. Snow's that Night; and I told my Landlord, Mr. Flood, that Mr. Snow was to be there that Evening; and Snow told me that Mac Kercher, and Anneſley, and Livingſtone were to ſup there that Night; and he told me if I would come there at Eight o'Clock, that I could ſee Mac Kercher. Upon that I did, and we went up Stairs, Mr. Snow, and Mac Kercher and me, and he aſked me if I knew this young James Annesley, Eſq. Where is he? ſays I. I hope, my Friend, you will do nothing againſt his Intereſt, ſays Mac Kercher. Indeed I will not, nor appear at all, ſays I, if I can help it; ſo there is all I can remember.
Q. Did there paſs any other Converſation between you that Night?
A. There might, but not to any Purpoſe.
Q. When do you ſay the 300*l.* was offered to you?
A. About this Time two Year.
Q. And who made you the Offer of it?
A. Paul Keating, and carried me to one Captain Forreſter's.
Q. When this Offer was made, was any body preſent?
A. No, he carried me aſide to a little Garden at Captain Forreſter's Door, and he ſaid that when the Cauſe was over I would get the raiſing of my Family.
Q. What did he offer you this Money for?
A. He offered it for to join his young Maſter James Annesley, becauſe he thought that I knew a great deal by living with Lady Altham, only to give my Promiſe to teſtify for James Annesley.
Q. What did he tell you, you were to ſwear?
A. The Words were in general

Mr. Smith.] My Lord, the next Witneſs is Mrs. Sweeny. Your Lordſhip obſerves that the laſt Witneſs gave an Account of my Lady Altham's going from Dunmaine to Wexford Aſſizes, and that ſhe was drove to Captain Sweeny's at Wexford. He, my Lord, is dead: this Mrs. Sweeny is his Widow; her Huſband took the Houſe in March 1714, and ſhe has lived there ever ſince; ſhe will give account that Lord and Lady Altham, Mrs. Giffard and other Perſons came and lodged in the Houſe, and that my Lady did not appear to be with Child.

5. Mrs. SARAH SWEENY.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Where do you live, Madam?
Mrs. Sweeny.] I live at Wexford.
Q. What is your Chriſtian Name?---A. Sarah.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. Theſe four or five-and-thirty Years.
Q. Pray, do you know Mr. John Maſterſon?---A. I do.
Q. Did you know Mr. Walſh?---A. I did.
Q. Do you remember that they were charged with any Crime at Wexford?——A. I do.
Q. When?---A. In the Year 1715.
Q. Did you know the late Lord or Lady Altham?
A. I did; I knew them both, but my Lord much better than my Lady.

Q. Was it usual for you to set Lodgings?——A. It was.

Q. Can you recollect whether they lodged at any Time and when in your House?—A. They lodged with me in the Year 1715, in April.

Q. Do you know upon what Occasion, or what was a-doing in Wexford at that Time?——A. The Assizes was at that Time.

Q. Pray, Madam, can you recollect how long they lodged with you, and when they came, whether before or after the Assizes?

A. They came just at the Assizes, and they staid no longer than the Assizes held, four Nights or five, I cannot tell which.

Q. Can you tell whether any Gentlewoman came with Lady Altham to the Assizes?—A. Yes, there did come Mrs. Giffard, and Mrs. Mary Roe, and there came Mrs. Heath.

Q. Was Mrs. Heath a Servant to any of the Ladies, or whom?

A. She was her Ladyship's Woman.

Q. Where did she lodge?——A. At my House, Sir.

Q. Can you be certain that it was in the Spring Assizes 1715, that they were there?——A. I am very sure of it.

Q. Pray, can you give any Reason for that Certainty?

A. I can give several Reasons, if there was an Occasion.

Q. Please to inform the Court and the Jury what your Reasons are.

A. It was in the Year 1714 that I came to that House I now live in. I came to it in July, just before the Queen died; and in 1714 Mr. Sweeny was ill of a Fever, and was just recovered out of it as her Ladyship came to my House; he was recovered the March before she came.

Q. When she was there did you frequently see her?

A. I did see her very often, Sir.

Q. Where did she generally diet in Wexford?

A. She dined and supped at my House.

Q. Did she dine and sup at your Table?—A. I dined with her at the Table, and with my Lord, when he dined there.

Q. Had she any Signs of Breeding, or being with Child?

A. I did not perceive any, neither do I believe she was with Child.

Q. Could she have been with Child then and you not know it?

A. If she had been with Child I should have heard it.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Fitzgerald.] You say, I think, that my Lady came to lodge at your House in April 1715?——A. Yes.

Q. What particular Reason have you for fixing it in April 1715?

A. I tell you; in July before the Queen died I came to the House, and the April following she came to lodge there.

Q. Where did you live before?

A. At Kenny's-Hall, a little out of Wexford.

Q. How long did you live there?

A. From the latter end of the Year 1713, till we left it.

Q. What particular Time did you leave that Hall?

A. In July 1714, just before the Queen died.

Q. Was that House, where you received Lord and Lady Altham, repaired when you took it?—A. We repaired it before we came there.

Q. After you took the Lease, what Time did you take to repair it?

A. Not very long; I cannot tell how long.

Q. Did the Repairs take up three Months?

A. I believe it might take up three Months; but I was sick at that Time, and do not know how long it was.

Q. What Time was it you took the Lease?

A. We took the Lease in the Year 1714.

Q. What Time of that Year?——A. In the Beginning of 1714. I have the Lease if you have a mind to see it.

Q. Do you know a Man called Nicholas Duffe?—A. I do.

Q. What is he?—A. He was Master of a Vessel for my Husband.

Q. Did he live with you then?—A. He did not live with us then.

Q. Was not he Master of the Ship at that Time?

A. He quit that Employment before I was married to Mr. Sweeny. He went Master before for him.

Q. Did he live in your House in April 1715?—A. No, he did not.

Q. Did he live with you when you took the House and you were sick?

A. He was at Sea in 1714, when I was ill of the Fever, and he came home at that Time in the Year 1714, and was not employed after, for my Husband parted with the Ship.

Q. You say he was not in April 1715, in your House?

A. Not to live with me.

Q. Was not he then Master of your Husband's Ship?

A. He was not in that Employ, we were building a Ship then.

Q. Was not he in the Town of Wexford in the Year 1715?

A. I do not know but he might.

Q. Do you know Captain Maxwell?—A. I do, very well.

Q. Do you know his Wife?

A. I do; I am very well acquainted with her.

Q. Did they not visit you in April 1715?

A. I cannot tell in what Year, I do not know but she might be there, and they lived in the House where I lived in before.

Q. Do you know one David Conolly?——A. I do not know any such Body as Conolly, I know one David Connell.

Q. Was he a Servant of your's at that Time?

A. He was not a Servant, but in and out with me.

Q. How long did he live with you?---A. Really I cannot tell.

Q. What do you think of that Man, what is his Character?

A. Why really, I never thought it worth my while to enquire; he did my Business well enough.

Q. Did you and Mrs. Maxwell visit frequently?

A. Yes, we did, and I was Godmother to one of her Children.

Q. What is Mrs. Roe's Name now?---A. Mrs. Crumpton.

Q. Did you declare to any Person of your Acquaintance in Wexford that you were not sure when Lady Altham was at your House?

A. I do not know whether I did or no; to be sure at the beginning I could not recollect it, but after, when I considered about it, I found it out.

Q. Did she never lodge with you but once?---A. Never but once.

Q. Was she never there at the Water-drinking Season?

A. She never was.

Q. And that Time she lodged with you was at the Assizes?

A. It was at that Time.

Mr. Smith.] This Lady has mentioned that her Sister, who is now Mrs. Crumpton, came to Wexford at that Time in Company with Lady Altham; she was then called Roe, my Lord; we shall now produce her to the same Point.

Court.] Do not you think you have proved it already without producing her?

Mr. Daly.] I would produce Mrs. Giffard and no more to that Fact, I own it.

Court.] Call Mrs. Giffard.

Mr. Smith.] This Mrs. Giffard not only was at Wexford with my Lady at the Assizes, but was a particular Intimate of the Family, and she will prove to your Lordship, that she not only accompanied my Lady to the Assizes, but that she returned from Wexford to Dunmaine with her, and saw my Lady almost every Day while she stayed there, and never saw or heard of a Child; and your Lordship must recollect that one of the Witnesses did mention, that she was censured for her great Intimacy in that Family; and that Joan Laffan said, she and my Lady were very great.

6. Mrs. Anne Giffard.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Mrs. Giffard, are you a married Woman, or a Widow?

Mrs. Giffard.] A Widow.

Q. The Widow of whom?——A. Of Ravenscroft Giffard.

Q. What is your Christian Name?—A. Anne.

Q. Where did your Husband live?

A. At Ballysop, in the County of Wexford.

Q. Do you know a Place called Dunmaine?—A. I do.

Q. How far is Ballysop from Dunmaine?

A. Not two Miles, a Mile and half or thereabouts.

Q. How long have you lived at Ballysop?

A. We went to live there forty Years ago, and continued to live there till now, only seven Years that I lived at Ross.

Q. Do you remember the late Lord and Lady Altham?

A. I do remember them very well.

Q. Where did they live when you knew them?

A. They lived sometimes in Dublin, and sometimes at Dunmaine.

Q. Do you remember when my Lady first came to live at Dunmaine?

A. I do.

Q. When was it?—A. In the Year 1713, two or three Days before Christmas-day, as I think; I am not positive to the Day.

Q. Were you intimately acquainted with her?—A. I was indeed.

Q. Did you ever see her with Child whilst you knew her?

A. Upon my Oath, I never knew it, nor never heard it.

Q. Did you ever know of her having a Child at Dunmaine?

A. I never did indeed, Sir.

Q. Do you remember to have travelled with her at any Time to any and what Place?—A. I did to Wexford in a Chariot.

Q. From whence?—A. From Dunmaine.

Q. Did you go with my Lady in the Chariot?

A. I did, and my Lord rode.

Q. What Time of the Year, and what Year was it?

A. I believe it was in the Spring.

Q. Of what Year?

A. The Time when Mr. Masterson and Walsh were tried.

Q. Where did you lodge in Wexford?—A. At Mrs. Sweeny's.

Q. Who lodged with you there?---A. My Lord and Lady Altham.

Q. You mentioned something of Walsh and Masterson, what is the Reason that you remember any thing of them?---A. Because my Lady Altham and I were in Court to hear their Trials.

Q. What do you call Court?---A. At the Session-House.

Q. What is the Use of that House?

A. The House where the Judges are.

Q. Were you and she in that House at this Time of the Assizes?

A. We were indeed.

Q. How long did you stay in Wexford that Time?---A. We stayed four Days.

Q. Did my Lady and you travel together from Wexford?

A. I came home with her in the Chariot, and lay there that Night.

Q. Do you remember any Woman-servant to have travelled with you?

A. Mrs. Heath; she rode.

Q. Were any other Persons with you?---A. My Husband went.

Q. And who else?---A. A Sister of mine went.

Q. What was her Name?---A. Mary Roe.

Q. Is that her Name at present?---A. Her Name now is Crumpton.

Q. Where did you go to from Wexford?---A. Back to Dunmaine.

Q. Where did you lie that Night?---A. I lay there.

Q. How long was you acquainted with Lady Altham after your Return to Dunmaine?---A. Whilst she stayed at Dunmaine.

Q. Do you remember any remarkable Eclipse of the Sun?

A. I do, the Eclipse was just after we came from Wexford; the Friday after we came home, I was at a Burying that Day and know it.

Q. What I ask you now is, whether during your Acquaintance with Lady Altham you perceived her to be with Child, or knew her to be with Child?---A. I did not, nor never heard her talk of it.

Q. How often did you visit?---A. Frequently, sometimes twice, sometimes once a Week, or a Fortnight, or so.

Q. Did you go to the same Parish Church?

A. Sometimes; she very often came to White-Church.

Q. Can you recollect after her coming to Dunmaine, that she went to Dublin?---A. I remember she went once or twice to Dublin.

Q. Have

Q. Have you been in the Room with her when she dressed or undressed herself?——A. Yes, I have pretty often.

Q. Did you ever observe any Symptoms of Pregnancy?

A. Upon my Oath, I never did.

Q. I ask you, Madam, whether my Lady was big-bellied at the Assizes?—— A. Indeed she was not.

Q. Do you know one Anne Bennet that was formerly your Servant?

A. I never had a Servant of that Name in my Life.

Q. Do you know any Person of the Name of Bennet that lived with you?

A. I do not know any one of the Name of Bennet that lived with me.

Q. Is there any one of the Name of Anne that lived with you, that is now married to the Name of Bennet?

A. They say so; I heard so to-day, but I know nothing of it.

Q. Did you ever tell any Servant of your's of the Name of Anne, that my Lady had been with Child, or had a Child?

A. I never did, I could not say it.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Harward.] If I do not mistake, you were examined at the Trial in the Exchequer?——A. I believe I was; to be sure I was.

Q. Did not you then swear to all the Company that went with you to Wexford?——A. And so I do now.

Q. Were you not asked at that Trial, to give an Account of all that went with you to that Assizes?—A. Well, I was.

Q. Did you give that Account?

A. I did, of every one that I remembered.

Q. What I ask you now is, did you give an Account that this Mrs. Roe went along with you?—A. No, I did not.

Q. Then you did not give an Account that she went?

A. No, Sir, I did not.

Q. In what Manner was it that she went?—A. She rode.

Q. Did she ride single or double?—A. She rode single.

Q. How did Mrs. Heath ride?---A. Single too.

Q. Pray, Madam, Lord Altham rode, I suppose, too?---A. Yes.

Q. And how did my Lady and you go?

A. It was a Chariot-and-Six that we went in.

Q. By virtue of your Oath, was not you in Mourning for a Brother of your's at that Time?

A. I was not; I was in Mourning, but not for him; he was dead a great while before that.

Q. Was it not to hear this Trial that you and Lady Altham went to Wexford?

A. I do not remember whether it was that or no we went for; but we went there to hear it when we were in Wexford.

Q. So that it was Curiosity that carried my Lady and you into the Court-house to hear these Trials?

A. We went to see Wexford; to be sure it was our Curiosity that carried us into Court when we were there.

Q. Was not that the only Motive that induced you to go there?

A. It was not that that induced us to go.

Q. What induced you to go?---A. We went for our Pleasure.

Q. Was you ever in a Court-house before for your Pleasure?

A. Indeed I was in that same very often before when I was a Girl; but what signifies that?

Q. Upon the Trial in the Exchequer did you not say, that you could not tell whether it was before or after the Queen's Death that this Trial was?---A. Well, I do not know whether I said it or no.

Q. Did you not upon that Trial say so?

A. Indeed I cannot tell whether I said it or no.

Q. Recollect whether you did not upon that Trial say, you did not know whether their Trial was before or after the Queen's Death?

A. Why, Sir, if I went after the Queen's Death, you know that I could have said nothing else; what do you mean by saying that upon that Trial I said I could not tell whether before or after?

Q. Did not you say upon that Trial that you did not know whether it was before or after the Queen's Death?

A. I do not believe I said any such Thing at all.

Q. Did you or did you not say upon that Trial that it was before or after?

A. Upon my Word, I cannot tell that I said any such Thing.

Q. If you cannot tell whether you said that it was before or after the Queen's Death that you went to Wexford, how can you say now that it is either one or the other?---A. I do not remember.

Q. Would you be understood to say that you do not know whether it was before or after the Queen's Death that you went to Wexford?

Court.] Is not that fully said already?

Mr. Harward.] I do not apprehend it so, my Lord.

Q. Which was it, by virtue of your Oath, was it in the Queen's Time, or after her Death, that you went with Lady Altham to the Assizes?

A. I could not tell you now; I do not know, Sir.

Q. Now, Madam, I ask you this, how came it that you could not tell that this Mrs. Roe went with you?

A. I might have remembered it indeed, but I did not at that Time.

Q. Had you at this Time any extraordinary Intimacy or Business with Mrs. Sweeny?---A. She is my Sister.

Q. Oh! I did not know that, Madam. Pray, were you in Mourning then?---A. I believe I was.

Q. For whom?

A. I cannot tell whether for any body; I wore Black sometimes.

Q. Were you in Mourning for any body at that Time?

A. I wore Black, but I cannot tell whether I was in Mourning for any body.

Q. Was my Lady in Mourning?---A. She was.

Q. As to this Trial that you went to see, give us some Account of what passed there.

A. I remember nothing of the Trial, but that I saw the Gentlemen in the Dock.

Q. Did you stay, Madam, till they were acquitted or not?

A. Indeed I cannot tell.

Q. Who sat by you in Court?---A. Lady Altham.

Q. Did not Mr. Coleclough sit by her?---A. He did.

Q. Did not he hand her in and out of Court?--A. I believe he did.

Q. Are you sure he did?

A. To the best of my Knowledge, he did.

Q. Did not you swear on the Trial in the Exchequer, that you could not tell whether he did or not?

A. I say, to the best of my Knowledge, he did.

Q. Who went into the Court-house with Lady Altham?

A. He and I and Lord Altham went with her.

Q. Did not you swear that you could not tell whether he did or not?

A. I cannot recollect whether I did or not.

Q. Did you know any of my Lord's Family?

A. I knew Ralph the Butler, and Anthony Dyer, my Lord's Gentleman.

Q. Did you know Bourke?-- A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know John Weedon?

A. I did, and Mrs. Setwright too, I was often there and knew them.

Q. What was Bourke?---A. The Postillion.

Q. Was Doyle the Clergyman tried at the same Time.

A. He stood on the Side-bar, and was not tried that Time.

Q. Did you know the Judges?---A. I knew one Forster, I believe.

Q. Did Lord and Lady Altham go to Dublin after this?

A. They went to Dublin soon after Wexford Assizes.

Q. Did not they go twice after?

A. I cannot tell indeed, I remember once they did.

Q. Did not you swear on the Trial in the Exchequer that you could not tell whether it was before or after my Lord returned from Dublin that you were at Wexford Assizes?——A. I never did.

Q. Madam, do you know one Mrs. Bushe?

A. Not I, indeed I do not.

Q. Did you ever declare, to your Remembrance, that you did not know but this Assizes was in the Year 1716?

A. I cannot remember whether I did or no.

Q. Did you, or did you not?

A. Not that I know of, indeed I did not: I am sure not to Mrs. Bushe.

7. Sarah Weedon.

Mr. Smith.] Before she comes it will only be proper to observe to your Lordship, that she has been mentioned by some of the Witnesses as being the Coachman's Wife at the Time of the Birth; and, my Lord, Mrs. Sarah Weedon was the Coachman's Wife, and she will give your Lordship an Account of her Knowledge of the Family at Dunmaine during the Period of Time to which the Birth is sworn to; and I believe, when she is produced and has given her Evidence, that you will think she is not a material Witness for the Prosecutors, as she was upon a former Occasion sworn to be.

Mr. Morgan.] Do you know a Place called Dunmaine?

Sarah Weedon.] Yes, Sir, I do.

Q. Did you know Lady Altham?——A. Yes, Sir.

Q. And Lord Altham?——A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Where was you when my Lady came first to Dunmaine?

A. I was at Dunmaine.

Q. How long did you continue there after she came?

A. I believe very nigh three Years, to the best of my Knowledge.

Q. Did you know one Mrs. Briscoe?

A. I did, Sir.

Q. Did you know her Daughter?——A. I did.

Q. Did you see them at Dunmaine?——A. I did, Sir.

Q. Pray now answer, where was you at the Time that they were there?

A. I was in the House, Sir.

Q. Did you know of any Accident that happened to Lady Altham during the Time they were there?

A. I did not know of any Accident that happened to her.

Q. Any Miscarriage?

A. Upon my Word, I never knew nothing of it.

Q. What Condition in point of Health was my Lady in during the Time that they were there?

A. To the best of my Knowledge, she ailed nothing at all.

Q. Did you ever hear of any and what Accidents happening upon account of Sawcers during the Time they were there?

A. I protest I remember no such Thing.

Q. No China broke?——A. I do not remember any such Thing, Sir.

Q. I ask now, whether you know of any of that Family to be delivered of a Child during the Time you were at Dunmaine?

A. I do.

Q. Who was that?---A. One Hesther, that my Lord called Pouty.

Q. I ask you whether this Hesther was delivered of this Child before or after my Lady came to Dunmaine?——A. Before, Sir.

Q. Do you know of any other Person delivered after she came?

A. Not in the House, Sir.

Q. Do you know of any out of the House?

A. Mrs. Setwright was, and myself out of the House.

Court.] Was Lady Altham with Child while you were at Dunmaine?

A. She was not, my Lord.

Q. Did you see her with Child at any Time whatever?

A. Upon my Word, I did not. My Lord, what I say is Truth, and nothing but the Truth.

Mr. Morgan.] You say that this Hesther was delivered of a Child, can you recollect the Midwife?

A. If I should tell you the Truth, they sent for one Mrs. ——, I forget her Name,——Mrs. Shiel in Ross; but to tell you the Truth, before Mrs. Shiel came, I delivered her.

Q. Who was sent for Mrs. Shiel?

A. Really I cannot tell; there was a Fellow in the House, but I cannot tell his Name now.

Q. Now recollect and say, whether any other Persons were brought-to-bed at Dunmaine during your Time?——A. There was Juggy Lamy.

Q. Now I ask you, did you see this Child of her's?——A. I did.

Q. Did you know it?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. Did you see it at any other Place?

A. I

A. I did, Sir.

Q. With whom?---A. A great while afterwards, when we were in the County of Carlow, the Child was brought there.

Q. To what Place?——A. To Carrickduffe.

Q. Who was it with there?---A. It was in the Houſe.

Q. With whom do you mean?———A. With Lord Altham.

Q. Was that the very Child?

A. I ſay, Sir, it was the ſame I ſaw with Joan Landy at Dunmaine.

Q. Did you ever ſee any Child at Dunmaine conſidered as my Lord Altham's Child by his Lady?

A. Never in my Life; I would not ſay it for all the Eſtate that ever Lord Angleſea had, if it was falſe.

Q. Where do you live now?---A. I live in Connaught.

Q. With whom there?---A. With Colonel Blakeney.

Q. At what Place does he live?---A. At a Place called Abbart.

Q. Have you any Children?---A. I have, Sir.

Q. What are they?---A. Sons.

Court.] What is it you propoſe by this Evidence?

Mr. Morgan.] What I propoſe by this Evidence is this, that we ſhall ſhew a very unfair Attempt made upon this Woman on the Part of the Proſecutors.

Court.] Mr. Mac Kercher has made an Affidavit, which I wiſh, for his Sake, he had not.

Mr. Morgan.] He ſays, my Lord, in his Affidavit, he ſerved this Woman with a Subpœna; I hope I may aſk her that Queſtion.

Court.] Go on, Sir.

Mr. Morgan.] Was you ſerved with a Subpœna by him, and when?

A. I cannot tell the Day of the Month, it came one Day, and I was to appear in Dublin the next Day.

Q. How far is Colonel Blakeney's Houſe from Dublin?

A. It is threeſcore and three Miles off.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Callaghan.] Did you live as a Servant in the Houſe of Dunmaine?

A. I did, Sir.

Q. In what Station were you there?

A. I was Houſe-keeper before my Lady came there.

Q. Was you ſo after?---A. I was not; Mrs. Setwright was.

Q. In what Capacity did you ſerve in the Houſe after ſhe went there?

A. I was in the Houſe after ſhe went there.

Q. But I aſk, did you ſerve in the Houſe after?

A. I did after, becauſe I did every thing that was to do.

Q. How long did you continue to live in the Houſe?

A. I lived in the Houſe 'till I took a Houſe of my own.

Q. When was that?

A. I cannot tell exactly the Time, but it was juſt at the End of the Avenue, and I was as frequently in the Houſe then, as I was before.

Q. I aſk you how ſoon after my Lady went to Dunmaine was it that you left the Houſe?--- A. I cannot tell exactly the time, Sir.

Q. Was it a Month?

A. Oh! a great deal more than one, or two, or three.

Q. Was it before or after Mrs. Briſcoe and her Daughter went there?

A. I was in the Houſe when they came there.

Q. I aſk you only, whether you were a Servant living in the Houſe at the time they went there?---A. I was.

Q. Upon your Oath, did not you keep an Alehouſe at the Bridge then?

A. No, not 'till after they went there.

Q. Did you keep an Ale-houſe there before Mrs. Briſcoe and her Daughter left Dunmaine?—A. No, I did not, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. What time did they go to Dunmaine?---A. I cannot tell the Year, nor Month, nor any thing of that, it is too long ago for my Memory.

Q. How long did they ſtay there?---A. I cannot tell that again.

Q. How long after they left it was it that Mrs. Setwright was brought-to-bed?---A. I cannot tell; ſhe was with Child coming to the Houſe; but I cannot tell the time ſhe was brought-to-bed.

Q. Was it a Month, or ſix Weeks, or two Months after they left Dunmaine, that ſhe was brought-to-bed?

A. Mrs. Briſcoe's Daughter was a Goſſip to the Child, to the beſt of my Knowledge, and they were there at the ſame time.

Q. Was you out of the Houſe at the time Mrs. Setwright was brought to-bed?---A. I think I was not out of the Houſe then.

Q. Were you or were you not?---A. I cannot tell that exactly.

Q. But you are ſure you were a Servant when Mrs. Briſcoe went away?

A. No, I did not ſay that: I ſay, to the beſt of my Knowledge I was in the Houſe.

Q. You remember Mrs. Heſther's being brought-to-bed?

A. I do, very well.

Q. Was that before or after my Lady went to Dunmaine?

A. It was before my Lady went there.

Q. You mentioned the Midwife's Name?---A. Shiel it was.

Q. Could that Midwife be ſent for for any Purpoſe to Lady Altham?

A. She could not, becauſe Lady Altham never had a Child; ſhe never had a Child.

Q. Was not it before Lady Altham went to Dunmaine that Heſther was brought-to-bed?---A. Yes, do not I tell you ſo?

Q. I think you ſay you were at Carrickduffe?---A. I was, Sir.

Q. Was not you there upon a Day, that was celebrated as a Birth-day of Lord Altham's Son?---A. There never was ſuch a thing in this World.

Q. Can you take upon you to ſay there was not?

A. I am as poſitive of it as of any thing in the World.

Q. Had you any Converſation with any body in relation to Lady Altham's having had a Child?---A. No, never ſince I was born.

Q. Upon your Oath, did you never ſay that my Lady had a Child?

A. Never, in the courſe of my Life.

Mr. Recorder.] Now we ſhall judge whether Mr. Mac Kercher's Information be true or not.

Court.] He was certainly miſinformed.

8. ELEANOR THOMAS, alias FISHER.

Mr. Le Hunte.] The Evidence ſhe will give is this——

Court.] Do not open it now ſhe is here.

Mr. Le Hunte.] What is your Name?--Eleanor Themas.] Eleanor Themas.

Q. Is that the Name you go by now?

A. Eleanor Fiſher is; my maiden Name was Thomas.

Q. Did you know one Mary Waters?---A. I did.

Q. Did you know the late Lady Altham?---A. I did, Sir.

Q. Did you ever live in her Service?---A. I did.

Q. When did you go there?

A. I cannot tell you the Year, but I was the ſecond Servant ſhe hired after ſhe came to Dunmaine.

Q. What was the Nature of your Service?---A. I was Houſe-maid.

Q. How long did you live with my Lady?

A. I lived a Twelvemonth with her.

Q. Where did you go when you left the Service?

A. I went to one Mr. Bunbury's of Ballyſeſkin.

Q. Did you ever hear of one Mrs. Briſcoe and her Daughter's being at Dunmaine?

A. I was in the Houſe at the ſame time.

Q. What Houſe?---A. My Lord's in Dunmaine.

Q. Whilſt you were Houſe-maid, do you remember to have ſeen them there?---A. I did.

Q. Did you continue there 'till they left it?

A. I did indeed.

Q. Do you know of Lady Altham's having a Miſcarriage at Dunmaine?

A. Indeed I never did.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Pigot?---A. Indeed I did.

Q. Of what Place?---A. Of Tyntern.

Q. Did you ever live in her Service?

A. I lived eight Years Maid and Wife with her.

Q. When did you go to live with her?

A. I went to her after I left Dunmaine.

Q. I thought you ſaid you went to Mrs. Bunbury's?

A. I was only a Year at Bunbury's.

Q. How long did you live with Mrs. Pigot?

A. I was eight Years Maid and Wife with her.

Q. Did you live any where in her Service but at Tyntern?

A. No where but at Tyntern.

Q. Can you recollect the Time ſhe was living there when you was hired?---A. I was a Twelvemonth her Servant at Tyntern before ſhe came from Dublin.

Q. When did ſhe come from Dublin to Tyntern?

A. I went to her at Lammas, and the Lady-day Twelvemonth following ſhe came to Tyntern.

Q. What Year was it?---A. Indeed, Sir, I cannot tell.

Q. Where did ſhe live for that Year?---A. In Dublin, Sir.

Q. Who hired you then?---A. Her Steward, James Byrne, hired me.

Q. Was there any Separation between Lord and Lady Altham, to your Knowledge?

A. I remember they parted; I was at Tyntern at the ſame Time.

Q. Was Mrs. Pigot there at that Time?

A. I think ſhe was; I cannot tell poſitively.

Q. Whilſt you were at Dunmaine and Mrs. Briſcoe there, did you hear that Lady Altham miſcarried of a Child?

Mr. Walſh.] That is a leading Queſtion; do not anſwer it, Woman.

Court.] Did you ever ſee Lady Altham with Child?

A. I never ſaw her with Child, nor never heard of her having a Child.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Mac Manus.] You ſay, you lived at Dunmaine?——A. I do, Sir.

Q. What Year?---A. Indeed, Sir, I cannot tell you the Year.

Q. Upon your Oath, what Year did you go to live there?

A. I can tell you the time of Year, but not the Year.

Q. Can you tell the Year you left Dunmaine?

A. I ſerved her Ladyſhip a Year.

Q. Was it in the Year 1716 or 1717 that you left her Service?

A. I cannot tell, if you would ſhoot me for that.

Court.] Where were you hired?---. A. In Dunmaine Houſe.

Q. Who hired you?---A. My Lady hired me herſelf.

Q. During the time that you were there, did you ſee any Child there?

A. I never did.

Q. Did you ſee Lady Altham frequently?

A. I did, I was the next Servant to Mrs. Heath, and often ſaw her.

Mr. Mac Manus.] Did you ſee the Furniture of that Houſe?--A. I did.

Q. Did you ſee any Sawcers with odd Figures on them?

A. I never ſaw the Sawcers.

Q. Did you never ſee thoſe bawdy Sawcers in the Houſe?--A. I never did.

Q. Do not you believe they were there?

A. I do not know; I never did ſee them.

Q. Did you never hear of a Miſcarriage occaſioned by the breaking of the Sawcers?---A. I never ſaw or heard of a Miſcarriage.

Q. Did you never hear it among the Servants?

A. I never did, upon my Word.

Q. Upon your Oath, did you never hear it?

A. Upon my Oath, and upon my Life, I never did.

Q. Could there not be a Miſcarriage and you not know of it?

A. There could not, Sir; for my Lady could not miſcarry unknown to me.

Q. Could ſhe do any Office of Nature unknown to you?

A. I do not know what you mean.

Mr. Bradſtreet.] The next Witneſs will ſhew your Lordſhip where Mr. Cliffe, who is ſaid to be Godfather to this Child, was from the fifth of May 'till the Middle of June 1715. His Son will appear here to prove that; and will ſhew ſome Rules of the Court, where he made Motions during that Time.

Mr. Walſh.] I believe many a Rule is entered in a Lawyer's Name that he knew nothing of.

Mr. Bradſtreet.] Firſt, we will produce his Son, to ſhew where he was in the Year 1715. We will ſhew that firſt.

Court.] If this be as you have opened it, it will be the moſt material Thing that has happened yet; and I believe there will be little in the Thing after, for it cuts off two or three of the moſt material Witneſſes on the other Side.

The Night being pretty far advanced, Mr. Cliffe had retired to his Lodgings, and the next Witneſs called was Mrs. Halpen; but ſhe being alſo out of the way, Mr. Tench was called.

9. JOHN TENCH, Esq.

Mr. Spring.] Pray, Sir, inform the Court and the Jury, whether you had any Knowledge of Mrs. Pigot of Tyntern?—Mr. Tench.] I had, Sir.

Q. You did know her?——A. I knew her, Sir.

Q. Was any Friend of your's concerned for her in her Affairs?

A. My Father received her Rents for above thirty Years.

Q. Who was concerned in the Management of her Affairs, and Receipt of her Rents in the Year 1715?——A. My Father was.

Q. Can you give the Court and the Jury an Account where Mrs. Piget was in the Month of November, 1714, and from thence down to the latter End of the Year 1716?——A. From my own Knowledge I do not know where she was; but from Letters I can tell you.

Q. Have you any Reason to enable you to form a Judgment where Mr. Tench was in———

Court.] Where was Mrs. Pigot in November 1714?

A. Of my own Knowledge I cannot tell where she was.

Mr. Spring.] Are your Father's Accompts, and Papers, and Letters, come to your Hands?——A. I have them, Sir.

Q. Have you any Accompts relating to Mrs. Piget's Affairs in the Years 1714, 1715, or 1716, in his Hand-writing?—A. I have in the Year 1715.

Court.] It is proper to ask him if he has such; but what then? That won't prove where Mrs. Piget was.

Mr. Spring.] My Lord, my next Question is, Whether he has any Letters of Mrs. Pigot to his Father?

Court. That will not do. If she was produced here as a Witness, you might produce her Letters to confront her. We are not now upon the Proof of Similitude of Hands.

Mr. Spring.] Was you at Tyntern in the Year 1714?

A. I cannot tell where I was in 1714.

Q. Were you there in the Year 1715?—A. I was there in 1715.

Q. Where were you in May 1715?——A. Indeed, Sir, I cannot tell.

10. JAMES WALSH.

Mr. Edward Malone.] We produce this Witness, my Lord, to shew that Mrs. Pigot was in another Country, at another Place attending her Husband, who broke his Leg, at the Time they pretend she was Godmother to this Child.

Mr. Edmond Malone.] Are you a married Man?

James Walsh.] Yes, Sir.

Q. In what Family did your Wife live when you married her?

A. In the Family of Mrs. Pigot.

Q. What Mrs. Pigot, Sir?——A. Mrs. Pigot of Tyntern.

Q. Did you know Counsellor Pigot?—A. I did, Sir, very well.

Q. I ask you, then, if you recollect at any Time when any, and what Accident or Hurt happened to him?——A. I do, Sir.

Q. Tell it.

A. Mrs. Pigot went to Dublin in 1714, about November or December, I am not sure in what Month, and some time after Christmas Mr. Pigot went to London, and he came back again———

Q. Was it in January 1714-15, that he went to London?

A. I believe thereabout.

Q. Well, go on.

A. He came back I believe about March, or thereabouts, and he went to his Estate in the County of Limerick, and happened to break his Leg or Thigh in the Year 1715.

Q. What Time in the Year 1715?

A. April I believe, or March, or thereabouts.

Q. At what Place did he break his Leg?

A. They tell me, Sir, at Glengoole; I was not with him there.

Q. How do you know he broke his Leg?

A. I know, because Mrs. Pigot went from Dublin to him.

Q. What Time did she go to him?—A. She went about April 1715.

Q. Where was she to go to?——A. Either to the County of Tipperary or County of Kilkenny, I cannot tell which.

Q. How soon after he went to the County of Limerick did she leave Dublin?—A. I cannot tell exactly how soon she left Dublin, but she staved there till she brought Mr. Pigot home.

Q. To what Place?——A. To her House upon Arran's-Quay.

Q. What Time was that?

A. I cannot exactly tell the Time; I believe it was in the Year 1715.

Q. How long might she have staid away with him?

A. I cannot tell exactly; I believe it was more than a Month; I believe it was two Months, I do not exactly know.

Q. When they came to Dublin, how long did they continue in Dublin without going into the Country again?

A. They staid in Dublin till she buried Mr. Pigot in 1717.

Q. Are you positive that she remained all that Time in Dublin, without going any where to the County of Wexford?

A. Yes, Sir, I can say that safely; and that she went home in the Year 1717, and sent me back to Dublin to make a Monument for Mr. Pigot at the Outside of St. Paul's Church.

Q. How long after their Return to Dublin was it that he died?

A. He died in the Year 1717.

Court.] Are you sure that Mrs. Pigot was not at Tyntern in the Year 1715?

A. She was not, upon my Oath.

Q. Nor in the County of Wexford?

A. Indeed she was not, my Lord.

Q. How many Years did you live with her in all?

A. I cannot tell how many Years, but I lived with her from his Death to her Death.

Q. And you are sure she was not in the County of Wexford from the Time she came to Dublin, till she buried him?

A. I am sure she was not.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Harward.] Pray, Sir, where were you in Christmas 1714?

A. In Dublin, Sir.

Q. Where did you live in Dublin?——A. On Arran's-Quay.

Q. Was you a House-keeper there?

A. I generally kept Mr. Pigot's House when they were in the Country, but that Year I did not.

Q. Did you keep his House in Christmas 1714?——A. I did not, Sir.

Q. Where were you then?———A. On Arran's-Quay.

Q. Where were you in the Beginning of March 1714?

A. I was in Dublin then.

Q. Where in Dublin?——A. In Lodgings of my own.

Q. Where were you May-day 1715?——A. In Dublin, Sir.

Q. Are you sure you were?—A. I was indeed, Sir.

Q. Where in Midsummer 1715?———A. In Dublin.

Q. Now, I ask you upon your Oath, was Mr. Pigot or Mrs. Pigot in their House at Dublin in the Beginning of March 1714?

A. No, they did not come to Dublin till November 1714.

Q. Where was Mrs. Pigot in March 1714?

A. In the County of Wexford.

Court.] Do you mean March 1713-14, or March 1714-15?

A. In March 1714-15 she was in Dublin.

Q. Where was she in March 1713-14?

A. I cannot tell, my Lord, I believe in the County of Wexford.

Mr. Harward.] Where was Mr. Pigot the first of May 1715?

A. I cannot tell you whether in Dublin, or that he was sick where he got his Hurt.

Q. Can you say, upon your Oath, where he was the first of May 1715?

A. Indeed I am not sure whether he was in Dublin, or whether he was where he broke his Limb.

Q. Now, Friend, where was Mrs. Pigot when the great Eclipse was?

A. I believe she was with her Husband where he broke his Leg.

Q. Was you in the County of Tipperary at the Time of the great Eclipse?———A. I was not.

Q. Where was she at that Time?

A. I suppose she was with Mr. Pigot.

Q. Don't be supposing with me; you know you ought to tell nothing but what you know; do you know where she was at the Eclipse?

A. She was, and I take it upon my Oath, she was where Mr. Pigot broke his Thigh.

Q. Where was that?—A. In the County, I believe, of Tipperary.

Q. How do you know that she was not in the County of Wexford?

A. Because I know she was not.

Q. Was not you in Summer 1715 in Dublin?

A. I was, Part of the Summer 1715.

Q. How do you know that she was where her Husband lay ill at the Time of the Eclipse?

A. I know it very well; she was with Mr. Pigot where he broke his Leg.

Q. Did you see her with him?——A. No, I did not.

Q. Why will you swear then she was with him?

A. Why, because I am sure of it.

Q. How are you sure of it?

A. She told me she was going to him, I knew that she went there, and we all knew that she went there.

Q. Have you any other Reasons for being so positive?

A. There are Letters from under her Hand, giving an Account that she was there.

Q. What Letters?———A. To her Agent Captain Tench.

Q. Pray now then, is not that the Reason that you know she was there?

A. It is only one Reason.

Q. Tell another Reason.

A. Why, I am sure she was there, because I know she went there, and all that were along with her told me so.

Q. Do you know of your own Knowledge where she was?——A. No.

Court.] Did you see Mr. Pigot when he came to Dublin?——A. I did.

Q. In what Condition did he then appear to you?

A. He appeared as if he had a Leg broke, and was very bad.

Court, to the Jury.] The Witness says, he saw Mrs. Pigot go down to her Husband, and saw them return together.

Mr. Recorder.] Where he swears that she went to her Husband at a certain Time, that she said she was going to her Husband, and that he saw her come back with him, with his broken Leg, it is as full Evidence as is necessary.

11. MARY WALSH.

Mr. Lee.] What is your Husband's Name?

Mary Walsh.] James Walsh.

Q. Did you know Mrs. Pigot?——A. I did.

Q. Did you know her in the Year 1715?——A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where was she then?——A. In Dublin then.

Court.] Where did she go from Dublin?

A. She went to where Mr. Pigot broke his Thigh.

Q. Where was that?——A. Beyond Kilkenny, going up to Munster.

Q. Was you with her?——A. I was not.

Q. How do you know she went there?

A. Because she was sent for when he broke his Thigh.

Mr. Lee.] When did Mrs. Pigot come to Town after that?

A. I cannot tell when she came up.

Q. Who came with her?

A. Mrs. Wallace and others, I cannot tell who.

Q. Did you ever see Mr. Pigot after?

A. Sure I was with him when he was buried.

Q. Do you remember when he came to Dublin after he had broke his Leg?

A. Why, I believe he came when she came.

Q. Who came to Town with Counsellor Pigot?

A. I cannot tell you, Sir; I cannot remember that.

12. JOHN CLIFFE, Esq.

Mr. Bradstreet.] My Lord, this is the Evidence that I have already open'd.

Mr. Bradstreet.] What is become of your Father?—Mr. Cliffe.] Dead.

Q. What Profession was he of?—A. A Lawyer at the Bar.

Q. Do you remember where your Father was in May and June 1715?

A. I

A. I cannot take upon me to say where he was; he was in this Kingdom, but whether in Country or Town I cannot take upon me to say from my own Memory.

Q. Where was you at that time?—A. I believe I was at the College.

Q. Pray, recollect and consider now, where your Father was in those Months?

A. I cannot take upon me to say, from my Memory, where he was in May 1715.

Q. Where do you say you yourself were at that time?

A. I was in the College at that time.

Q. Did your Father attend the Terms regularly at that time, or not?

A. I believe he did; but I cannot take upon me to say that I remember his keeping Terms regularly; I believe he did.

Mr. Bradstreet.] It appears to your Lordship that Mr. Cliffe was a Lawyer at the Bar; now, we are to falsify the Testimony of some Witnesses produced on the other Side, who swear he was Godfather to this Child, and therefore I hope we shall be at Liberty to shew some Rules of the Court, to prove that Mr. Cliffe was here in May and June in the Year 1715.

Mr. Serj. Tisdall.] I desire to know first, whether you have other Questions to ask the Witness.

Mr. Bradstreet.] My Lord, I remember when the Testimony of a Person was defeated, by shewing that the Name of a Lawyer was to a certain Bill. He said, that the Lawyer was dead before that time, the Record was produced, and his Name was at the Record in the Cause of Reynolds and Sandys. We produce this Witness to shew that those Witnesses, who swore his Father was Godfather to my Lord Altham's Child, swear false; cannot we, in addition to his Testimony, shew the Rules of the several Courts that his Father made Motions in at that time?

Mr. MacManus.] My Lord, I only get up to answer Mr. Bradstreet. I do apprehend, that a Bill in Chancery is not Evidence, and the Reason is, because any Man may file a Bill in the Name of another; and therefore, unless you can shew some Proceedings have been had upon it, you cannot produce it in Evidence. The same Rule will hold in a cursory Motion in Court, which may be made by one Person and have another's Name to it.

Mr. Daly.] It is never done on the Equity Side, it is always moved in Court publickly.

Court.] I think it must appear, who the Counsel is that makes the Motion.

Mr. MacManus.] The Attorney is the Person to whom you must give notice, and is answerable for all the Proceedings; the Lawyer's Name may be, and often is mistaken by the Officer of the Court, it not being material what Lawyer moves.

Court.] The Question is, Whether attested Copies of the Acts of a Court of Record may not be produced, proved and given in Evidence to falsify a Witness, to shew that a Person sworn at a certain Time to be in one Place, was then at another?

Mr. Daly.] The Indenture of a Fine is read against a Man every Day.

Mr. Solicitor.] By Act of Parliament?

Mr. Daly.] It is not made Evidence by Act of Parliament.

Court.] Put the Case distinctly.

Mr. Bradstreet.] I say, my Lord, I put it thus: After the Evidence of this Gentleman, his Father appearing to be a Lawyer at the Bar, and after the Evidence that has been given on the other Side of his being Godfather to a Child at Dunmaine at such a Time, I offer these Rules of his on Motion, to shew that he was not at Dunmaine at that Time, but in these Courts, and I instanced the Case of Reynolds and Sandys for a Precedent.

Mr. Robins.] Are they litigated Motions?

Mr. Bradstreet.] They are litigated, and Hearings and open Pleadings.

Mr. Thomas Bourk.

Mr. Bradstreet.] What is that in your Hand?

Mr. Thomas Bourk.] Rules in the Court of Exchequer in Easter Term 1715.

Q. Are they all out of that Court?—A. They are, Sir.

Q. Are they true Copies?——A. They are.

Mr. Serj. Tisdall.] I believe it is an established Rule in Evidence, that the greatest Certainty must be had, that the Nature of the Thing to be proved will admit of. This is Evidence of no sort of Certainty, because it depends upon a Person not on his Oath, and because he incurs no Penalty by falsifying the Name of the Lawyer. He is not upon his Oath not to put the Name of the Lawyer to the Record, and it is no more than a falsifying Evidence; and besides, Records can only be produced as Evidence between the Parties to them.

Mr. MacManus.] I apprehend it no sort of Evidence at all.

Mr. Bradstreet.] What I apprehend is this, that this is Evidence which is contradictory to the Evidence that they have produced to this Point. Here are Motions that have been litigated, that have not passed of course; but I say, they have been litigated, so that it is to be presumed, that he was litigating these Matters; and if so, it is impossible he could be at Dunmaine at that time. And as such, I hope, is good Proof, and especially since he is dead.

Court.] I think it may be read to Contradict a Witness; and I know that the Officer is so far from being permitted to do this Thing of falsifying a Name, that he is under a great Penalty for it.

Mr. Bradstreet.] The Register is answerable, though committed by the Deputy.

Court.] I think it may be read in contradiction to the Witnesses.

Mr. MacManus.] Your Lordship is going to establish a Rule that may be of dangerous Consequence.

Court.] I am not going to settle a Rule, but I only tell you what I think is and ought to be allowed as Evidence. The Journals of both Houses of Parliament have been produced in Evidence.

Mr. Walsh.] I beg leave to consider this——

Court.] Read the Notes and Orders.

Mr. Whyte reads, This is the 5th of May 1715.

Powell v. Goodwin Ex. of Goodwin. } Mr. Cliffe pro Q. prays Interest for the 246 l. which the Defendant's Testator received since they were paid the Mortgage Money.

Mr. Baly.] I do not oppose Plaintiff's having a Decree for the Money, but they move for Interest, and I am surprized at their demanding of Interest.

Cur. Take a Decree for the Money reported, and Interest for the Money reported from the Time the Report was confirmed; and take an Injunction forthwith to be put in Possession, and take a Decree for the Rent that fell due the 25th of March last.

Court.] He must be personally in Court at that Motion.

Mr. Whyte.] The next is the 6th of May, 1715.

Bermingham et al. v. Lord Shelburne } Mr. Cliffe pro Q. moves on the last Notes for putting off the giving of the Judgment of the Court on Affidavit.

The next is the 9th of May, 1715.

Lawless v. Shee } Mr. Cliffe pro Q. moves on last Order for putting off the Hearing a Week.

The next is the 11th of May, 1715.

Bermingham et al. v. Lord Shelburne } Mr. Cliffe prays a Day to speak to this Matter.

The next is the 12th of May, 1715.

Archer v. Rogers } Mr. Cliffe pro D. moves for Time to answer personal Interrogatories as to several Books, in regard the Books are very large, and produces an Affidavit of this Matter.

The next is the 13th of May, 1715.

Wattson v. Butler } Mr. Cliffe pro D. moves for to dissolve the Injunction.

The next is the 14th of May, 1715.

White & Ux. v. Gale et al. } Mr. Cliffe pro Q. moves on the Notes upon the Hearing.

The next is the 31st of May, 1715.

Thomas White v. David Dunbarr } Mr. Cliffe opens the Defendant's Answer.

The next is the 1st of June, 1715.

Archer v. Rogers } Mr. Cliffe pro D. the Plaintiff never demanded any Custom for Timber these fourteen Years.

The next is the 18th of June, 1715.

Bermingham v. Lord Shelburne } Mr. Cliffe pro Q. moves on the Order for Liberty to read the Bill and Answer in the Cause of Stewart against the Lord Shelburne.

The next is the 23d of June, 1715.

King v. Gore et al. } Mr. Cliffe pro D. moves on Affidavit for a Commission to examine.

The next is the 25th of June, 1715.

Bermingham et al. v. Lord Shelburne } Mr. Cliffe pro Q. Stewart et al. have a Decree against Lord Shelburne, Evans et al. and they have a Decree for the 29,503 and also for the 21,032 Acres, and on the Hearing of this Cause the Bill of Stewart and others and the Lord Shelburne's Answer was offered to be read, but the Court has not yet read that Bill and Answer; prays that Bill and Answer may be read, before the Bill is dismissed.

Mr. Bradstreet.] How many of your Name were at the Bar in the Year 1715?

Mr. Cliffe.] I know of no Person of that Name but my Father.

Q. Did you ever attend the Courts?——A. I did not, Sir.

Q. Did you know Mr. Anthony Colclough, Sir?——A. Yes.

Q. Of what Religion was he?—A. He was reputed a Papist.

Q. Is he alive or dead?—A. I have heard that he is dead.

Q. Did not he die a Papist?

A. He was reputed a Papist during his Life.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. MacManus.] Did you attend the Terms in the Year 1715 or 1716?---A. I did not attend in 1715 or 1716.

Q. Was your Father the only Person of the Name that professed the Law?

A. There might be another, but I never heard of any.

Mr. Walsh.] It has not been taken notice of in what Terms these Motions have been made. Here is a Chasm of about a Fortnight between the first and last Motion, and there is so between the two Terms. The first Rule is on the 5th of May, the last the 25th of June, so that it must be in two Terms that they were made.

Court.] So it was.

Mr. Walsh.] Well, then there was a short Vacation, when he might have been in the Country, and stood Godfather to the Child.

Court.] But you will consider, one of the Witnesses said the Christening was four or five Weeks, and another three or four Weeks after the Birth.

13. Mrs. Penelope Halpen.

Mr. Lee.] What was your Maiden name?---Mrs. Halpen.] Hunt, Sir.

Q. Whose Daughter are you?---A. Daughter to John Hunt of Glangoole, near Killenaule, in the County of Tipperary.

Q. Where did he live in the Year 1714, 1715, and 1716?

A. He lived there, Sir.

Q. Do you remember the Eclipse of the Sun?---A. I do.

Q. Where was you at that time?---A. I was at my Father's House then.

Q. Were you acquainted with Counsellor Pigot and his Wife?

A. I was.

Q. What was the Occasion of your being acquainted with them?

A. He broke his Thigh near my Father's House, and came and lay there till he was cured.

Q. When was that?---A. In the Year that the Eclipse happened.

Q. Was Mrs. Pigot there?

A. She was there at the Time of the Eclipse.

Q. How long did she stay after the Eclipse?---A. I cannot tell indeed.

Q. How long was she there before?---A. I cannot tell indeed.

Q. Was she a Fortnight, or a Month, or how long?
A. I cannot tell how many Days.
Q. Who came there first, he or she?—A. He came first.
Q. How long was he there before she came?
A. He was a few Days before she came.
Q. Who came with her?---A. Mrs. Wallace.
Q. In what State of Health was he?
A. He was in his Bed with that broken Leg.
Q. How long did he keep his Bed?
A. I cannot tell how long he kept it; whether a Month or six Weeks I cannot tell.

Court.] How long did his Wife stay with him?
A. I believe more than a Month.

Mr. Lee.] Were they visited by any body while they stayed there?
A. By several.
Q. Can you recollect any one that visited them?
A. Mr. Cæsar Colclough was there; whether to pay him a Visit or not I cannot tell, but I saw him there.
Q. Did they leave your Father's House together?
A. They did, to the best of my Memory and Knowledge.
Q. Where did they go to from your Father's House?
A. I cannot tell indeed.

Court.] Did they come to your Father's before or after the great Eclipse?
A. Before.
Q. Was Mrs. Pigot there before the great Eclipse?
A. She was indeed.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Serjeant Tisdall.] Can you be positive of the Time that she came to your Father's House?---A. I cannot tell what Time.
Q. Can you say whether she was there at the Time of this Eclipse?
A. Yes.
Q. Are you sure she was?---A. I am sure she was.
Q. Was any Person with her at that time?
A. Mrs. Wallace and she were there.
Q. Have you any particular Reason for being so certain?
A. Yes, Sir, I was in the Garden when the Eclipse happened, and I called Mrs. Wallace out, to the Garden, to look at the Eclipse with me.
Q. When was the Eclipse?---A. I cannot tell, Sir.
Q. How long after the Eclipse did Mrs. Pigot stay?
A. I cannot tell indeed.
Q. How long did she come before it?---A. Nor how long before she came.

Mr. Le Hunte.] My Lord, we now produce Mr. Sutton, who will shew your Lordship that Dennis Redmond in the Year 1718 told him, that he carried a Midwife to Dunmaine to deliver one there, who was called my Lady.

14. William Sutton, Esq.

Mr. Le Hunte.] Pray, Sir, do you know Dennis Redmond?
Mr. Sutton.] I do, Sir.
Q. When did you first know him?---A. I believe in the Year 1717.
Q. Was he ever in the Service of you or your Mother?
A. He lived in the House with us in the Year 1717.
Q. Had you ever a Sister at that Time?---A. I had.
Q. Had she any Occasion for a Midwife?---A. She had, Sir.
Q. Was any body sent for a Midwife?---A. Dennis Redmond was sent.
Q. Will you give an Account of what you remember of the bringing her by him to your Sister?

A. I believe it was in February 1717 that I sent him to Ross for Mrs. Shiel; he went out pretty early in the Morning, so as I expected him home before Dinner, but he did not return till an Hour or two in the Night, which made me imagine he had Occasion to go further for her; and when he came home, I went to the Stable to look what Condition the Horse was in. When I came into the Stable, I found him taking care of the Horse, and asked him how he came to stay so late; he told me he could not get her to come away sooner; and upon examining the Horse, I took up the Saddle and Pillion, and found him very warm and wet; upon which, I asked him how that came? He said, he could not tell, unless that unhappy Woman had pissed upon the Pillion, for that she was fond of Drink, and had served him so once before.

Q. Upon what Occasion did he tell you he had been sent for her before?
A. He told me he had brought her once from Ross to Dunmaine for a young Gentlewoman, as he called her, that was kept by my Lord Altham.
Q. Go on, Sir.
A. He named the young Gentlewoman's Name, but I will not take upon me to swear her Name; I do not remember now what he called her.
Q. Who was it he said he brought the Midwife for?
A. He said, he brought her for a young Gentlewoman kept by my Lord Altham.
Q. Did he ever tell you that he fetched one for my Lady Altham?
A. He never did.
Q. What is the Character of Redmond, is he to be credited upon his Oath?
A. Why, of late Years he is not reckoned a Man of Veracity in our Country.
Q. Is he to be believed upon his Oath?
A. I should take but very little Notice of his Oath now.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Mac-Manus.] Why now?
A. From his general bad Character in the Country.
Q. How long has he had that general bad Character?
A. He has not had a good one these several Years.
Q. Do you know him to have perjured himself?
A. I did not know him to have perjured himself in a Court of Justice.

Mr. Edmond Malone.] We now produce Nicholas Croake, and he will shew that my Lady Altham stayed in Dunmaine in the Months of October and November 1714, that she went to Dublin in May following, and stayed in Dublin all the Year 1715.

15. Nicholas Croake.

Mr. Edmond Malone.] When did you first become acquainted with Lord and Lady Altham?

Nicholas Croake.] The first time that I knew Lord Altham was in the Year 1711.

Q. And when with my Lady?---A. In the Year 1713.
Q. Where did you live in the Year 1713?---A. At Ballycarrigmore.
Q. How near is that to Dunmaine?
A. I believe very near two small Miles the high Road, but to go a short Road it is much nearer.
Q. You say in the Year 1713 you first knew my Lady, where was it you first saw her?
A. In 1713, that was the first time that I saw her at Dunmaine, some time after she came there, in December 1713.
Q. Do you know Rathimny Bogg in that Country?---A. Very well.
Q. Do you know any thing particular that happened there?
A. I do, very well.
Q. Give an Account of what you know.
A. In the Year 1714, his Lordship and Major John Sutton made a Hurling-match, to be hurl'd at the Green of Rathimny.
Q. What time of the Year was that Hurling-match?
A. It was hurled in September 1714, or the Beginning of October 1714; I cannot tell whether in October or the latter End of September.
Q. Pray, Sir, how long after that, and when did you see Lady Altham at Dunmaine?
A. I saw her that Day at the Hurling Green in her Chariot.
Q. Was my Lord there?---A. He was on Horseback.
Q. Pray, Sir, were you at any time and when at Wexford in the Year 1715?
A. I was there at the Assizes in 1715, which happened upon Easter Week.
Q. I ask you, Sir, whether there were any and what Persons of Consequence there that you took notice of?
A. Lord and Lady Altham were there.
Q. Between the time of the Hurling-match and the time of the Assizes, did you visit them at Dunmaine?
A. I was very often at Dunmaine in the Year 1714, when they lived there.
Q. Were you ever there in November 1714?
A. I was often there between the Hurling-match and Christmas 1714.
Q. Were you there in November that Year?---A. I cannot tell that.
Q. Did you see my Lord and Lady often between the Hurling-match and the Assizes?——A. I did, Sir.
Q. When you saw my Lady at the Assizes, did you observe her to be with Child?
A. I never did, by the Virtue of my Oath, nor never heard she was 'till this Affair.
Q. After the Assizes, can you recollect any Misfortune that happened in your Family?
A. When I was at Wexford Assizes, my Father, being ill for several Months before, died; when I came home the 20th of April 1715, he was dead before I came home, and was buried that Friday that the great Eclipse happened, the 22d of April.
Q. Do you remember any Rejoicings at Dunmaine about the Time of the Eclipse, and on what Occasion?
A. I cannot tell you on what Occasion, but on the 23d of April, being St. George's Day, that my Lord made a Merriment, it was on a Saturday, the Day after my Father's Burying.
Q. Did my Lord Altham celebrate any Day, and what Day in the Year with Dancing and Merriment?
A. That Day he did, the 23d of April 1715, and the 23d of April 1714 before.
Q. Did you see Lady Altham at the time you were there?
A. I saw her there, indeed.
Q. Was she present at the Diversion?—A. She was.
Q. In what Condition did she appear, as to being with Child then?
A. By the Virtue of my Oath, I never saw her appear as to say she was any way big, or with Child.
Q. How soon after did they go from Dunmaine to Dublin?
A. They went in May 1715 to Dublin.
Q. Did you see them at any time after, and when?
A. I saw them in August 1715.
Q. Was that the August after the Assizes?
A. It was in August 1715 that I saw them in Dublin.
Q. Did you see them at any time that Year besides, and how soon after?
A. I did see them in October 1715, and in February 1715 I seen them here; and in April 1716, the latter End of that Month I came to Town to my Lord, and staid till he went into the Country in May 1716.
Q. Where was my Lady then?---A. I saw her at her Lodging.
Q. Where?---A. At Mrs. Vice's in Essex-street.
Q. Can you say when my Lord returned to Dunmaine?
A. He went from Dublin to Dunmaine in May 1716.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Mac Manus.] You say, you knew my Lord and Lady Altham at Dunmaine?——A. I did, Sir.
Q. Pray, how often did you see them there?
A. I cannot tell, but very often.
Q. I think you said, that my Lady was not with Child when you saw her?
A. I did say so, and I never heard it 'till this Affair.
Q. Might not she have been with Child and you not know it?
A. I should have heard it in the House where I was so conversant.
Q. Might not she have been with Child and you not know it?
A. I never knew her to be with Child.
Q. What sort of a Woman was Lady Altham?
A. She was a clever proper Woman.
Q. Was she tall?——A. She was tall.
Q. May not a tall Woman be with Child and you not observe it, if she was young with Child?
A. If she was, I never saw it nor heard it.
Q. Did you ever hear that she miscarried?---A. I never did.
Q. You say you were at the Assizes of Wexford?---A. I was.
Q. Was you there in Easter Assizes 1716?
A. In Easter Assizes 1715, I was there.
Q. Were you there in Easter Assizes 1716, or any other Assizes?

A. I

A. I cannot tell but I might be at other Aſſizes, I do not remember which now.

Q. How came you to know you were there in 1715?

A. I gave you a Reaſon before, that my Father was ill when I went to the Aſſizes, and I found him dead when I came home.

Q. Was Mr. Colclough at that Aſſizes?---A. I believe he may be there.

Q. Would not you have ſeen him, if he had been there?

A. There may be ſeveral there, that I did not ſee.

Q. Name any Perſon you did ſee there.---A. I ſaw Lady Altham there.

Q. How came you to take more particular notice of her being there than of Mr. Colclough's?

A. Becauſe I was much better acquainted with them than him; and I had very great Reaſon for it.

Q. Did you ſee her go into Court?---A. I did not.

Q. Was ſhe in it to your Knowledge?---A. She was, as I was told.

Q. Were you in the Court during the Aſſizes?

A. I was in it ſometimes, and I cannot tell well whether I was or not, but I believe I was.

Q. What coloured Cloaths had ſhe on at Wexford then?--A. I cannot tell.

Q. Where was it you ſaw her at that Aſſizes?

A. At her Lodging at Captain Sweeny's, at Wexford.

Q. Where did he live?

A. In the Street as you go down towards the Gaol.

Q. How came you to ſee her there?

A. Becauſe I came to his Lordſhip about ſome Buſineſs.

Q. Did you ſee her whenever you went to ſee my Lord at any other Time?---A. Perhaps I might, and perhaps not.

Q. Where was my Lord at Wexford when you ſaw him?

A. I ſaw him at Captain Sweeny's Houſe.

Q. And where did you ſee my Lady?

A. She was coming out of the Room when I ſaw her.

Q. What ſort of Cloaths did ſhe wear then?

A. I cannot tell what ſort of Cloaths, it is ſo long ſince.

Jury.] Pray, Sir, when did you hear of your Father's Death?

A. Not until I came home, in the Night.

Q. How long was you at home after he was buried?

A. I came home before he was buried, he died on Wedneſday, and I came home that Night, and he was buried on Friday the twenty-ſecond of April.

Q. How far do you live from Dunmaine?

A. About two Miles, or thereabouts.

Q. Was you at Dunmaine the twenty-third of April?

A. I was there the twenty-third of April, the Day after my Father was buried.

Mr. Mac Manus.] How many Days did you ſtay at the Aſſizes?

A. Two Days, Sir.

Q. Were you there the firſt Day of the Aſſizes?

The Witneſs is directed to go off the Table.

The Examination of the Witneſſes for the Traverſer ended at three o'Clock in the Morning.

Mr. Solicitor.] I mentioned to your Lordſhip ſome time ago, that if theſe Gentlemen offered any thing new, we would reſerve a Liberty of replying, and encountering ſome Teſtimony that we expected on the other Side. It relates to the Tranſaction at Wexford, on which they lay great Weight; in anſwer to which, for the Satisfaction of the Jury, we ſhall beg leave to have two or three Witneſſes produced.

Court.] Well, be it ſo. Who do you call?

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] We ſhall now call Mr. John Maſterſon, the very Man that was tried at that Aſſizes.

Mr. Malone, Mr. Daly, &c.] Not one of the Witneſſes ſaid that he was tried, but that Walſh was.

Mr. Robins.] This is to ſhew whether Lady Altham was there or not.

1. Mr. John Masterson.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] Was you at the Aſſizes of Wexford in Spring 1715?——Mr. John Maſterſon.] I was, Sir.

Q. Pray, Sir, was you arraigned there?---A. I was.

Q. Can you ſay whether there was any Lady at the Court-houſe the Day you were arraigned?

A. There were ſome Gentlewomen there, but I know of no Lady.

Q. Did you take notice of any of them?

A. There were two Aunts of mine, and a Siſter of mine, and two Couſin-Germans.

Q. Who were they? Name them.---A. My Aunt Swords, my Aunt Talbot, my Siſter Colclough, and my Aunt Talbot's two Daughters.

Court.] Did you know Lady Altham then?---A. I did.

Q. Did you ſee her in the Court-houſe that Day?

A. I take it upon me, to the beſt of my Knowledge, to ſay, that I did not ſee her.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Anne Giffard?---A. I did know her formerly, but have not ſeen her ſince the laſt Time I ſeen her at Wexford.

Q. Did you ſee her in Court?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, ſhe was not there.

Q. Was ſhe in Wexford at that Aſſizes?

A. If ſhe was, ſhe was not in Court.

Q. How do you know?---A. Becauſe I did not ſee her.

Q. And might not ſhe be there for all that?

A. She might be in Diſguiſe, may be.

Q. Would you know her now if you ſaw her?

A. I do not believe I would, for I live very remote from that Part of the Country, and have not ſeen her a long time.

Q. Might not ſhe be there and you not ſee her?

A. Not, except ſhe kept behind Backs.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall]. Did you know Lady Altham before that Aſſizes?

A. I have ſeen her before at Roſs at Captain Butler's, my Wife's Father-in-Law's.

Q. Were you acquainted with her Face?---A. I was.

Q. Did you, or did you not ſee her in the Court at the Aſſizes?

A. I did not ſee her, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Mr. Daly.] Was Lord Altham there?---A. He was.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] Was Cæſar Colclough there?---A. He was.

Q. Whereabouts was he in the Court-houſe?

A. I do not remember whereabouts he was.

Court.] This is improper; it is not regular, Mr. Serjeant. It is Evidence to the ſame Fact, your Evidence now muſt be only to diſcredit the Witneſſes.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] My Lord, it is a new Fact ariſen upon their Teſtimony.

Q. Did you ſee Lady Altham there at any other Aſſizes?---A. I did.

Q. At what other Aſſizes?

A. I cannot tell which Aſſizes, but it was after that, and I have ſeen Mrs. Giffard with her, and it was not the Aſſizes I was tried.

Q. Are you ſure it was not the Aſſizes 1715?---A. It was not.

Q. Were you tried at that Aſſizes?

A. I was arraigned, and tried then, and acquitted with Honour.

Q. Was Mr. Walſh tried at the ſame time?

A. He was not tried by the ſame Jury, nor the ſame Day.

Q. Pray, were you both at the ſame time in Court?---A. We were, Sir.

Mr. Recorder.] I aſk you, Sir, were you under ſo little Concern, as that you reckoned all the Ladies in the Court?

Court.] You eſtabliſh him as a Witneſs properly produced, if you croſs-examine him.

Mr. John Maſterſon.] There were more Women that I do not remember.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] We beg leave to produce Mr. Colclough.

Jury to Mr. Maſterſon.] What was the Day you were tried on?

A. I believe it was on Wedneſday I was tried, to the beſt of my Memory, and I believe it was the twentieth of April.

Q. On what Day was Mr. Walſh tried?

A. Mr. Walſh was tried the Day before me.

Q. Did the Court ſit the Day after you were tried?

A. I did not mind that, for I was drinking with my Friends and minding other Buſineſs, and did not mind that; I believe the Judges diſcharged the Country.

Q. Were you in Court when Walſh was tried?---A. I was.

Mr. Mac Manus.] Mr. Colclough has met with a very great Misfortune by the Death of a valuable Son, but for the Sake of publick Juſtice he will appear here.

2. Cæsar Colclough, Eſq.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] Were you at the Spring Aſſizes of Wexford in the Year 1715?

Mr. Cæſar Colclough.] I was, Sir.

Q. Did you ſee Lady Altham or Mrs. Giffard there?

A. I did not that I know of.

Q. Were you in the Court-houſe when the Pretender's Men were tried?——A. I was.

Q. Pray, Sir, were Lady Altham and Mrs. Giffard there?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, they were not.

Q. Did you ſit by them at thoſe Trials?---A. I did not, Sir.

Q. Pray, Sir, did you hand either of them into Court?—A. I handed neither of them into Court, by the Virtue of my Oath.

Q. Did you attend the whole Trial?

A. I did, and was there before and after.

Q. You were acquainted with Mr. Pigot, I preſume?---A. What Pigot?

Q. Counſellor Pigot, that was married to Mrs. Pigot of Tyntern.

A. Yes, he was married to my Relation.

Q. Can you ſay where he was in Spring 1715?

A. To the beſt of my Knowledge, he was then in England.

Q. Do you remember his breaking his Leg?---A. I do, Sir; I remember he broke it at Glangoole in the County of Tipperary.

Q. Pray, Sir, what Year was that?

A. In the Year 1716, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. Did you go to the County of Tipperary to ſee him?

A. I was in Town here when he broke his Leg, and my Couſin Pigot wrote to me, ſhe had a Jointure upon that Eſtate, and wrote to me that I ſhould come——

Mr. Daly.] I muſt object to this Evidence Mr. Colclough is going into; thoſe Letters, Sir, that you received from Mrs. Pigot are not Evidence.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] Do you know Dennis Redmond?---A. I do.

Q. Pray, Sir, what Character does he bear; is he a Man to be credited upon Oath?

A. Upon my Word, I believe he is to be credited upon his Oath; if you will aſk me for my Reaſons, I will give them to you.

Q. What is his general Character?

A. He has as good a Character as any Man of his Abilities that I know of in the World; I have known him theſe twenty Years.

Q. Pray, Sir, do you know when Counſellor Pigot died?

A. I believe in the Year 1719, or thereabouts; he was buried in St. Paul's Church, the Time of his Death is on his Tomb there; I believe it was 1718 or 1719, or thereabouts, I am not certain.

Court.] Do you know whether Mrs. Pigot went to her Huſband when he broke his Leg?

A. She did; and ſtaid with him 'till he came to Dublin.

Q. Do you remember what Year it was?

A. It was in the Year 1716, as near as I can recollect.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Recorder.] Can you ſwear that Lady Altham was not at the Aſſizes in the Year 1715?

A. I can, as poſitively as I can ſwear any thing in the World.

Q. Can you, that ſhe was not at the Aſſizes?

A. I can, that ſhe was not in the Court.

Q. Can you ſwear that ſhe was not in the Town?

A. I cannot take upon me to ſwear that ſhe was not in the Town.

Q. Can you ſwear that Mr. Pigot did not break his Leg in the Year 1715?---A. I can, to the beſt of my Memory.

Q. But can you poſitively ſwear that he did not break his Leg in the Year 1715?

A. I can ſwear that it was not in the Spring 1715, becauſe I was at the Wexford Aſſizes, and my Couſin wrote to me to come to her.

Q. Where was ſhe?---A. She was at Glangoole.

Q. At whoſe Houſe there?

A. At one Hunt's, it was a thatched Houſe.

Q. Do you remember Penelope Hunt, a Daughter there?

A. I cannot tell, I might ſee Women there, but did not take ſuch Notice as to remember them.

Q. Do not you believe that Mr. Hunt's Family knew when Mr. Pigot broke his Leg? Was not it broke near them?

A. Upon my Word, Sir, I do not believe they knew better than I; becauſe I was directed by my Couſin to come down, and I did; and I found her there, and Surgeons ſetting his Leg, and I am ſure it was the Year 1716.

Q. Where was Mrs. Pigot in the Year 1715?

A. She was in the Winter 1714, I am poſitive that ſhe was at Tyntern, and ſhe ſeldom left it 'till towards May, or thereabouts.

Q. Do you know James Walſh?---A. He did not live with her then.

Q. Did not he live with her in the Year 1715?

A. No, Sir, nor his Wife neither.

Q. Where did they live?

A. They lived in Town, or ſomewhere elſe, but not in our Family.

Q. Was not he an Attendant of the Family at that Time?

A. No, Sir, I believe he was then a Door-keeper to the Play-houſe.

Q. Upon your Oath, do you know that of your own Knowledge?

A. I do know it ſo far, as I had it from his own Mouth, upon my Oath, that he was a Door-keeper at the Play-houſe.

Q. How long before that was he in their Service?

A. He had not been in the Service before.

Q. Was not he in the Service at all?

A. He was afterwards, but he was not in the Service at the Time Mr. Pigot broke his Leg at all.

Jury.] Was Lord Altham at the Aſſizes of Wexford in 1715?

A. I do not recollect any Thing about him at all; I was told he was, but he was a Man taken very little Notice of.

Q. Do you know whether he was in Court or not at the Trial?

A. I do not know whether he was in the Court or not.

Mr. Recorder.] Do you remember where you were at the Time of the Eclipſe?

A. I was in the County of Wexford; I was hunting on the Mountain of Forth at the very Inſtant of the Eclipſe.

Q. Did you, or did you not ſee Lord Altham at Wexford Aſſizes?

A. I did not ſee him there, to the beſt of my Knowledge.

Q. Recollect, and ſay upon your Oath, whether you did or no?

A. I do not recollect, I cannot ſay I did not ſee him or that I did, upon my Oath.

Mr. Serjeant Tiſdall.] We ſhall trouble your Lordſhip but with two Witneſſes more, and them but to two ſhort Points. The firſt relates to Edmond Bourke; we produce Mr. Buſh to give an Account of that Man, and a Character of him too.

3. Arthur Bush, Eſq.

Mr. Solicitor.] Do you know Edmond Bourke?

Mr. Buſh.] I do, him of Collombkill.

Q. Do you remember that he was a Poſtillion to any body?---A. I do not.

Q. What is he now?---A. He is a kind of a Farmer now.

Q. Had you any Diſcourſe with him about the Affairs of the Angleſea Family?---A. I had a Diſcourſe with him.

Q. Give an Account what that Diſcourſe was.

A. A little after the Time that Mr. Anneſley and Lord Angleſea were at Roſs, examining Witneſſes, this Bourke came to my Houſe about ſome Buſineſs of a Juſtice of Peace, and after I had done what he came about, I aſked him whether he was at Roſs, and what was doing there? He told me there was a great deal of Company, and he ſaid he gave ſome Evidence there. I then aſked him on which Side he was a Witneſs; he told me, on the Earl's Side. What was it, ſays I, that you had to ſay? He ſwore that he was Servant to Lord Altham, when he lived at Dunmaine, and that there was a Kitchen Maid there that my Lord had got with Child, that ſhe was under the Cook in the Kitchen, and that all the Family diſliked her, becauſe ſhe took a great deal upon her for lying with my Lord. That one Day there was a Hare in the Kitchen to be dreſſed for Dinner, and the Cook took the Skin of the Hare off and threw it at her, and hit her upon the Back, and ſaid, Damn you, for a Whore, if I can do nothing elſe, I will mark your Baſtard. Some Time after, he ſaid, ſhe was brought-to-bed of a Son, and they were all deſirous to ſee if it had that Mark, and they run to ſee it, and it had the Mark of the Hare's Skin upon the Back of it. I told him, this is a very material Thing, and I thought you were a cunninger Fellow than to be pinned down to ſwear ſuch a Thing as that. Oh! ſays he, if they do not like that, I can ſay that my Son was that Day drowned, and that I was a Madman and did not know what I was doing. He ſwore further, that there was a Quarrel between my Lord and Lady Altham on Account of Tom Palliſer; and upon that, he ſaid, they parted, and my Lord lived at a Place called Dunmaine, and ſhe in Roſs, and he went with a Compliment from my Lord to my Lady, with a How-do-you-do, and ſaid, that he ſaw my Lord very fond of the Child; and, ſays he, I ſpoke to my Lord about it and ſaid, How can you be ſo very fond of that Baſtard? Why, ſays he, I got him, and I will take Care of him, I will get him to be a Captain of Horſe.

Q. What Character has this Bourke?

A. He is of a very bad Character.

Q. Is he to be believed upon his Oath?

A. I will not believe him; nor no one that ever heard talk of him would believe him.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. I have known him theſe ſix-and-twenty Years, and I have known him under a bad Character during that Time.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Recorder.] Had you any Diſcourſe with this Man about a Child of Lady Altham's?

A. No indeed, he told me that ſhe never had a Child.

Mr. Juſtice Blennerhasset.

Gentlemen of the Jury, The Traverſer, Mary Heath, is indicted for Perjury, committed by her on her Examination in the Court of Exchequer, in a Cauſe wherein Campbell Craig, Leſſee of James Anneſley, was Plaintiff, and the Earl of Angleſea, Defendant. The ſeveral Aſſignments of Perjury in the Indictment are as follow:

Firſt, It is laid in the Indictment, that ſhe ſwore on that Trial that Lady Altham never had a Child, while ſhe, the Traverſer, lived with her.

Secondly, That Lady Altham never had a Child at Dunmaine in the County of Wexford.

The third is, That there never was a Child as a Child of Lord Altham's and Mary his Lady chriſtened or living at Dunmaine Houſe, while ſhe, the Traverſer, was there.

The fourth, That ſhe never ſaw a Child in the Hands or Care of Joan Laffan while ſhe was at Dunmaine.

And the fifth is this, That Lady Altham did not miſcarry of a Child at Dunmaine.

The Indictment, Gentlemen, averreth the contrary of all theſe Facts, ſworn by the Traverſer, to be true, and that ſhe has been guilty of malicious, wilful and corrupt Perjury. There have been many Witneſſes produced by the Proſecutor in Support of this Indictment, and many in Support of the Traverſer; and it has been admitted, that there was a Verdict in that Cauſe tried in the Exchequer, and that Verdict was given on the Side of the Party, who was to gain by having the Traverſer's Teſtimony diſcredited: And it is alſo admitted, that thoſe ſeveral Facts above-mentioned were ſworn by the Traverſer on that Trial in Ejectment. It is likewiſe admitted by both Sides, that the Traverſer lived with Lady Altham from the Month of October 1713, the Time of her firſt coming into this Kingdom, till the Year 1729, when Lady Altham died. All theſe are admitted, to ſhorten the Time.

" [The firſt Witneſs examined by the Proſecutor was Mrs. Henrietta
" Cole, whoſe Teſtimony related to the Miſcarriage of Lady Altham.
" She ſwears, that Lady Altham came over in 1713. That Lord and " Lady Altham lived at Dunmaine. That they, and Mrs. Cole, and " her Mother, were at Dinner at Dunmaine. That there were Sawcers
" of indecent Images brought to Table, which were broke by my Lord,
" whereby my Lady Altham received a Fright, and that Mrs. Heath came
" and alarmed her Mother that Night with the Indiſpoſition of Lady Al-
" tham; and that Mrs. Cole was in Bed with her Mother, when Mrs.
" Heath deſired her Mother to make haſte, and riſe, for that Lady Al-
" tham was extremely ill. And the Witneſs ſaid, ſhe believed, that " Lady Altham miſcarried, for that ſhe ſaw the Abortion in Lady Altham's
" Cloſet; ſhe firſt ſaid, that the Abortion was ſhewed to her by her Mother,
" and did not remember any particular Converſation about a Miſcarriage,
" with Lady Altham; that Lady Altham was confined to her Chamber a
" Fortnight, and that ſhe mentioned this Affair to Mr. Monk's Family.
" This is the Subſtance of her direct Teſtimony. But ſhe is not quite " ſo conſiſtent when croſs-examined.
" You obſerve, Gentlemen, that Mrs. Cole ſays, that Lord and Lady
" Altham went from her Father, to lodge at another Lodging, and that
" from thence they went to Dunmaine. In this Point, the Witneſſes for
" the Traverſer ſtand in Contradiction to her; for they ſwear, that Lord
" and Lady Altham went directly from Mrs. Cole's Father's Houſe to " Dunmaine. Mrs. Setwright, who was hired to be the Houſekeeper, is " particular in her Teſtimony herein, that Lord and Lady Altham went
" from Mrs. Briſcoe's, and not from Vice's, to Dunmaine. Mrs. Cole ſaid,
" that Setwright was brought-to-bed in Dunmaine. Setwright and ſhe
" agree in this Part of the Evidence.
" Mrs. Cole ſaid, ſhe was examined in the Court of Exchequer, and
" there declared, that ſhe and her Mother went down to Dunmaine,
" from Dublin, in March or April, in the Spring immediately following
" Lady Altham's coming over to this Kingdom. But now ſhe corrects
" herſelf, and ſays, ſhe then miſtook the Time, for that it was in Fe-
" bruary ſhe and her Mother went to Dunmaine. She ſays, the Accident
" of China Sawcers happened two Months after going to Dunmaine, and
" that four Gentlemen and her Mother and ſhe dined with Lord and Lady
" Altham that Day, and were preſent at that Accident: She does not " mention who they are, but conceals their Names. In her Teſtimony,
" ſhe deſcribes the Room. She tells you, Gentlemen, that Lord Altham
" emptied the Sawcers very carefully from the Sweetmeats, and threw
" them down, one by one. She ſwears, that Lord Altham knew his Lady
" was with Child. She ſays, that ſhe believes that ſhe ſwore, that ſhe
" was about 13 Years old, at the Time of the former Trial; but now
" ſhe ſays ſhe was born in the Year 1691, ſo that ſhe muſt be then about 23
" Years old, and differs now 10 Years from the Account ſhe gave of her
" Age on her former Examination. She tells you now, that one might
" obſerve the large Eyes and Head of the Abortion. She admits to have
" ſaid, on the former Trial, that her Mother told her it was an Abor-
" tion; but now ſhe ſays, that her Mother and ſhe went into the Cloſet
" together. She ſaid on the former Trial, that Lady Altham ſat next to " her at Table, but now ſhe ſays that Lord Altham ſat next to her; and
" excuſes herſelf from theſe Miſtakes, that they all aroſe from the Con-
" fuſion ſhe was in at the Time of her Examination.
" She now will not be poſitive that Lady Altham went to Vice's
" before ſhe went to Dunmaine, but is poſitive ſhe went to other Lodg-
" ings. Says, ſhe does not remember the Houſemaid at Dunmaine, nor
" Bourke the Poſtillion. She tells you, ſhe paid a Viſit to Mr. Boyde's.
" She was aſked if ſhe knew Anthony Dyer, one of the Servants; She ſaid
" ſhe did not. She was aſked if ſhe was at Dunmaine on St. George's-day;
" ſhe ſaid ſhe believed ſhe was. She was aſked if ſhe remembered any
" Smock-Race to be at Dunmaine that Day; ſhe ſaid ſhe did not remem" ber of any Smock-Race. She denies ſhe ever had any Diſcourſe with
" Mr. Mark White, that ſhe could ſwear for Lord Angleſea, if her Leaſe
" was renewed. She ſaid ſhe did not know of any Fire, or Candle, be" ing in the Room when Mrs. Heath came to alarm her Mother of Lady
" Altham's being ill; but the Manner of her knowing Mrs. Heath was,
" by her Voice.
" The next Witneſs in behalf of the Proſecutor was Dr. Jemmatt. He " ſwore that he was Phyſician to Lord Altham ſeveral Years. He ſwears,
" That Lord Altham came to his Lodging to acquaint him of the Indiſpo-
" ſition of his Lady, and that he went along with my Lord to ſee her, and
" found her very warm, and preſcribed for her; but that afterwards he
" diſcovered by her all the Symptoms of Pregnancy, and that ſhe told
" him ſhe was gone three Months with Child. She ſaid ſhe was regu" lar 'till about two Months paſt, and thereupon he ordered her mild
Medicines:

" Medicines: He further ſaid, he believed, that Lady Altham was " with Child, and that her Complexion was altered, as pregnant Wo- " men are. He was aſked on the Croſs-Examination, whether there " was any infallible Rule to know a real from a falſe Conception. He " ſaid, the Colleges of Phyſicians of Dublin, or London, or the Royal " Society in London, could not as yet determine that Point.

" Hellen Moncriefe was the next Evidence. She ſwore, that Doctor " Walker recommended her as a Nurſe to Lady Altham. That ſhe met " him in Stafford-ſtreet the Beginning of November or December 1714. " That ſhe was three times at my Lady's Lodgings; that ſhe appeared as " big with Child as any Woman that had been gone ſix or ſeven Months, " that ſhe laid her Hands on her Belly near her Petticoat; though ſhe " was not quite ſo critical as the Doctor was in his Profeſſion, yet ſhe " ſeemed to know more of Lady Altham's Pregnancy than the Phyſician " knew. When ſhe was croſs-examined, ſhe ſaid, ſhe did not obſerve " any Child to move in her Belly.

" Mrs. Buſh was next examined. She ſaid, ſhe was acquainted with " Lady Altham, and ſaw her at New Roſs in February 1714, and that ſhe " ſeemed then to be with Child; and that ſhe was in Mourning for " Queen Anne. That ſhe was introduced to her there, and in a Day or " two paid her a Viſit. She ſays that ſhe ſaw her after the latter End of " June, to the beſt of her Recollection, without her big Belly. There " was nothing certain in her Teſtimony, and nothing material aroſe " from her Croſs-Examination; therefore, Gentlemen, I will not " trouble you therewith.

" Alice Betts ſwore, that ſhe wiſhed Lady Altham Joy, and in November " 1714, and after, had ſome Converſation with Mrs. Heath; and that ſhe " uſed to joke with her about Lady Altham's being with Child. She ſaid, " that Lady Altham appeared with Child, and that it was eaſy to be ſeen " that ſhe was with Child; that it was before or after Chriſtmas.

" Mary Sutton ſwore, that ſhe dined at Dunmaine, and toaſted the Boy " in the Box.

" As to Evan Thomas, and Martha Tenant, their Teſtimony was not " very material. You have it, Gentlemen, in your Notes.

" Anſtace Toole ſaid, ſhe fitted a Gown on Lady Altham, and that Mrs. " Heath was preſent. That ſhe ſaw the Child at Roſs, and made a Gown " for the Child, and ſaid that ſhe never had any Converſation with Lady " Altham about the Child.

" Anne Bennett ſaid, ſhe believed in her Heart, Lady Altham was with " Child, and that Lady Altham looked very round.

" Edward Howlett was the next Witneſs, who was examined after " Bennett. You have ſeen, Gentlemen, the mean Figure and Appear- " ance he made. He ſwore he ſold Clouts to Mrs. Heath, for Lady Al- " tham's Lying-in. That on the Day of Separation of Lord and Lady " Altham, her Ladyſhip kiſſed the Child in the Coach at parting. He ſaid " that this happened about ten or eleven o'Clock in the Morning. But " here, Gentlemen, I muſt take notice, that all the other Witneſſes " ſay it was in the Afternoon Lady Altham went from Dunmaine, the Day " of the Separation; and herein contradict Howlett.

" It is of no Purpoſe to mention all the Croſs-Examinations, therefore " I ſhall not repeat them to you.

" Newton Rickets ſaid, that he made a ſmall Chair for a Child, but did " not ſwear, that Lord and Lady Altham called him their Child, but that " they behaved to him as ſuch. I ſhall likewiſe not trouble you with " his Croſs-Examination.

" Elizabeth Doyle ſwore, that her Mother fell ill of a Fever, which " prevented her nurſing the Child. On her Croſs-examination ſhe ſaid, " that Madam Cole deſired her to go to Dunmaine laſt Summer to give an " Account of what ſhe could ſay, and that ſhe was not at Dunmaine for " twelve Years before.

" James Sinnot ſwears, that he ſaw Lord and Lady Altham at his Fa- " ther's Houſe, and obſerved that Lady Altham was with Child, and " that the Child was afterwards at Dunmaine, and that Lord Altham had " ordered the Child to be brought to Table to be ſhewn to the Witneſs " and Mr. Ivory, as his Son and Heir. This Piece of Evidence is ſome- " what extraordinary, that Lord Altham ſhould call his Son and Heir to " be ſhewn to him, and that he never ſaw the Child but once.

" James Fitzpatrick ſays, that he ſaw a Child in the Arms of a clean, " orderly Woman, and that he took it to be Lord Altham's legitimate " Child; and the only Reaſon he gave for it was, that he believed Lord " Altham had that Regard for him that he would not introduce his illegi- " timate Child to him, and that, to the beſt of his Memory, he ſaw the " Child once before the Separation. But I muſt obſerve to you, Gentle- " men, that no Witneſs of Figure has been produced to ſatisfy you that " Lady Altham miſcarried, or was brought-to-bed.

" You have given great Attention, Gentlemen, to the Evidences of " both Parties, and you have them on your Memory, therefore in regard " it is ſo late, at this Time I ſhall not trouble you farther with a Repe- " tition of them."]

Gentlemen, I ſee you are all greatly fatigued; I do not wonder at it, for I think we have ſat here without Refreſhment for near twenty-two Hours. You have heard the Evidence on both Sides, and ſeen the Witneſſes, ſo that it will be unneceſſary to take up more of your Time. I ſhall only obſerve to you, that the Crime the Traverſer ſtands charged with is a Crime of a high Nature; the Conſequence of a Conviction is no leſs than to make her perpetually infamous, never to be believed after in a Court of Juſtice; and therefore it is that Men of Honour will ſee, that Evidence is clear and demonſtrative, before they will lay ſuch an Imputation by their Verdict on any body: You will, for this Reaſon, weigh the Teſtimony on both Sides, and compare the Credit of the Witneſſes; and if, on the whole, you ſhall believe that the Balance goes on behalf of the Crown, you will then find the Traverſer guilty; if, on the other Hand, the Teſtimony in favour of the Traverſer outweighs the Crown Evidence, or is equal with Reſpect to Credit, even in that Caſe Juries rather incline to Mercy than otherwiſe; ſo that, Gentlemen, you'll go together, and I'll wait for you till you pleaſe to return with your Verdict.

Lord Chief-Juſtice MARLAY.

Gentlemen,

My Brother has ſummed up and obſerved upon the Evidence, ſo far as he has gone, as clearly and diſtinctly as poſſible.

There have been Twenty-five examined on behalf of the Proſecutor, beſides three new ones produced on the Reply, and no leſs than fifteen on the Part of the Traverſer. To repeat every thing they have ſaid would be endleſs, and almoſt impoſſible, conſidering the Time already taken up in this extraordinary Trial.

I ſhall only obſerve to you, that in a criminal Caſe of this Nature, the Teſtimony to convict any Perſon of ſo great and infamous an Offence, ought to be ſo full, clear and conſiſtent, that there can be no Room to doubt the Truth of what it is offered to prove.

Whether what you have heard on behalf of the Proſecutor, be ſuch of itſelf, conſidered without Regard to what has been given in Evidence for the Traverſer, you are the proper Judges.

Though there are many Witneſſes for the Crown, there are few material ones; and it has been obſerved to you already, that the bare Declarations of my Lord or Lady Altham are not Evidence in this Caſe.

The firſt Witneſs produced, Mrs. Cole, is a material Witneſs; my Brother has fully repeated her Teſtimony; I ſhall not add to his Obſervations; ſhe ſwears to the Miſcarriage, and there is no other Witneſs brought to ſupport her Teſtimony, though two contradict her.

The eleventh, Edmond Howlett, a Pedlar, is in ſome meaſure a material Witneſs; he ſwears that the Child was owned by Lady Altham before Mrs. Heath, and a Ribband bought for it by my Lady, and put on the Child by the Traverſer, and Diaper bought for it for Clouts, before it was born, by the Traverſer. You have ſeen and heard him, and are the beſt Judges how far he is to be credited.

James Fitzpatrick; the fifteenth, ſwears, though not ſo fully, to the ſame Purpoſe, the publick owning of the Child; and to this Purpoſe are thoſe who are produced to prove the Enquiry for a Nurſe, and the Child's being carried about by my Lord and Lady Altham.

Eleanor Murphy, the eighteenth, and Mary Doyle, the nineteenth Witneſs, are both material, and ſwear poſitively, that they were preſent at the Birth of the Child; and Dennis Redmond, the ſeventeenth, produced, ſwears almoſt as fully to the ſame Purpoſe, though he does not ſwear himſelf an Eye witneſs of the Birth.

Joan Laffan, the laſt produced by the Proſecutor, is a very poſitive and material Witneſs, if you credit her; ſhe dry-nurſed the Child in the Houſe with my Lord, and ſhe ſays, with my Lady too, where the Traverſer ſaw him every Day. As to all the others, they are only Evidences as to their Belief and Opinion, merely conjectural.

Doctor Jemmat, the Perſon of moſt Skill, told you, that neither he, nor the College of Phyſicians here, nor that in London, aſſiſted by the Royal Society, can diſtinguiſh between a falſe Conception and a real Pregnancy.

I ſaid the other Witneſſes were only to their Belief and Opinion; I muſt except Thomas Higginſon, who would have been a material Evidence, if his Memory did not fail him.

Now, Gentlemen, if you believe Eleanor Murphy, Mary Doyle, Dennis Redmond, and Joan Laffan, you have ſufficient Evidence to convict the Traverſer, Mrs. Heath; but if you ſhould not think them Perſons of Credit, you have not ſufficient poſitive Evidence on which you can ground ſuch a Verdict.

Three of theſe Witneſſes, Murphy, Doyle, and Redmond, ſwear to my Lady Altham's being delivered of a Son, and ſwear it very poſitively.

But if they ſwear truly, this Child was born at Dunmaine, and very near Eaſter, in the latter End of April, or Beginning of May 1715; and chriſtened at Dunmaine by Mr. Lloyd, a Clergyman of the Church of England, three, or four, or five Weeks after its Birth, and had for Godfathers and Godmother, Mr. Cliffe, Mr. Anthony Colclough, and Mrs. Pigot of Tyntern, who were all preſent.

If there was no Child of my Lady Altham's born at the Place and Time they poſitively ſwear to, nor chriſtened there, they are, I mean all theſe three Witneſſes, directly perjured.

Now, if my Lady Altham was at Wexford Aſſizes at that time, ſhe could not be delivered of a Child at Dunmaine. If Mr. Cliffe and Mrs. Pigot were, one in Dublin, and the other in the County of Tipperary, from the latter End of April till ſix Weeks after Eaſter, they could not poſſibly ſtand in Perſon as Goſſips to a Child of my Lady Altham's, chriſtened at Dunmaine in three, or four, or five Weeks after it was born.

Obſerve, Gentlemen, that it appears by the Almanack, that Eaſter Day in the Year 1715, fell on the 17th of April; the great Eclipſe of the Sun happened on the 22d of April; King George the Firſt's Birth-day, the 28th of May, was on a Saturday. On that Birth-day my Lady Altham was in Dublin. The Spring Aſſizes of Wexford began on Eaſter-Eve that Year. My Lady Altham is ſworn to have been there.

Now, as to my Lady Altham's being or not being at the Spring Aſſizes of Wexford in 1715, if the Matter ſhould ſtand doubtful; becauſe, tho' three Witneſſes of Credit have ſworn ſhe was, yet Mr. Maſterſon and Mr. Cæſar Colclough ſwear they did not ſee her there; yet it is impoſſible that Mrs. Pigot and Mr. Cliffe could be at a Chriſtening at Dunmaine, when they were at many Miles Diſtance at the time that Chriſtening was, if there were ever any ſuch Thing.

Mr. Cliffe is proved by the Records of the Court of Exchequer to have been in Dublin.

And Mrs. Pigot, by a Witneſs, (who, if ſhe ſwears the Truth, cannot be miſtaken) to have been at Mr. Hunt's in the County of Tipperary.

I muſt obſerve to you, that Mr. Arthur Buſh, the third and laſt Witneſs produced by the Proſecutors on their Reply, ſwears only to diſcredit Edmond Bourke the Poſtillion, a Witneſs on behalf of the Traverſer.

If you believe the Traverſer's Witneſſes, particularly Mrs. Gifford, Mary Setwright, and Sarah Weedon, my Lady never was brought-to-bed at Dunmaine; and conſequently Joan Laffan, who ſwears that ſhe had this Child put into her Hands by my Lord and Lady Altham, and that ſhe dry-nurſed it at Dunmaine, and all the reſt of the poſitive Witneſſes for the Proſecutor, are not in the leaſt to be credited.

You, Gentlemen, are Judges of the Fact; 'tis your Buſineſs to weigh the Teſtimony on both Sides, and, as you find one or other deſerve Credit, to find the Priſoner Guilty, or acquit her.

At Half-an-hour after four o'Clock the Jury left the Box, and after twenty Minutes Stay, returned with their Verdict for the Traverſer, Not Guilty.

XXVIII. The

XXVIII. The Trial of WILLIAM CHETWYND, Esq. for the Murder of Mr. THOMAS RICKETTS, before the Right Honourable Robert Willimot, Esq. Lord Mayor of the City of London, the Right Honourable the Lord Chief Justice Lee, the Honourable Mr. Baron Reynolds, Mr. Serjeant Urlin Recorder, and others his Majesty's Justices of Oyer and Terminer for the City of London, and Justices of Gaol Delivery of Newgate, holden at the Old-Bailey for the said City and County of Middlesex, the 12, 13, 14 and 17 of October 1743.

Counsel for the Crown.

Mr. Erskine.
Mr. Purcas.

Counsel for the Prisoner.

Mr. (afterwards Sir Richard) Lloyd.
Mr. (afterwards Mr. Baron) Legge.
Mr. Hume Campbell.
Mr. Hatsell.
Mr. Stracey, afterwards Recorder of London.

WILLIAM CHETWYND was indicted at Common Law for the Murder of Thomas Ricketts.

He was likewise indicted on the Statute of Stabbing by the Name of William Chetwynd, of the Parish of St. Ann, Westminster, in the County of Middlesex, Gent. for that he not having God before his Eyes, &c. on the 26th Day of September, in the 17th Year of his Majesty's Reign, with Force and Arms, in the said Parish, and the said County, in and upon Thomas Ricketts, in the Peace of God, and our Lord the King, then and there being, feloniously did make an Assault; and with a certain Knife made of Iron and Steel, of the Value of Six-pence, which he, the said William Chetwynd, then and there had, and held in his left Hand; him, the said Thomas Ricketts, in and upon the right Side of the Belly of him the said Thomas, below the Navel of him the said Thomas, then and there feloniously, and in the Fury of his Mind did strike and stab (he the said Thomas Ricketts then and there not having any Weapon drawn, nor the said Thomas Ricketts then and there having first stricken the said William Chetwynd), and that the said William Chetwynd, with the Knife aforesaid, did then and there give to the said Thomas Ricketts in and upon the right Side of the Belly of him, the said Thomas, below the Navel of him, the said Thomas, one mortal Wound, of the Breadth of half an Inch, and of the Depth of three Inches, of which mortal Wound the said Thomas, at the Parish aforesaid, and County aforesaid, from the said 26th Day of September until the 29th of the said Month of September, did languish, and languishing did live; upon which said 29th Day of September, the aforesaid Thomas Ricketts, in the said Parish, and the said County, of the said mortal Wound did die; and so the Jurors aforesaid do say, that the aforesaid William Chetwynd the aforesaid Thomas Ricketts feloniously, and in the Fury of his Mind, did kill and slay, against the Peace of our Lord the King, his Crown and Dignity.

He was a third Time indicted on the Coroner's Inquisition, for feloniously slaying the said Thomas Ricketts.

The Counsel for the Prisoner desired, that as the Prisoner had the Misfortune to be extremely deaf, he might have the Liberty of standing at the Inner Bar; which the Court readily granted.

The Counsel for the Prosecution having opened the several Indictments, and set forth the Circumstances relating to the Fact, they proceeded to examine their Witnesses.

Master WILLIAM HAMILTON sworn.

Counsel. I think you are one of the young Gentlemen who boarded at Mr. Clare's Academy in Soho-Square?——A. Hamilton. Yes, I am.

Q. Was you boarded there last September?—A. Yes.

Q. Was the Prisoner at the Bar at board there then?——A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember one Mr. Thomas Ricketts being there?

A. Yes, I was present when the Prisoner and Mr. Ricketts were together in the Room.

Q. What Time was it?—A. It was on the 26th of September.

Q. Who was in the Room when you went in?

A. There was one Samuel Malcher, Thomas Ricketts, and Mr. Chetwynd; they were the only Persons in the Room.

Q. What was the Conversation turning upon? What were they talking about, when you came into the Room?

A. Mr. Chetwynd had got some Cake, and Mr. Thomas Ricketts desired Mr. Chetwynd to give him a Piece of his Cake; Chetwynd denied it him; I asked him for a Piece, and he likewise denied it me.

Q. What happened then?

A. Hannah Humphreys came into the Room about that Time. Mr. Chetwynd took the Cake, and cut a Piece off, and laid the Piece upon the Bureau, and locked the other up; with that Mr. Ricketts came and took the Piece of Cake off the Bureau; Mr. Chetwynd asked him for it; and Mr. Ricketts laughing, went up to the Maid, and told her, he had taken a Piece of Mr. Chetwynd's Cake; with that, Mr. Chetwynd came up to him, and demanded it of him again.

Q. Did Mr. Ricketts deliver it to him again?—A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Ricketts refuse to deliver it?

A. Mr. Ricketts did not refuse to deliver it.

Q. What Answer did Mr. Ricketts give Mr. Chetwynd, when he asked him for the Cake again?

A. He gave him no Answer, but continued laughing.

Q. You mean he was laughing with you, not laughing at the Prisoner.

Prisoner's Counsel. That is nice indeed!

Prosecutor's Counsel. What happened next after this?

Hamilton. After Mr. Chetwynd demanded the Cake, and Mr. Ricketts giving him no Answer, he struck him immediately with the Knife, which he had in his Hand.

Q. Was it back-handed?—A. It was back-handed.

Jury. I desire he may speak a little louder; Was Ricketts behind him when he struck him with the Knife?

A. Mr. Ricketts's Side was to Mr. Chetwynd's. He was standing by his Side.

Q. How near were you to them?—A. Not very near.

Q. Where did you stand?—A. I stood a little Way before them.

Q. Where was this Blow given?

A. Just here about upon the Side (pointing to the right Side of the Belly).

Q. Did you see him pull the Knife out?

A. I did not see him pull it out.

Q. How do you know it was a Knife that he struck him with?

A. Because it was the same Knife that he cut the Cake with.

Q. What followed upon that?

A. Mr. Ricketts cried out he was afraid he was stabbed.

Q. Did Mr. Ricketts fall down?

A. No; he laid his Hand upon his Side, and said he was stabbed.

Q. What Sort of a Room is it?---A. It is a pretty large Room.

Q. What Part of the Room did the Scrutoire stand in?

A. It stood in the Corner of the Room by the Window; the Window and the Scrutoire were on the same Side.

Q. What Kind of a Knife was this?

A. It was a Sort of a French Knife.

Q. Was it a Penknife? or what Knife was it?

A. It was a pretty large Knife.

Q. Was it a Clasp Knife?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Chetwynd cut the Piece of Cake?——A. No.

Court. Did you see the Deceased take it away?---A. Yes.

Q. Did Chetwynd see him take it away?---A. I cannot tell that.

The Counsel for the Prosecution having done with this Witness, he was examined on behalf of the Prisoner.

Prisoner's Counsel. Mr. Hamilton, if I understand you right, the Deceased and you asked Mr. Chetwynd for a Piece of Cake, and Chetwynd refused it?---Hamilton. Yes.

Q. So he was not willing to give either of you any?---A. No, he was not.

Q. I think you said Mr. Chetwynd took the Knife out of his Pocket?

A. I said he cut a Piece of Cake; I did not say he took the Knife out of his Pocket.

Q. I think it was a Cake that they call a Simnel; was it not?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. I think they are very hard, with a Crust on the Outside, and difficult to be cut?—A. It was pretty hard.

Q. Then that may possibly require more Strength than he had in one Hand, to cut it; he cut it down did not he?

A. I did not see him cut it.

Q. You said he took his Knife and cut it?

A. Yes he did cut it.

Q. Then tell me whether or no (I am sure I will do fairly, God forbid that I should do otherwise) Mr. Chetwynd did not refuse to give any of the Cake to Mr. Ricketts?

A. Yes, he did refuse it.

Q. Who did he cut the Cake for? was it not for himself?

A. I believe it was.

Q. Then he did not cut it for any body else; I think you said, he laughingly told the Maid he had got it?---A. Yes.

Q. And upon that Mr. Chetwynd demanded it from him again, and he laughed, but did not deliver it?

A. He made him no Answer, but did not deliver it.

Q. Did he ask him to give it him again before this unhappy Accident happened?——A. Yes, he did.

Q. Pray tell me whether he did not besides his Laughing, endeavour to keep the Cake from him?—A. I did not observe that.

Q. Please to tell me, whether, as you were School-fellows together, you were not all good Friends?———A. Yes, we were.

Q. Which of the two was biggest?

A. Ricketts was larger than Chetwynd.

Q. I am obliged to the Gentlemen on the other Side, for intimating that Mr. Chetwynd gave Mr. Ricketts a Piece of Cake before; I would ask you whether Mr. Chetwynd did not give Mr. Ricketts a Piece that Morning?

A. I heard he did.

Q. How long was that before this Thing happened?

A. I

A. I do not know how long it was. This happened about one o'Clock.

Q. When this unfortunate thing happened, what did Mr. Chetwynd say immediately upon it?---A. Really, I do not know.

Q. I think, Sir, you were telling the Court of a French Knife; I own I do not know what they are; but the Question I would ask you, is, Whether most of you young Gentlemen do not carry these Knives in your Pockets?

A. I have heard so; it was a Knife that he always had.

Q. And I suppose many of you had such Knives?

A. I cannot tell, as to that, Sir.

Q. I am obliged to you for the Candour you have used in your Evidence; I have no more Questions to ask you.

Court. Can you recollect, how these young Gentlemen lived together, whether there was any Ill-will between them, or whether they lived in a friendly Manner?

Hamilton. I think they lived as the other Scholars did.

Court. Do you apprehend there was any Malice between them?

Hamilton. I never knew of any Malice between them.

Court. How did the young Gentleman behave after he had given that Wound?—Hamilton. I did not see him afterwards.

Master SAMUEL MALCHER sworn.

Court. How old are you?---Malcher. I am thirteen next January.

The Court asked Malcher what he thought would become of him, if he did not speak the Truth? To which he replied, he should be unhappy everlastingly.

Court. Were you present at this unhappy Affair?---Malcher. Yes.

Counsel. Then give us an Account of what you heard, and what you saw.

A. Mr. Ricketts asked Mr. Chetwynd for a Piece of his Cake, and Mr. Chetwynd gave him a Piece; he asked him for another Piece, and he refused it him.

Q. How long was that after he had given him the first Piece?

A. It was about a Quarter of an Hour; and after he had refused it him, he went out of the Room, with the Cake under his Arm, and then came into the Room again.

Q. What Room was it?

A. It was the Room where Mr. Chetwynd lay.

Q. What Room did he go into, when he went out of his own Room, after his refusing him the Cake?

A. He did not go into any Room; he only went out of the Room to the Head of the Stair-case, and then came in again.

Q. Did he open the Bureau then, or was it open before?

A. I cannot justly recollect that.

Q. You say he had the Cake with him?---A. Yes.

Q. What did he cut it upon?---A. He cut it upon the Bureau.

Q. You say he cut a Piece, what did he do with it?

A. He laid it down upon the Bureau, and Ricketts came and took it---snatched it away.

Q. Did Chetwynd see him take it away?

A. I cannot tell whether he did or no.

Court. How did Chetwynd stand?--Malcher. He had his Back to Ricketts.

Court. Where did the Cake lie?

Malcher. The Cake was before Chetwynd, and Ricketts put his Hand beside him, and took it away, and then he went to the Window.

Counsel. Where did he carry it?

Malcher. He went to the second Window with it.

Q. How far was that from the Bureau?---A. I believe about a Yard.

Q. What did he do after that?--A. Mr. Chetwynd came and stabbed him.

Q. In how long Time was that after he took the Cake?

A. I believe it was a Minute.

Q. Was it so long as a Minute?---A. I do not know whether it was quite so long as a Minute, or not, it was but a very little Time.

Q. Did Chetwynd ask for his Cake?---A. I was not near enough to hear it; I was at my Box, at the other End of the Room.

Q. Is it a small Room?---A. It is not a very large Room.

Q. What happened after that?

A. Mr. Ricketts told the Maid he was stabbed, and then he went down Stairs.

Q. Was Hannah Humphreys in the Room?---A. Yes.

Q. What did she say?---A. She said, he was stabbed.

Q. What was said or done afterwards?---A. Really I do not know.

Q. Had Ricketts any thing in his Hand?---A. He had nothing in his Hand that I saw; nor said any thing to provoke him, as I heard.

[Cross-Examination by the Prisoner's Counsel.]

Counsel. You was present at the Beginning of this Transaction, was you not?--- Malcher. Yes.

Q. Was you present before Mr. Hamilton came up?—A. Yes, Sir.

Q. When Mr. Ricketts had the Piece of Cake given him, that was before Mr. Hamilton came up, was it not?

A. Mr. Hamilton did not see him give it him.

Q. They were good Friends before this, were they not?

A. I think so, they used to be so.

Q. When Ricketts asked him for the second Piece of Cake, was not he teazing of him?

A. No, he teazed him about the first; and then he went out of the Room, and Ricketts followed him.

Q. You say, Mr. Chetwynd carried the Cake under his Arm out of the Room, and Ricketts followed him; and then Chetwynd came into the Room again, and Ricketts followed him still, did not he?---A. Yes.

Q. Then he came to his Bureau, Ricketts following of him still?

A. Yes; and then I saw Mr. Ricketts take the Piece of Cake up, which Mr. Chetwynd had laid upon his Bureau.

Q. Then Mr. Chetwynd turned about to ask for his Cake again?

A. I did not hear him ask for it.

Q. He went after him, did not he?---A. Yes.

Q. Was it not for his Cake?---A. I cannot tell.

Q. Did Ricketts shove him?---A. Not that I saw.

Q. When Ricketts took the Cake from Chetwynd, had Chetwynd his Back towards him?---A. Yes.

Q. Did Ricketts reach over his Shoulder, or take it under his Arm?

A. He went under his Arm, and took the Cake.

Q. Did he touch him?---A. I cannot tell that.

Q. You say immediately upon that he went to the Window, how far was that from the Bureau?-- A. About a Yard or two.

Q. Pray, now, when Chetwynd went to cut the Cake (you were there all the while); did Ricketts offer to assist him in it, did he offer to lend him a Knife?---A. Yes, he did, and had it open.

Q. What did Chetwynd say then?

A. Chetwynd said, he had a Knife of his own.

Q. Pray, had Ricketts a Knife in his Hand?

A. Yes, he had a Knife, and offered to lend it Mr. Chetwynd.

Prosecutor's Counsel. I should be glad to know whether he did not put that Knife into his Pocket again?---Malcher. I do not know that he did.

Q. Here is a Question misunderstood I believe; did the Knife that you speak of belong to Mr. Chetwynd, or to Mr. Ricketts?

A. The Knife belonged to Mr. Ricketts.

Prisoner's Counsel. That is a fair Answer to the Question.

Court. Ricketts's Knife was opened before Chetwynd's; were both the Knives open at the Time this unhappy Accident happened?

Malcher. Mr. Chetwynd's Knife was not opened when Mr. Ricketts offered him his Knife; but he refused it, and said he had one of his own.

Court. Was Ricketts's Knife open then?---Malcher. Yes.

Court. Were they both open when the Accident happened?

Malcher. No, Ricketts's was clasped, and put into his Pocket, on Mr. Chetwynd's refusing it, and before the Cake was cut and put upon the Bureau.

Court. Then you saw him clasp his Knife when Chetwynd refused it, and put it into his Pocket?---Malcher. Yes.

Court. And this was before this Wound was given?---Malcher. Yes.

Prosecutor's Counsel. Was it before the Cake was cut and laid upon the Bureau?---Malcher. Yes, it was.

HANNAH HUMPHREYS sworn.

Counsel. Pray give us an Account what you know of this unhappy Affair.

Humphreys. The young Gentlemen were in the Dining-room, and I was in the next Room; I heard a Noise, upon which I went into the Dining-room and asked them what they did there, and what was the matter they were not in their own Rooms; Mr. Ricketts made Answer, that he wanted a Piece of Cake of Mr. Chetwynd; I said to Mr. Ricketts, Have not you had a Piece? He said No, and smiled. I looked at Mr. Ricketts, and said, I believed he had had some, for he had some Crumbs of Cake upon his Lips; Mr. Ricketts smiled again, and said, he wanted another Piece, or a bigger Piece.

Q. Where was Mr. Chetwynd then?

A. Mr. Chetwynd at that Time was at his own Bureau, cutting his Cake.

Q. How far was Mr. Ricketts off the Bureau?

A. He was as near as I can guess about two Yards from the Bureau; Mr. Ricketts went up to the Bureau to Mr. Chetwynd, and Mr. Chetwynd lifts up his Arms, and says, Don't, Mr. Ricketts; and Mr. Ricketts then took the Cake.

Court. Mentionin what Manner he took it.

Humphreys. I think, to the best of my Knowledge, it was over Mr. Chetwynd's Shoulder.

Counsel. Where did you stand at that Time?

Humphreys. I stood at the Corner of the middle Window, and Mr. Ricketts almost faced me, not quite, but was a little sideways of me.

Court. Had Mr. Ricketts the Cake in his Hand?

Humphreys. He had the Cake in his Hand.

Court. How far were you off the Bureau then?

Humphreys. I was then from the Bureau about three Yards, and Mr. Ricketts came up to me, and said, Hannah, I have got some Cake. (I had a Stocking in my Hand which I was darning.) Upon Mr. Ricketts's saying he had got some Cake, Mr. Chetwynd came from his Bureau to my Right-hand, and in a very short time Mr. Ricketts said, Hannah, Mr. Chetwynd has stabbed me. I looked at him.

Prosecutor's Counsel. Did you see Mr. Chetwynd come from the Bureau?

Humphreys. Yes.

Q. Where did Mr Ricketts stand?---A. Mr. Ricketts stood just by me.

Q. Now tell us whether you saw this Stab given?--A. I did not see it given.

Q. Did you observe that Mr. Ricketts had any Thing in his Hand?

A. He had nothing in his Hand but a Bit of Cake.

Q. Did you observe that Mr. Ricketts had struck Mr. Chetwynd?

A. No, he had not struck him, and was not seemingly in any Anger.

Q. You say that at this Time Mr. Chetwynd came up and stabbed Mr. Ricketts?

Prisoner's Counsel. No, that is not right.

Court. She said Mr. Ricketts told her so.

Prisoner's Counsel. I do not doubt your Candour, but you are mistaken in the Evidence; repeat it again.

Humphreys. I saw Mr. Ricketts come from the Scrutore, and he said, Mr. Chetwynd has stabbed me. Says I, Mr. Ricketts, you joke. Mr. Ricketts had put his Hand to his Side: I bid him take his Hand away, and then I saw a little Blood; Mr. Chetwynd, said I, you have done very well. Mr. Chetwynd said, Hannah, if I have hurt him, I am sorry for it.

Prosecutor's Counsel. Did you observe who were in the Room?

Humphreys. I saw Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Ricketts, and Mr. Chetwynd.

Court. Did you hear Chetwynd ask Ricketts for his Piece of Cake?

Humphreys. I did not hear him.

Counsel. What became of Mr. Chetwynd after that? where did he go?

Humphreys. He went out of the Room.

Q. How long did he continue in the House?

A. He continued in the House till Tuesday Morning.

Q. That was the next Morning; did he give any Notice of his going away?---A. I cannot tell that.

[Counsel for the Prisoner on the Cross-Examination.]

Counsel. Tell us where this Room was, where you heard the Noise before you went to them.---Humphreys. It was on the same Floor.

Q. Did you hear any Rustling of Feet, or only their Tongues?

A. It was only their Tongues; it is my customary Way when I hear any Noise among the young Gentlemen to go to them, in order to persuade them to be quiet.

Q. Where was Mr. Chetwynd when you came into the Room?

A. Mr. Chetwynd was at his Bureau, and Mr. Ricketts was standing in the Room, and he said he wanted a Piece of Cake of Mr. Chetwynd.

Q. Was this Mr. Ricketts's Room?

A. No, Mr. Ricketts had a Room up another Pair of Stairs.

Q. Then he was got into Mr. Chetwynd's Room, which was the Occasion of your asking him what he did there?

A. Yes, it was the Room where Mr. Chetwynd lay; he had not a Room to himſelf.

Q. Was there any Converſation about the Cake, or any aſking for Cake before you went into the Room?

A. I do not know, he only ſaid he wanted another Piece of Mr. Chetwynd's Cake.

Q. Was Mr. Chetwynd's Back toward you?——A. Yes.

Q. Then conſequently it muſt be to Mr. Ricketts?

A. Yes——Mr. Chetwynd put out his Arms a little to keep Ricketts from the Cake. It was but a very little Way thus, extending his Arms a little from his Body, and raiſing them up, and Mr. Chetwynd ſaid, Don't, Mr. Ricketts.

Q. Did you obſerve Mr. Ricketts then offer to take the Cake, or to touch Mr. Chetwynd?

A. I only obſerved him to take the Cake.

Q. But did you ſee him touch him?—A. I did not ſee him touch him.

Q. That is very odd, becauſe putting out his Arm, and ſaying Don't, ſhews as if he had done ſomething.

A. He might touch his Cloaths, when he took away the Cake.

Q. Was not he taller than Mr. Chetwynd?

A. He was a great deal taller than Mr. Chetwynd, he might for his Heighth reach over Mr. Chetwynd, and take the Cake.

Q. Could he take it over his Shoulder, or over his Head without touching him?

A. Over his Shoulder he might do it without touching him.

Q. Did he take the Cake over his Shoulder or over his Head?

A. I think it was over his Shoulder.

Q. Did not Mr. Ricketts laugh when he had got the Cake?

A. Mr. Ricketts came away laughing, and ſaid, he had got a Bit more Cake.

Q. Was there any Motion or Action between them before this Thing happened?——A. There was not any Motion or Action at all that I ſaw before this happened.

Q. Did you ſtand facing the Bureau?

A. The Bureau was behind my Back, and Mr. Ricketts ſtood facing me, as I ſtood ſideways to the Window, with my Work in my Hand, and Mr. Chetwynd was by my right Hand, we all three in a Manner touched one another.

Q. How could this be done without your ſeeing it?

A. I did not ſee it done.

Q. And then the firſt Thing you heard was, that he was ſtabbed?

A. That was what Mr. Ricketts ſaid.

Q. And you at that Time did not believe it?

A. No, I did not believe it; for when Mr. Ricketts ſaid he was ſtabbed, I liſted my Eyes off my Work, and ſaid, Mr. Ricketts, you joke.

Q. Was there any Blow given?—A. I believe there was no Blow; I did not ſee any; I did not at firſt believe that there was a Wound.

Q. As you did not believe it, it is plain that Mr. Chetwynd did not believe it; for he ſaid, If I have hurt Mr. Ricketts, I am ſorry for it. Did he look to have Anger in his Countenance?

A. No; he looked with Concern; and ſaid, Hannah, if I have hurt Mr. Ricketts, I am ſorry for it.

Mr. Beeston Long ſworn.

Proſecutor's Counſel. Pray, Mr. Long, inform the Court what Diſcourſe paſſed between you and the Deceaſed, after he had received the Wound.

Mr. Long. I came to Town on Monday Night, the 26th of September, and found a Letter from Mr. Clare; wherein he acquainted me, that Mr. Ricketts had met with an untoward Accident, and had received a Wound from a young Gentleman in the Houſe, but that he thought there was then no Danger; this Letter having been wrote in the Morning, I enquired if there had been any ſubſequent Meſſage from Mr. Clare; I was told there had not: I did not go to Mr. Ricketts that Night, not thinking there was any Occaſion for ſo doing; but in the Morning, I determined to take the Advice of Mr. St. Hill, who being a Gentleman very eminent in his Profeſſion, we always take his Opinion, when any Accident happens to the young Gentlemen under our Care: I wrote a Letter to him, and deſired he would meet me at the Academy that Day [that was on Tueſday], which he did; and I found there Mr. Shipton and Mr. Middleton, who had likewiſe been called in; theſe three Gentlemen, with Mr. Mac Cullock, the Surgeon of the Houſe, viewed Mr. Ricketts's Wound, and thought him in very great Danger; they continued attending him till Thurſday Morning the 29th, when he died.

Q. What Account did Mr. Ricketts give you of the Occaſion of this Accident?

A. Mr. Ricketts told me, that on the Monday, about Noon, he was ſent to call Mr. Chetwynd to fence, and found him in the Dining-Room, with a Cake, of which he aſked him for a Piece, which he gave him; that he then aſked Mr. Chetwynd for another Piece, which he refuſed; and cut a Piece of the Cake, and laid it upon his Bureau, which ſtood at the End of the Room; Mr. Ricketts, to teaze Mr. Chetwynd, for having refuſed him, (but without any Intention of eating or keeping it) took up the Piece of Cake, carried it to the middle Window, and ſaid to a Maid, who ſtood there, Hannah, I have got a Piece of Cake; and he ſaid that Mr. Chetwynd followed him, and immediately ſtabbed him in the Belly.

Priſoner's Coun. You ſaid, you came to Town that Monday, did you ſee Mr. Ricketts that Day?

Mr. Long. I came to Town that Monday Night, and found a Letter from Mr. Clare; I did not ſee Mr. Ricketts that Day; for I did not apprehend there was ſo much Danger, as I afterwards found there was.

Q. How many Surgeons had you?

A. There were four Surgeons; three were called in; and there was Mr. Mac Cullock, the Surgeon of the Houſe.

Q. I ſhould be glad to know, whether Mr. Ricketts gave any Account to you of any Paſſage that happened immediately after the taking of the Cake?

A. He ſaid, that after he had taken the Piece of Cake, he carried it to the middle Window, where the Maid ſtood; and ſaid, Hannah, I have got a Piece of Cake; and that Mr. Chetwynd came up to him, and ſtabbed him without ſpeaking a Word.

Q. Without whoſe ſpeaking a Word.

A. Without Mr. Chetwynd's ſpeaking a Word.

Q. Did you aſk him in what Manner he had lived with this young Gentleman the Priſoner, whether they did not live in Friendſhip?

A. He ſaid, he never had had any Quarrel with him; and I have Reaſon to think it to be true, becauſe Mr. Ricketts was a Lad of a remarkably good-natured Diſpoſition.

Q. Did you aſk him any thing farther?

A. Mr. Ricketts was generally, when I ſaw him, in ſuch extreme Torment, that I did not care to trouble him with too many Queſtions.

Q. Did not he tell you he forgave him?

A. He did ſay that he forgave him.

Proſecutor's Counſel. Call Mr. St. Hill.

Priſoner's Counſel. There is no Occaſion for it.

Proſecutor's Counſel. The Jury muſt have Satisfaction, that the Wound was the Occaſion of his Death.

Mr. Peter St. Hill ſworn.

Proſecutor's Counſel. Pray, Sir, give the Court an Account in what Condition you found the Deceaſed.

Mr. St. Hill. On Tueſday the 27th of laſt Month I received a Letter from Meſſ. Drake and Long, deſiring me to go to Mr. Clare's Academy in Soho-Square, to ſee a young Gentleman that they had the Care of, who the Day before had been accidentally wounded: I met there Mr. Shipton, Mr. Middleton, and Mr. Mac Cullock; and by Mr. Mac Cullock's Account of the Wound, who firſt dreſſed him, and the Symptoms that attended it, we had too much Reaſon to fear that it had penetrated into the Cavity of the Belly, and that ſome of the Viſcera were wounded; for his Belly was much ſwelled, and croſs the upper Part of it ſo very painful, as to deprive him of all Reſt, and his Pulſe was extremely quick, and contracted. The next Day we met again—he had had a very unquiet Night; his Pulſe was extremely quick and low; and though his Belly was not ſo much ſwelled, yet his Pain croſs the upper Part of it was more ſevere, and attended with a continual Hickup, and frequent bilious Vomitings.

Q. Pray, Sir, inform us, whether you think that Wound was the Occaſion of his Death? what Depth was the Wound of?

A. It is not eaſy to know the Depth of a Wound after it has penetrated into the Cavity of the Belly: But, upon the whole, I think we have given our Opinon in ſuch a Manner, that Nobody will doubt, but that the Wound was the Occaſion of his Death.

Q. Then you do think that Wound to be the Occaſion of his Death?

A. I do think it to be the Occaſion of his Death.

Q. In what Part was the Wound given?——A. It was on the right Side of the Belly, two Inches obliquely below the Navel.

[A Piece of the Blade of the Knife was produced, which was about three Inches long, and ſharp at the Point.]

Counſel to Humphreys. Did you ſee the Knife in Mr. Chetwynd's Hand?

Humphreys. Yes.

Q. What kind of a Knife was it?

A. It was a Knife with a long Handle.

Q. Was it a long Blade?

A. It was ſuch a Blade as this; this is but a Piece of it.

Q. It is a French Couteau.

Priſoner's Counſel. It is no ſuch thing, it is only a common French Knife.

Mr. Peter Mac Cullock ſworn.

Counſel. Mr. Mac Cullock, pray, give an Account how you found the Deceaſed.

Mr. Mac Cullock. I was called at half an Hour after One, on the Monday, to go to Mr. Clare's; when I came there, I aſked to ſee the Knife, and the Knife was produced.

Q. Was it produced broke?

A. Yes, it was produced to me then broke, as it is now. I probed the Wound; but did not find at that Time, that it had penetrated into the Cavity of the Belly; the Deceaſed's Pulſe was extremely low, but I thought that was owing to the Fright: I went the next Day; and then upon ſearching the Wound, I found it had penetrated into the Cavity of the Belly, and found it to be a very bad Caſe; upon that Mr. Middleton was ſent for; and after that Mr. St. Hill, and Mr. Shipton.

The Counſel for the Priſoner called no Witneſſes, admitting that the Fact had been fairly laid before the Court by the Evidence, and acknowledged the Candour of the Gentlemen concerned for the Proſecution, in repreſenting it to the Jury without any Aggravation; but inſiſted, on his behalf, that however his Hand might have been unhappy, his Heart was innocent; that this Fact therefore could not amount to Murther at Common Law, which the Lord Coke defines to be an unlawful killing another Man with Malice afore-thought, either expreſſed by the Party, or implied by the Law; that in this Caſe, there was not the leaſt of that Ingredient, their own Evidence having ſhewed they were Friends, Friends to the laſt Hour, Friends to the dying Hour; when the Gentleman ſaid, He forgave him. That it being proved there was a Friendſhip ſubſiſting, it would be talking againſt the Senſe of Mankind, to ſay the Law could imply any thing contrary to what is plainly proved. That Deliberation and a Cruelty of Diſpoſition makes the Difference between Manſlaughter and Murther. For which Purpoſe Holloway's * Caſe was cited.

If A be paſſing the Street, and B meeting him, takes the Wall of A, and thereupon A kills him, this is Murder; but if B had juſtled A, this Juſtling had been a Provocation, and would have made it Manſlaughter, 1 Hale's Hiſt. Pl. Cr. 455.

If I ſee another's Child beat, or Wife debauched, it would be Murder in me to kill the Party, not ſo in the Parent or Huſband.

A ſudden Challenge and fighting immediately, the Challenge is held to be a ſufficient Provocation.

The

NUMBER I.

Holloway's Caſe, 4 Charles I.

* Holloway was indicted for the Murther of one Payne. The Indictment was, that he with Malice forethought tied the ſaid Payne to a Horſe's Tail, and cauſed the Horſe to drag him on the Ground three Furlongs, whereby the Shoulder of the ſaid Payne was broke, whereof he inſtantly died. On Not Guilty pleaded, the Jury found a ſpecial Verdict, that the Earl of Danby was ſeized in Fee of Oſterley Park in Middleſex, and made the ſaid Holloway Woodward of the ſaid Park; and that the ſaid Payne, with others unknown, entered the ſaid Park, to cut Wood there; and that the ſaid Payne climbed up a Tree, and with an Hatchet cut down ſome Boughs thereof;

The Law makes a Difference between a Perſon's killing another, when he is doing a lawful Act, and when he is doing an unlawful Act. If the Maſter deſigneth moderate Correction to his Servant, and accordingly uſeth it, and the Servant by ſome Misfortune dieth thereof, this is not Murder, but per infortunium; becauſe the Law alloweth him to uſe moderate Correction, and therefore the deliberate Purpoſe thereof is not ex malitia præcogitata.

But if the Maſter deſign an immoderate or unreaſonable Correction, either in reſpect of the Meaſure, or Manner, or Inſtrument thereof, and the Servant die thereof; if it be done haſtily, and without Deliberation, this would be Manſlaughter; if done with Deliberation and Deſign, it would be Murder, L. C. J. Hale in his Hiſt. Pl. Coron. p. 454.

Shall the young Boy at the Bar, who was doing a lawful Act, be ſaid to be guilty of Murder? He was reſcuing what was his own; the Witneſſes have told you, that after he had given the poor Boy, Ricketts, a Piece of Cake, Ricketts went to him for more; he denied it him; he had a Right to keep his Cake, the other had no Right to take it; and he had a Right to retake it.

There are Caſes in the Books which make a Difference between Murder and Manſlaughter: If a Man takes * up a Bar of Iron and throws at another, it is Murder; and the Difference in the Crime lies between a Perſon's taking it up, and having it in his Hand; Chetwynd had the Knife in his Hand, and upon that a Provocation enſues, for he did not take the Knife up; if he had, that might have ſhewn an Intention to do Miſchief. It may be doubted, whether or no, when he had this Knife in his Hand for a lawful Purpoſe, and in an Inſtant ſtruck the other, whether he conſidered he had the Knife in his Hand; for if, in his Paſſion, he intended to ſtrike with his Hand, and ſtruck with the Knife, not thinking it was in his Hand, it is not a ſtriking with the Knife.

That in reſpect to the Statute of the firſt of James I. † it had always been looked upon as a hard Law, and conſtrued therefore conſtantly very ſtrictly by all the Judges in Favour of the Priſoner. That when the Facts amount only to Manſlaughter at Common Law, it has been the Cuſtom of the Courts ‡ to acquit upon this Statute.

That this Act was made for a particular Purpoſe §: On the Union of the two Kingdoms, there were national Factions and Jealouſies, when wicked Perſons, to conceal the Malice lurking in their Hearts, would ſuddenly ſtab others, and ſcreen themſelves from the Law, by having the Act looked upon as the Reſult of an immediate Quarrel.

That it was to be conſidered, whether there was not Evidence to except this Caſe from the Letter of the Law: At the Beginning of the Fray Ricketts had a Knife in his Hand; and it was one continued Act. And another Queſtion was, whether there was not a Struggle; here was the Cake taken, and in endeavouring to get it again this Accident happens; on the firſt taking of the Cake, it is in Evidence, that Chetwynd was forced to extend his Arms to keep the other off; now there was no Occaſion for him to extend his Arms, unleſs the other was coming to take it from him; and then a Struggle is a Blow. In Reneer's Caſe, (cited in the King and Keite) Cymbal gave no Stroke but in ſtruggling, and yet it was adjudged but Manſlaughter in Reneer. Lord Raymond, 143.

If a Man hath done a Treſpaſs, and is not continuing in it, and he that hath received the Injury ſhall thereupon beat him to a Degree of killeing, this, ſaith the Lord Chief Juſtice Holt (Kelyng 132) is Murder. But this Act of the Deceaſed is a Treſpaſs, and the not reſtoring what he had taken was a continuing in the Treſpaſs, and is ſuch a Provocation as will make it Manſlaughter at Common Law.

That this Statute is not to be literally interpreted; for taking up a Candleſtick to throw at another has been judged a Weapon drawn.

Mere ſtabbing is not within the Act; when a Man is taken in Adultery with another Man's Wife, if the Huſband ſhall ſtab the Adulterer, or knock out his Brains, this is bare Manſlaughter. 1 Vent. 158. Raymond, 213. Kelyng 137.

A Man muſt intend to kill to be within the Statute; and muſt intend to ſtab, for throwing a Hammer is not within the Act. William's ‖ Caſe cited in Kelyng 131.

That ſome Degree of Malice is required in this Caſe, as well as at Common-Law: The Act indeed has taken away the Neceſſity of the Proof of Malice, and laid the Negative upon the Criminal, and here the Negative is proved. The Intent of the Statute was to take away the Benefit of the Clergy from cruel and bloody-minded People; 'tis impoſſible to conceive, that the Parliament would, at all Events, condemn to Death thoſe who had no preconceived Malice.

But the Caſe moſt ſtrongly inſiſted and relied on in Behalf of the Priſoner, was Buckner's ¶ Caſe on this Statute, wherein the Judges all agreed, becauſe there was ſome Provocation and no preconceived Malice, that he was not within the Act of Parliament.

The Counſel for the Crown, in Reply to the Arguments and Caſes inſiſted upon on behalf of the Priſoner, ſubmitted to the Court, whether (ſince thereof; and that Holloway came riding into the Park, and ſeeing Payne on the Tree commanded him to deſcend, and he deſcending from thence, Holloway ſtruck him two Blows upon the Back with his Cudgel; and Payne having a Rope tied about his Middle, and one End of the Rope hanging down, Holloway tied the End of that Rope to his Horſe's Tail, and ſtruck Payne two Blows upon his Back; whereupon the Horſe running away with him, drew him upon the Ground three Furlongs, and by this means brake his Shoulder, whereof he inſtantly died; and Holloway took Payne, and threw him into a Buſh, behind the Pales of the Park. And whether upon all this Matter found, the ſaid Holloway be guilty of the Murder, they pray the Direction of the Court, &c.

This ſpecial Verdict was removed by Certiorari into the King's-Bench, and depended three Terms: And the Opinion of all the Judges and Barons was demanded, and they all (except Hutton, who doubted thereof) held clearly, that it was Murder. For when the Boy, who was cutting on the Tree, came down from thence upon his Command, and made no Reſiſtance, and he then ſtruck him two Blows, and tied him to the Horſe's Tail, and then ſtruck him again, whereupon the Horſe ran away, and he by that means was ſlain, the Law implies Malice, and it ſhall be ſaid in Law to be prepenſed Malice, he doing it to one who made no Reſiſtance. Whereupon he was adjudged to be hanged, and was hanged accordingly. Croke, Charles, 131. Palmer, 545. W. Jones, 198. See this Vol. page 63.

* John Grey being indicted for the Murder of William Golding, the Jury found a ſpecial Verdict to this Effect, viz. We find, that the Day, Year, and Place in the Indictment mentioned, John Grey, the Priſoner, was a Blackſmith; and that William Golding, the Perſon killed, was his Servant; and that Grey, his Maſter, commanded him to mend certain Stamps, being Part belonging to his Trade, which he neglected to do; and the ſaid Grey, his Maſter, after coming in, aſked him, the ſaid Golding, why he had not done it; and then the ſaid Grey told the ſaid Golding, that if he would not ſerve him, he ſhould ſerve in Bridewell; to which the ſaid Golding replied, that he had as good ſerve in Bridewell, as ſerve the ſaid Grey, his Maſter; whereupon the ſaid Grey, without any other Provocation, ſtruck the ſaid Golding with a Bar of Iron, which the ſaid Grey then had in his Hand, upon which he and Golding were working at the Anvil; and with the ſaid Blow he broke his Skull, of which he died; and if this be Murder, &c. This was held to be Murder by all the Judges of the King's-Bench, with the Concurrence of the Lord Chief-Juſtice Bridgman. 1 Jac. c. 8. An Act to take away the Benefit of Clergy for ſome kind of Manſlaughter.

† To the end that ſtabbing and killing Men on the ſudden, done and committed by many inhumane and wicked Perſons, in the Time of their Rage, Drunkenneſs, hidden Diſpleaſure, or other Paſſion of Mind, contrary to the Commandment of Almighty God, and the common Peace and Tranquillity of this Realm, may from henceforth be reſtrained through Fear of due Puniſhment to be inflicted on ſuch cruel and bloody Malefactors, who heretofore have been thereunto emboldened, by preſuming on the Benefit of Clergy,

Be it therefore enacted, &c. That every Perſon which ſhall ſtab or thruſt any Perſon, that hath not then any Weapon drawn, or that hath not then firſt ſtricken the Party which ſhall ſo ſtab or thruſt, ſo as the Perſon ſo ſtabbed or thruſt, ſhall thereof die within the Space of ſix Months then next following, although it cannot be proved that the ſame was done of Malice forethought, yet the Party ſo offending, and being thereof convicted, &c. ſhall ſuffer Death, as in caſe of Wilful Murder.

Provided always, That this Act, or any Thing therein contained, ſhall not extend to any Perſon or Perſons which ſhall kill any Perſon or Perſons ſe defendendo, or by Misfortune, or in any other Manner than as aforeſaid; nor ſhall extend to any Perſon or Perſons, which in keeping and preſerving the Peace, ſhall chance to commit Manſlaughter, ſo as the ſaid Manſlaughter be not committed wittingly, willingly and of Purpoſe, under Pretext and Colour of keeping the Peace; nor ſhall extend to any Perſon or Perſons, which in chaſtiſing or correcting his Child or Servant, ſhall beſides his or their Intent and Purpoſe, chance to commit Manſlaughter. This Act to continue until the End of the firſt Seſſion of the next Parliament. 3 Car. c. 4. continued.

‡ At a Meeting of all the Judges, on Saturday, the 28th of April, 1666, at Serjeants-Inn, to conſider of ſuch Things as might in Point of Law fall out in the Trial of the Lord Morley, who was on Monday to be tried by his Peers for a Murder; they were all of Opinion, that the Statute of 1 Jac. for ſtabbing a Man not having firſt ſtruck, nor having any Weapon drawn, was only a Declaration of the Common-Law, and made to prevent the Inconveniencies of Juries, who were apt to believe that to be a Provocation to extenuate a Murder, which in Law was not. Kelyng 54.

Mr. Lindon, who had been Clerk of the Indictments at Hicks's-Hall a great many Years, on being applied to on Mr. Chetwynd's Caſe, ſaid that if a Man was found guilty of Manſlaughter, on an Indictment for Murder at Common-Law, it was the Cuſtom, if he was indicted on the Statute of Stabbing likewiſe, to find him Not Guilty on that Statute. Yet in December Seſſions 1700, John Cowland, Gent. was tried for the Murder of Sir Andrew Slanning, Bart. at the Roſe Tavern, in Drury-lane, on three Indictments. 1. For Murder, at Common Law. 2. On the Statute of Stabbing. 3. Upon the Coroner's Inqueſt for the Murder of Sir Andrew, when the Jury acquitted him of the firſt Indictment for Murder at Common Law, and on the third for Murder on the Coroner's Inqueſt, but found him guilty on the Statute of Stabbing; and he was executed at Tyburn, December 20, 1700, Old-Bailey Trials, Vol. I. p. 21.

§ This Statute was enacted in the Time of King James the Firſt, when many Animoſities aroſe between the Engliſh and the Scotch, who uſing Daggers were accuſtomed to ſtab many of the Engliſh, ex improviſo, which could not have been done by a flat Sword, the uſual Weapon of the Engliſh; therefore this Statute was deſigned to ſecure defenceleſs People from Surprize, ſuppoſing that whoever ſtruck would be prepared. Rex v. Keite. Lord Raymond, 139.

At the Seſſions in the Old-Bailey, March 22, 1638.

‖ David Williams was indicted ſpecially upon the Statute 1 Jac. for the Death of Francis Marbury; on which a ſpecial Verdict was found, viz. That upon St. David's-day the Priſoner, being a Welſhman, had a Leek in his Hat; and that there was, at the ſame Time, in Waggery, a Jack-a-lent in the Street put up with a Leek; and one Nicholas Redman, a Porter, ſaid, Look at your Countryman; and the Priſoner being therewith enraged, threw an Hammer at Redman, to the Intent feloniouſly to hit him; but miſſing him, the Hammer did hit Francis Marbury, whereof he died; and ſo the ſaid David the ſaid Francis with the ſaid Hammer did ſtab and thruſt the ſaid Francis then not having any Weapon drawn, nor then having firſt ſtricken the ſaid David, It was reſolved he was not within that Statute, but guilty of Manſlaughter at Common Law. W. Jones, 432. 1 Hale Hiſt. Pl. Cr. 469.

This Caſe, I fear, hath been the Occaſion of ſome Miſtake in the Deciſion of Queſtions of this Kind: I concur with the Judgment, that it is not within the Statute of Stabbing, for it is not ſuch a Weapon, or Act, that is within that Statute; neither could he be found guilty of Murder, but only Manſlaughter, for the Indictment was for no more. But if the Indictment had been for Murder, I do think that the Welſhman ought to have been convicted thereof; for the Provocation did not amount to that Degree, as to excite him deſignedly to deſtroy the Perſon that gave it him. The Protector and Buckner.

Mich. 1655. In the upper Bench. Stiles, 467.

¶ Buckner was indicted upon the Statute of 1 Jac. made againſt Stabbing, at the Juſtice-Hall in the Old-Bailey, for killing of Horwood; and upon the Evidence given for the Protector, the Jury found a ſpecial Verdict, which was to this Effect, viz. That Horwood and another Man with him came into the Lodging of Buckner, being in Drury-lane; and when they were come into the Lodging, that other Man took down a Sword in the Scabbard which hung there, and ſtood at the Door of the Chamber with this Sword undrawn in his Hand, and kept the Door to keep Buckner from going out, till they might bring a Bailiff to arreſt Buckner for a Debt which he owed Horwood; whereupon, upon ſome Diſcourſe between Buckner and Horwood, Buckner takes a Dagger out of his Pocket, and ſtabs Horwood, and kills him; and whether this was within the Statute of Stabbing was doubted by the Jury. Upon which Buckner was committed to Newgate, and after the Body and the Cauſe was removed into this Court by Habeas Corpus and Certiorari, and argued divers Times at the Bar, and at laſt on the Bench:

And firſt Arthur Harris, of Lincoln's-Inn, opened the Record, and only put the Queſtion; and then, on the Behalf of the Priſoner it was moved, that he might have a Copy of the Record, and Counſel aſſigned him, ſuch as deſired, which the Court granted; then it was prayed he might be bailed; but that the Court would not grant, but turned him over to the Marſhal, and gave a Day for the Protector's Counſel to be heard.

At which Day Tewiſden, for the Protector, made this Queſtion, Whether Buckner was to have his Clergy in this Caſe, or were debarred by the Statute or not? And he ſaid, this Queſtion ſhould not have been made by the Jury as they have done upon the ſpecial Verdict, but the Court ought to have made it; for the Jury are only to proceed upon Matter of Fact, and not upon Matter of Law; and he argued, that he ought not to have his Clergy, for the Statute of 1 Jac. doth not create the Offence, but leaves it to the Common-Law, and only takes away the Clergy from the Party that commits it; and to prove this, 1. It is not within the Words of the Statute, and 2dly, It is not within the Meaning of the Statute, neither in its Preamble, nor in the Body, or in the Proviſo thereof; for Buckner was not firſt ſtruck, nor had he a Weapon drawn againſt him, altho' he was kept a Priſoner in his Chamber, which was not a conſiderable, but a ſlight Provocation of him to move him to ſo foul a Fact. And within the Body of the Act, there are no Acts expreſſed, but having a Weapon drawn againſt him, or being firſt ſtruck, and this Enumeration of the Acts excludes all other, as it is in the Statute of Fines, and in the Statute which takes away Clergy. Alſo the Reaſon of Law requires to allow the Clergy to one that is firſt ſtricken: But here is no ſuch Reaſon, and the Party might have had his Remedy againſt Horwood, for coming into his Chamber, and impriſoning of him, by an Action of Treſpaſs; and the having a Weapon drawn, was a Reaſon for the other to defend himſelf.

Finch (Heneage) for the Priſoner argued, that the Priſoner was only guilty of Felony at the Common-Law, and is not within the Statute, by which his Clergy ſhould be taken away. For firſt, the Statute is to be literally interpreted, becauſe it is made the only Points inſiſted upon by way of Defence for the Priſoner, were Queſtions of Law, in which the Jury were to be guided by their Opinion) the Facts proved and admitted, did not clearly, in the firſt place, amount to Murder at Common-Law; and in the ſecond place, whether there could be the leaſt Doubt in point of Law, but that this Caſe was within the Statute of 1 James I. c. 8.

Upon the firſt it was admitted, that to conſtitute Murder there muſt be Malice.

But it was argued, that Malice was of two Kinds: either expreſs and in fact, or implied by Law.

That when one Perſon kills another without Provocation it is Murder *, becauſe the Law preſumes and implies Malice from the Act done.

And therefore, where-ever any Perſon kills another it is Murder, unleſs ſome ſufficient Provocation appear.

But that it is not every Provocation which extenuates the killing of a Man from Murder to Manſlaughter.

A ſlight or trivial Provocation is the ſame as none, and is not allowed by Law to be any Juſtification or Excuſe for the Death of another.

And therefore no Words of Reproach or Infamy, whatever provoking Circumſtances they may be attended with; no affronting Geſtures or deriding Poſtures, however inſolent or malicious, are allowed to be put in the Balance with the Life of a Man, and to extenuate the Offence from Murder to Manſlaughter. Kelyng 130. Croke El. 779 †.

For the ſame Reaſon, no ſudden Quarrel upon a ſlight Provocation ſhall juſtify ſuch an act of Cruelty as one Man's ſtabbing another, though it is done immediately in the Heat of Paſſion. As if two Perſons, playing at Tables, fall out in their Game, and the one upon the ſudden kills another with a Dagger; this was held to be Murder by Bromley at Cheſter Aſſizes. See this Vol. page 63.

In like manner, no Treſpaſs on Lands or Goods ſhall be allowed by Law to be any Excuſe for one Man's attacking another in ſuch a Manner as apparently endangers his Life, and could not be intended merely as a Chaſtiſement for his Offence; becauſe no violent Acts beyond the Proportion of the Provocation receive Countenance from the Law.

And therefore if a Man beats another that is treſpaſſing upon his Goods or Lands, and does not deſiſt, he will be juſtified by Law; becauſe what he does is only in Defence of his Property, and no more than a Chaſtiſement to an Offender.

But (ſays the Lord Chief Juſtice Holt) if one Man be treſpaſſing upon another, breaking his Hedges, or the like; and the Owner, or his Servant, ſhall upon Sight thereof, take up an Hedge-Stake, and knock him on the Head, that will be Murder; becauſe it is a violent Act, beyond the Proportion of the Provocation. Kelyng 132.

That applying the Rules of Law to the preſent Caſe, it was plain, that the violent Act done, bore no Proportion to the Provocation. All the Provocation given was taking up a Piece of Cake, which is not ſuch an Offence, as can juſtify the Priſoner's attacking the Perſon, who took it up, with an Inſtrument, that apparently endangered his Life, or rather carried certain Death along with it.

And laſtly, That Grey's Caſe before cited (Kelyng 64, and 133.) was much ſtronger than the preſent: Where a Maſter, who was provoked with the Neglect, Diſobedience, and Inſolence of his Apprentice, and had therefore a Right by Law to chaſtiſe him; immediately upon receiving the Provocation, took up a Bar of Iron, at which he was then working, and ſtruck his Apprentice, who afterwards died of the Blow. This was by all the Judges held to be Murder, notwithſtanding it was done upon a ſudden, and notwithſtanding the Provocation, and the Right which Grey had as a Maſter to correct his Servant. For having exceeded Meaſure herein, what he did was malicious.

Upon the ſecond Indictment it was ſaid, that the Gentlemen who had argued on behalf of the Priſoner, had, in order to raiſe a Doubt upon this Point, in effect contended that the Statute of 1 J. I. ſhould never be allowed to comprehend any one Caſe whatſoever, or extend to any one Offender.

For if Perſons indicted upon that Statute, were to be acquitted where-ever the Caſe would have been Manſlaughter at Common-Law, the Statute would be entirely fruſtrated, and have no kind of Effect whatſoever.

made in reſtraint of the Common-Law, and it was made only to prevent Feuds betwixt the Engliſh and the Scotiſh Nation, which were then apt to break forth, and the Quarrel here was not a drunken and ſudden Quarrel, but acted upon Deliberation, and here is an Aſſault ſo great uſed againſt the Priſoner, that it amounts to the ſtriking of him, 43 E. III. f. 41, 42. E. III. f. 7. and the Impriſonment of him is more than an Aſſault, and here is found a forcible Entry into his Chamber, and the ſending for a Bailiff, and the ſtanding at his Chamber Door with a Sword in the Party's Hand, though not drawn, which is as much in effect as if it had been drawn; and 23 Car. the Clergy was allowed to two Perſons that aided and aſſiſted a third Perſon in ſtabbing of a fourth Man, and that becauſe the Clergy ſhall not be taken away by Intendments.

Glyn (Chief Juſtice). The Statute hath not been ſo favourably conſtrued as hath been argued, for here is no Stroke, nor Weapon drawn for his preſent Defence, as the Statute intends; and ſtabbing with a Tobacco-pipe, and with a Halberd, hath been adjudged to be ſtabbing within the Statute, and the Statute doth not ſay being firſt aſſaulted, as this Caſe is, but firſt ſtricken, and I conceive not that there are any Words in the Statute that will keep you out of it. Day was given over to the next Term.

At which Day the ſpecial Verdict was again repeated by Serjeant Maynard, and by him it was argued for the Priſoner, that he was not within the Statute 1 Jac. of ſtabbing, becauſe firſt, here was an unlawful Impriſoning of Buckner in his own Chamber, and this could not be without an Aſſault; next this Statute is not to be literally interpreted, for if there be Acts of Terror uſed againſt one, although a Weapon be not drawn, yet he is not within the Statute, although he kill another, for the taking up of a Candleſtick to ſtrike another hath been adjudged a Weapon drawn; and he cited Patye and Horwood's Caſe; and all the Perſons that came into his Chamber were Treſpaſſers, and one of them taking the Sword in his Hand, how could it be known what Miſchief might have been done with it? Cook's Caſe 14 Caroli, one may do a lawful Act by unlawful Means, and although Buckner did ill, yet is he not within the Statute.

Arthur Harris on the other Side argued, that the Act was ſtabbing within the Statute, and ouſted the Priſoner of his Clergy, and that he is within the Meaning and Words of the Statute. The Statute intended to prevent the killing of Men ſuddenly, which is the worſt of all other killing; for it is, as it were, to deſtroy not only the Body, but even to kill Body and Soul alſo, and therefore though the Statute be penal, yet it is not to be favourably interpreted, it being made for the Peace and Quiet of the Nation. The killing is the Matter aimed at in the Statute, and it matters not whether the Party be killed with a Faulchion or a Piſtol, as Williams's Caſe was, that killed another, by throwing a Taylor's Gooſe at him, and he is not within the Saving of the Statute though he was aſſaulted, and the other ſtood with the Sword in the Scabbard in his Hand, 36, 37 Eliz. Hanger and Molin's Caſe in the Exchequer Chamber. The Words of the Statute are, "not being firſt ſtruck;" but an Aſſault is not a ſtriking, and ſo he is out of the Letter of the Statute; and here is no Weapon drawn, for the Sword was in the Scabbard, which is no more than a Staff in a Man's Hand, Stat. 5 E. VI. c. 4. and it is like a Piſtol uncocked; and if the Sword had been drawn it would not have altered the Caſe, becauſe it was not in Horwood's Hand, who was ſlain, but in another's, and you cannot extend the Statute further.

Glyn (Chief Juſtice). Will you have it argued any more?—Finch. No.

Glyn (Chief Juſtice). I have conſidered of the Verdict, and conſulted with the Statute, and adviſed with all the Judges, and they are of my Opinion. This is a good Law, and to be interpreted ſtrictly, yet I hold the Priſoner is not within it, for the Scope of the Statute appears by the Preamble, the Body, and Saving of it, which do all confirm my Opinion. My firſt Reaſon is, becauſe I find that the Intent of the Statute is againſt ſudden killing; but here was not a ſudden killing, and the Statute takes not away the Clergy from all manner of Manſlaughter; and here was a Treſpaſs and an Impriſonment acted againſt the Priſoner before he killed Horwood, and ſo the Act was not ſuddenly done. 2dly, The Body of the Act ſeems to mean, that there ought to be Malice in the Caſe, and it doth not intend we ſhould ſtick to the very Words of it; and here the Party ſlain might have foreſeen the Danger, and defended himſelf. 3dly, The Proviſo excepts divers Particulars out of the Law, and the Word killing is only in the Proviſo, ſo that there is Proviſion made how the Statute ſhall be interpreted, viz. That it muſt be ſudden killing, which is not ſo here, for there are Provocations, and Time intervenient betwixt them and the ſtabbing, and the Verdict finds no pre-conceived Malice, and the Statute extends to no other killing by the Proviſo. And if one be aſſaulted by Thieves which have no Sword drawn, and the Party aſſaulted ſtabs one of the Thieves, he is not within the Intent of the Statute, although he be within the Words of it; or if one be aſſaulted in his Houſe, and the Aſſaultor hath no Weapon drawn, and one of the Aſſaultors be ſhot, yet the Party aſſaulted is not within the Statute. 15 Car. in Davy and Williams's Caſe, it was adjudged by all the Judges, that he that killed another by throwing a Hammer at him was not within the Statute, becauſe there was a preceding Provocation of him. And if two aſſault a third Perſon, and one of them ſtrike the third Perſon, and the third Perſon kills the other that did not ſtrike him, I do not conceive he is within the Statute, for it is the Aſſault of both, and ſhall alſo be adjudged the ſtriking of both.

Aſh (Juſtice) held he was within the Statute, becauſe it was not unlawful to come to arreſt him, and here was no Weapon drawn, and ſo it was adjourned to another Day.

At which Day Buckner was again brought to the Bar, Aſh (Juſtice) repeats the Special Verdict, and made the Queſtion, Whether this Fact of Buckner be within the Statute of 1 Jac. enacted againſt ſtabbing? And he argued that it was, and that Buckner could not have his Clergy, becauſe the Statute ſhall be taken beneficially for the Commonwealth, and not for the Priſoner, who is a particular Perſon, and the Intent of the Statute is to take away the Clergy for ſome Felony; neither by the Common-Law, nor by the Law of God is there Clergy given for killing a Man, and it was the Popiſh Power that introduced the Clergy to be given for Manſlaughter, and alſo for Murder, in diminution of the Common-Law, and of Regal Power, yea, and of the Law of God alſo; and if a Woman kill one, ſhe ſhall not have her Clergy, but be hanged; which ſhews that by the Common-Law the Clergy was not given for Manſlaughter. And by the Law of God I find no Difference between Murder and Manſlaughter, for it makes no Difference between hot Blood and cold Blood, as we do now diſtinguiſh; and every Word in the Statute methinks doth take away the Clergy by way of Argument, even from the Title of the Act to the very End of it; and here is a great Sin to be puniſhed, and great Inconveniences would follow to admit of the Clergy in ſuch Caſes as this is, and here was a ſudden killing as the Act expreſſeth, for it was done with a Dagger which was not ſeen, but ſuddenly drawn out of a Pocket, and no Weapon was drawn againſt him; for the Provocations alledged, they cannot amount to the drawing of a Weapon, or ſuch a Provocation as the Statute intends, for all the Acts done by Horwood amounted but to a Treſpaſs, and cannot be ſuch a Provocation as ſhould cauſe Buckner to fear his Death, for no Violence was uſed to his Perſon by ſtriking, or drawing of a Weapon, or otherways, and the ſending for Bailiffs to arreſt him cannot be ſuch a Provocation as the Statute intends, which is to put the Party in fear of his Life, and the Party knew that Horwood came with an Intent only to arreſt him, and not to kill him, nor did the Party ſlain do any thing to Buckner to provoke him; and there is by Preſumption of Law a prepenſed Malice in Buckner to kill Horwood, which is ſeen by his ſudden Manner of ſtabbing him; and Davy and Williams's Caſe, urged on the other Side, is not like to this Caſe. I grant if one kill a Thief ſuddenly it is not within the Statute, for ſuch killing was never intended to be prevented by it. The worſt Words one Man can give another are not a ſufficient Provocation within the Statute, for ſpeaking of Words doth much differ from drawing of a Weapon: Nor is this a killing ſe defendendo, or by Misfortune, but a killing at the Common-Law, and ſo the Clergy is taken away by the Statute, and the Caſe of Serjeants-Inn in Fleet-Street, amongſt whom are Barkly, Foſter, and Rolle, who have been Judges, are of my Opinion.

Glyn (Chief Juſtice) held it not within the Statute. He argued long much to the Effect as formerly; but having taken cold, I could not diſtinctly hear him. Adjourned.

This Caſe was again argued, Trin. 1656, to inform Juſtice Warburton, who was called to that Bench, after the former Arguments and Opinion of the Court delivered much to the ſame Manner as formerly, by Finch for the Priſoner, and Baldwin for the Protector; and thereupon my Lord Chief Juſtice Glyn and Juſtice Windham were of Opinion againſt Juſtice Aſh, and ſo Judgment was given for the Priſoner, that the Stabbing was not within the Statute, but was only Felony at the Common-Law, and the Priſoner was admitted to his Clergy, and burnt in the Hand accordingly.

* He that doth a cruel Act voluntarily, doth it of Malice prepenſed, 3. Inſt. 62.

Some have been led into Miſtake, by not well conſidering what the Paſſion of Malice is; they have conſtrued it to be a Rancour of Mind lodged in the Perſon killing, for ſome conſiderable Time before the Commiſſion of the Fact; which is a Miſtake ariſing from the not well diſtinguiſhing between Hatred and Malice. Envy, Hatred, and Malice, are three diſtinct Paſſions of the Mind. Lord Chief Juſtice Hale in Mawgridge's Caſe. See this Vol. page 61.

NUMB. VI.

Watts and Brains. B. R. 1599.

† Appeal of Murder for the Death of her Huſband. The Defendant pleaded not guilty; and upon Evidence at the Bar it appeared, that two Days before her Huſband's Death, he and the Defendant fighting upon a Quarrel then betwixt them, the Defendant was hurt in that Fray; and the third Day after, the Plaintiff's Huſband, paſſing by the Defendant's Shop, the Defendant purſued him ſuddenly, and the Huſband's Back being towards him, ſo as he perceived him not, the Defendant ſtruck him upon the Calf of his Leg, whereof he inſtantly died; the Defendant, to excuſe himſelf, affirmed, that he, who was ſlain, when he came by his Shop, looked upon him, and wried his Mouth at him, and therefore, for this mocking of him, he purſued him. And it was much enforced by the Defendant's Counſel, that it was a new Cauſe of Quarrel; and ſo the Stroke is not upon any precedent Malice, and therefore it is not Murder: but all the Court ſeverally delivered their Opinions, that if one make a wry or diſtorted Mouth, or the like Countenance upon another, and the other immediately purſues, and kills him, it is Murder; for it ſhall be preſumed to be Malice precedent, and that ſuch a ſlight Provocation was not ſufficient Ground, or Pretence, for a Quarrel; and ſo delivered the Law to the Jury, that it was Murder, although what the Defendant pretended had been true; whereupon, the Jury going from the Bar, notwithſtanding the Evidence was pregnant againſt the Defendant, Eight of them agreed to find him not guilty, but the other Four withſtood them, and would not find it, but to be Murder: and on the next Day Morning, two of the Four agreed with the Eight, to find him not guilty; and afterwards the other Two conſented in this Manner: that they ſhould bring in, and offer their Verdict not guilty; and, if the Court diſliked thereof, that then they all ſhould change the Verdict, and find him guilty. And, upon this Agreement, they came to the Bar, and the Foreman pronounced the Verdict, that the Defendant was not guilty; and the Court much diſliking thereof, being contrary to their Direction, examined every one of them by the Poll, whether that was his Verdict; and Ten of the firſt Part of the Panel ſeverally affirmed their Verdict, that the Defendant was not guilty; but the two laſt affirmed how they agreed, and diſcovered the whole Manner of their Agreement; whereupon, they were ſent back again, and returned, and found the Defendant guilty. And, for this Practice, Harris, the Foreman, was afterwards fined 100 Marks, and the other Seven, who agreed with him at the firſt, every of them was fined 40*l.* and the other two, who agreed with the Eight, although they affirmed, that it was, becauſe they could not endure, or hold out any longer; yet in that they did not diſcover the Practice, being examined by Poll, but affirmed the Verdict, were fined each of them at 20*l.* and all of them impriſoned; but the other two were diſmiſſed, yet blamed, for ſuch a Manner of conſenting in abuſe of the Court. And afterwards the Defendant was adjudged to be hanged.

Since it was only made in order to exclude such Persons as stabbed others upon the sudden, not upon their Guard, from the Benefit of Clergy; and was intended as a Sort of Correction to the Common-Law, by restraining such Offenders, through Fear of due Punishment, who were emboldened by presuming on the Benefit of Clergy, allowed by the Common-Law.

But if it is to exclude none from their Clergy, who at Common-Law would have been entitled to it, it can never have any Effect, and may as well be repealed.

That whatever the Reasons might be which first gave Rise to this Statute, the Legislature thought it of general publick Benefit, and therefore afterwards continued it by a subsequent Law.

And, if the Statute is to have any Force or Effect at all, there cannot be a Doubt but that it must extend to the present Case.

It is expressly within the Words; Mr. Ricketts was stabbed, having then no Weapon drawn in his Hand, and not having before struck the Person who stabbed him.

It is plainly within the Intention; which is declared in the Preamble to have been in order to punish Stabbing, or killing upon the sudden, committed in Rage, or any other Passion of the Mind, &c.

And the principal Reasons upon which the Determination in Buckner's Case is founded, conclude strongly against the Prisoner:

For it is there argued, that Buckner was not within the Statute, because it appeared to have been made to prevent sudden killing, the worst of all killing, of a Person not upon his Guard.

And secondly, because in that Case the Party slain might have foreseen the Danger, and defended himself.

But the unfortunate Person killed in this Case, had no Opportunity either of foreseeing the Danger, or of avoiding it, or making any Defence; but was killed on the sudden, before he could apprehend any Danger.

And therefore it was submitted to the Court, whether upon the Facts proved and not denied, the Consequence of Law was not clear that the Prisoner was guilty within both Indictments.

Mr. Baron Reynolds and Mr. Recorder Serjeant Urlin, (being the only Gentlemen of the long Robe on the Bench, when Mr. Chetwynd was tried) taking Notice of the Points of Law that had arisen, the learned Arguments of the Counsel, and the many Cases cited upon this Occasion, were of Opinion, that it would be proper to have the Facts found specially, that they might be put in a way of receiving a more solemn Determination. A Special Verdict was accordingly on all Sides agreed on, and drawn up to the following Purport, viz.

The King against William Chetwynd, the same against the same, and the same against the same.

We find that Thomas Ricketts, on the 26th of September last, being a Scholar at Mr. Clare's Academy, in Soho-square, was in a Room in the said Mr. Clare's House, in which the said Mr. Chetwynd used to lie, (and not Mr. Ricketts) in Company with the Prisoner William Chetwynd, William Hamilton, Samuel Malcher, and Hannah Humphreys, a Maid-servant in the said Mr. Clare's Family; that the said Mr. Chetwynd, the Prisoner, having his own Cake in his Hand, which was a hard Cake, called a Simnel, and hard to cut, the deceased, Thomas Ricketts, asked the said Mr. Chetwynd to give him a Piece, upon which the said Mr. Chetwynd gave him a Piece; that the said Thomas Ricketts afterwards asked him, the said Chetwynd, to give him some more of his Cake, which the said Chetwynd refused, and thereupon, the said Chetwynd went out of the said Room with his Cake under his Arm, and the Deceased followed him out of the said Room; upon which, the said Chetwynd returned again into his said Room, and went to his own Bureau, and cut another Piece of the Cake for himself; the said Ricketts offered to lend the said Chetwynd his Knife to cut the Cake, and at the same Time pulled his Knife, being a clasped Knife, out of his Pocket, and opened it; but the said Chetwynd, refusing to make use of the said Ricketts's Knife, saying, he had a Knife of his own, the said Ricketts put up his Knife again; and immediately after this, the said Chetwynd being then at his Bureau, cut off a Piece of the said Cake with his own Knife, being a common Knife, and such as Mr. Chetwynd and his School-fellows generally used, and laid the same Piece of Cake upon the Top of his Bureau for himself; that the said Chetwynd, standing then with his Back to the rest of the Company, was putting the rest of his Cake into his Bureau, and, whilst he was so doing, the Deceased came up, and put his Hand over the said Mr. Chetwynd's Shoulder, whereupon, the said Mr. Chetwynd raising his Arms, said to the said Deceased, Don't, Mr. Ricketts; the said Mr. Ricketts immediately snatched the said Piece of Cake away, against the Consent of the said Mr. Chetwynd, which lay upon the Top of the said Bureau, and went up to the said Maid-servant, who was about two or three Yards off, and said, laughing, Hannah, I have got a Piece of Mr. Chetwynd's Cake, which he shewed to her in his Hand; that thereupon immediately the said Mr. Chetwynd followed the Deceased, with his Knife in his Hand, and demanded the said Mr. Ricketts to return him his Piece of Cake; the Deceased, Mr. Ricketts, returned no Answer to this, but continued laughing, and did not return the Piece of Cake; upon which, the said Mr. Chetwynd struck the said Mr. Ricketts backhanded, with the said Knife which he had kept in his Hand all along, and with which he had cut the said Cake, (the said Ricketts being then only in his Waistcoat, which was at that Time unbuttoned) and gave him a Wound upon the Right Side of the Belly below the Navel, which penetrated into the Cavity of the Belly (the Deceased not having before struck the Prisoner, and not having at that Time any Weapon in his Hand); that immediately after, the Deceased cried out, Hannah, Chetwynd has stabbed me; and then the said Hannah said to the Prisoner, What have you done? Upon which the Prisoner looked on the said Hannah, with Concern, and said, If I have hurt Mr. Ricketts, I am sorry for it. We find that there never had been any Quarrel or Malice between the Deceased and the Prisoner, but that they constantly had lived in Friendship together; and we find likewise, that the Deceased was about the Age of Nineteen *, and Mr. Chetwynd about the Age of Fifteen; and that of this Wound the Deceased died, on the 29th of the said September: and whether upon the whole, the Prisoner is guilty of all, or any of the several Indictments, the Jurors submit to the Judgment of the Court.

Soon after this Trial, Roger Drake, Esq. and other Friends of Mr. Ricketts, laid the following Case before Sir John Strange:

The King against Chetwynd. } THE Defendant was tried the last Sessions at the Old Bailey for the Murder of Mr. Thomas Ricketts, and the Jury brought in the following special Verdict:

"That Thomas Ricketts, on the 26th of September 1743, being a Scholar "at Mr. Clare's Academy in Soho-square, was in a Room in the said Mr. "Clare's House in which the said Chetwynd used to lie and not Mr. Ric"ketts, in Company with the Prisoner William Chetwynd, William Hamil"ton, Samuel Malcher, and Hannah Humphreys a Maid-servant in the said "Mr. Clare's Family. That the said Mr. Chetwynd the Prisoner having "his own Cake in his Hand, which was a hard Cake called a Symnel, and "hard to cut, the deceased Thomas Ricketts asked him for a Piece of it, "which the said Mr. Chetwynd gave him. That the said Thomas Ricketts "afterwards asking the said Chetwynd to give him some more of his Cake, "the said Chetwynd refused, and thereupon the said Chetwynd went out of "the said Room with his Cake under his Arm, and the Deceased follow"ed him out of the said Room; upon which the said Chetwynd returned "again into his said Room, and went to his own Bureau and cut another "Piece of Cake for himself: the said Ricketts offered to lend the said Chet"wynd his Knife to cut the Cake, and at the same time pulled his Knife "(being a clasp Knife) out of his Pocket and opened it; but the said Chet"wynd refusing to make use of Mr. Ricketts's Knife, saying, he had one "of his own, the said Ricketts put up his Knife; and immediately after "this the said Chetwynd being then at his Bureau, cut off a Piece of the "said Cake with his own Knife (being a common Knife, and such a one "as the said Chetwynd and his School-fellows generally used), and laid the "same Piece of Cake upon the Top of his Bureau for himself. That the "said Chetwynd, standing then with his Back to the Company, was put"ting the rest of the Cake into his Bureau; and whilst he was so doing, "the Deceased came up and put his Hand over the said Chetwynd's Shoul"der, whereupon the said Mr. Chetwynd raising his Arms said to the De"ceased, Don't, Mr. Ricketts; and the said Mr. Ricketts immediately "snatched the said Piece of Cake away against the said Chetwynd's Con"sent, which lay upon the Top of the said Bureau, and went to the said "Maid-Servant about two or three Yards off and said, laughing, Hannah, "I have got a Piece of Chetwynd's Cake, which he shewed to her in his "Hand; that thereupon immediately the Prisoner Mr. Chetwynd follow"ed him with his Knife in his Hand, and demanded the said Mr. Ricketts "to return his Piece of Cake; the deceased Mr. Ricketts returned no An"swer to this, but continued laughing, and did not return the Piece of "Cake, upon which the Prisoner struck him back-handed with the said "Knife, which he had kept in his Hand all along, and with which he "had cut the said Cake, the said Ricketts being then only in his Waistcoat "which was then unbuttoned, and gave him a Wound upon the right "Side of the Belly below the Navel, which penetrated into the Cavity of "the Belly, the Deceased not having before struck the Prisoner, and not "having at that time any Weapon in his Hand. That immediately after "the Deceased cried out, Hannah, Chetwynd has stabbed me; and then the "said Hannah said to the Prisoner, What have you done? Upon which the "Prisoner looked on the said Hannah with Concern, and said, If I have "hurt Mr. Ricketts I am sorry for it. We find that there never had been "any Quarrel or Malice between the Deceased and the Prisoner, but that "they constantly had lived in Friendship together. We find likewise the "Deceased was about the Age of nineteen, and Mr. Chetwynd about the "Age of fifteen, and that of this Wound the Deceased died upon the "twenty-ninth of the same September. And whether upon the whole the "Prisoner is guilty of all or any of the several Indictments, the Jury sub"mit to the Court."

Mr. Chetwynd is still in Newgate; it is apprehended Mr. Chetwynd will apply to his Majesty for a Pardon before the special Verdict is argued, or if not he will do so afterwards, in Case the Judges should be of Opinion that the Facts stated in the special Verdict should be Murder. To prevent this, and his escaping the Justice due for his Offence, if the Law declares him to be guilty of Murder, it is proposed to bring in an Appeal of Murder, and to that end your Opinion is desired.

Q. Whether the Offence found by the special Verdict is Murder or Manslaughter?

"I am strongly inclined to think this will be adjudged to be Murder."

The Deceased's Father and eldest Brother are both resident in Jamaica: It is apprehended that an Appeal if brought must be brought by the eldest Brother, who is the Heir at Law of the deceased.

Q. Whether such Appeal can be brought by Mr. Barham and Mess. Drake and Long, for and on his behalf; or must the same be brought by the Heir in Person?

"The Appeal must be commenced by the Heir in Person if he is of full "Age, if not by Guardian."

As the Heir is resident in Jamaica, and it will be some time before he can be in England, and as a Year and a Day from the time of the Death is allowed for bringing such Appeal, so if Mr. Chetwynd should in the mean time obtain his Pardon,

Q. Whether he will upon pleading such Pardon be discharged out of Custody without Bail, and if so and he cannot afterwards be apprehended within the Year and Day, how is the Appellant to save the Benefit of his Appeal?

"If there is no Appeal commenced when the Pardon is pleaded, I "hardly think the Court will require Bail upon allowing the Pardon; "but it will be proper to shew that the Heir is expected, and in order "to give time for his appearing it may be proper to enter Caveats,

* That Mr. Ricketts was about Nineteen Years of Age was admitted: No Evidence being offered as to the Age of the Prisoner, the Jury formed their Judgment thereof, on seeing him.

" and desire to be heard, as a Means to procure some Terms where-
" by the Opportunity of having the Appellee forthcoming may be " secured: If the Appeal is commenced in time, it will not be any Ob-
" jection that the Appellee is not apprehended within the Year."

Q. Whether an Appeal may be brought immediately, or must the Appellant wait the Determination of the special Verdict?

" The Appeal must be commenced within the Year and Day, and the " Appellant is not bound to wait the Determination of the special Ver-
" dict before he commences it. The Court perhaps may give the Appel-
" lee Time to plead upon that Account, but this should be opposed."

Q. Whether the Appellant is obliged to enter into any Recognizance with Sureties to prosecute his Appeal with Effect; and suppose, upon trying such Appeal, the Jury find the Offence only Manslaughter; is the Appellant or his Sureties liable to any Damage, Fine or Punishment for bringing such Appeal?

" The giving Pledges to prosecute is recited in the Writ, and I believe
" there is some Security given to the Sheriff before he serves the Writ,
" though in Bambridge's Case it was omitted. But it is out of doubt, if
" the Jury find it to be Manslaughter, that will be a sufficient prosecuting
" it with Effect, and protect the Appellant and his Sureties from any
" Damage, Fine or Imprisonment."

If the Defendant should be found guilty upon the Appeal,

Q. Whether the King can reprieve or respite the Execution of the Judgment, or any otherwise interfere therein?

" I apprehend that upon a Conviction of Murder on an Appeal, the " Crown cannot interfere."

Upon the whole, under the Circumstances of this Case, your Opinion is desired,

Q. Whether it is advisable for Mr. Ricketts to appeal in case Mr. Chetwynd should obtain a Pardon; or would such a Proceeding be considered as severe or vindictive?

" The Youth of the Offender, the Suddenness of the Action unattended
" with any aggravating Circumstances, and the Friendship which the " Jury find to have subsisted to the Moment of the fatal Accident, make " me incline to think, that even the Appellant, if he should succeed in
" his Suit, would hardly insist upon the Rigour of the Law; and then
" considering he is now abroad, I think the Gentlemen who have hitherto
" prosecuted and obtained the present Verdict, will be well justified in
" acquiescing under the Pardon, (supposing the King should grant it)
" after they have laid the State of the Case properly before those through
" whose Hands it is to take its Progress." J. STRANGE.

31st October, 1743.

After the beforementioned special Verdict was found, the Relations of the Prisoner, who were Persons of some Figure in the World, had a Meeting with his Counsel, to consult what was most proper to do in this Affair, whether to endeavour the bringing on the arguing of the special Verdict, or immediately to apply to his Majesty for a Pardon.---The Counsel, considering the Youth of the Prisoner, and the Length of Time he might lay in Newgate, before the Determination of the special Verdict, advised the applying directly to his Majesty for a Pardon.---Whereupon the following Petition was delivered to the Lords Justices, (the King being then at Hanover) viz.

To their Excellencies the Lords Justices in Council,

The humble Petition of William Chetwynd, an Infant of the Age of 15 Years,

Most humbly sheweth,

THAT the Petitioner was tried at the last Sessions of Oyer and Terminer at the Old-Bailey, on three Indictments preferred against him in the Name of his Majesty, for the Murder of Thomas Ricketts his School-fellow, on the Trial whereof the Jury brought in a special Verdict in the Words following, viz.

That Thomas Ricketts, on the twenty-sixth Day of September last, being a Scholar at Mr. Clare's Academy in Soho-Square, was in a Room in the said Mr. Clare's House, in which the said Chetwynd used to lie and not Mr. Ricketts, in company with the Prisoner William Chetwynd, William Hamilton, Samuel Malcher, and Hannah Humphreys a Maid-servant in the said Mr. Clare's Family. That the said Mr. Chetwynd, the Prisoner, having his own Cake in his Hand, which was a hard Cake called a Simnel, and hard to cut; the Deceased, Thomas Ricketts, asked him for a Piece of it, which the said Chetwynd gave him. That the said Thomas Ricketts afterwards asking the said Chetwynd to give him some more of his Cake, the said Chetwynd refused; and thereupon the said Chetwynd went out of the said Room with his Cake under his Arm, and the Deceased followed him out of the said Room; upon which the said Chetwynd returned again into the said Room, and went to his own Bureau, and cut another Piece of the Cake for himself; the said Ricketts offered to lend the said Chetwynd his Knife to cut the Cake, and at the same Time pulled his Knife (being a clasped Knife) out of his Pocket and opened it; but the said Chetwynd refusing to make use of Mr. Ricketts's Knife, saying, he had a Knife of his own, the said Mr. Ricketts put up his Knife again; and immediately after this the said Chetwynd, being then at his Bureau, cut off a Piece of the said Cake with his own Knife, being a common Knife, and such a one as the said Chetwynd and his School-fellows generally used, and laid the same Piece of Cake upon the Top of his Bureau for himself. That the said Chetwynd standing there, with his Back to the rest of the Company, was putting the rest of his Cake into his Bureau, and whilst he was so doing, the Deceased came up and put his Hand over the said Chetwynd's Shoulder; whereupon the said Mr. Chetwynd, raising his Arms, said to the Deceased, Don't, Mr. Ricketts; and the said Mr. Ricketts immediately snatched the said Piece of Cake away, against the said Chetwynd's Consent, which lay upon the Top of the said Bureau, and went to the said Maid-servant about two or three Yards off, and said, laughing, Hannah, I have got a Piece of Chetwynd's Cake, which he shewed her in his Hand. That thereupon immediately the Prisoner, Mr. Chetwynd, followed him with his Knife in his Hand, and demanded the said Mr. Ricketts to return him his Piece of Cake; the deceased Mr. Ricketts returned no Answer to this, but continued laughing, and did not return the Piece of Cake; upon which the Prisoner struck him back-handed with the said Knife which he had kept in his Hand all along (and with which he had cut the said Cake), the said Ricketts being then only in his Waistcoat, which was then unbuttoned, and gave him a Wound upon the right Side of the Belly, below the Navel, which penetrated into the Cavity of the Belly, the Deceased not having before struck the Prisoner, and not having at that Time any Weapon in his Hand. That immediately after the Deceased cried out, Hannah, Chetwynd has stabbed me; and then the said Hannah said to the Prisoner, What have you done? Upon which the said Prisoner looked upon the said Hannah with Concern, and said, If I have hurt Mr. Ricketts I am sorry for it. We find there never had been any Quarrel or Malice betwixt the Deceased and the Prisoner, but that they constantly had lived in Friendship together; we find likewise that the Deceased was about the Age of Nineteen, and Mr. Chetwynd about the Age of Fifteen; and that of this Wound the Deceased died the 29th of the same September; and whether upon the whole, the Prisoner is guilty of all or any of the several Indictments, the Jury submit to the Court. That as it is expressly found, by this special Verdict, that there never had been any Quarrel or Malice between the Deceased and the Petitioner, but that they constantly lived in Friendship together; and as the fatal unhappy Wound your Petitioner gave the Deceased was the Effect of a sudden and instant Provocation, and for which he has ever since been, and still is, under the deepest and most inconsolable Affliction, and as the Petitioner had not the most remote Apprehension of murdering the Deceased, and in regard to your Petitioner's tender Age,

Your Petitioner most humbly hopes he may, under all the Circumstances of this unfortunate Case, be considered as a proper Object of the Royal Mercy; which your Petitioner most humbly prays your Excellencies will be graciously pleased to extend to him, by granting him the Royal Pardon for the said Offence.

And your Petitioner, as in the strictest Gratitude and Duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

When their Lordships were pleased to refer it to the Attorney and Solicitor-General, who made the following Report thereupon:

A Copy of the Report of his Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor-General, on Mr. Chetwynd's Petition.

To the King's most excellent Majesty in Council.

May it please your Majesty,

IN humble Obedience to their Excellencies the Lords Justices Commands signified to us by Mr. Stone, by his Letter of 25th October last, directing us to take the annexed Petition of William Chetwynd, an Infant of the Age of fifteen Years, into Consideration, and report our Opinions what may be proper to be done therein; We have taken the same into Consideration, after having been attended by the Agent and Counsel of the Petitioner, and also by the Agent and Counsel for Mr. Roger Drake and Mr. Beeston Long, under whose Care Thomas Ricketts the Deceased mentioned in the Petition had been placed by his Father, who now lives at Jamaica; and which said Mr. Drake and Mr. Long opposed before us the Prayer of the said Petition.

The Petition states, That the Petitioner had been tried at the last Sessions of Oyer and Terminer at the Old Bailey, on three Indictments, for the Murder of the said Thomas Ricketts his School-fellow, on the Trial whereof the Jury brought in a special Verdict, which the Petition sets forth particularly, and prays, that as it is expressly found by this special Verdict, that there never had been any Quarrel or Malice between the Deceased and the Petitioner, but they constantly lived in Friendship together, and as the fatal unhappy Wound the Petitioner gave the Deceased was the Effect of a sudden and instant Provocation, and for which he hath ever since been, and is still under the deepest and most inconsolable Affliction, and as he had not the most remote Apprehension of murdering the Deceased, and in regard to his tender Age, the Petitioner most humbly hopes he may, under all the Circumstances of his unfortunate Case, be considered as a proper Object of the Royal Mercy, which he most humbly prays may be extended to him, by granting the Royal Pardon for the said Offence.

We have inquired into the Case, and find that the Petitioner was indicted on three Indictments, whereof Copies are annexed, for the killing of the said Thomas Ricketts; one of which was on the Coroner's Inquest, which had found him guilty of Manslaughter; another at Common Law for Murder; and the third on the Statute of Stabbing, of the first Year of King James the First, Chap. 8th, all which were tried at the last Sessions of Oyer and Terminer at the Old Bailey; and the Jury found a special Verdict, which is not yet drawn up in form, but the Minutes thereof signed by the Jury are in the following Words, viz.

Middlesex.] The King against William Chetwynd, the same against the same, and the same against the same.

That Thomas Ricketts, on the twenty-sixth of September, being a Scholar at Mr. Clare's Academy in Soho-Square, was in a Room in the said Mr. Clare's House, in which the said Chetwynd used to lie, and not Mr. Ricketts, in Company with the Prisoner William Chetwynd, William Hamilton, Samuel Malcher, and Hannah Humphreys, a Maid-servant in the said Mr. Clare's Family.—That the said Mr. Chetwynd the Prisoner having his own Cake in his Hand, which was a hard Cake, called a Simnel, and hard to cut, the Deceased, Thomas Ricketts, asked him for a Piece of it, which the said Chetwynd gave him; that the said Thomas Ricketts afterwards asking the said Chetwynd to give him some more of his Cake, the said Chetwynd refused, and thereupon the said Chetwynd went out of the said Room, with his Cake under his Arm, and the Deceased followed him out of the said Room; upon which the said Chetwynd returned again into his said Room, and went to his own Bureau, and cut another Piece of the Cake for himself; the said Ricketts offered to lend the said Chetwynd his Knife to cut the Cake, and at the same Time pulled his Knife (being a clasped Knife) out of his Pocket, and opened it, but the said Chetwynd refusing to make use of Mr. Ricketts's Knife, saying, he had a Knife of his own, the said Mr. Ricketts put up his Knife again; and immediately after this, the said Chetwynd being then at his Bureau, cut off a Piece of the said Cake with his his Knife, being a common Knife, and such a one as the said Chetwynd and his School-fellows generally used, and laid the same Piece of Cake upon the Top of his Bureau for himself; that the said Chetwynd standing then with his Back to the rest of the Company, was putting the rest of his Cake into his Bureau; and whilst he was so doing, the Deceased came up and put his Hand over the said Chetwynd's Shoulder, whereupon the said Mr. Chetwynd, raising his Arms, said to the Deceased, Don't, Mr. Ricketts; and the said Mr. Ricketts immediately snatched the said Piece of Cake away, against the said Chetwynd's Consent, which lay upon the Top of the said Bureau, and went to the said Maid-servant about two or three Yards off, and said, laughing, Hannah, I have got a Piece of Chetwynd's Cake, which he shewed her in his Hand; that thereupon immediately the Prisoner, Mr. Chetwynd, followed him with his Knife in his Hand, and demanded the said Mr. Ricketts to return him his Piece of Cake; the Deceased Mr. Ricketts returned no Answer to this, but continued laughing, and did not return the Piece of Cake, upon which the Prisoner struck him back-handed with the said Knife, which he had kept in his Hand all along, (and with which he had cut the said Cake) the said Ricketts being then only in his Waistcoat, which was then unbuttoned, and gave him a Wound upon the Right Side of the Belly, below the Navel, which penetrated into the Cavity of the Belly; the Deceased not having before struck the Prisoner, and not having at that time any Weapon in his Hand. That immediately after the Deceased cried out, Hannah, Chetwynd has stabbed me; and then the said Hannah said to the Prisoner, What have you done? Upon which the said Prisoner looked on the said Hannah with Concern, and said, If I have hurt Mr. Ricketts, I am sorry for it. We find there never had been any Quarrel or Malice betwixt the Deceased and the Prisoner, but that they had constantly lived in Friendship together. We find likewise, that the Deceased was about the Age of Nineteen, and Mr. Chetwynd about the Age of Fifteen; and that of this Wound the Deceased died the twenty-ninth of the same September; and whether upon the whole the Prisoner is guilty of all or any of the several Indictments, the Jury submit to the Court.

As the Minutes of the special Verdict have stated the Case with all its Circumstances so very minutely, no other Evidence was offered on either Side to mitigate or aggravate the Charge. And we beg leave humbly to certify your Majesty, that it lies entirely in your Majesty's Royal Breast, to pardon the Petitioner or not; and if your Majesty shall be graciously pleased to extend your Royal Mercy to him, there can be no Objection thereto in point of Law.

All which is humbly submitted to Your Majesty's great Wisdom.

D. RYDER,

Upon which his Majesty (being then returned from Hanover) was pleased to order his Most Gracious Pardon, for the said William Chetwynd, to be made out. As soon as this came to be known, a Caveat was entered against passing the same at (Lord Gower's) the Lord Privy-Seal's Office; whereupon the Lord Privy-Seal sent to Sir Thomas Abney, Knt. one of the Judges of the Court of Common-Pleas, to assist him at the Hearing the same; Sir Thomas in a very genteel Letter begged to be excused, on account of his former Intimacy with Walter Chetwynd, of Grendon in Warwickshire, Esq. the young Gentleman's late Father; upon which the Lord Privy-Seal sent to the Lord Chief Baron, to desire his Assistance at the Hearing of Counsel (at Whitehall) for and against passing the said Pardon; when after hearing the Arguments, (Serjeant Wynne and Mr. Morton for the Caveat, and Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Legge against it) the Lord Privy-Seal declared he had heard no Reasons sufficient given against allowing the same, and put the Privy-Seal to the said Pardon. After which the Friends and Relations of the Deceased entered a Caveat against passing the same at the Lord Chancellor's; when the Right Honourable the Earl of Hardwick ordered the Counsel on both Sides to attend him at his House in Ormond-street; when after hearing the Arguments on both Sides, his Lordship said, he had no doubt with him about passing the said Pardon, and ordered the Great Seal to be put to it. When the Prisoner came to Westminster-hall in Hillary Term to plead this Pardon, it was strongly opposed by Counsel; but after hearing the Arguments on both Sides, Lord Chief Justice Lee declared, he had heard no sufficient Reasons offered against the Prisoner's taking the Benefit of his Majesty's Pardon; which he did directly by pleading it on his Knees, and was immediately discharged.

Hilary Term, 17 George II.

DOMINUS REX Vers. CHETWYND.

" A special Verdict, on an Indictment for Murder, was found at the Old-Bailey, and removed into the King's Bench; but before Argument* the Defendant obtained his Majesty's Pardon, which he pleaded upon his Knees; and it was allowed. Then the Counsel for the Prosecutor insisted, that by Vertue of 3 H. VII. c. 1. the Court ought to require Bail for his Appearance to answer an Appeal; there being an Affidavit produced, that the Brother and Heir was beyond Sea, but expected in time; and it was also insisted, that by Vertue of 5 and 6 W. and M. c. 13, the Court should take Security for the Good-behaviour.

" The Statute 3 H. VII. c. 1. runs: " That if any Person charged as " Principal or Accessory, be acquitted at the King's Suit, within the Year " and Day, the Justices, before whom he is acquitted, shall not suffer him " to go at large; but either remit him again to the Prison, or else let him " to bail, after their Discretion, 'till the Year and Day be past.

" Upon this Clause it was argued, that the Case of pleading a Pardon " after a special Verdict, was stronger than the Case of an Acquittal by " a Jury, which took away all the Presumption of Guilt; and that this " was an actual Acquittal, and is called so in the Pardon. The Judgment is Quod eat inde sine Die, and if he is again indicted, he may plead " Autre foits acquitte, 11 H. IV. 41. Bro. 20. Coron. 29, 133. Fitz. N. B. " 251. G. and the Record being moved into the King's Bench, this Court " are the Justices before whom he is acquitted ‡; and it is not discretionary only as to the Point between Bail and Imprisonment, the latter " of which the Prosecutor did not insist upon.

" But as to this Point, the Court were of Opinion, that the present " Case was not such as the Act of Parliament meant; and this being to " subject the Prisoner to a second Trial, which before he was not, he " not being indictable (Kelynge 23.) 'till the Time to appeal was elapsed, " 'till this Act gave such a Prosecution; it was therefore to be construed " strictly, and confined literally to an Acquittal by Verdict (Kelynge 104.) " upon an Arraignment at the King's Suit; and it was material, that no " Instance could be shewn of requiring such Bail upon pleading a Pardon; " on the contrary, Bowen in Mich. 8 Ann. was discharged without Bail. " Acquittal, they said, must be understood in a Course of Law, and not an " Interposition of the Crown's Mercy.

" The other Point, as to Sureties for the Good-behaviour, depended " on the 5 and 6 W. and M. c. 13. which enacts, " That the Justices " before whom any Pardon for Felony shall be pleaded, may, at their " Discretion, remand or commit the Person pleading it to Prison, 'till " he shall enter into a Recognizance with two Sureties, for his good Behaviour, for any time not exceeding seven Years; and if the Party be " an Infant (which was the present Case) then he is not to be bound, but " must find Sureties." Upon this Clause, therefore, the Prosecutor " insisted upon Sureties for the Good-behaviour, and instanced 2 H. " P. C. 394, where it is said, that at Common-Law, without the " Aid of 18 Eliz. c. 7. a Party acquitted may be bound to his Good-" behaviour, if of ill Fame.

" The Counsel for the Prisoner did not much oppose giving Sureties, " and said, they had them ready; and Mr. J. Wright and Mr. J. Dennison " were inclined to take them; but as there had yet been no Instance since " the Act, and this was merely discretionary, the Chief Justice (Sir " William Lee) was unwilling to make the Precedent in the Case of an " Infant, where some favourable Circumstances were stated in the Verdict. And the Case Hale cites out of Rastal's Entries, was, where " (as the Record says) testatum fuit cur' per fide dignos, that the Defendant was of ill Fame; and at last the others came in to discharge him " without Security."

N. B. I (Sir John Strange) on behalf of the Prosecutor, (the Heir being beyond Sea) desired it might be taken notice of, that we did not waive our Demand; and upon that the Court said, it should be their own Act, upon the Discretion of the Court.

The whole Expence attending this Prosecution, at Consultations, Fees to Counsel at the Trial, at the Attorney General's, at Lord Privy Seal's, at the Lord Chancellor's, and at the King's Bench on pleading his Pardon, and Imprisonment in Newgate from October to February, amounted to above 1300*l.*

This William Chetwynd, Esq. was the Last Heir-male of the Chetwynds of Grendon in Warwickshire, and Rudgley in Staffordshire. For though (on the Death of his elder Brother, Walter Chetwynd, Esq. who catched a Fever by attending Captain Clark's Trial at the Old Bailey, April 1749, of which he died) he came into a good Estate, as Heir at Law (his Brother Walter's Will being in part set aside on a Trial in B. R.) he enjoyed it but a few Years.

* Strange's Reports, Vol. II. p. 1203, 4, 5.

‡ Slaughterford was acquitted before Holt, at Surrey Assizes; and he took Bail to answer an Appeal; which was afterwards tried at Bar, and the Party convicted and hanged. Strange, Vol. II. p. 1204. Slaughterford's Case was this:

Christopher Slaughterford (Son of a Miller, himself a Maltster of some Substance, near Guildford in Surrey) courted one Jane Young, who thereupon left her Service in order to be married to him; was seen in his Company October 5, 1708, but never heard of afterwards; whereupon he was suspected of murdering her, taken up, and committed to the Marshalsea; and at the Lent Assizes following, was tried at Kingston, in Surrey, for the said Murder, and acquitted. However, he was ordered to remain in Gaol, many People thinking him guilty. The Father and Friends of the Deceased being poor, a Subscription was set on foot and Money raised, and an Appeal was brought against the said Slaughterford by Henry Young, Brother of the Deceased. He was brought to the Queen's-Bench Bar at Westminster, the second Day of the Term following, and tried before the Lord Chief Justice Holt, on the said Appeal, and convicted on very strong Circumstances, and ordered for Execution on Saturday July 9th. Slaughterford being led to the Gibbet from Guildford (to which Place he was carried from the Marshalsea), the only Request he had to make to the Executioner was, that he might throw himself off: And they were almost the only Words he uttered there; for being tied up, before the Executioner could descend to do the rest of his Office, in turning him off the Ladder, he had swung himself off. He seemed to die with a resolute Obstinacy, but delivered the following Paper to the Sheriff.

Guildford, July 9, 1709.

" I being brought here to die, according to the Sentence passed upon me at the " Queen's-Bench Bar, for a Crime of which I am wholly innocent, thought myself " obliged to let the World know (that they do not reflect on my Friends and Relations whom I have left behind me much troubled for my fatal End), that I know " nothing of the Death of Mrs. Jane Young; nor how she came by her Death directly or indirectly; though some have been pleased to cast Reflections on my " Aunt. However, I freely forgive all my Enemies, and pray to God to give them " a due Sense of their Errors, and in his due time to bring the Truth to light. In " the mean time, I beg every one to forbear reflecting on my dear Mother, or any of " my Relations, for my unjust and unhappy Fall, since what I have here set down " is the Truth and nothing but the Truth, as I expect Salvation at the Hands of " Almighty God; but I am heartily sorry that I should be the Cause of persuading " her to leave her Dame; which is all that troubles me, as witness my Hand this 9th " Day of July."

XXIX. The Trial of FRANCIS TOWNLEY, Esq. for High-Treason, (in levying War against his Most Sacred Majesty King George the Second) at the Court-House at St. Margaret's-Hill, Southwark, before the Right Honourable the Lord Chief Justice Lee, the Right Honourable the Lord Chief Justice Willes, Mr. Justice Wright, Mr. Justice Denniſon, Mr. Justice Foſter, Mr. Justice Abney, Mr. Baron Reynolds, and Mr. Baron Clive; with Sir Thomas De Veil, Knt. and Peter Theobalds, Esq. (both Justices of the Peace for the County of Surry, and Gentlemen named in the Special Commission) July 15, 1746 *.

THE whole Pannel (108) being first called over in the Prisoner's Presence, after he had made several Challenges, the following Jury-men were sworn †.

1. Daniel Ponton of Lambeth, Starch-maker.
2. John Haywood of Chelsham, Gent.
3. Michael Cuffe of Battersea, Gardener.
4. Francis Bartholomew of Egham, Gent.
5. Robert Wood of Epsom, Baker.
6. William Brooker of Walton upon Thames, Brewer.
7. Edmond Browne of Croydon, Brewer.
8. Thomas Belch of Coulsdon, Gent.
9. Thomas Dawson of St. George in Southwark, Brazier.
10. William Taylor of St. Saviour in Southwark, Brewer.
11. Thomas Lintall of the same, Cloth-worker.
12. James Paine of Seal, Yeoman.

Then the Clerk of the Arraigns (after Silence commanded) read over his Indictment to him, which was as follows:

Surry. Be it remembered, That at a Special Session of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol-Delivery of our Sovereign Lord the King, of and for the County of Surry, holden at the Borough of Southwark in the said County, on Monday the twenty-third Day of June, in the twentieth Year of the Reign of our said present Sovereign Lord George the Second, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, before Sir William Lee, Knight, Chief Justice of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, appointed to hold Pleas before the King himself, Sir John Willes, Knight, &c. (naming the rest of the Judges and Commissioners present) and others their Fellow-Justices and Commissioners of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, assigned by Letters Patent of our said present Sovereign Lord the King under his Great Seal of Great Britain, made by Virtue of the Statute made in this present Parliament, intitled, An Act for the more easy and speedy Trial of such Persons as have levied or shall levy War against his Majesty, and for the better ascertaining the Qualifications of Jurors in Trials for High-Treason, or Misprision of Treason, in that Part of Great Britain called Scotland, to the said Justices and Commissioners above-named and others, and to any three or more of them (of whom our said present Sovereign Lord the King willed that any of them the said Sir William Lee, [naming some others of the Judges] and others in the same Letters Patent named and appointed shall be one, to deliver the Gaol of the said County of the Prisoners therein being, or such as shall or may be detained in the same, on or before the first Day of January, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Forty-six, for or on Account of the High-Treason mentioned in the said Statute in levying War against our said present Sovereign Lord the King within this Realm, and to enquire by the Oath of good and lawful Men of the same County of all such High-Treasons in levying War against our said present Sovereign Lord the King within this Realm by the said Prisoners, or any of them, or by any other Person or Persons who are now in actual Custody for or on Account of the same, or who are or shall be guilty of High-Treason in levying War against our said present Sovereign Lord the King within this Realm, and shall be apprehended and imprisoned for the same on or before the said first Day of January, in the said Year of our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Forty-six, and the same High-Treasons to hear and determine according to the Form of the said Statute, by the Oath of Sir William Richardson of Bermondsey, Knt. Sir Abraham Shard of Kennington, Knt. Sir Thomas Hankey of Clapham, Knt. Sir Peter Thompson of Bermondsey, Knt. Josias Wordsworth of Adscombe, Esq. Percival Lewis of Putney, Esq. Samuel Atkinson of Croydon, Esq. John Copeland of Camberwell, Esq. Charles Heskins of Croydon, Esq. Joseph Creswick of Stretham, Esq. William Clarke of Southwark, Esq. Joseph Willoughby of Croydon, Esq. Thomas Bevois of Bermondsey, Esq. Elias Bird of Rotherhith, Esq. Thomas Tarrant of Southwark, Esq. Edward Steavens of Southwark, Esq. Henry Robinson of Wandsworth, Esq. John Heathfield of Croydon, Esq. Nathaniel Green of Southwark, Esq. Isaac Eeles of Lambeth, Esq. John Smith of Lambeth, Esq. Hammett Richardson of Bermondsey, Esq. Samuel Nicholson of Croydon, Esq. good and lawful Men of the said County, being then and there sworn and charged to enquire for our said present Sovereign Lord the King, touching and concerning the Premises in the said Letters Patent mentioned, It is presented, that the Bill of Indictment to this Schedule annexed is a true Bill.

The Jurors for our present Sovereign Lord the King upon their Oath present, that Francis Townley, late of the City of Carlisle, in the County of Cumberland, Esq. otherwise called Francis Townley, late of the same Place, Gentleman, John Hamilton, late of the City of Carlisle, in the County of Cumberland, Esq. otherwise called John Hamilton, late of the same Place, Gentleman, Alexander Abernethy, late of the same Place, Gentleman, otherwise called Alexander Abernethy, late of the same Place, Surgeon, and George Abernethy, late of the same Place, Gentleman, &c. being Subjects of our said present most Serene Sovereign Lord George the Second, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, not having the Fear of God in their Hearts, nor having any Regard for the Duty of their Allegiance, but being moved and seduced by the Instigation of the Devil, as false Traitors and Rebels against our said present Sovereign Lord the King, their supreme, true, natural, lawful, and undoubted Sovereign Lord, entirely withdrawing that cordial Love, and that true and due Obedience, Fidelity and Allegiance, which every Subject of our said present Sovereign Lord the King should and of Right ought to bear towards our said present Sovereign Lord the King; and also devising, and (as much as in them lay) most wickedly and traitorously intending to change and subvert the Rule and Government of this Kingdom, duly and happily established under our said present Sovereign Lord the King, and also to depose and deprive our said present Sovereign Lord the King of his Title, Honour, and Royal State, and of his Imperial Rule and Government of this Kingdom, and also to put and bring our said present Sovereign Lord the King to Death and final Destruction, and to raise and exalt the Person pretended to be Prince of Wales during the Life of James the Second, late King of England, and so forth, and since the Decease of the said late King, pretending to be, and taking upon himself the Stile and Title of King of England, by the Name of James the Third, to the Crown and to the Royal State and Dignity of King, and to the Imperial Rule and Government of this Kingdom, upon the tenth Day of October, in the nineteenth Year of the Reign of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, at the City of Carlisle aforesaid, in the County of Cumberland aforesaid, with a great Multitude of Traitors and Rebels, against our said present Sovereign Lord the King (to wit) to the Number of three Thousand Persons (whose Names are as yet unknown to the said Jurors), being armed and arrayed in a warlike and hostile Manner (to wit), with Colours displayed, Drums beating, Pipes playing, and with Swords, Clubs, Guns, Pistols, and divers other Weapons, as well offensive as defensive, with Force and Arms, did falsely and traitorously assemble and join themselves against our said present Sovereign Lord the King, and then and there with Force and Arms did falsely and traitorously, and in a warlike and hostile Manner array and dispose themselves against our said present Sovereign Lord the King, and then and there with Force and Arms, in Pursuance and Execution of such their wicked traitorous Intentions and Purposes aforesaid, did falsely and traitorously prepare, order, wage and levy a publick and cruel War against our said present Sovereign Lord the King, then and there committing and perpetrating a miserable and cruel Slaughter of and amongst the faithful Subjects of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, and also then and there during the said War with Force and Arms did with the said Traitors and Rebels so assembled, armed and arrayed as aforesaid, falsely and traitorously against the Will of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, enter into and take Possession of the said City of Carlisle, and the Castle thereto belonging within the same City, (the said City and Castle being a City and Castle of our said present Sovereign Lord the King) and the said City and Castle with Force and Arms then and there did falsely and traitorously possess, hold, keep, maintain, and defend, against our said present Sovereign Lord the King, against the Duty of their Allegiance, against the Peace of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, his Crown and Dignity, and also against the Form of the Statute in such Case made and provided.

To this Indictment the Prisoner pleaded, Not Guilty.

N. B. This Indictment and Caption were made use of against all the Rebels who were tried in Surry, except Æneas Macdonald; save that the Overt-Acts were laid in different Counties of England or Scotland, as the Cases respectively required; and also save that the Overt-Act of taking and possessing the City and Castle of Carlisle was not charged on those who were not concerned in that Part of the Rebellion.

Clerk of Arraigns. Gentlemen, upon this Indictment the Prisoner at the Bar has been arraigned, and thereunto has pleaded, Not Guilty, and for his Trial hath put himself upon God and his Country, which Country you are: Your Charge is to enquire, whether he be guilty of the High-Treason whereof he stands indicted, or Not Guilty. If you find him Guilty, you are to enquire what Goods and Chattels, Lands or Tenements, he had at the Time of the High-Treason committed, or at any Time since: If you find him Not Guilty, you are to enquire whether he fled for it; and if you find he fled for it, you are to enquire of his Goods and Chattels, as if you had found him Guilty: If you find him Not Guilty, nor that he did fly for it, you are to say so, and no more, and hear your Evidence.

* Though there were no Trials of the Rebel Commoners in 1715, printed in the Collection of State Trials; yet we shall insert here a short Account of a few of the Trials of the principal Commoners concerned in the Rebellion in 1745-6, as printed at that Time, (with Additions) to shew they were Persons of no Consequence or Estate, concerned in that unnatural Rebellion; being either Men of small Fortunes, or who had run out what they had, or Tradesmen, who took Part in that desperate Undertaking.

† For the several Steps taken relating to the Rebels, previous to their Trials, see Judge Foster's Reports, Page 1, 2, 3.

The Counsel for the King were Mr. Attorney General, Sir John Strange, Mr. Solicitor General, Sir Richard Lloyd, and the Honourable Mr. York; and for the Prisoner, Mr. Serjeant Wynne, and Mr. Clayton.

Mr. York, Counsel for the King. May it please your Lordship, and you, Gentlemen of the Jury; This is an Indictment against Francis Townley, the Prisoner at the Bar, and sets forth, &c. (as is before mentioned). To this Indictment he hath pleaded Not Guilty; we shall produce our Witnesses to make good the Charge against the Prisoner, which if we do, we doubt not that you will find him guilty of the Indictment.

Mr. Attorney General (Sir Dudley Rider). My Lords, and you, Gentlemen of the Jury, the Prisoner at the Bar, having been deeply engaged in the late unnatural and wicked Rebellion begun in Scotland, and carried into the Heart of this Kingdom, in order to overset our present happy Constitution in Church and State, hath made it necessary for this Prosecution against him: I do not doubt but in the course of our Evidence we shall make it appear to your Satisfaction, that the Prisoner with two others, whose Names are Blood and Fletcher, and other their Confederates, did assemble in a warlike Manner, and procured Arms, Ammunition, and other Instruments of War; and composed a Regiment for the Service of the Pretender to these Realms, to wage War against his present most sacred Majesty; and did march through and invade several Parts of this Kingdom, and unlawfully did seize his Majesty's Treasure in many Places for the Service of their villainous Cause, and took away the Horses and other Goods, Merchandize, and Chattels of many of his Majesty's peaceable Subjects. And that during the said March the Prisoner, with other Rebels, in open Defiance of his Majesty's undoubted Right and Title to the Crown of these Realms, frequently caused the Pretender's Son to be proclaimed in a publick and solemn Manner as Regent of these Realms; and himself marched at the Head of a pretended Regiment, which they called the Manchester Regiment.

My Lords, I shall not take up the Time of the Court in saying a great deal, for all that the Prisoner is charged with will appear so full and plain from the Evidence we shall produce for the King, that there will not be the least Doubt with the Jury, to find him guilty.

Sir John Strange then spoke to the following Effect: My Lords, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, I am of Counsel in this Case likewise for the Crown: I am very far from aggravating this Case against the Prisoner at the Bar, but I cannot help observing, that the Engagements which the Prisoner had embarked in, would have overset one of the most glorious and free Constitutions that ever was framed, and I believe I may venture to say, is the only one in the whole World.

If an Attempt to subvert the Government, to destroy the King, and set up a Popish Pretender; if marching in an hostile manner, carrying on a bloody and destructive War in this Nation, can move Compassion, or be extenuated, any Rebellion may be palliated over and excused, since scarce any Circumstance can be added in Aggravation of that which hath lately been raised and carried on in this Kingdom.

Every Body knows the Rebellion broke out in Scotland with a small Number of People, and made a very great Progress, 'till at last the Rebels had the Audaciousness, with the Pretender's Son at their Head, to fight his Majesty's Forces at Preston Pans, and then the Rebellion burrowed into England, and the Prisoner at the Bar was with them in Lancashire, particularly at Preston, and several other Places, and then they proceeded to Manchester, where the Prisoner formed a Regiment, and accepted a Commission to be Colonel of the said Regiment, from the eldest Son of the Pretender, and wore a white Cockade, and a Plaid Sash, as a Mark of his Authority, and the Party he sided with; and then advanced from Manchester to Derby with his Regiment, where the Rebel Army halted some few Days; but being apprehensive of the Duke of Cumberland's attacking them, it so alarmed them, that they marched back with great Precipitation 'till they came to Carlisle, where he acted as Commandant of the City, and gave out Orders to the Garrison, amongst which he ordered the Houses of some of his Majesty's faithful Subjects to be set on fire, but was afterwards obliged by the Duke to surrender to the King's Pleasure; and though Humanity may induce you to have Compassion towards the Prisoner, yet if it is proved he is guilty of the Crimes laid to him, the Justice of this Nation calls aloud for his Punishment.

For no less was to be a Sacrifice than his Majesty and his Royal Family (a Succession of Princes, appointed by Divine Providence to be not only the Preservers of our Rights and Liberties, but to be the Guardians of the Protestant Interest in Europe), to appease the Fury of a Sett of unsatisfied People, who have associated in this most wicked and unnatural Rebellion, and who envied us, the faithful Subjects of his Majesty, the Blessings we enjoyed uninterrupted, of our Religious and Civil Rights and Privileges.

These People, in order to divert themselves, and amuse the Ignorant, had on their Standards or Colours, Mottoes that they imagined would be grateful, viz.

LIBERTY and PROPERTY,
CHURCH and KING.

But your Lordship and the Gentlemen of the Jury, as well as the unfortunate Person who stands before you at the Bar, will excuse me if I take upon me to interpret the Meaning of their famous Motto or Inscription on their Colours, which, not to take up too much of the Time of the Court, I shall do in few Words.

The Liberty they designed, was nothing less than Slavery; their intended Property was Plunder, which too many of the good People of this Kingdom hath found; their Church was Popery, and the Meaning of their King, was only to make these free Kingdoms a Province to France. We shall now call our Witnesses, who will give such Proofs against the Prisoner, that I doubt not, Gentlemen of the Jury, you will find him guilty of the Treason he stands charged with.

Mr. Solicitor General. (Hon. W. Murray, Esq.) Call Roger Mac Donald.

Roger Mac Donald being sworn, said, That he knew Colonel Townley the Prisoner, that he saw him at Derby, and on the Retreat of the Rebel Army from thence, he marched at the Head of the Manchester Regiment, as Colonel of the same.

This Witness also said, that he saw him with a white Cockade in his Hat, a Brace of Pistols, and was accounted as principal Officer between Lancaster and Preston, and he appeared at the Head of the Regiment, with Colours flying, and Drums beating, and that he had on a Plaid Sash.

This Witness was then asked, What Number at that Time the Rebel Army might consist of? and he said, to the best of his Knowledge, he believed 5600 Men, but not all armed.

This Witness farther deposed, That the Prisoner at the Bar was always looked upon by both Officers and Soldiers, as Colonel of the Regiment called the Manchester Regiment; and that he gave Command to all the Officers under him, who obeyed his Command as their principal Officer. ---- That the Regiment had a Flag with these Words on one Side, viz. Liberty and Property; and on the other, Church and King. That they had some Artillery with them, and the Prisoner always appeared at the Head of his Regiment.

Cross-Examination.

Prisoner's Counsel. (Mr. Serjeant Wynne) Pray have you had no Promise of Pardon?

Witness. I have had no certain Promise of Pardon. I was first examined, at Inverness, by the Judge Advocate of Scotland, but he did not assure me of a Pardon.

Prisoner's Counsel. Did not you expect it?

Witness. I cannot say but I did expect to be pardoned, for I was only a Servant. I was brought ashore very poor, and without any thing to subsist on.

King's Counsel. You say you saw the Prisoner, in the Retreat from Derby, command his Regiment: Was not he looked upon as Colonel?

Witness. Yes, I saw him on Horseback very often, and he always rode at the Head of the Regiment on a bay Horse.

Sir Richard Lloyd. Call Samuel Maddox; who appeared, and was sworn.

Maddox said, The first Time he saw the Prisoner, Colonel Townley, was at Manchester, about the sixth, seventh, or eighth Day of December last, but the Day he could not particularly remember; and said the Prisoner was made Colonel of the Manchester Regiment by the Pretender's Son; and one Reason why he was certain he was Colonel of the Regiment, was, that a Guard from the said Regiment was mounted every Day, and Centinels placed at the Prisoner's Quarters; that he, the said Maddox, marched out with him in the Station of an Ensign, but never had any Commission, though he carried the Colours as such; that the Prisoner wore a Sword and a Brace of Pistols, with a white Cockade in his Hat; and that the Prisoner gave Command as Colonel of the Regiment, and that he ordered the said Manchester Regiment to be drawn up in the Church-Yard in Manchester, where the Pretender's Son reviewed them, and that he marched at the Head of the Regiment as Colonel to Derby. Their first Day's March from Manchester was to Winslow, where the Prisoner appeared also at the Head of the Regiment, and had a white Cockade in his Hat, a Plaid Sash, a Brace of Pistols, and a Sword; that their next Day's March was to Macclesfield, where he, this Witness, signified, he had an Inclination to leave the Regiment, and return home to his Master at Manchester, but was intimidated from so doing, by being threatened, and told, that if he did he would have his Brains knocked out.

This Witness farther deposed, That when they were at Derby with the Rebel Army, they beat up for Volunteers for the Manchester Regiment, commanded by the Hon. Colonel Francis Townley; and the same was done by the particular Order and Direction of the Prisoner.

That when the Rebel Army retreated from Derby, Colonel Townley, the Prisoner, and some of his Regiment, took out of a House between Derby and Ashborn, a Sack full of Arms, which were concealed under some old Writings; that the said Arms were taken with them to Ashborn, and lodged all Night in the Prisoner's own Room, and disposed of afterwards among his Men; that the Prisoner had two Centinels always at his Door all Night, for fear the Duke of Cumberland was nearer to them than they imagined; that the Prisoner marched as Colonel of the Manchester Regiment, in their Retreat from Derby to Carlisle; sometimes at the Head of the Regiment; that when they came to Carlisle, the Prisoner was made by the Pretender's Son, Commandant of Carlisle, and had another Commission given him by the Pretender's Son to raise a Regiment of Horse; that so soon as the main Body of the Rebel Army were gone from Carlisle for Scotland, he the Prisoner took on him the Command of the whole Rebel Forces left there; and that he gave Orders for the Guns to be mounted, and also ordered a House to be burnt; which was accordingly done, alledging that several of the King's Forces had fired from it, and annoyed the Pretender's Army; and that he particularly directed and caused several Chevaux de Frize to be made, and fixed at the Gates and Entrance to the City, to prevent his Majesty's Horse and Dragoons from approaching it; that the Prisoner ordered some of the Rebel Army then in Carlisle, to make a Sally out to bring in some Sheep, and that the Prisoner mounted the Walls, with a Pistol in his Hand, to give notice if the King's Forces were near where the Men were to go; that the Prisoner paid the Men of his own Company himself, as all the Captains of Companies did theirs; and that he had heard the Prisoner when in Carlisle, in company with other Officers, complain that he was fourscore Pounds out of Pocket in paying his Men; that before the Capitulation, this Witness heard the Prisoner have some Words, and was seemingly in a great Passion with Colonel Hamilton, who was Governor of the Castle or Citadel of Carlisle, for surrendering the Place, and not making a Defence to the last; and that he heard the Prisoner declare, that it was better to die by the Sword, than to fall into the Hands of those damned Hanoverians.

This Witness being particularly asked by the King's Counsel, if he had at any time seen the Prisoner in Carlisle act as an Officer, said, That he had particularly seen him encouraging the Rebel Soldiers to make Sallies out on the King's Forces.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Serjeant Wynne. Mr. Maddox, after the Surrender of the Town and Citadel of Carlisle, did not you all expect Mercy?

Maddox. We were all put Prisoners into the Church.

Serjeant Wynne. Did you all expect to be hanged?

Maddox. I cannot say that, for we were in expectation of being at Liberty again soon.

Serjeant Wynne. Pray do not you expect a Pardon, or have you had any Promise of a Reward for what you have done in this Affair?

Maddox. I cannot ſay I have ever had any Promiſe of a Reward.

Serj. Wynne. I find you are a very ſmart young Man, and I deſire to be anſwered to this Queſtion; Pray, have you had any Promiſe of a Reward or Pardon, or do you expect any Reward or Pardon, after having given your Evidence againſt the Priſoner at the Bar, or the other Priſoners that are in Cuſtody?

Maddox. My Brother came to me when I was in New-Priſon, and he did adviſe me to do the beſt I could for myſelf, and ſerve my Country. Soon after one of his Majeſty's Meſſengers took me away; and I have been at his Houſe ever ſince, only at thoſe Times I went to be examined; Nobody ever told me that I ſhould be pardoned, but my Friends adviſed me to do what I have done. If I could have a free Pardon, I ſhould be very thankful for it.

Mr. Clayton. (another of the Priſoner's Counſel.) Mr. Maddox, Did not his Royal Highneſs the Duke (when you ſurrendered Priſoners) promiſe you Mercy?

Maddox. All the Terms his Royal Highneſs ſaid we were to expect, were, we ſhould not be put to the Sword, but that we ſhould be left to his Majeſty's Pleaſure; which two Scots Officers who went to the Duke, and whoſe Names were Abernethy and Forbes, told us; and that the People in Carliſle were to deliver up all their Arms at the Gate, and the Officers were to go into the Church.

King's Counſel. Call Auſtin Coleman, who appeared and was ſworn, and ſaid, He ſaw the Priſoner at the Bar in Carliſle, who was called Colonel Townley, and commanded the Mancheſter Regiment, and was made Commandant of the ſaid City by the Pretender's Son; and if any of the Soldiers wanted Arms, they applied to him, and he furniſhed them with Firelocks, Piſtols and Bayonets; and that he often had ſeen the Priſoner order the Guard to mount, and always acted as their chief Officer, and all the other Officers took their Orders from him as their Superior.

Croſs-Examination.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Pray, Sir, inform me what Time you ſaw the Gentleman at the Bar at Carliſle, was it in the Month of November?

Coleman. I cannot tell what Month it was, I know I ſaw him at Carliſle when it was in Poſſeſſion of the Rebels, and he had a Commiſſion from the Pretender's Son.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Did you ever hear him ſay he had a Commiſſion?

Coleman. No, I never did.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Then what you ſay ſignifies nothing.

King's Counſel. Call Capt. Carey of the Foot-Guards, who appeared.

King's Counſel. Pray ſwear the Captain; which being done, Capt. Carey ſaid, That he received Orders by Lord George Beauclerk, from his Royal Highneſs Duke William, to take Care of the Governor of Carliſle, and had his Royal Highneſs's Orders to examine all the Rebel Priſoners Papers, amongſt whom he applied to the Priſoner at the Bar, who ſaid he had delivered his Commiſſion before to Major Adams. He further ſaid, That the Priſoner had ſome Guineas in his Pockets, and his Watch, which he did not take from him; for his Royal Highneſs's Orders were, not to take any Money out of the Pockets of any of the Officers, only to ſeize all publick Money that they had collected; for that what Money they had in their Pockets might be of Service to them in their Confinement. That this Evidence indorſed all the Papers that he found on ſuch of the Officers as he ſearched, and ſaid, the Capitulation was ſigned by the Duke of Richmond, Lieutenant-General in the Army; wherein the Rebels in Carliſle were to be at the King's Pleaſure.

Counſel for the King. Sir, are you ſure that in the Capitulation that was ſigned by the Duke of Richmond, it was mentioned that the Priſoners ſhould be reſerved for the King's Pleaſure?

Capt. Carey. I cannot take upon me to be certain of that; but I think ſo.

King's Counſel. Do you know the Duke of Richmond's Hand-writing?

Capt. Carey. No, I never ſaw his Grace write.

Then a Paper was ſhewn him, which he ſaid was the Capitulation, and was read, as follows:

"All the Terms his Royal Highneſs will or can grant to the Rebel Garriſon of Carliſle, are, That they ſhall not be put to the Sword, but be reſerved for the King's Pleaſure.

"If they conſent to theſe Conditions, the Governor and principal Officers are to deliver themſelves up immediately, and the Caſtle, Citadel, and all the Gates of the Town are to be taken Poſſeſſion of forthwith by the King's Troops. All the ſmall Arms are to be lodged in the Town Guard-Room, and the reſt of the Garriſon are to retire to the Cathedral, where a Guard is to be placed over them. No Damage is to be done to the Artillery, Arms, or Ammunition." Head Quarters at Blackall, 30 Dec. Half an Hour paſt Two in the Afternoon.

By his Royal Highneſs's Command,

Signed Richmond, Lenox, and Aubigney, Lieutenant-General of his Majeſty's Forces*.

King's Counſel. Call Captain Nevet of the third Regiment of Foot Guards; who appearing, and being ſworn, ſaid, He went by order of his Royal Highneſs the Duke to viſit and examine the Rebel Officers in Carliſle; and that the Priſoner was one of them, and went by the Name of Colonel Townley, and Commandant of Carliſle.

King's Counſel. Swear Captain Vere, which was done.

King's Counſel. Sir, will you be pleaſed to tell my Lords, and the Gentlemen of the Jury, what you know of the Priſoner at the Bar being in the late unnatural Rebellion?

Capt. Vere. I ſaw the Priſoner on the 20th of November at Carliſle, for I was taken Priſoner a little before by the Rebel Army; he was called Colonel Townley, Colonel of the Mancheſter Regiment, and Commandant of the Town. On the 25th of December he appeared with a white Cockade; I went up to Colonel Hamilton's Room, where we talked of a Capitulation, and Mr. Hamilton was willing to agree to it: We then wrote a Letter to his Royal Highneſs the Duke, and the Meſſenger who carried it was made a Priſoner; and Mr. Hamilton deſired me to go to Captain Abernethy, and the Scotch Officers, and they all agreed to what was done, and the next Day they hung out the White Flag.

Sir John Strange. Did not Townley appear as the Commanding Officer?

Capt. Vere. Yes, I ſaw his Commiſſion in the Guard-Room.

Sir John Strange. Did you ſee it in his own Hands?

Capt. Vere. I cannot ſay I did.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Pray, Sir, what are you?

Capt. Vere. I am an Officer, and was ſent by his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle upon the publick Service, and was taken Priſoner before by the Rebel Army.

Mr. Davidſon, a Grocer of Carliſle, was the next Witneſs, who being called and ſworn, depoſed, That he had ſeen the Priſoner at Carliſle, where he acted as Colonel of the Mancheſter Regiment, and Commandant of the City of Carliſle; he was preſent when he ordered a Houſe to be ſet on Fire at Carliſle; and on this Deponent's aſking him the Reaſon for it, he replied, That ſeveral of the Elector of Hanover's Men had fired from it, and annoyed his Men.

Here the King's Counſel reſted it.

The Counſel for the Priſoner proceeded now to his Defence, and pleaded, That Mr. Townley was a Gentleman of a good Family, and that his Education was ſuitable to his Birth; but by ſome Misfortunes in his Family was obliged to retire to France, which happened in the Year 1728. Being a Man of Spirit, he was ſoon taken Notice of by the French Court, and being recommended to his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, as a Perſon capable of a Poſt in his Army, the King gave him a Commiſſion; in conſequence of which he ſerved at the Siege of Philipſburgh, under the Marſhal Duke of Berwick, who loſt his Life before the Walls of that Place. He there behaved with ſuch Courage and Conduct as gained him the Reſpect and Eſteem of all the Officers in the Army. He executed all the Orders of his Superiors with the greateſt Intrepidity, and expoſed himſelf on every Occaſion in ſuch a Manner, as if Life was of no Signification, when Honour and the Service of his Maſter ſtood in Competition with it. He was likewiſe in ſeveral other Sieges and Engagements, where his Behaviour was always ſuch as became a Man of Honour; and as he received the Pay of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, he thought it his Duty to ſerve him with all the Fidelity he was capable of. Thus he continued in that Service from the Year 1728, till a few Years ſince that he came into England, where he privately reſided till about the Time of the breaking out of the Rebellion. And the French King imagining he might be of Service in promoting his Views, in the Invaſion which he had meditated againſt theſe Kingdoms, ſent him a Colonel's Commiſſion, to enable him to raiſe Forces, and to aſſiſt his Ally, the Pretender, in his Expedition to Scotland. Thus it appears, that he has been ſixteen Years in the Service of France; that he has had the French King's Commiſſion during all that Time; and conſequently was as much in the Service of France as any Officer in the French Army; and therefore they were humbly of Opinion, that Col. Townley had as juſt a Right to the Cartel, as any French Officer that has been taken by the Engliſh, during the Progreſs of the War between the two Kingdoms.

---

* As ſome People may be willing to know what the Rebels called, The Capitulation on the Surrender of Carliſle; and as ſeveral of thoſe unhappy Perſons in their dying Speeches aſſerted, That their Lives were taken away contrary to the Laws of Nations and of Arms, as appears by the Capitulation granted them at the Surrender of that City; to contradict ſo falſe an Aſſertion, we ſhall here inſert all the Meſſages, &c. that paſſed on that Occaſion, whereby it will appear, that nothing was granted them but, "that they ſhould not be put to the Sword, but reſerved for the King's Pleaſure;" which Terms they conſented to accept, as appears by Colonel Hamilton's, and the other Officers Anſwer to the Terms offered by his Royal Highneſs, viz. On the firſt Platoon of the Old Battery firing, (December 30, 1745) the Rebels hung out the White Flag; whereupon the Battery ceaſed, and they called over the Walls, That they had two Hoſtages ready to be delivered at the Engliſh Gate, on the oppoſite Side of the Town; his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland then ordered Colonel Conway and Lord Bury to deliver two Meſſages marked in Writing, to be ſigned by Colonel Conway; the ſecond Meſſage being deſigned as an Anſwer to a Perſon's Letter, who called himſelf a Frenchman.

In about two Hours they returned, and brought a Paper ſigned John Hamilton; whereupon they were ſent back with the Terms ſigned by the Duke of Richmond, by Order of his Royal Highneſs; and about Four they brought a Paper ſigned alſo by the ſaid John Hamilton; on which Brigadier Bligh took Poſſeſſion of the City.

Copy of his Royal Highneſs's Meſſage to the Rebels at Carliſle, upon their hanging out a White Flag, Monday Morning, the 30*th of* December, 1745, ſent by Colonel Conway.

His Royal Highneſs will make no Exchange of Hoſtages with Rebels, and deſires they will let him know by me, what they meant by hanging out the White Flag.

To let the French Officer know, if there is one in the Town, that there are no Dutch Troops here, but enough of the King's to chaſtiſe the Rebels, and thoſe who dare to give them any Aſſiſtance.

Signed, Col. Conway,
Aid de Camp to his Royal Highneſs the Duke.

John Hamilton's Anſwer to his Royal Highneſs the Duke's Meſſage to the Rebels in Carliſle, December 30, 1745.

In Anſwer to the ſhort Note ſent by his Royal Highneſs Prince William, Duke of Cumberland; the Governor, in Name of himſelf, and all the Officers and Soldiers, Gunners and others, belonging to the Garriſon, deſires to know what Terms his Royal Highneſs will be pleaſed to give them, upon the Surrender of the City and Caſtle of Carliſle; and which known, his Royal Highneſs ſhall be duly acquainted with the Governor and Garriſon's laſt or ultimate Reſolution, the White Flag being hung out on Purpoſe to obtain a Ceſſation of Arms for concluding ſuch a Capitulation. This to be given to his Royal Highneſs's Aid de Camp.

Signed, John Hamilton.

His Royal Highneſs's Declaration to the Rebels, ſent by the Colonels Conway and Lord Bury, Aid de Camps to his Royal Highneſs, after receiving John Hamilton's Letter, December 30, 1745.

All the Terms his Royal Highneſs will or can grant to the Rebel Garriſon of Carliſle, are, that they ſhall not be put to the Sword, but be reſerved for the King's Pleaſure.

If they conſent to theſe Conditions, the Governor and principal Officers are to deliver themſelves up immediately, and the Caſtle, Citadel, and all the Gates of the Town, are to be taken Poſſeſſion of forthwith by the King's Troops. All the ſmall Arms are to be lodged in the Town Guard-Room, and the reſt of the Garriſon are to retire to the Cathedral, where a Guard is to be placed over them. No Damage is to be done to the Artillery, Arms, or Ammunition. Head Quarters at Blackall, 30 December, Half an Hour paſt Two in the Afternoon.

By his Royal Highneſs's Command,

Signed Richmond, Lenox, and Aubigney, Lieutenant-General of his Majeſty's Forces.

The Rebels Anſwer to the Terms offered them by his Royal Highneſs, December 30, 1745.

The Governor of Carliſle, and all the Officers compoſing the Garriſon, agree to the Terms of Capitulation given in by his Grace the Duke of Richmond, Lenox, and Aubigney, Lieutenant-General of his Majeſty's Forces, recommending themſelves to his Royal Highneſs's Clemency, and that his Royal Highneſs will be pleaſed to interpoſe for them with his Majeſty; and that the Officers Cloaths and Baggage may be ſafe, with a competent Time to be allowed the Citizens of Carliſle to remove their Beds, Bedcloaths, and other Houſhold Furniture impreſſed from them for the Uſe of the Garriſon in the Caſtle. The 30th of December, at Three in the Afternoon.

W:

We muſt acknowledge that the King's Counſel have opened the Nature of the Indictment with all the Candour that could be expected, and have not exaggerated the Charge againſt the Priſoner beyond the Bounds of Humanity and Good-nature; and we humbly hope they will be of Opinion with us, that tho' the Priſoner at the Bar ſhould unhappily be found acting in this unnatural Rebellion, yet as he acted under a Commiſſion from the French King, he has a Right to the Cartel for ſettling the Exchange of Priſoners that may be taken on either Side, in the War now carried on between the two Kingdoms.

The Evidence we have to produce in Behalf of the Priſoner, are only three. The firſt is Capt. Carpentier, who will prove, we hope, to your Lordſhips Satisfaction, that Col. Townley was many Years in the French Service, under a Commiſſion from the French King; and ſince his being taken at Carliſle has been conſtantly ſupplied from France; the other two, who are John Hayward and Thomas Dickinſon, we ſhall bring to invalidate the Evidence of Maddox, by ſhewing the Badneſs of his Character, and that he is ſuch a Man whoſe Teſtimony is not to be credited.

And the Priſoner's Counſel farther obſerved, that the Indictment was inſufficient, for that they had not mentioned the Day in the Indictment when the Treaſon was done, and that the glorious Statute of the 7th of King William III. which was juſtly eſteemed the Bulwark of Engliſh Liberty, directed, that nothing ſhall be given in Evidence but what is inſerted in the Indictment; and that the Time not being mentioned in the Indictment when the Treaſon was acted, is ſufficient to quaſh it, becauſe it might be ſo long paſt as to entitle the Priſoner to the Benefit of the Limitation enacted in the ſaid King's Reign; and that Act ſays, That no Perſon ſhall be convicted, or ſuffer for High or Petit Treaſon, unleſs a Proſecution is begun againſt the Perſon who committed ſuch Treaſon, in three Years after the Commiſſion of ſuch Treaſon.

Counſel. Pray call Mr. Carpentier; who appeared, and was ſworn.

King's Counſel. Pray, what would you aſk this Gentleman to?

Priſoner's Counſel. To prove that the Priſoner had a Commiſſion from the French King, and that he was at the Siege of Philipſburg.

Court. That will be againſt you; for no Man that is a liege Subject of his Majeſty can juſtify taking up Arms, and acting in the Service of a Prince that is actually in War againſt his Majeſty.

On which Carpentier was ſet aſide, without being examined.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Pray call John Hayward; who appeared, and was ſworn.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Pray Sir, do you know Samuel Maddox, and how long have you known him?

John Hayward. Yes, Sir, about two Years.

Mr. Serj. Wynne. Pray, what Character doth he bear?

John Hayward. He bears ſuch a very bad Character, that I would not believe him upon his Oath.

Croſs-Examined.

Sir John Strange. I hope you believe that every Perſon that joined with the Rebels are bad Men?---Hayward. Yes, Sir.

Sir R. Lloyd. What Buſineſs are you of?---Hayward. I am a Glover and Leather-ſeller at Mancheſter. [After being examined, he went out of Court, but was recalled.]

Sollicitor Gen. Mr. Hayward, Pray, did you ſee the Priſoner at the Bar in Mancheſter?

Hayward. No, I never ſaw the Priſoner before.

Counſellor Clayton. Pray call Thomas Dickinſon; who appeared, and was ſworn.

Sir, do you know Samuel Maddox?

Dickinſon. Yes, Sir; he was bound Apprentice to an Apothecary at Mancheſter.

Counſ. Clayton. Pray, what Character does he bear?

Dickinſon. A very bad one.

Counſ. Clayton. Would you believe him upon his Oath?

Dickinſon. No, I would not, eſpecially upon Life and Death.

Sir John Strange. For what Reaſon do you take upon you to ſwear he is not to be believed upon his Oath?

Dickinſon. I do not know particularly; but I have heard he was a very bad Apprentice, and that he had wronged his Maſter.

Sir John Strange. Do you know his Maſter?

Dickinſon. Yes; his Maſter is in London now.

Sir John Strange. So, for no other Reaſon, than becauſe you have heard he was not a good 'Prentice, you take upon you to ſwear he is not to be believed on his Oath. I ſuppoſe you have other bad 'Prentices in Mancheſter?

Dickinſon. Yes, there are.

Mr. Att. Gen. Dickinſon, Did you ever ſee the Priſoner at Mancheſter at the Time the Rebel Army was there?---Dickinſon. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. What was he doing there?

Dickinſon. He was Colonel of the Mancheſter Regiment.

Mr. Att. Gen. What, in the Pretender's Service?

Dickinſon. Yes, in the Rebel Army.

The Evidence for the Priſoner being all gone through, Mr. Sollicitor General replied to what had been objected by the Priſoner's Counſel to the Indictment.

Mr. Sollicitor General ſtood up, and made a Reply to the Priſoner's Counſel, wherein he obſerved, "The firſt Overt-Act of High-Treaſon charged againſt the Priſoner, is compaſſing and imagining the Death of the King; the next is, adhering to the King's Enemies, and levying of War againſt his Majeſty's Perſon and Government; and this is founded on the Statute of the 25th of Edward the Third. And levying of War by one or more Perſons, is Treaſon. That this War has been levied, and that Acts of Hoſtilities have been committed by the Priſoner, I do not doubt but that it has been ſufficiently proved to you, Gentlemen of the Jury; there is no Occaſion to prove explicitly all that is laid in the Indictment; but that War has been levied againſt his Majeſty, has been ſufficiently proved and admitted by the learned Counſel for the Priſoner; it has been proved, likewiſe, that the Priſoner, with a tumultuous Number of Rebels and Traitors, did aſſemble in ſeveral Parts of his Majeſty's Dominions, and levied a cruel and deſtructive War. The Counſel on the other Side would inſinuate, that the Crime was committed before the Day laid in the Indictment, therefore the Day of the Commiſſion in the Indictment ſhould be inſerted. But admitting it was ſo, this Indictment is good; for in the Caſe of Sir Harry Grey, it was the Opinion of all the Judges, that Sir Harry was guilty, notwithſtanding that the Fact was committed twelve Years before the Indictment; and it is recent in the Memory of many Gentlemen of the Law, that this was the Caſe of Chandler, Layer, and Bradſhaw; and ſo it was allowed, in conſtructive Treaſon, in the Caſe of Dammery and others *, in the Reign of the late Queen Anne, for pulling down of Meeting-houſes, and many Caſes of the like Nature in Sir Matthew Hale's Pleas of the Crown; for which ſeveral Reaſons, and what has been mentioned before, I humbly conceive your Lordſhips will over-rule this Exception, as having no Weight." (Upon which the ſaid Motion was over-ruled by the Court.) Then my Lord Chief Juſtice Lee ſummed up the Evidence very impartially to the Jury.

After which the Jury conſulted together in Court, but not agreeing in their Verdict, withdrew about ten Minutes, and when they returned into Court, were called over by the Clerk of the Arraigns, and anſwered to their Names.

Clerk of the Arraigns. Gentlemen of the Jury, are you agreed on your Verdict?---Jury. Yes.

Clerk of the Arraigns. Who ſhall ſay for you?---Jury. Our Foreman.

Clerk of the Arraigns. Francis Townley, hold up your Hand. (Which he did.)

How ſay you? Is Francis Townley guilty of the High Treaſon whereof he ſtands indicted, or not guilty?---Foreman. Guilty.

Clerk of the Arraigns. What Goods and Chattels, Lands and Tenements, had he at the Time of the ſaid High Treaſon committed, and at any Time ſince, to your Knowledge?---None.

Clerk of the Arraigns. Hearken to your Verdict, as the Court has recorded it; You ſay that Francis Townley is guilty of the High-Treaſon whereof he ſtands indicted, and you ſay he had no Goods, nor Chattels, Lands or Tenements, at the Time of the ſaid High-Treaſon committed, or at any Time ſince to your Knowledge, and ſo you ſay all?---Jur. Yes.

Then Mr. Jones, Keeper of the County Gaol of Surry, was ordered to take Care of the Priſoner.

Mr. Townley's Caſe, July 15, 1746.

HIS Counſel moved that before any Juryman ſhould be brought to the Book, the whole Pannel might be called over once in the Priſoner's Hearing, that he might take notice who did and who did not appear; which they ſaid would be a conſiderable Help to him in taking his Challenges †. This was done by Order of the Court, and the Attorney-General did not oppoſe it.

Every Juryman as he came to the Book was aſked, whether he was a Freeholder or no. Thoſe who anſwered that they had no Freehold in the County, were examined upon a Voire dire to that Matter; and on their anſwering that they had no Freehold, were ſet aſide. Thoſe who anſwered that they had both Freehold and Copyhold were aſked, whether both put together did amount to 10*l.* a-Year; and if they did, that was admitted to be a good Qualification, though the Freehold alone was under 10*l.*

The Court grounded this Rule on the Bill of Rights, 1 W. M. St. 2. c. 2. 4. 5. W. M. c. 24. S. 15. and the 4th and 5th W. M. compared.

The Priſoner's Counſel offered to call a Witneſs to ſhew that he was at the Time of the Rebellion in the Service and Pay of the French King, and ſo intitled, as they inſiſted, to the Benefit of the Cartel for Exchange of Priſoners: But the Court declared that ſuch Proof is not to be admitted. It is no Defence in a Court of Law, nor is it ſo much as an Excuſe, that he had entered into the Service of an open Enemy. See the Caſe of Æneas Macdonald.

They then inſiſted on what they (very improperly) called the Capitulation at the Surrender of Carliſle. In this likewiſe the Court over-ruled them. It is no Sort of Defence in a Court of Law. But to prevent Miſconſtructions, Colonel Carey was examined touching the Terms upon which the Surrender was made. And he ſwore, that the Duke expreſly reſerved the Rebels in Carliſle to be dealt with as His Majeſty ſhould pleaſe.

The Court then obſerved, that the Priſoners had received the whole Benefit of the Terms offered by the Duke, in that they were not immediately put to the Sword, [See Lord Winton's Trial 6. St. Tri.] but were reſerved for his Majeſty's Pleaſure; which now appears to be, that they ſhall have a fair Trial, and Liberty to make their Defence according to Law.

They then inſiſted that the Overt-Acts are charged in the Indictment to be committed on the 10th of October, and that all the Evidence is of Overt-Acts ſubſequent to that Time; and ſaid, that however the Reſolutions with regard to this Point may have been before the 7th W. III. yet now, by that Act, no Evidence is to be given but of Overt-Acts laid in the Indictment; and conſequently the Overt-Acts muſt be proved in ſuch Manner as they are laid: That in this Caſe eſpecially the King's Counſel are not at Liberty to vary in their Proofs from the Day laid, ſince they have confined themſelves in the Indictment to one Day, and have not charged (as they ſaid in moſt of the Precedents it is charged) that the Defendant did commit the Treaſon charged on him on the Day laid, and at divers Days and Times, as well before as after.

To this Mr. Murray, the Sollicitor General, anſwered, That the 7th W. III. makes no Alteration with regard to this Point, ſo as to make either Time or Place more material than they were before the Act. The Act indeed ſaith, That no Evidence ſhall be given of any Overt-Acts not laid in the Indictment: But what is or is not Evidence of ſuch Overt-Acts, is left upon juſt the ſame Foot in this reſpect as it was before the Act; what was Evidence at Common Law is in this reſpect Evidence ſtill; and as to the charging the Overt-Acts at divers Days and Times as well before as after the Day particularly mentioned, he ſaid, that the greateſt Part of the Precedents he had ſeen of Indictments for levying War, which is the preſent Caſe, do charge the Overt-Acts on one Day only.

Sir Richard Lloyd offered to ſpeak on the ſame Side; but the Court told him, he need not give himself the Trouble of ſpeaking to the Point, on which there could be no Doubt, and over-ruled the Objection. *

Of the above Seventeen, Abernethey, Gadd, Furnivall, Taylor, Brettaugh, Saunderſon, Charles Deacon, and Willding were reprieved, and the other Nine executed July 30.

The Priſoner Townley was executed according to his Sentence on Kennington-Common, on Wedneſday the 30th of July 1746.

After he had hung ſix Minutes, he was cut down, and having Life in him, as he lay upon the Block to be quartered, the Executioner gave him ſeveral Blows on his Breaſt, which not having the Effect deſigned, he immediately cut his Throat; after which he took his Head off; then ripped him open, and took out his Bowels and Heart, and threw them into a Fire, which conſumed them; then he ſlathed his four Quarters; and put them with the Head into a Coffin, and they were carried to the New Jayl in Southwark, where they were depoſited till Saturday Aug. 2. when his Head was put on Temple-Bar, and his Body and Limbs ſuffered to be buried.

This unfortunate Perſon was about 38 Years of Age, born near Wigan in Lancaſhire, of a very good Family. His Uncle Mr. Townley, of Townley-Hall, in Lancaſhire, was tried in Southwark, before Judge Powis, for being in the Rebellion in 1715; and tho' acquitted by his Jury, yet not thought innocent by the Publick; for many of his Men who were tried at other Places, for going into the Rebellion with him, were convicted and executed.

In 1727, he went over to France, and entered himſelf a Volunteer in the French King's Service; and in 1728 obtained a Commiſſion from the King of France, and continued abroad about 15 Years. He was at the Siege of Philipſburg, when the Duke of Berwick's Head was ſhot off, and was near the Duke at that Time. He was alſo in the French Army, when the Germans made ſuch a ſudden Attack upon that Quarter of the Army where Marſhal Broglio commanded, as obliged the Marſhal in a terrible Fright to run away without his Breeches. He was likewiſe in ſeveral other Actions and Sieges, and, as was ſaid by his Friends, he always behaved well and with Honour.

The Reaſon of his leaving the French Service, about five Years ſince, and coming to England, was to live ſome Time in his own Country with his Friends; and when the Rebel Army came into England, he went and met them between Lancaſter and Preſton; and came with them to Manchester, where the Pretender's Son gave him a Commiſſion to raiſe a Regiment of Foot, which was immediately done; and the young Pretender, on leaving him at Carliſle, gave him another Commiſſion to raiſe a Regiment of Horſe.

His Behaviour from the firſt of his being taken Priſoner at Carliſle, to the Time of his Trial, was of a Piece; he frequently ſaying that he could not be hurt, for that he had a Commiſſion from the King of France, and ſo muſt be exchanged upon the Cartel; but when he was convicted, he ſeemed a little more ſerious, and often ſaid, he expected no Mercy.

He was much more reſerved than many of his Fellow-Sufferers; and would not talk a great deal to any body but his particular Friends and Brother-Priſoners.

The Morning of his Execution, and even at the fatal Place, he ſhewed no manner of Signs of Dread, but ſaid he hoped he ſhould be happy in the next World.

XXX. The Trial of George Fletcher, for High Treaſon, at the Court-houſe, St. Margaret's-hill, Southwark, on Wedneſday, July 16, 1746.

THIS Day the Court, according to Adjournment, met at Ten in the Morning, where there were preſent, the Lord Chief Juſtice Lee, Mr. Juſtice Wright, and Mr. Baron Reynolds.

And alſo the other Officers, that attended the Court the preceding Day, took their Seats; and Proclamation being made by the Cryer, he proceeded to call the Jury, and ordered the Keeper of the County Gaol to ſet George Fletcher to the Bar; which being done accordingly, the following Gentlemen (after the Priſoner had made ten Challenges) were ſworn in for the Jury.

The Names of the Jury.

1 Daniel Ponton of Lambeth, Starch-maker.
2 Michael Cuſſe of Batterſea, Gardener.
3 Michael Conſtable of Dorking, Yeoman.
4 William Brooker of Walton upon Thames, Brewer.
5 Edmund Brown of Croydon, Brewer.
6 Thomas Belch of Coulſdon, Gent.
7 Chriſtopher Stoakes of Bermondſey, Fellmonger.
8 William Taylor of St. Saviour, Brewer.
9 Thomas Lintall, of Ditto, Cloth-worker.
10 Francis Simmonds of Puttenham, Yeoman.
11 James Paine of Seal, Yeoman.
12 Richard Sparkes of Wonerſh, Yeoman.

And they being all ſworn, took their Seats in the Jury-box; and Proclamation was again made for Silence, whilſt the Indictment was reading to the Priſoner.

Note, The Indictment was the ſame as that of Townley's (convicted the Day before), the Treaſon being laid to be committed the ſame Time, at the ſame Place, and in the ſame Manner.

After the King's Counſel had opened the Charge, the following Evidence was called againſt the Priſoner.

Ormſby Mac Cormack, being ſworn,

King's Counſel. Mr. Mac Cormack, pray look upon the Priſoner, and then tell the Court, and the Gentlemen of the Jury, what you know of him; and ſpeak out loud, that you may be heard.

Mac Cormack. The firſt time that I ſaw him, was before the Rebels marched from Manchester to Derby.

King's Counſel. What Appearance did the Priſoner make at Manchester? Did you look upon him to be an Officer?

Mac Cormack. He had a white Cockade in his Hat, and marched as Captain in the Manchester Regiment. I ſaw the Flag that belonged to the Regiment

* The Lord Balmerino, who had neither Counſel nor Witneſs at his Trial, inſiſted on the ſame Point. And the Houſe out of their extreme Tenderneſs in caſe of Life (after my Lord Chancellor had delivered his Opinion clearly that the Time is not material, provided the Treaſon be committed before the Bill found) put the Queſtion to the Judges. Lord Chief Juſtice Lee delivered the unanimous Opinion of the Judges, that the Day is not material, provided the Treaſon be proved to have been committed before the finding of the Bill. Foſter's Report of ſome Proceedings on the Commiſſion for the Trial of the Rebels, p. 9.

Regiment flying, and the Motto was, Liberty and Property, Church and King.

King's Counſel. Did he march with all the Rebel Army? Were there any Pipes playing?

Mac Cormack. There were Pipes playing before the Highland Rebels, but none in the Manchester Regiment.---I ſaw him alſo at Derby.

Priſoner's Counſel. Pray, Friend, how came you to know him ſo particularly?---Mac Cormack. They called him Capt. Dawſon.

[Here the Counſel for the Priſoner interrupted the Witneſs, becauſe there is one Dawſon now in Cuſtody, who was an Officer in the ſaid Regiment, and the Priſoner's Name is Fletcher.]

King's Counſel. Look at the Priſoner again.

(Looking earneſtly at him.)

Mac Cormack. Though I may miſtake his Name, I am ſure he is the Perſon that I ſaw at Derby, tho' I cannot poſitively ſay he gave any Command there as an Officer. I ſaw him at Preſton, and other Places along the Road, till we came to Carliſle.

King's Counſel. Was you with him at Carliſle?

Mac Cormack. I was at Carliſle; but he was there before I came, and there I ſaw him act as a Captain; and when the Soldiers were drawn up in the Caſtle-Yard, I ſaw him there, and ſaw Arms diſtributed to ſome of the Soldiers who had none.

Priſoner's Counſel. Did you ſee him diſtribute any Arms to any of the Soldiers?---Mac Cormack. I cannot ſay that I did.

Priſoner's Counſel. Then who diſtributed thoſe Arms?

Mac Cormack. It was a Scotch Officer, whom I am informed is ſince killed.---I heard ſo.

King's Counſel. Was not the Priſoner at the Bar at Carliſle when the Duke was before the Town?

Mac Cormack. Yes, I am ſure he was, and commanded as an Officer; he had a white Cockade in his Hat, an Highland Plaid Saſh, lined with white Silk, and all Military Accoutrements that Officers have.

King's Counſel. Then you are certain as to his Perſon?

Mac Cormack. I am certain this is the Gentleman, for he mounted the very firſt Captain's Guard that was mounted at Carliſle. I ſaw him at the Surrender, and he was carried into the Church, and made Priſoner with the reſt of the Officers.

Serj. Wynne. Are you ſure he is the very Man?

Mac Cormack. I am very ſure of it, tho' he has been long out of my Sight.

L. C. J. Conſider you are upon your Oath, and what you ſay affects his Life.

Mac Cormack. I am ſure he is the very ſame, I know his Perſon perfectly well.

Serj. Wynne. How can you be ſo poſitive to him, did you ever ſee him before you came to Manchester?---Mac Cormack. Not to my Knowledge.

Serj. Wynne. Where did you come from, what Countryman are you?

Mac Cormack. I am an Iriſhman, I came from Ireland.

Serj. Wynne. What brought you to Manchester?

Mac Cormack. I am a Weaver by Trade, and I came to Manchester laſt May was Twelvemonth to ſeek for Buſineſs, and I continued there, and worked till the 30th of June; then Buſineſs falling ſhort, I went into Warwickſhire, and worked as a Haymaker for my Living.

Croſs-Examination.

Priſoner's Counſel. It is a little extraordinary, that you ſhould take ſuch particular Notice of the Priſoner; was you in the Rebel Army; was he your Commander?

Mac Cormack. No, he was not; Capt. * Peter Moſs was my Commander.

Serj. Wynne. Had you any Command in the Rebel Army, was you either a Captain, or a Lieutenant?

Mac Cormack. I had no Command at all.

Counſel. How came you hither to give your Evidence?

Mac Cormack. I was taken into Cuſtody by Mr. Carrington, one of the King's Meſſengers, at Weſt-Cheſter, and I did not know I was to come to London to be an Evidence.

Counſel. Have you had any Promiſe of a Pardon?

Mac Cormack. I have not, nor never had to my Knowledge.

Sir John Strange. Pray call Samuel Maddox, who appeared, and was ſworn.

King's Counſel. Mr. Maddox, do you know Mr. Fletcher, the Priſoner at the Bar?

Maddox. I know him very well; and in the Month of laſt November, but I cannot particularly remember the Day, I ſaw him at the Dog-Inn in Manchester, where there were ſeveral Perſons aſſembled, and his Name was put down as an Officer in a new-raiſed Regiment, called the Manchester Regiment; he marched as a Captain from Manchester to Winſlow, and from thence on to Macclesfield, where the ſaid Regiment was drawn up in the Church-yard; and all the Soldiers who were unarmed had Arms delivered unto them; the Priſoner, Mr. Fletcher, had there a Sword by his Side, and appeared in his Regimentals, as Captain, with a white Cockade, and a Plaid Saſh.

The Rebels at Macclesfield were in general in Confuſion for want of Men, and very much dreaded the King's Forces. I was determined to return to Manchester, and communicated my Thoughts and Intentions to ſeveral of my Comrades; the Priſoner, Mr. Fletcher, heard of my Reſolution at a Place called Blackerſey, and then he came to me, and told me it would be a ſcandalous Thing to make a diſhonourable Retreat; and putting his Hand in his Pocket pulled out a great Parcel of Gold, and told me I ſhould never want while that laſted. I marched with him to Derby, and back to Carliſle afterwards.

Croſs-Examination.

Priſoner's Counſel. How came you to be at the Black-Dog at Manchester?

Maddox. I went there accidentally; I was with the Regiment three Days before it marched, and I was never ſober all the Time.

Priſoner's Counſel. What, not ſober all the Time?

Maddox. I mean not all the Time I was at Manchester.

Priſoner's Counſel. Where did you ſee the Priſoner beſides at Manchester?

Maddox. I ſaw him at Penrith, and I ſaw him at Carliſle, with other Officers, and with the Pretender's Son; at both which Places he acted in the Capacity of a Captain: And when Carliſle was ſurrendered, he went into the Church with other Officers.

Priſoner's Counſel. Have you had no Promiſe of a Pardon?

Maddox. I have had none; I told you ſo, Sir, ſeveral times before.

Priſoner's Counſel. What, did none of your Friends adviſe you, or perſuade you to do what you have done?

Maddox. I cannot ſay, but one of my Relations perſuaded me to do what I could to ſave my own Life.

Priſoner's Counſel. Could not Mr. Fletcher have eſcaped to ſave his Life, if he would?

Maddox. I cannot tell but what he might; for Capt. Bradſhaw got away, but he ſoon joined the Army again.

Priſoner's Counſel. Pray what Character does the Priſoner bear at Manchester?

Maddox. I do not know much of his general Character; I have ſeen him at the Aſſembly with the Ladies: He was a Chapman, and dealt in Linnen before this Affair.

King's Counſel. Pray call Thomas Bradbury, who appeared and was ſworn.

King's Counſel. Mr. Bradbury, pray what do you know, or what have you to ſay againſt the Priſoner at the Bar?

Bradbury. I lived at Manchester when the Rebels were in that Town; and one Morning when a Serjeant and Drum were beating up for Volunteers at the Exchange for the Pretender's Manchester Regiment, I happened to be there, where I believe there were more than 1000 People aſſembled: And when the Serjeant had done his Speech, and concluded with ſaying God bleſs King J——s and Prince C——les! the Priſoner pulled off his Hat and hallooed.

Croſs-Examination.

Priſoner's Counſel. As you live at Manchester, pray what Character does the Priſoner bear at that Town?

Bradbury. A good Character for aught I know, for I only came here to ſpeak the Truth.

King's Counſel. Pray call Auſtin Coleman, who being ſworn, was aſked if he had ever ſeen the Priſoner act as an Officer?

Coleman. Yes, I have ſeen him act as a Captain at Preſton, Penrith, and at Carliſle, when it was ſurrendered to the Duke of Cumberland.

Priſoner's Counſel. What Countryman are you?

Coleman. I am an Iriſhman, and I came to Manchester about twelve Months ago,

Thomas Craig was then called by the King's Counſel, and being ſworn, was aſked what he knew of the Priſoner?

Craig. I ſaw him march from Manchester; I ſaw the Colours of the Manchester Regiment flying, and the Drums beating; and I ſaw him act on the March as Captain, and I ſaw him ſurrender at Carliſle to his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland's Troops.

King's Counſel. Pray call Capt. Nevet, who appeared and was ſworn.

King's Counſel. Pray, Sir, give the Court and the Jury an Account of what you know of the Priſoner at the Bar.

Capt. Nevet. I was at Carliſle when the Rebels ſurrendered the Town to his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland. When the Officers of the Garriſon ſurrendered themſelves Priſoners, and were in Cuſtody, I had a particular Order from his Royal Highneſs to go to the Place of their Confinement, to take the Names, Ranks, and Qualities of all thoſe that were there. When I called on the Priſoner at the Bar, he told me he was a Captain; and when I had taken the Names of all the reſt, and what Commiſſions they had under the Pretender's Son, I went and made a Report that Evening to the Duke, and his Royal Highneſs commanded me the next Day to go to the ſame Place; and I called over their Names, and he anſwered by the Name of Captain Fletcher.

The Priſoner's Defence.

Priſoner's Counſel. Call Anne Acton, who was ſworn. Do you know the Priſoner?

Acton. Yes, Sir, I have known him ever ſince he was born, for I have lived in the Family 27 Years; he managed the Trade for his Mother at Salford, juſt over the Bridge at Manchester, and he had a very good Share of Buſineſs for a Young Man. The Rebels came the 29th of November to Manchester, and we had a great many of them quartered upon us; Mr. Fletcher's Mother was very uneaſy at the Sight of them, and went away, becauſe ſhe could not bear to ſee them eat and drink, and make free with every Thing in the Houſe. They tarried at Manchester three Days, and upon the 8th of December, they returned again to Manchester, and Capt. Robinſon, who commanded the Soldiers who were at our Houſe before, came a ſecond Time, and aſked for our Maſter; he went out, and there were half a Dozen of Soldiers at the Door, and ſwore they would have him; and I never ſaw him after. I do not know he ever did a bad Thing in his Life; he always behaved well and dutiful to King George, and all the Royal Family. I never ſaw the leaſt Willingneſs in him to join with the Pretender; all the Family were of the Church of England, and when they dragged him away, he went away with Tears in his Eyes.

She was Croſs-Examined by Sir John Strange; and prevaricated ſo much in her Anſwers in moſt Queſtions that were aſked of her, that no Credit was given to her Evidence.

Charles Worral was produced and ſworn, who ſaid, he knew the Priſoner an Apprentice, and had ſold him Goods, and that the Priſoner paid him honeſtly; but as to his Principles, he knew nothing of them.

Then John Hayward † was called and ſworn, and being aſked what Buſineſs he followed, he ſaid, he was a Dealer in Leather.

Priſoner's Counſel. What do you know of the Priſoner?

Witneſs. I cannot ſay that I know much of his Notions one way or other.

Priſoner's Counſel. I think, Sir, you live at Manchester?

Witneſs. Yes, I do, Sir.

Priſoner's Counſel. Then pray inform the Court and the Gentlemen of the Jury, ſo far as you know, what paſt at Manchester relating to the Priſoner, during the Time the Rebels were there.

Witneſs. I cannot ſay any Thing particularly.

* Peter Moſs eſcaped out of Newgate the Night before the Rebel Priſoners were removed by Habeas Corpus, and hath not been heard of ſince.—Died in France.

† This is the ſame Perſon that was Evidence the Day before for Colonel Townley.

Priſoner's Counſel. Pray do you know that at the Time the Pretender's Party were beating up for Volunteers, at the Exchange in Mancheſter, the Priſoner was preſent, and took off his Hat and hallooed?

Witneſs. I was not out of doors at that Time; I had a Relation lay dead in my Houſe at the ſame time.

The Priſoner's Counſel not having any thing more to ſay in his Defence, and the Teſtimony of Mrs. Ann Acton having very little Weight with the Court and Jury, after my Lord Chief Juſtice had ſummed up the Evidence, the Jury, without going out of Court, found the Priſoner, Guilty.

N. B. The Priſoner deſired his Fetters might be taken off whilſt he was on his Trial, which the Court granted; but after his Conviction, the Court gave the Gaoler Direction to iron him again, and take an eſpecial Care of his Priſoner, for that he was convicted of High-Treaſon.

This Priſoner was executed the ſame Day, viz. the 30th of July 1746, in the ſame Manner as Townley, and his Head with Townley's was put up on Temple-Bar, on Saturday the 2d of Auguſt, the Saturday following their Execution.

He was about 28 Years of Age, and was bred up in Salford, adjoining to Mancheſter, where his Parents lived, who were very ſubſtantial People. His Father had been ſome time dead, but his Mother was then living, whoſe Buſineſs he managed. He was reckoned before he took on in the Rebel Army, to be a young Man of a good Character; but being unhappily prejudiced againſt the preſent Royal Family, he was very ready to join the Pretender's Forces as ſoon as they came to Mancheſter; and he gave Murray, the Pretender's Secretary, 50*l.* for his Captain's Commiſſion.

There is one Thing pretty ſingular in the Story of Mr. Fletcher, which muſt not be omitted, becauſe it ſhewed the Heartineſs of the Man in the Cauſe he endeavoured to ſupport. At his Trial, Mr. Maddox, who was a principal Evidence againſt him, ſwore, that when the Rebels were at Macclesfield, they were in great Confuſion for want of Men, and mightily diſheartened at the Approach of the King's Forces; upon which he (Maddox) determined to leave them, and return to Mancheſter, and communicated ſuch his Intention to ſeveral of his Comrades; which being told to Fletcher, he came to Maddox, and expoſtulated with him about it; telling him, what a Scandal it would reflect upon him to leave his Friends at a Juncture, when they had the greateſt Occaſion for his Aſſiſtance; that if he wanted Money, he need but ſpeak, and he ſhould have whatever he had Occaſion for; and at the ſame time, putting his Hand in his Pocket, ſhewed him a Handful of Gold.

Fletcher's Behaviour during the Time of his Confinement in Newgate, was, as the reſt of his Fellow Rebel Priſoners, very chearful; and he continued ſo during the time he was under Sentence of Death, even from the Gaol to the Place of Execution, and was the ſame to the laſt. He was a young Man of very good Parts, and very often acknowledged, that he had brought this Misfortune upon himſelf by his Obſtinacy; for that his Mother had begged and intreated of him, even on her Knees, that he would keep himſelf out of the Rebellion; and when no Perſuaſions could prevail upon him, ſhe offered him a thouſand Pounds to do with as he pleaſed, if he would hearken to her Advice: But all to no Purpoſe; and therefore that he had Nobody to thank but himſelf for the Conſequences that had happened.

At the Place of Execution he delivered Papers to the Populace, as the reſt of them did, the Contents of which Papers were, that they died in a good Cauſe; that they did no way relent at what they had done, and doubted not but their Deaths would in time be revenged; and many treaſonable and other vile Expreſſions not fit to be here mentioned.

XXXI. The Trials of Thomas Chadwick and William Battragh, for High Treaſon, at the Court-houſe Southwark, July 16, 1746.

THOMAS CHADWICK and William Battree, otherwiſe Battro, otherwiſe Battragh, otherwiſe Bretah, were both brought to the Bar, and both agreed in their Challenges of the Jury; but before Mr. Chadwick was tried, he deſired his Irons might be taken off, which was done directly; and after having challenged thirteen Jurymen, the Twelve following Gentlemen were ſworn to try them.

1 Francis Bartholomew of Egham, Gent.
2 Thomas Dawſon of St. George's, Brazier.
3 William Shurlock of Shere, Yeoman.
4 Richard Toy of Richmond, Grocer.
5 John Fielder of Eſher, Yeoman.
6 James Vinal of Eſher, Wheelwright.
7 John Otway of Aſhted, Yeoman.
8 Thomas Puplett of Banſtead, Yeoman.
9 John Start of Epſom, Chandler.

Mr. Att. Gen. Call Samuel Maddox; who appearing in Court, was ſworn.

King's Counſel. Mr. Maddox, Pray relate to my Lord and the Gentlemen of the Jury, what you know concerning the Priſoners at the Bar, or either of them.

Maddox. (looking on the Priſoners at the Bar) I know both of them; Mr. Chadwick was a Lieutenant, and Mr. Battragh ſerved as an Enſign in the Mancheſter Regiment in the Rebel Army.

King's Counſel. Pray how did Mr. Chadwick appear; did he appear as an Officer?

Maddox. Chadwick wore a laced Hat, with a white Cockade in it, and I ſaw both of them march from Mancheſter; and when they marched, Mr. Battragh had on a Scotch Plaid Saſh, lined with a white Ribband; I was with them when they marched from Mancheſter to Winſlow; there were a great many Men liſted as we went on the Road.

King's Counſel. Can you take upon you to ſay that either of the Priſoners at the Bar inliſted any?

Maddox. I cannot be poſitive to that; but there were a great many Men inliſted by Captain Deacon upon our March from Mancheſter. Both the Priſoners appeared on Horſeback as Officers; and I myſelf carried the Colours out of Mancheſter. And as we were upon the Road on our March, I ſaw the Priſoner, Battragh, carry the Colours once or twice, whereon was the Motto, Liberty and Property, Church and King.

King's Counſel. Did any thing remarkable happen at Winſlow, relating to the Priſoners? did they act as Officers?

Maddox. I know nothing at all particular there.

King's Counſel. What Rout did you take when you left Winſlow?

Maddox. We marched on for Derby.

King's Counſel. Did the Priſoners all along appear as Officers, and act as ſuch?

Maddox. Yes, they did, Chadwick as a Lieutenant, and Battragh as an Enſign: I ſaw them at Penrith, and at Preſton; Battragh belonged to Captain James Dawſon's Company, but I do not know what Company the other Priſoner belonged to; and I ſaw both of them reviewed by the Young Pretender.

King's Counſel. And what further happened? Tell my Lord and the Gentlemen of the Jury every thing you know relating to this Matter.

Maddox. I cannot ſay any thing more that is very material, only that from Mancheſter all the Way they acted as Officers.

King's Counſel. Do you remember any thing that was remarkable when you came to Lancaſter?

Maddox. I remember that all the Officers were very merry there, and Mr. Chadwick propoſed to entertain them with a Tune; and myſelf, and moſt of the Rebel Officers went into Lancaſter Church, and went up into the Organ Gallery, and Mr. Chadwick played a Tune on the Organ.

King's Counſel. What Tune did he play?—Maddox. He played The King ſhall enjoy his Own again; and we were all very merry.

King's Counſel. Pray inform the Court, if you ſaw any of the Priſoners at Carliſle.

Maddox. Yes, I ſaw both the Priſoners at Carliſle, in the Room with the Young Pretender.

King's Counſel. How came they in particular to be in the Room with the Young Pretender?---Maddox. We were all drawn up together to take Leave of him, before he left Carliſle.

King's Counſel. Was the Town of Carliſle put in a Poſture of Defence againſt the King's Forces?

Maddox. Yes; we oppoſed his Majeſty's Forces, and I ſaw both the Priſoners mount Guard in the Town Hall, where a Guard was placed a Day or two after the Pretender left the Town.

King's Counſel. Was you preſent when the Town was ſurrendered to his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland?

Maddox. I was; and both the Priſoners were put into the Aiſles of the Church, amongſt the other Rebel Officers.

Croſs-Examination.

Priſoner's Counſel. How long have you known Battragh, or Batteagh, as they call him?

Maddox. I have known him two Years and upwards, he was an Attorney's Clerk, and came and perſuaded me to join with the Young Pretender's Army, before I had an Inclination ſo to do: This we talked of privately in his Bed-chamber; he told me he had new Linnen made on purpoſe, and was going to the Sadler's to beſpeak Bags to carry his Linnen and other Things in.

Priſoner's Counſel. Had not you and the Priſoner a Quarrel at Carliſle? I think you had a Trial of Skill there.

Maddox. That I confeſs, and I will tell you what it was about; it was about a very fooliſh Affair.---Proviſions being a little ſcarce at Carliſle, I had ſome Sauſages, and the Priſoner would have them from me, and I not caring to part from them, cauſed a Quarrel, and we fought together.

Priſoner's Counſel. Did not you tell him you would do for him, or be revenged on him, or ſome Words to that Purpoſe?

Maddox. No, never as I remember; I would not ſwear any Man's Life away for a Sauſage.

Priſoner's Counſel. Do not you ſwear in expectation of ſaving your Life?

Mr. Att. Gen. It is not a proper Queſtion;---that has been anſwered already.

Sir J. Strange. Do you expect to ſave your Life by falſe Swearing?

Maddox. No, I do not indeed; I will ſwear nothing but the Truth; and what I have ſworn in this honourable Court, is all Matter of Fact.

King's Counſel. Pray call Thomas Craig; who appeared, and was ſworn.

King's Counſel. Well, Sir, what have you to ſay to either of the Priſoners that ſtand by you?

Craig. I know Mr. Chadwick very well; but I cannot ſay that I have ſo much Knowledge of Battragh. I remember ſeeing Mr. Chadwick at Mancheſter, with a Cockade in his Hat: Then I afterwards ſaw him march from Mancheſter to Winſlow, as a Lieutenant: I ſaw him at ſeveral other Places on the Road, and alſo at Penrith, where he ſtill appeared as a Lieutenant.

King's Counſel. Then you are ſure he was a Lieutenant in the Rebel Army?

Craig. Yes; he marched from Mancheſter to Penrith Moor as ſuch, then I ſaw him at Carliſle, and there he mounted Guard as a Lieutenant. I am ſure that I ſaw him once mount Guard.

Croſs-Examination.

Priſoner's Counſel. Do not you expect to have a free Pardon?

Craig. As to that I muſt truſt to his Majeſty's Mercy.

Priſoner's Counſel. How came you to know Mr. Chadwick ſo well; do you know him ſo very well that you can be poſitive to him?---Craig. I have known him many Years, and I belonged to the Mancheſter Regiment.

King's Counſel. Call Auſtin Coleman; who was produced, and ſworn.

King's Counſel. Give an Account, Mr. Coleman, to my Lords and the Jury, what you know of the Priſoners at the Bar.

(Coleman being ſworn, and looking on them, and then pointing to Battragh,) That

That Gentleman's Name is Battragh, and I have ſeen him at Derby; and the other is Chadwick, and him I have ſeen at Mancheſter; there he appeared as an Officer with a Plaid Saſh, and a laced Hat, with a white Cockade in it: I did not ſee Battragh have any. They both appeared as Officers in marching along; they were ſometimes on Foot, and ſometimes on Horſeback.

King's Counſel. Do you know any thing of their being at Carliſle?

Coleman. I ſaw them both in the Guard-Room with Capt. Fletcher.

King's Counſel. Did they wear their Saſhes there, as other Officers did?

Coleman. I cannot remember that; but when the Town was ſurrendered to the Duke of Cumberland, they were put into the Church with other Rebel Officers.---I am ſure of that.

(Ormſby Mac Cormack was next produced and ſworn.)

King's Counſel. Do you know either of the Priſoners?

Mac Cormack. Yes, I have ſeen both of them in the Mancheſter Regiment; I ſaw Battragh with the Rebel Army, and he carried the Colours from Penrith to Carliſle.

King's Counſel. And did you ſee him at Carliſle?

Mac Cormack. Yes, I ſaw him there when the Town was beſieged by the Duke of Cumberland.

King's Counſel. Did he ever mount Guard at Carliſle?

Mac Cormack. Not to my Knowledge; but I have ſeen him in the Guard-Room, with a Sword, a Saſh, and a Cockade.

King's Counſel. And you always took him to be an Officer there, did you not?

Mac Cormack. Yes, for I very well remember that he was walking up and down the Caſtle Yard, as an Officer, when the Arms were diſtributing to the Rebel Soldiers there, and Mr. Chadwick was with them.

(John Collins, a Boy of 13 Years of Age, was called and ſworn.)

Priſoner's Counſel. Do you know the Nature of an Oath, Child?

Collins. Yes, I do; I know I am ſworn to ſpeak the Truth; and I ſhall never be happy if I do not.

King's Counſel. Do you know either of the Priſoners? was you among the Rebels at Carliſle?

Collins: Yes; I was, and was a Servant to Capt. Lowther, and we were taken Priſoners by the Duke at Carliſle, where on my Knees I begged my Life of his Royal Highneſs, which he generouſly granted, and God bleſs him for it. I ſaw both the Priſoners at Carliſle, and there they always acted as Officers in the Mancheſter Regiment; Chadwick as a Lieutenant, and Battragh as an Enſign: I know them both perfectly well.

King's Counſel. Pray call Captain Nevet, who was ſworn.

King's Counſel. I think when Carliſle ſurrendered to his Royal Highneſs the Duke, you had a Command from his Royal Highneſs to go to the Church where the Officers were Priſoners, and to take their Names.

Capt. Nevet. Yes, I had, Sir:

King's Counſel. Do you remember to have ſeen either of the Priſoners at the Bar at Carliſle?

Capt. Nevet. Perfectly well: The firſt Time that I ſaw them, Mr. Chadwick gave in his Name as a Lieutenant in Townley's Mancheſter Regiment; and the other Priſoner, Battragh, told me he was an Enſign in the ſame Regiment; I noted it ſo in my Paper: And on making a Report to his Royal Highneſs the Duke, and giving in a Liſt of their Names and Qualities, I was ordered to go the next Morning, and I went accordingly, and called all the Priſoners over by their Names, and they anſwered, Chadwick as a Lieutenant, and Battragh as Enſign.

The King's Witneſſes being all gone through, and neither of the Priſoners making any Defence, or calling any Witneſſes to their Characters, the Jury, without going out of Court, found both the Priſoners Guilty of High Treaſon; and the Court ordered the Irons to be put on Mr. Chadwick again.

The Priſoner Chadwick was executed on Kennington-Common, on Wedneſday the 30th of July, 1746, according to his Sentence; and his Head was preſerved in Spirits, and ſent down to Carliſle or Mancheſter, to be put up as thoſe of Townley and Fletcher's had been on Temple Bar; but his Body was delivered to his Friends to be buried.

He was about 32 Years of Age, of very honeſt and creditable Parents in Mancheſter, and whoſe Father then lived there, and followed the Trade of a Tallow-Chandler and Soap-boiler. This unfortunate Man was bred up to the ſame Trade; but he playing pretty well on ſeveral Inſtruments, kept ſome of the moſt polite Company of the Place, and never followed any Trade.

He was a Perſon of great Reſolution, and could, as he uſed to ſay, look Death in the Face with as much Pleaſure as he could a Friend who came to viſit him, and could meet it with as much Good-will. His Behaviour, during the whole Time of his Confinement, was always cheerful and merry, taking all Manner of Pleaſures the Gaols afforded; and frequently declaring, that what he had done he was not ſorry for, for if it was to do again, he would act in the ſame Manner.

The Morning of his Execution, whilſt they were at Breakfaſt, Mr. Chadwick ſaid to Mr. Berwick; Ah! Duke (for this is the Name that Berwick went by in the Rebel Army) our Time draws very near; though as to my Part, I am as hearty as ever I was in my Life. Mr. Berwick replied, As to my Part, I think we all look pretty well, and I declare Death don't ſhock me in the leaſt. I hope God will be merciful to us all; for I can lay my Hand on my Heart, and ſay, the greateſt Injury I ever did was to myſelf and Relations; and though I have brought them and myſelf to Diſgrace, they have been ſo kind as to forgive me, and would have ſaved my Life had it been in their Power.

The other Priſoner Battragh received his Majeſty's moſt gracious Reprieve.

XXXII. The Trial of Thomas Theodorus Deacon, for High Treaſon, at the Court-houſe, St. Margaret's-hill Southwark, July 17th, 1746.

THE Court being ſat, the following Judges being preſent; viz. Lord Chief Juſtice Willes, Mr. Juſtice Abney, and Mr. Juſtice Foſter, Thomas Deacon was put to the Bar.

King's Counſel. Call Mr. Samuel Maddox; who appeared, and was ſworn.

King's Counſel. Mr. Maddox, give an Account to the Court and Jury what you know of the Priſoner that ſtands by you.

Maddox. I ſaw him at the Bull Head at Mancheſter, where he ſat at a Table, writing down the Names of ſuch as enliſted in the Pretender's Service; for which he was paid for every Name enliſted, One Shilling. There were ſeveral blue and white Ribbands lying before him, which, when he was not writing, he made up into Favours, and gave them to the Men enliſted. I ſaw him march from Mancheſter to Winslow as an Officer, wearing a Plaid Waiſtcoat, with laced Loops, a broad Sword by his Side, a Brace of Piſtols ſtuck in his Girdle, and a Cockade in his Hat. When he beat up for Volunteers at ſeveral Places, he made a very long Speech, inviting all Gentlemen Volunteers to come and ſerve Charles, Prince Regent, and they ſhould have good Quarters, be well uſed by the Officers, and enter into preſent Pay, and when they came to London, they ſhould receive five Guineas to bear their Expences Home, if they thought proper to leave the Service, and ſhould receive Thanks, and have a Protection. At Winslow he was ordered by the Pretender to march to Derby as a Guide, with Ammunition, &c. that had been ſeized; and at Leake he went with Thomas Sydall and James Bradſhaw to raiſe Recruits, and joined the Rebel Army again at Mancheſter. That at Preſton he commanded his Company, and gave Directions to the Officers under him, who obeyed him; and that at Carliſle he mounted Guard in the Town-hall during the Siege.

Thomas Bradbury, another Witneſs, ſwore, That the Priſoner was a Captain in the Rebel Army, and was dreſſed as above. That he, the Witneſs, being a Servant to a Printer at Mancheſter, the Priſoner, with other Rebels, came to him, in the Abſence of his Maſter, and compelled him to print a treaſonable Paper, which they called a Manifeſto, and likewiſe an Advertiſement; both which were delivered into Court and read. The Advertiſement, or Hand-bills, were diſtributed by the Rebels, offering all fitting Encouragement to ſuch as would enliſt with them; and that he the ſaid Deacon was in a great Hurry, and came ſeveral Times to the Printing-Office, and threatened Mr. Bradbury, if he did not get the Papers ready, he ſhould be ſeverely puniſhed;---and that he the ſaid Deacon brought with him, when he came for the ſaid Papers, a great Number of Horſe belonging to the Rebel Army, who threatened to pull down the Houſe.

Thomas Craig, another Witneſs, ſwore, That he ſaw the Priſoner mount Guard at Mancheſter, Preſton, and Carliſle; that he was Lieutenant-Colonel, and promoted for his great Diligence, in raiſing Recruits. ---Capt. Nevet ſwore, that the Priſoner ſaid, his Name was Thomas Deacon, and that he was a Captain in the Mancheſter Regiment.---Capt. Carey confirmed Capt. Nevet's Teſtimony.

The Priſoner had no Witneſſes to produce, ſo the Jury found him guilty of the Indictment. Death.

Mr. Deacon's Caſe, July 17, 1746 *.

IN Mr. Deacon's Caſe, his Counſel objected to the receiving the Evidence of a Printer touching the Priſoner's obliging him to print the Pretender's Manifeſto at Mancheſter, and his publiſhing of it there, while the Rebel Army was in the Town; and alſo to the reading the Manifeſto. They inſiſted that this ought not to be given in Evidence, becauſe it is an Overt Act not laid in the Indictment; and alſo becauſe the Orders were given and the Manifeſto printed and publiſhed in Mancheſter, and all the Overt Acts are laid in Cumberland.

But it was anſwered by the Court (Lord Chief Juſtice Willes, Juſtice Abney, and Juſtice Foſter), that an Overt Act not laid may be given in Evidence, if it be a direct Proof of any of the Overt Acts that are laid.

One of the Overt Acts charged in this Indictment is the aſſembling and marching Modo Guerino, in order to depoſe the King, and to ſet the Pretender on the Throne. It is proved that the Priſoner with the reſt of the Rebel Army was at Mancheſter, and appeared in an hoſtile Manner there. Now what ſtronger Proof can there be that the Priſoner joined this Army for the Purpoſe mentioned in the Indictment, than his cauſing to be printed and diſperſed among the People the Pretender's Manifeſto? It never was doubted that the being preſent with Rebels and joining in proclaiming the Pretender, might be given in Evidence on ſuch an Indictment as this; and yet that Circumſtance was never expreſsly laid in any Indictment. But 'tis ſufficient that it proves Quo Animo the Rebel Army was raiſed, and Quo Animo the Priſoner joined it.

As to the Objection that this Fact was not committed in Cumberland, where all the Overt Acts are laid, Mr. Juſtice Abney and Mr. Juſtice Foſter held, that it is indeed neceſſary on this Indictment that ſome Overt Act laid be proved on the Priſoner in Cumberland; but that being done, Acts of Treaſon tending to prove the Overt Acts laid, though done in a foreign County, may be given in Evidence.

And the Manifeſto was read.

Lord Chief Juſtice Willes declined giving any Opinion on the ſecond Point. But no Objection was made during the whole Courſe of the Trials to the giving Evidence of Overt Acts in a County different from that where the Fact was laid, an Overt Act having been first proved in the proper County. And that * sort of Evidence was given in almost all the Trials †.

* F. Foſter's Reports, p. 9.

This unfortunate young Man, who was about twenty-two Years of Age, was the Son of Dr. Deacon of Manchester, who gave him a liberal Education, and designed to have brought him up to his own Profession; but he was unhappily prejudiced in Favour of the Pretender against the present Royal Family, by the Company he frequently conversed with; and by their Persuasion, took on in the Rebel Army as soon as it came into Manchester, and he had often declared before the Rebels came to the Town, that he would join them as soon as they did; and was one of the most strenuous Zealots for the Cause amongst them.

It was very unfortunate for his Family his taking a Commission in the Pretender's Service, for by his Example his two other Brothers did the same, one of whom died in the Pretender's Service, and Charles the Younger was condemned, but reprieved on account of his Youth.

His great Activity in the Service made him so far taken Notice of by the Young Pretender, that he was made Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment, and was to have been Colonel of the same, as soon as Colonel Townley had raised his new Regiment of Horse.

His taking Leave of his Brother, Charles Deacon, in the County Gaol, was very moving; his Brother declaring he had rather have suffered with him, than to survive him; and that was the only Time any particular Alteration could be discerned in him, and then he was in great Agonies, and wept.

He was executed with Townley and the rest, on Kennington-Common, on Wednesday the 30th of July 1746, in the same Manner as Townley. His Body was delivered to his Friends to be buried, and his Head was preserved in Spirits, and sent down to Carlisle, or Manchester, to be put on one of the Gates.

XXXIII. The Trial of John Berwick, for High-Treason, at St. Margaret's-Hill, Southwark, July 17, 1746.

JOHN BERWICK was then brought to the Bar, and being arraigned on the same Indictment with the other Manchester Officers, the Jury were sworn to try him. The Treason, and Overt Acts of Treason, were laid to be committed on the 10th of November.

The first Witness for the King that was called and sworn, was Samuel Maddox; and he deposed, That he had often seen the Prisoner, particularly at Manchester, and other Places, and that he always appeared as an Officer, and gave his Command; he saw him at Carlisle; and that he was there when the Town surrendered.---Mr. Bowker, the Manchester Constable, said, That he saw him in the Town, and that he appeared in the same Garb as the other Officers belonging to the Regiment which they called the Manchester Regiment.

The Counsel for the Prisoner insisted, that the Charge was not proved, for that in all Cases of High-Treason, there must be two positive Witnesses to prove the Fact, and, as they apprehended, that was not done sufficiently by the two Witnesses that had been examined; on which the King's Counsel called Capt. Nevet and Capt. Carey, who both appearing, and being sworn, deposed, That when they went into Carlisle by the Duke's Order, to take an Account of what Rank all the Officers were, the Prisoner gave in his Name to them as a Lieutenant in the Manchester Regiment.

The Prisoner calling no Witnesses, the Jury found him Guilty.

John Berwick's Case, July 17, 1746 ‡.

IN the Case of John Berwick, there was only one Witness that proved him to have been in Arms with the Rebels. This Witness proved that he was inrolled and reviewed as a Lieutenant in the Regiment called the Manchester Regiment, and did Duty as such at Penrith and Carlisle.

Two other Witnesses (Officers in the Duke's Army) swore, that after the Surrender of Carlisle, they were ordered by the Duke to take an Account of the Names of the Officers and of their respective Ranks in the Rebel Garrison; that accordingly they went to the Prison where the Officers were confined apart from the Common Men, and took such Account of them; that the Prisoner Berwick appeared among the Officers, and gave in his Name to them as Lieutenant in the Manchester Regiment.

Lord Chief Justice Willes and Mr. Justice Abney were of Opinion, that this Declaration of the Prisoner is not to be considered as a bare Confession after the Fact, but as an Evidence of the Fact itself, viz. That the Prisoner did appear and take the Rank of a Lieutenant in the Rebel Garrison. They thought too, that a Confession after the Fact proved by two Witnesses, was sufficient to convict within the 7 W. III.

Mr. Justice Foster doubted whether this Declaration, being made after the Surrender, can be considered in any other Light than as a Confession after the Fact §. And with regard to a Confession after the Fact, he said he never doubted whether it might be given in Evidence as a corroborating Proof. His Doubt was, whether it being proved by two Witnesses is a conclusive Evidence, nor an Evidence sufficient of itself to convict without other Proof. Since the 7 W. III. seems to require two Witnesses to Overt Acts, or a Confession in open Court ‖; and says further, page 243. I would not in any thing I have said, be understood to arraign the Proceeding in the Case of Berwick, before-mentioned; he was found in a Prison assigned by the Duke (of Cumberland), after the Surrender, to the Officers in the Rebel Garrison, and to none but Officers, whither he went with the rest of them. He appeared among them, and took the Rank of an Officer. These Facts, together with his Declaration, all proved by two Witnesses, were, I think, properly considered by two learned Judges, not as a bare Confession after the Fact, but as an Evidence upon the Spot, and in the very Scene of Action.---See more relating to Confessions in Foster's Reports, Page 241, 242, 243, 244.

Berwick was convicted upon the Evidence of the Officers and of the other Witness.

This Prisoner was about 32 Years of Age, and was a Housekeeper in Manchester, and a considerable Dealer in chequ'd Linnen, where he kept a Shop, and had a good Trade; but not being so diligent as young Tradesmen should be, and loving his Pleasure too well, 'tis thought he was running behind-hand in the World; and that not being able to settle his Accounts with his Creditors, was the principal Reason that induced him to take on with the Rebels.

The Commission he bore was a Lieutenancy in the Manchester Regiment, given him by the Pretender; to whom he had been well recommended as a Man of undaunted Courage and Resolution, firm to his Party, staunch in his Principles, and of a bold, enterprizing Disposition, of which he discovered manifest Tokens on every Opportunity that offered.

He was executed also on Kennington-Common, with Townley and the rest, according to the Sentence, on Wednesday the 30th of July, 1746, and his Head was put into Spirits, and sent to Manchester or Carlisle, to be put up in one of those Places; his Body being delivered to his Friends to be buried.

XXXIV. The Trial of David Morgan, of Monmouth, but late of Derby, Esq. for High-Treason, at St. Margaret's-Hill, Southwark, July 18, 1746.

The Names of the Jury.

James Glover,	Ralph Godfrey,	Thomas Symonds,
Joseph Brookes,	William Barnard,	John Jeffries,
John Mason,	John Voice,	Henry Rowed,
Joakin Faulk,	Thomas Clement,	John Clement.

THE King's Counsel opened the Indictment (which was the same as against all the rest), and proceeded, and called the following Witnesses to support the same against the Prisoner.

Sollicitor General. Call Edward Tew (which was done accordingly) who appeared in Court, and was sworn.——Pray, Mr. Tew, inform my Lord and the Jury what you know relating to the Prisoner at the Bar.

Tew. I live at Preston next Door to the Sign of the Joyners-Arms, and when the Rebel Army was there, I assisted my Neighbour to wait on some Company that were at that House, most of whom were Officers belonging to the Rebels.

King's Counsel. Can you recollect ever having seen the Prisoner there?

Tew. I remember him very well, for I waited on him at Dinner, when Lord Elcho and he dined there together.

King's Counsel. Do you remember any Discourse that passed?

Tew. The Prisoner asked Lord Elcho what Number of Men the Young Pretender [which the Prisoner called Prince] had landed with him.

King's Counsel. And what Answer did he make?

Tew. He said, not above half a dozen; but the Number soon increased when the Clans heard he was landed; and also that they had 17 Pieces of Cannon.

King's Counsel. And what further Discourse passed between them?

Tew. The Prisoner asked Lord Elcho what Religion the Pretender professed?

King's Counsel. And what was the Reply?

Tew. My Lord Elcho shook his Head, and said he could not very well tell; but he believed his Religion was to seek.

King's Counsel. And what passed then?

---

* The like Evidence was given in most of the Trials after the Rebellion of 1715, and admitted by the Judges upon the Commission in the North this Summer. See the Cases of Layer and Sir William Perkins in the State Trials.

† J. Foster's Reports, p. 9. ‡ Foster, p. 10.

§ Upon further Consideration I doubt there was too much Refinement in this Distinction. See 1. Disc. c. 3. S. 8. Foster, page 232.

‖ The like Evidence was held sufficient upon the Commission in the North this Summer; upon the Authority of the Judges Opinions previous to the Trials of Greg and Francia. See Foster's Discourse on High-Treason, Chap. 3. S. 8.

Tew. The Prisoner asked if they had ever beat up for Volunteers in England, and Lord Elcho said they had not; and the Prisoner advised him to beat up for Volunteers, and said it would be an easy Matter to march forwards for London, for that there was not above 3000 Soldiers between there and London, and most of them were Dragoons, besides a few undisciplined Troops that were raised by Lord Gower and Lord Cholmondeley, who would make but little Opposition.

King's Counsel. Well, Sir, go on.

Tew. I know nothing more that is particular that passed at that Time; but the next Morning the Prisoner came, and asked for Lord Elcho.

King's Counsel. What Appearance did he make then?

Tew. He was in a white Cockade, and a Sword by his Side; and I saw him several Times walking up and down the Town with the Rebel Officers.

King's Counsel. Did you see the Young Pretender?

Tew. He marched at the Head of the Regiment, and did not lodge (as I have heard) but two or three Doors from the House where the Prisoner at the Bar lodged.

King's Counsel. What Number of People do you think the Young Pretender's Army consisted of?

Tew. The Talk in Town was, that they were 6000 strong: There was a great many, but as to the Number I cannot be positive.

King's Counsel. Do you imagine he was forced into the Rebels Service?

Tew. He was under no Force that I saw, for he appeared all along to be one of the Heads of them, and all of them seemed to have a great Regard to what he proposed, particularly about the Proposal he made for beating up for Volunteers.

King's Counsel. Will you ask this Witness any Questions?

Prisoner to Tew. I desire, Sir, that you would give the Court an Account how you came to know that my Name is Morgan.

Tew. I cannot say now that your Name is Morgan, but I am very positive to your Person.----I know your Face very well, and if I was not well assured that you are the very same Man, I would not swear it.

King's Counsel. Was the Young Pretender at that House?

Tew. I do not know; but they said that he lodged a few Doors farther.

JOHN BARRY sworn.

King's Counsel. John Barry, I desire you would inform the Court and Jury what you know relating to Mr. Morgan, the Prisoner at the Bar.

Barry. I came out of Monmouthshire with my Master and the Prisoner at the Bar, in the Month of November last, and at the Town of Preston we joined the Rebel Army. About a Mile on this Side of Preston, my Master and the Prisoner left their Horses, and walked to Preston on Foot to avoid any Suspicion of what their Design was.

King's Counsel. And what Part did the Prisoner at the Bar act; and how did he behave during the Time you was with the Rebel Army?

Barry. I saw him ride with the Rebel Army, from Preston to Manchester, and he was very active in encouraging the Rebel Officers and Soldiers. After that I saw the Prisoner at Ashborn, and he said there that he would not leave the Army as long as he lived.---I cannot say that he bore any Commission as an Officer: If he did, it is more than I know.

BENJAMIN BOWKER called and sworn.

King's Counsel. Mr. Bowker, acquaint my Lord and the Gentlemen of the Jury, what you know of Mr. Morgan the Prisoner.

Bowker. Upon the 29th of last November, I had this Paper delivered to me (holding a Paper in his Hand, and looking at it). It is a Paper ordering me to search for Arms.

King's Counsel. What are you, Sir?

Bowker. I am a Deputy-Constable of Manchester.

King's Counsel. Who gave you that Paper?

Bowker. The Prisoner at the Bar and Mr. Wallis, who was one of the Head-Constables.

King's Counsel. Then the Prisoner was with Mr. Wallis, when you had that Paper delivered to you?

Bowker. Yes, he was.

King's Counsel. What were the Contents of the Paper?

Bowker. It was a Warrant signed by Murray the Pretender's Secretary, to search for all the Arms I could find; and if any Body refused to deliver up and surrender their Arms, they were to suffer military Execution against their Goods and Effects.

[Then this Paper was delivered by Mr. Bowker to the Clerk of the Arraigns, and was read in Court; but it is so very treasonable, that it is improper to insert it. The Preamble called the Pretender's Son Regent of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and required all whom it may concern, to pay due Obedience to that Order.]

King's Counsel. What, did you get any Arms of the Town's Peop Manchester?

Bowker. I did, and carried them to the Prisoner's Lodgings, and left them there, though I did not see him, but I asked for Esquire Morgan; and one of the Servants belonging to the House told me he would be there presently.

King's Counsel. Do you know any thing farther?

Bowker. I do not: I have spoke all that I can recollect.

King's Counsel. Call Samuel Maddox next, and swear him.

SAMUEL MADDOX sworn.

King's Counsel. Mr. Maddox, inform the Court where you first saw the Prisoner at the Bar.

Maddox. I saw Mr. Morgan, the Prisoner at the Bar, at Manchester, when he was joined with the Rebel Army; he had a white Cockade in his Hat, and a Sword by his Side, and publickly declared that he was of the Pretender's Party.

King's Counsel. Did he march away from Manchester with the Rebels?

Maddox. He marched with them to Derby; and there being an Information given that some Arms were secreted from the Rebels, he gave Orders for a Party of the Rebel Army to go and search for them.

King's Counsel. Did he go with that Party?

Maddox. Not to my Knowledge: I saw Capt. *James Dawson deliver him a Pair of Pistols.

King's Counsel. Whilst the Rebels were at Manchester, was not there some Talk of the Prisoner's being made Colonel of the Manchester Regiment, as it was called?

Maddox. I was in the Room at Mr. Croxson's, at the Dog at Manchester, when the Proposal was made for the Prisoner to be Colonel of the Regiment; but he refused it, and said, Mr. Townley was much fitter than he for such an Office; and then it was agreed amongst those that were present, that Mr. Townley should be Colonel; and he was declared so, and had the Pretender's Son's Commission.

King's Counsel. You say you saw him march from Manchester to Derby?

Maddox. Yes, I did; he marched as a Gentleman Volunteer, and was very active, and did all in his Power to promote the Interest of the Rebels.

(Mr. Maddox was cross-examined by the Prisoner.)

Prisoner. You talk so very exactly, I desire to know if you ever made any Memorandums of what passed?

Maddox. I did, but I have not got those Memorandums, for I delivered them to that Gentleman (pointing to the Sollicitor of the Treasury's Clerk).

Prisoner. Are you sure they have never been altered?

Maddox. I am very sure they never were by my Direction; since they have been out of my Custody I have never seen them. I have made no use of them to refresh my Memory, for I can remember the Particulars very well without them.

King's Counsel. Call Captain Vere, and swear him. (Which being done, he stood up.)---Pray, Captain, inform us what you know of the Prisoner.

Vere. On the 3d of November I saw the Prisoner at Sir Peter Davenport's at Macclesfield, with several of the Rebel Officers; and I have seen him at several other Places march with the Pretender's People. I knew him very well, for he abused me, and called me a great Scoundrel, because he said I had prevented a Gentleman from getting a Commission under Sir Daniel O'Carrol.

King's Counsel. Are you positive the Prisoner is the same Person you saw at Macclesfield, and in the Pretender's Army?

Vere. I am sure he is the very same; I saw him at several Places, particularly I remember to have seen him about a Mile out of Derby, riding with the Pretender on a bay Horse.

King's Counsel. When was you at Macclesfield?

Vere. I saw him there on the 3d of November, and on the 5th I saw him at Derby; and I am sure he is the very same Man, because I know him very well.

Mr. How called and sworn.

King's Counsel. Mr. How, do you know Mr. Morgan?

How. Yes, I know him very well: This Gentleman (pointing to the Prisoner) who stands by me, is Mr. Morgan.

King's Counsel. What do you know of him?

How. He lodged at my House, and was accounted a principal Man amongst the Rebels, and they called him the Pretender's Counsellor.

King's Counsel. How do you know that he was a principal Man?

How. Because he seemed more active than any of them. He paid me the Reckonings when he used to dine with the Rebel Officers. He paid me a Guinea and three Shillings, and gave all Directions about every thing.

King's Counsel. Had you any Discourse with him?

How. Yes, I had; when the Rebels were at Derby, he asked me if I was surprized at their being there so soon? I told him, that I had expected them as that Night.

King's Counsel. What did he say then?

How. He said it was more than they expected themselves; and if I had heard such News, he was sure that the Devil had brought it me.

King's Counsel. And what do you know farther?

How. I have seen the Prisoner since he has been taken up.

King's Counsel. Where have you seen him?——How. In Newgate.

King's Counsel. Had you any Discourse with him there?

How. Yes, I had.

King's Counsel. Then relate it to the Court and Jury; speak all that you can remember.

How. I came to Town on Business, and being informed that Mr. Morgan was in Newgate, I went there out of Curiosity to see him; when I came there I spoke to him, and he seemed glad to see me; and asked me kindly how I did; and we drank together, and had some Discourse.

King's Counsel. What did that Discourse relate to?

How. I said I was very sorry to see him a Prisoner in such a Place.

King's Counsel. And what did he say to that?

How. He said he should soon be at Derby in spite of King George, or any body else.

The Prisoner's Defence.

Prisoner's Counsel. My Lord, and Gentlemen of the Jury, I cannot speak so exactly to the Evidence that has been given against this unhappy Gentleman, as I could wish, because I have not had my Brief above half an Hour. If my Instructions be right, I will take upon me to say, that we shall produce Evidence of good Credit and Reputation, who will prove, that this Gentleman, the Prisoner, was forced into the Service of the Rebels, and at several Times, and several Places, endeavoured to make his Escape from them; which he at last effected, and was seized, after he had made his Escape, by a Magistrate, and committed Prisoner. And to prove that the Prisoner did make his Escape, I shall call Mr. Chatterton, who is the Master of the House where the Prisoner lodged at Ashborn, in Derbyshire.

* Dawson was the Day before convicted of High-Treason, being one of the Rebel Captains.

Mr. CHATTERTON being called and ſworn.

Priſoner's Counſel. Sir, do you know any Thing of the Priſoner's endeavouring to make his Eſcape from the Rebel Army? — Chatterton. Yes.

Priſoner's Counſel. And how did he propoſe to make it?

Chatterton. He was to go out of Town one Morning about one or two o'Clock, and ordered me to call him at that Time.

Priſoner's Counſel. And did you call him?

Chatterton. I did; but he did not care to riſe then, for fear he ſhould be ſtopt (in endeavouring to get away) by the Rebel Guard, who were poſted all about the Town. He ſaid, that about five in the Morning would be the moſt proper Time, for then the Rebel Pipes would begin playing, and they would be all buſy, and that was his only Time to make his Eſcape from them.

Priſoner's Counſel. And did he go away from your Houſe, and out of Aſhborn Town?

Chaterton. Yes, he went away, and aſked me to go with him as a Guide to ſhew him ſome Bye-way to Stone; and ſaid, it would be very proper for us to get to ſome Farm-houſe, and hide ourſelves, leſt the Rebels ſhould ſend in Search of him, and if we ſhould be taken after he had got away, and brought again to the Rebel Army, he did not know what might be the Conſequence.

Priſoner's Counſel. Did you go with him as a Guide, Sir?

Chatterton. When he propoſed it to me, I ſaid, Mr. Morgan, it is impoſſible for me to leave my Houſe, for we are all in a Hurry, and therefore you cannot expect I ſhould go; but I will ſend a Man with you that will do as well.

Priſoner's Counſel. And you did ſend a Man with him?

Chatterton. I ſpoke to a Man who worked Labouring-work with me, who I knew was well acquainted with the Country, and he agreed to go; and they both ſet out of Aſhborn, and the firſt News that I heard afterwards, was, that the Priſoner and my Man were both ſeized on Suſpicion of being of the Rebel Army. And what I heard was very true; ſo I went to the Gentleman by whoſe Order they were apprehended, and enquired about the Matter, and told him how the Affair was, juſt in the ſame Manner I have informed this honourable Court; but his Worſhip would not diſcharge my Man 'till I had given Security for his Appearance, which I was obliged to do; ſo he was ſet at Liberty, and the Priſoner at the Bar was kept in Cuſtody.—This is all that I know of the Matter.

(Here the Priſoner's Counſel reſted his Defence, there being no other Witneſſes to examine on his Behalf.)

Court to Priſoner. You have heard, Sir, what has been ſworn; whatever you have to ſay in your Defence, now is your Time to ſpeak it, and the Court will hear you.——(And then the Priſoner ſpoke to the following Effect, after the Cryer had made Proclamation for Silence.)

Morgan. I have heard what has been ſworn againſt me by the Witneſſes on the Behalf of the Crown; and I appeal to the Court and the Jury, if there are not the greateſt Improbabilities in the World in the Evidence they have given againſt me. I would ſpeak particularly to what happened at Mancheſter. The Deputy Conſtable ſwears, That I gave him an Order to ſeize all Arms he could find, and to bring them to my Quarters: Mr. Maddox ſwears, That at a Conſultation amongſt the Officers at Mancheſter, I was propoſed for Colonel of the Regiment, which I refuſed, becauſe I thought Mr. Townley was more fit for ſuch a Command than myſelf.

Now can any reaſonable Man imagine that I, who had refuſed to be the Chief Commander of the Regiment, would do the ſervile Office of going up and down the Town in Search for Arms?

Every Gentleman of the Army (and I ſee ſeveral in this Court) very well know, that to go on ſuch an Errand, would ill become any Officer of a ſuperior Rank; and as to my own Part, I am ſure I could not have done any ſuch Buſineſs.

I do not deny my being at ſeveral Places with the Rebels; and if I had been indulged with a longer Time to prepare for my Trial, I ſhould have made appear very clearly, that I was taken Priſoner by the Rebels, and detained with them much againſt my Inclination; for there was no reſiſting Force.

My Landlord, Mr. Chatterton, has made it plainly appear to this honourable Court, that I made my Eſcape as ſoon as it was in my Power; and if I could have done it ſooner, or have had an Opportunity to get away from them, I ſhould have been very glad to have embraced it.

As to my Capacity as one bred to the Law, I confeſs I never pretended to much Knowledge that Way, and therefore was a very improper Perſon to counſel the Chief of the Rebels; for my Advice, I am ſure, could be of little Service to him.

There were Abundance of Gentlemen of Fortune ſeized as well as myſelf, who were obliged to go with the Army, till they found Means to eſcape as I did. I had been to pay a Viſit to a Gentleman at Etherton-Hall in Cheſhire, and I was ſeized by the Rebels, and they took my Horſes from me.

The Laws of England are very juſt and equitable; and they ſay, that every Man ſhall be tried by his Neighbours, of the ſame State and Condition with himſelf.

God help me, I am deprived of that Benefit, and I am now amongſt Strangers, who know nothing of me: They are upon their Oaths, and muſt give Credit to the Witneſſes; but I hope, and do not in the leaſt doubt, that they will do me Juſtice.

I have ſerved the Crown of England in two Campaigns with ſome Reputation. And I believe no Gentleman belonging to the Army, who knows me, will deny what I now tell this honourable Court. I chearfully gave all the Aſſiſtance I could in the public Service, and I was always glad when my poor Endeavours were crowned with Succeſs.

Here have been many Witneſſes examined againſt me, and it is very impoſſible that I ſhould confute them, becauſe of the ſhort Time allowed me.

I think it a very great Hardſhip that I ſhould be the laſt tried of all theſe Gentlemen, becauſe I could have brought ſeveral of them to prove my Behaviour both at Mancheſter and in other Places, was quite different from what the King's Witneſſes ſpeak of; but as they are convicted, they cannot give any Teſtimony for me, and that Aſſiſtance I might have had, can now be of no Uſe to me.

If I was to ſpeak it with my laſt Breath, I muſt deny that I went voluntarily into the Rebellion; but as the Evidence for the Crown is ſo ſtrong againſt me, I muſt ſubmit to the Determination of this honourable Court, and I ſubmit myſelf accordingly.

(When the Priſoner had done ſpeaking, Mr. Sollicitor General ſtood up, and made a Reply, which was to the Effect following:)

Sollicitor General. I ſhould not have troubled your Lordſhips, or the Jury, with ſaying one Word more relating to the Priſoner that is now before you; but I find it neceſſary, from what has been offered in his Defence, to obſerve, that he has complained of many Hardſhips.

He ſeems to think it a great Grievance, that his being laſt tried has deprived him of many Advantages; but, in my Opinion, he has had a better Chance to defend himſelf, becauſe it gained him more Time to get his Witneſſes ready, and to prepare for his Defence.

Can any Man imagine, that either of the Perſons who have been convicted (if Mr. Morgan had been firſt tried) would have appeared to clear him of the Charge that is laid againſt him? If they had done ſo, they would have been their own Enemies; for their Evidence would have been a plain Proof againſt themſelves, and convinced every body that they were in the Rebellion.

The Priſoner has no need to complain of any Hardſhips; he has been uſed with as much Lenity and Tenderneſs as any Man in his Condition ever was; and nothing that he has aſked, which the Law could grant, was ever refuſed him. He has had Counſel aſſigned him of his own chuſing, to enable him to make his Defence, a Copy of his Indictment in due Time, and therefore he could not have any Pretence of being ignorant of what he ſtood charged with; and I am ſure no one can ſay, but he has had a very fair and impartial Trial.

I think of all the Priſoners convicted, it is very evident, that the Priſoner's Caſe really appears the plaineſt of any; for of ſix Witneſſes, there are four who were not concerned in the Rebellion, who poſitively ſwear to his Perſon, and that he was the moſt active of any one in the Rebel Service; and Mr. How particularly ſwears, That he lodged at his Houſe, he gave Directions for every thing, and paid the Reckoning for himſelf and eight Officers who dined with him; and therefore he thought the Priſoner was one of the Heads of them:—Theſe were his Words.

Then there is Mr. Bowker, the Deputy-Conſtable of Mancheſter, and he comes and ſwears, That the Priſoner at the Bar, with one Wallis (who is one of the Head Conſtables of Mancheſter, and Bowker's Principal) came to him with a Paper ſigned by the Pretender's Secretary, ordering him to ſearch for all Arms, and carry them to the Lodgings of David Morgan, Eſq. which he did accordingly, for in Caſe of Refuſal, he, and all thoſe who refuſed to deliver up their Arms, were threatened with military Execution. This Witneſs is poſitive to the Perſon of the Priſoner; and I think there can be no plainer Proof of High-Treaſon than what has been ſworn.

As to what Mr. Chatterton has ſworn of the Priſoner's Eſcape from the Rebels, and leaving Aſhborn, I admit to be Matter of Fact, but this plainly makes againſt the Priſoner; for when he found their Affairs were deſperate, he was willing to ſhift for himſelf, and went away privately from them, purpoſely that he might not be ſeized by the King's Forces. He had been among the Rebels a conſiderable Time before this happened, and if (as he pretends) he was detained againſt his Will, he undoubtedly had frequent Opportunities of leaving them; but that you find he never did, till his own Preſervation and Safety required it.

As to his Complaint of Hardſhips, there is no one here that ever intended him any; but the Jury muſt go according to the Evidence; and I am ſure that no Evidence in the World could have brought a Fact more home to the Priſoner than they have done this: And I doubt not but the Evidence that has been given will have a due Weight with the Jury, and that they will find him guilty of the Indictment.

The Jury, without going out of Court, brought the Priſoner in Guilty.

July 22, 1746.

All the Priſoners who then ſtood convicted were brought to the Bar to receive Judgment; and their Counſel, Serjeants Wynne and Eyre, took two Exceptions in Arreſt of Judgment.

1. That the Teſte of the Commiſſion is not ſet forth in the Caption of the Indictment, and conſequently, for aught appears on the Record, the Commiſſion might iſſue before the Commencement of the Act, on which this Commiſſion is grounded: And if ſo, the whole Proceeding is coram non Judice.

To this it was anſwered by the Attorney General, and agreed by the Court, that the Juriſdiction of the Court doth ſufficiently appear on the Record. The Act of Parliament is undoubtedly the Foundation of this Proceeding: The Act, and this Commiſſion grounded on it, are recited in the Caption: And it is expreſly alledged, that the Commiſſion did iſſue by Virtue of the Act; which could not be true, unleſs the Commiſſion was ſubſequent to it.

Their ſecond Exception, and on which they ſeemed chiefly to rely, was, that the Act impowers the Crown to iſſue Commiſſions for trying Perſons then in Cuſtody, or who ſhall be in Cuſtody for High-Treaſon, in levying War before the firſt Day of January next, and it is not alledged in the Indictment that the Priſoners were in Cuſtody at the Time of the Indictment: And conſequently it doth not appear on the Record, that the Court hath any Juriſdiction over the Priſoners *.

To this it was anſwered by the Attorney General, and agreed by the Court, that it doth ſufficiently appear on the Record as it now ſtands, though not indeed on the Indictment, that the Priſoners are in Cuſtody; the Record alledgeth that the Priſoners, at the Time of their Arraignment, being brought to the Bar in the Cuſtody of the Sheriff to whoſe Cuſtody they had before been committed for the Cauſe aforeſaid, were aſked, &c.

† The Common Commiſſion of Gaol Delivery extendeth only to Priſoners in actual Cuſtody; and yet it was never thought neceſſary to alledge in the Indictment that the Defendant was then actually in Priſon: And if this Exception was to prevail, it would impeach all the Judgments that ever have been given at any Seſſions of Gaol Delivery.

That the Act on which the Preſton Rebels were tried runs thus in the very Words of this Act, all the Indictments at that Time were as theſe are, and this very Exception was then taken and over-ruled.

* See the Caſe of Æneas Macdonald afterwards.

† V. 12 Mod. 449. the ſame Point.

Lord Chief Juſtice Lee produced a Note he took at that Time in the Caſe of the * King and Oxburgh; the ſame Exception was then taken and over-ruled upon the Reaſon laſt before given.

Judgment was then given as in Caſes of High Treaſon.

Mr. Serjeant Eyre afterwards, viz. Auguſt 2d, took an Exception that bears ſome Affinity to the laſt in behalf of Donald Mac Donald and ſome others who then ſtood convicted, and were brought to the Bar to receive Judgment: It was, that it doth not appear that the Priſoners were apprehended; and ſaith he, in fact they were not apprehended, but ſurrendered. Whereas the Act of Parliament, on which the Commiſſion is grounded, ſpeaks only of Perſons that ſhall be apprehended and in Cuſtody.

This fine-ſpun Objection was likewiſe over-ruled. The Surrender was as much upon Compulſion, as the Submiſſion of a Perſon who cries for Quarter in the Heat of Battle is. In both Caſes, the Submiſſion is by reaſon of a ſuperior Force, and for Fear of immediate Death

David Morgan was about 51 years of Age, born in Wales, and bred to the Law, and had frequently (as a Barriſter) attended the Courts at Weſtminſter Hall, and elſewhere. He was a Perſon of a very mean Look, and ſeldom kept Company with any Gentlemen of his Neighbourhood; and if it had not been for his Eſtate, he might have ſtarved, for he was ſo very lofty, and of ſo bad a Temper, that Nobody but ſuch as were beholden to him cared to employ him. This Morgan was poſſeſſed of a very good Eſtate in St. Leonard's Shoreditch, but he let it all run to Ruin, becauſe he would not pay the Ground-Rent.

The Rebels called Morgan the Pretender's Counſellor, and his Advice was conſulted on every Occaſion. Even after he was condemned, he was haughty and inſolent beyond Expreſſion; and the very Afternoon before his Execution, he grumbled to pay the Cook who dreſſed his Dinner, and ſaid ſhe was very extravagant in her Demands.

He read to his Fellow Priſoners above twenty Minutes at the Gallows, and died very unconcerned.

The Morning (about Six o'Clock) before he went to Execution he ordered Coffee to be made, and bid them take care to make it very good and ſtrong, for he had never drank any ſince he had been in that Priſon fit to come near a Gentleman; and becauſe it was ready before he was unlocked, he ſeemed angry, and in a great Paſſion.

He was executed with the others on Wedneſday, July 30, 1746, and his Body delivered to his Friends to be buried.

The Nine that were executed at Kennington Common, July 30, 1746, were Francis Townley, Col. of the Mancheſter Regiment; Thomas Theodorus Deacon, James Dawſon, John Berwick, George Fletcher, and Andrew Blood (or Blyde), Captains in the Mancheſter Regiment; Thomas Chadwick, Lieutenant; Thomas Syddall, Adjutant to the ſame; and David Morgan, a Volunteer in the Pretender's Army; of theſe, Fletcher, Berwick, Chadwick, and Dawſon, declared themſelves Members of the Church of England; Townley and Blood died Papiſts; all their Speeches were filled with Treaſonable Expreſſions, not fit to be repeated (as beforementioned): But we ſhall take notice what a ſtrange enthuſiaſtick Sort of Religion Syddall and Deacon were of, as they mentioned the Church they belonged to in their dying Speeches; and Mr. Morgan's Declaration as to his Faith.

Thomas Syddall the Peruke-maker ſays, "I die a Member not of the "Church of Rome, nor yet that of England, but of a pure Epiſcopal "Church, which hath reformed all the Errors, Corruptions and Defects "that have been introduced into the Modern Churches of Chriſtendom: "A Church which is in perfect Communion with the Ancient and Uni"verſal Church of Chriſt, by adhering uniformly to Antiquity, Uni"verſality and Conſent; that glorious Principle, which if once ſtrictly "and impartially purſued, would, and which alone can, remove all the "Diſtractions, and unite all the divided Branches of the Chriſtian "Church. This only Catholick Principle is agreed to by all the "Churches, Eaſtern and Weſtern, Popiſh and Proteſtant; and yet un"happily is practiſed by none, but the Church in whoſe Communion "I die. May God in his great Mercy, daily increaſe the Members "thereof! And if any would enquire into its Primitive Conſtitution, "I refer them to our Common-Prayer-book; which is entitled, a Com"plete Collection of Devotions, both publick and private, taken from the "Apoſtolical Conſtitutions, the Ancient Liturgies, and the Common Prayer-book "of the Church of England, Printed at London, 1734."

Mr. Thomas Theodorus Deacon ſaid, in his Speech, "I profeſs I die a "Member not of the Church of Rome, nor yet of that of England, but "of a pure Epiſcopal Church, which has reformed all the Errors, Cor"ruptions and Defects that have been introduced into the Modern "Churches of Chriſtendom: a Church, which is in perfect Communion "with the Ancient and Univerſal Church of Chriſt, by adhering uni"formly to Antiquity, Univerſality and Conſent; that glorious Princi"ple, which if once ſtrictly and impartially purſued, would, and which "alone can, remove all the Diſtractions, and unite all the divided "Branches of the Chriſtian Church. This truly Catholick Principle "is agreed to by all Churches, Eaſtern and Weſtern, Popiſh and Pro"teſtant; and yet unhappily is practiſed by none, but the Church in "whoſe Holy Communion I have the Happineſs to die. May God, "of his great Mercy, daily increaſe the Members thereof! And if any "would enquire into its Primitive Inſtitution, I refer them to our Com"mon Prayer-book; entitled as abovementioned."—This Book of Devotion was ſuppoſed to be wrote by Dr. Deacon, the Phyſician at Mancheſter, Father of the above.

The Speeches of the Rebels were ſuſpected to be wrote by Mr. Creake, a Nonjuring Clergyman; (ſome ſaid one of their Biſhops) at leaſt he had a hand in them.

Counſellor Morgan in his Speech ſaid, "To conclude, my Brethren "and Fellow Subjects, I muſt make Profeſſion of that Religion I was "baptized, have continued, and ſhall, through divine Permiſſion, die "in, which is that of the Church of England; and which I hope, will "ſtand and prevail, againſt the Malice, Devices and Aſſaults of her "Enemies; as well thoſe of the Church of Rome, as thoſe, equally "dangerous, the Followers of Luther and Calvin, covered under, and "concealed in, the ſpecious Bugbears of Popery and Arbitrary Power. "This my Faith, I have fully ſet forth in a Poem of two Books, in"titled, the Chriſtian Teſt, or the Coalition of Faith and Reaſon; the firſt "of which I have already publiſhed, and the latter, I have bequeathed "to the Care of my unfortunate, but very dutiful Daughter, Mrs. Mary "Morgan, to be publiſhed by her, ſince it has pleaſed God I ſhall not "live to ſee it. To theſe Poems I refer, which I hope will obviate all "Cavil to the contrary."

XXXV. The Trial of Alexander Mac Growther, at the Town Hall, St. Margaret's Hill, Thurſday, July 31, 1746, for High-Treaſon.

THIS Morning the Right Honourable the Lord Chief Juſtice Lee, the Right Honourable Lord Chief Juſtice Willes, Mr. Juſtice Wright, Mr. Juſtice Foſter, Mr. Baron Reynolds, and Mr. Baron Clive, came into Court, and being ſeated, the Cryer made Proclamation for Silence; and the Keeper brought James Nicholſon, a Lieutenant in the Duke of Perth's Regiment, and Donald Mac Donald, otherwiſe David Mac Donald, otherwiſe Daniel Mac Donald, a Captain in Cappock's Regiment, to the Bar, and they deſired to retract their former Plea; which the Court having granted, they pleaded Guilty, and hoped the Court would recommend them to his Majeſty's Mercy.

Alexander Mac Growther was then called, and put to the Bar, and for his Trial put himſelf upon God and his Country, and after making ſome Exceptions, a Jury was ſworn to try him.

The Counſel for the King having opened the Indictment, that the Priſoner was a Lieutenant in the Duke of Perth's Regiment, they proceeded to call their Witneſſes, and Mr. Allen was called and ſworn accordingly.

Solicitor General. Pray, Sir, acquaint the Court of all that you know of the Priſoner.

Mr. Allen. There are two Mac Growthers, but this is the oldeſt, and he was a Lieutenant in the Duke of Perth's Regiment; and the firſt Time he was in Arms in the Pretender's Service was the latter End of laſt Auguſt. He was a Tenant to the Duke of Perth, and accepted a Commiſſion in the Rebel Service; he was called Lieutenant in Perth's Regiment by the Officers and Soldiers, and marched in his Highland Dreſs with the Rebels from their firſt beating up for Volunteers in Scotland. He was at Edinburgh, and ſeemed very glad when the Pretender had got Poſſeſſion of the City, and encouraged the Soldiers to be diligent, for that there was no Fear of Succeſs, and if they were hearty, vigilant and active, he did not doubt but they ſhould ſucceed. He wore a white Cockade at Edinburgh, a Dirk by his Side, had Piſtols in his Girdle, and a blue Bonnet, and the Highland Rebels paid a great Reſpect to him. He was at Perth when Poſſeſſion was taken of that Town by the Pretender's Party, and always acted there as an Officer; and at every Place where the Rebels came was very warm in their Cauſe, bidding the Rebels under his Command keep a good Heart, and fear nothing.——He ſpoke this at the Battle of Preſton Pans; and every Attack they made, he ſpirited up his Brother Officers, and deſired them to keep a good Look-out, and take care the Soldiers did their Duty.

Mr. Maddox was next called and ſworn, who depoſed, That he ſaw the Priſoner at Carliſle, in his Highland Dreſs, at the Time when his Royal Highneſs the Duke beſieged the City;—that he was in a Highland Plaid, a Bonnet, a White Cockade and Dirk, and was called Lieutenant Mac Growther, and greatly eſteemed by the Rebels.

The Captains Vere and Nevet, who are Officers in the King's Service, depoſed, That when the Rebels ſurrendered themſelves, they had Orders from his Royal Highneſs the Duke to examine all the Rebel Officers; and when they examined the Priſoner, Mr. Mac Growther, he owned that he was an Officer (a Lieutenant) in the Duke of Perth's Regiment; and that he gave in his Name as an Officer;—and all the Witneſſes agreed, that the Priſoner was under no Reſtraint, but acted as voluntarily as the other Rebel Officers.

Priſoner's Defence.

The Priſoner's Counſel inſiſted, that the Duke of Perth had compelled him to enter into the Rebellion, and had threatened him, if he refuſed to join them, to burn his Houſe to the Ground, to deſtroy all his Cattle and Stock of Corn, and to lay waſte all that belonged to him;—and to prove this they called four Witneſſes, who, in general, depoſed, That ſeveral of the Duke of Perth's Men came and threatened him, the Priſoner, with Deſtruction, if he refuſed joining the Rebel Forces; and to bind him with Cords; and that being compelled, he was forced to join them to ſave himſelf from Ruin.

The Evidence on both Sides being cloſed, my Lord Chief Juſtice ſummed up the Evidence to the Jury; and as the Proof was very ſtrong, and it appearing that he marched with the Rebels, and enliſted at the Beginning of the Rebellion, and continued with them 'till the Surrender of Carliſle, the Jury (without going out of Court) found him Guilty.

Alexander Mac Growther's Case, July 31, 1746 ‡.

IN the Caſe of Alexander Mac Growther, there was full Evidence touching his having been in the Rebellion; and his acting as a Lieutenant in a Regiment in the Rebel Army called the Duke of Perth's Regiment. The Defence he relied on was, that he was forced in.

And to that Purpoſe he called ſeveral Witneſſes, who in general ſwore, that on the 28*th* of Auguſt the Perſon called Duke of Perth, and the Lord Strathallan, with about Twenty Highlanders, came to the Town where the Priſoner lived. That on the ſame Day three ſeveral Summons were ſent out by the Duke requiring his Tenants to meet him, and to conduct him over a Moor in the Neighbourhood, called Luiny Moor. That upon the third Summons the Priſoner, who is a Tenant to the Duke, with about Twelve of the Tenants appeared; that then the Duke propoſed to them that they ſhould take Arms and follow him into the Rebellion. That the Priſoner and the reſt refuſed to go; whereupon they were told, that they ſhould be forced, and Cords were brought by the Duke's Party in order to bind them; and that then the Priſoner and Ten more went off, ſurrounded by the Duke's Party.

Theſe Witneſſes ſwore that the Duke of Perth threatened to burn the Houſes, and to drive off the Cattle of ſuch of his Tenants as ſhould refuſe to follow him. They all ſpoke very extravagantly of the Power Lords in Scotland exerciſe over their Tenants; and of the Obedience, (even to the joining in Rebellion) which they expect from them.

Lord Chief Juſtice Lee, in ſumming up, obſerved to the Jury, that there is not, nor ever was, any Tenure which obligeth Tenants to follow their Lords into Rebellion *.

And as to the Matter of Force, he ſaid, that the Fear of having Houſes burnt, or Goods ſpoiled, ſuppoſing that to have been the Caſe of the Priſoner, is no Excuſe in the Eye of the Law for joining and marching with Rebels.

The only Force that doth excuſe, is a Force upon the Perſon, and preſent Fear of Death; and this Force and Fear muſt continue all the Time the Party remains with the Rebels. It is incumbent on every Man, who makes Force his Defence, to ſhew an actual Force, and that he quitted the Service as ſoon as he could; agreeable to the Rule laid down in Oldcaſtle's Caſe, 1 Hale 50. that they joined pro timore Mortis & receſſerant quam cito potuerunt.

He then obſerved that the only Force the Priſoner pretends to, was on the 8*th* of Auguſt; and that he continued with the Rebels and bore a Commiſſion in their Army 'till the Surrender of Carliſle, which was on or about the 30*th* of December.

The Jury without going from the Bar found him Guilty. But he was reprieved, and not executed.

N. B. All the Judges that were in Town were preſent, and concurred in the Points of Law.

N. B. Many of the Scotch Priſoners made Force their Defence, and produced the ſame Sort of Evidence as MacGrowther did; and the ſame Directions in point of Law were given as in his Caſe. And the Matter of Fact whether Force or no Force, and how long that Force continued, with every Circumſtance tending to ſhew the Practicability or Impracticability of an † Eſcape, was left to the Jury on the whole Evidence.

* N. B. If Threats of this Kind were an Excuſe, it would be in the Power of any Leader in a Rebellion to indemnify all his Followers.

XXXVI. The Proceedings at St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark, relating to Alexander and Charles Kinloch (Brothers to Sir James Kinloch, Bart.), on Auguſt 23, September 2, October 28, 29, November 15, December 15 and 20, 1746. Before the Lord Chief Juſtice Lee, Lord Chief Juſtice Willes, Lord Chief Baron Parker, Mr. Juſtice Wright, Mr. Baron Reynolds, Mr. Juſtice Abney, Mr. Juſtice Denniſon, Mr. Baron Clarke, Mr. Juſtice Foſter, Mr. Baron Clive, Sir Thomas De Veil, Knt. and Peter Theobald, Eſq. relating to their Plea of being born in Scotland, and ought to be tried according to the Laws of that Kingdom, &c *.

Auguſt 23, 1746.

THIS Day Bills of Indictment were found againſt Alexander Kinloch and Charles Kinloch, and others of the Rebels to the Number of twenty-two. The Overt Acts were laid in different Shires in Scotland, according to the reſpective Caſes of the Priſoners. And then the Court adjourned to the 2*d* of September for the Arraignment of the Priſoners.

September 2, 1746. On this Day, (there being no other Judge in Town) Mr. Juſtice Foſter ſat with two other Commiſſioners, Sir Thomas De Veil, Knt. and Peter Theobald, Eſq. for the Arraigning the Priſoners. Alexander Kinloch and Charles Kinloch, and the reſt of the Priſoners, who were Scotchmen born, upon their Arraignment ſeverally delivered a Paper into Court whereof the following is a Copy:

"As I intend to inſiſt on the Benefit of the Act of Union, by which "all the Laws in Scotland at that time which concern private Right are "ſaved to the Natives of Scotland, and declared to be unalterable by the "Parliament of Great Britain, except for the evident Utility of the Sub-"jects within Scotland; and as I am a Subject born within Scotland, and "ſtand indicted for Treaſons charged to have been committed by me in "Scotland, I humbly beg that the Court will be pleaſed to aſſign me "Counſel and a Solicitor to adviſe me as to the Manner of Framing, and "the Uſe to be made of this Defence; and that the Court will be pleaſed "to indulge me in a few Days time to adviſe with them, before I am com-"pelled to plead; leſt by pleading I may be deprived of the Benefit of any "ſuch Defence."

Mr. Juſtice Foſter told the Priſoners that Copies of their Indictments having been delivered to them in due Time, they ought now to have been ready to plead ſuch Pleas as they would ſtand by; and that the Court expected they ſhould now plead accordingly. He told them withal, that if the Matter contained in their Papers would avail them at all, they would have the full Benefit of it upon Not Guilty: Since it amounts to no more than that their Caſes are not within the Act of the laſt Seſſion, by Authority of which Act alone this Court ſits. They then ſeverally pleaded Not Guilty.

The Caſe of Alexander Kinloch and Charles Kinloch, October 28, 1746.

PRESENT Lord Chief Juſtice Willes, Mr. Juſtice Foſter, and Mr. Baron Clive. Alexander Kinloch and Charles Kinloch, who were the firſt of the Priſoners concerned in the Paper delivered the Second of September that were brought to Trial, were ſet to the Bar; and they agreeing in their Challenges, one Jury was ſworn and charged with them by the Clerk of the Arraignments. The junior Counſel for the Crown opened the Indictment, and the Solicitor General in a few Words opened the Evidence.

When the Counſel for the Crown had proceeded thus far, the Chief Juſtice, before any Evidence was given, told the Priſoners Counſel, that he was informed they had ſome Objection to make in behalf of their Clients grounded on the Act of Union; which Objection he ſaid was proper to be ſpoke to before the Counſel for the Crown went into their Evidence. Whereupon Mr. Joddrell, one of the Priſoner's Counſel, ſtated his Objection, and ſpoke largely to it. The Chief Juſtice then ſaid, that the Objection being in nature of a Plea to the Juriſdiction of the Court, could not be made on the Iſſue of Not Guilty; nor could any Evidence in ſupport of the Objection be received upon that Iſſue; and therefore propoſed that a Juror ſhould be withdrawn; and that the Priſoners ſhould have leave to withdraw their Pleas of Not Guilty, and to plead this Matter ſpecially: and that the Attorney General might demur, and ſo the Point would come regularly before the Court.

Mr. Juſtice Foſter ſaid on this Occaſion, that when he aſſured the Priſoners, they would have the full Benefit of this Objection on their Plea of Not Guilty, he had no Intention of leading them into a Difficulty, which they could not get clear of, without the Indulgence of the Court. He thought they would be intitled ex mero Jure to the full Benefit of the Objection without ſuch Indulgence; and added, that the Principle he went upon was this, If there be any Weight in the Objection, it muſt be that the Caſe of the Priſoners is not within the Act of the laſt Seſſion, under which Act alone this Special Commiſſion is executed. And if it be not within that Act, it is a Caſe at Common Law; and conſequently, taking it to be a Caſe at Common Law, if no Overt Act be proved in the County where the Commiſſion ſits, and whence the Jury comes, the Priſoners muſt of courſe be acquitted.

Sir John Strange, of Counſel with the Crown, ſtrongly inſiſted, that in point of Law the Priſoners were intitled to the Benefit of the Objection on Not Guilty, if they could avail themſelves of it; and the Attorney General offered to wave all Advantage that might be taken againſt the Priſoners, if any Advantage could be taken; and preſſed that the Trial might go on upon the Iſſue joined by them, and that the Merits of the Objection might be now conſidered.

But it was otherwiſe ordered, and a Juror was withdrawn, and the Jury diſcharged upon the Motion of the Priſoners Counſel, and at the Priſoners Requeſt, and with the Conſent of the Attorney General. And the Priſoners withdrew their former Plea, in order that they might be ready the next Day with their Pleas to the Juriſdiction in Form. To which the Attorney General declared he would demur inſtanter.

And the Court adjourned to the next Day.

The Entry on the Record touching this Matter, is as followeth:

"Upon the Motion of Charles Hamilton Gordon, Eſq. and Paul Joddrell, "Eſq. being aſſigned as Counſel for the Defendants in this Cauſe, and by "their Conſent, and alſo at the Deſire and Requeſt, and by the Conſent "of the Defendants now at the Bar here, and alſo by the Conſent of Mr. "Attorney General on behalf of the King: It is ordered by the Court "here, that Richard Toy the laſt of the Jurors ſworn and impannelled in "this Cauſe be withdrawn out of the Pannel; and that the reſt of the Ju-"rors in this Cauſe be diſcharged; no Evidence whatſoever having been "given to the ſaid Jury in this Cauſe, either on the Part of the King or of "the Defendants. And it is further ordered by the Court here, that the "ſaid Defendants have leave to withdraw their Pleas of Not Guilty by "them formerly pleaded to the Indictment in this Cauſe, and have leave "to plead to the Juriſdiction of this Court: And that the ſaid Defend-"ants have Time 'till To-morrow to put in ſuch Plea. And that they "deliver Copies of ſuch Plea to Mr. Sharpe, Solicitor for the King in this "Cauſe, by Eight of the Clock this Evening. And thereupon the ſaid "Defendants do now here at the Bar withdraw their ſaid Pleas of Not "Guilty, in order to put in ſuch Plea to the Juriſdiction of this Court as "aforeſaid."

October 29, 1746. On this Day, preſent the ſame Judges as Yeſterday. Alexander Kinloch was firſt ſet to the Bar and again arraigned, whereupon he tendered a Plea ingroſſed on Parchment and ſigned by his

* We cannot find that any Trial of theſe two Kinlochs was ever printed; the Evidence againſt them (and the reſt tried at St. Margaret's Hill) being ſo very plain, nothing remarkable happened at their Trials. Counsel Mr. Gordon and Mr. Fodrell; to which the Attorney General demurred, and the Prisoner instantly joined in Demurrer.

" And the said Alexander Kinloch in his own proper Person comes, and " having heard the Indictment aforesaid read, and protesting that he is " Not Guilty of the Premisses charged in the said Indictment, for Plea " nevertheless saith, That he ought not to be compelled to answer to the " said Indictment: Because he saith that the Kingdom of Scotland, before " and until the Time of the Union of the two Kingdoms of England and " Scotland, was regulated and governed by the proper Laws and Statutes of " that Kingdom, and not by the Laws and Statutes of the Kingdom of " England; and that ever since the said Union of the said two Kingdoms " that Part of the Realm of Great Britain called Scotland hath been, and " yet is governed and regulated by the proper Laws of that Part of the " said Realm called Scotland, and not by the Laws of that Part of the said " Realm called England.

" And the said Alexander Kinloch further saith, That within the said King- " dom before the Union of the said two Kingdoms, and until the said " Union thereof, and within that Part of Great Britain called Scotland " ever since the said Union, there hath been, and now is a certain Court " called the Court of Justiciary; and that all and singular Offences of " High-Treason committed within the said Kingdom of Scotland before " and until the said Union, and within that Part of the Realm of Great " Britain called Scotland since the said Union by the Natives thereof, ap- " prehended or taken for such Offences there (except Peers of the Realm " of Great Britain), have been and of Right ought to be enquired of, heard " and determined in the said Court of Justiciary before the Justices of that " Court, or in some other Courts, or before other Justices within the said " Realm of Scotland before the Union, and within that Part of the Realm " of Great Britain called Scotland since the said Union; and not in any " Court, or before any Justices within the Realm of England before the " said Union, or within that Part of the Realm of Great Britain called " England since the said Union.

" And the said Alexander Kinloch further saith, That Fochabars in the " Shire of Murray in the said Indictment mentioned, the Place where the " said Offence contained in the said Indictment is supposed to have been " committed, before and until the said Union of the said two Kingdoms " was within and Parcel of the said Kingdom of Scotland, and ever since " the said Union was and now is lying within and Parcel of that Part " of the Realm of Great Britain called Scotland.

" And the said Alexander Kinloch further saith, That he was born within " that Part of the Realm of Great Britain called Scotland (to wit) at " Fochabars aforesaid; and that at the Time when the said Offence in the " said Indictment contained, is therein supposed to have been committed, " and long before that Time, and since, he the said Alexander Kinloch " was resident and commorant within that Part of Great Britain called " Scotland (to wit) at Fochabars aforesaid. And this he is ready to verify. " Wherefore the said Alexander Kinloch prays Judgment if the Court of " our Lord the King here will further proceed upon the Indictment afore- " said against him, and that he may be dismissed from the Court here of " and upon the Premisses, &c.

Demurrer.] " And the said Sir Dudley Ryder, Knight, Attorney-General of " our present Sovereign Lord the King, who for our said present Sovereign " Lord the King in this behalf prosecuted, as to the said Plea of him the " said Alexander Kinloch by him above pleaded as aforesaid, for our " said present Sovereign Lord the King saith, That the said Plea and " the Matter therein contained, are not sufficient in Law to preclude the " Court here from their Jurisdiction to hear and determine the High- " Treason mentioned and specified in the said Indictment, and above " charged upon him the said Alexander Kinloch in and by the said Indict- " ment. Wherefore for Want of a proper and sufficient Answer in " this Behalf, he prayeth Judgment, and that the said Alexander Kinloch " may answer in Court here to our said present Sovereign Lord the King " touching and concerning the Premisses aforesaid."

Joynder in Demurrer.] And the said Alexander Kinloch likewise.

The Prisoner's Counsel admitted, that his Case is within the Letter of the Act of the last Session, by Authority of which this Court sits: But insisted, that by the known Rules of Construction, if any great or manifest Inconveniences do arise from adhering closely to the Letter of the Act, the Court ought, and always doth depart from the literal Construction.

The Construction they insisted on was, that for Offences committed in England, Commissions might issue for hearing and determining the same in any County of England; and for Offences committed in Scotland, the like Commissions might issue into any County of Scotland, which would, they said, answer all the Ends of the Act mentioned in the Preamble; and would at the same Time avoid all the Inconveniencies which the Construction contended for in behalf of the Crown is attended with.

They then mentioned several Inconveniencies attending such a Construction of the Act: Some of which might possibly have merited the Attention of the Legislature at the Time the Act passed.

Mr. Attorney General in answer said, That the Rules of Construction as applied to Acts of Parliament grounded on Inconveniencies, whether imaginary or real, hold in no Cases but where the Meaning of the Act is doubtful: In plain Cases, where the Intention of the Legislature is evident, 'tis the Duty of the Court to put the Law in Execution, and to leave all Considerations of Inconveniencies to the Legislature. And if the Parliament had intended that different Commissions should issue for the Trial of Treasons committed in England and Scotland respectively, they would have said so: they would not have impowered his Majesty to issue Commissions into any County or Shire within the United Kingdom.

And the Objection he said is not new; it was made, but without Effect, in behalf of a Scotchman concerned in the Rebellion of 1715 * (1 Geo. I. c. 33.).

The Lord Chief Justice declared his Opinion, in which the other Judges present concurred, that the Prisoner's Birth, Residence and Apprehension in Scotland are Facts perfectly immaterial to the present Question. That they would have been so, if the Case had been at Common Law. For at Common Law every Man is triable, not where he was born, resided, or was apprehended, but where the Fact was committed: That these Facts being immaterial, and the whole Merits of the Objection appearing on the Face of the Indictment, the Prisoner might as well have Demurred to it, as pleaded in the Manner he hath done.

That in so plain a Case as this is, Arguments ab inconvenienti are of no Weight: The Law must take its Course: Inconveniencies in plain Cases are proper only for the Consideration of the Legislature.

His Lordship observed that the Words, This Realm, occur in four or five Places in the Act, and that in every Place where they do occur, except in the Clause in Question, they incontestably mean the United Kingdom of Great Britain, and can mean nothing else: And by no Rule of Construction can they be restrained in this single Clause, to that Part of the Kingdom called England.

The Court over-ruled the Plea, and ordered that the Prisoner should plead over to the Treason; and he pleaded Not Guilty. Charles Kinloch was then brought to the Bar, and being arraigned a second Time on the Indictment pleaded likewise Not Guilty. And both Prisoners agreeing to join in their Challenges, a Jury (the same Persons who were sworn and charged with them Yesterday) was sworn and charged with them. And they were both found Guilty, but not executed.

November 15, 1746. On this Day, Present the two Chief Justices, Mr. Justice Wright, Mr. Baron Reynolds, Mr. Justice Abney, Mr. Justice Foster, and Mr. Baron Clive. All the Prisoners who were convicted since the last Execution were brought to the Bar to receive Judgment. The two Kinlochs, Alexander and Charles, moved by (Mr. Fodrell) their Counsel in Arrest of Judgment: He took Notice of the Proceedings with regard to the Prisoners on the 28th and 29th Days of October, and insisted that their Trial on the 29th (a Jury having been sworn and charged with them on the 28th) was a Mis-trial, and the Verdict a mere Nullity.

He was proceeding to state his Reasons and Authorities, when Lord Chief Justice Lee interrupted him and said, that as there is a Variety of Opinions in the Books touching that Matter, which is really a Point of great Consequence, he thought it most adviseable to postpone the further Consideration of it to the next Adjournment, when he should desire the Assistance of all the Judges in the Commission. Then the Court, after passing Sentence on the others, adjourned to the 15th of December.

N. B. The Court being full, and the Bar crowded in Expectation of the Event of this Motion, Mr. Justice Foster thought it not improper to speak to the Purpose he spoke on the 28th of October. And he added, That from what was said by the Court on the 29th, he was confirmed in his Opinion, that the Prisoners might safely have pleaded the General Issue. For if, as was then admitted, the whole Merits of the Objection appear on the Face of the Indictment, the Prisoners undoubtedly might have had the Benefit of it in Arrest of Judgment. So that, quacunque Viâ, whether they could have been let into it on Evidence (as they certainly might), or in Arrest of Judgment, they were not ill advised in pleading the General Issue.

December 15, 1746. On this Day, Present the two Chief Justices Lee and Willes, the Chief Baron Parker, Mr. Justice Wright, Mr. Baron Reynolds, Mr. Justice Abney, Mr. Justice Dennison, Mr. Baron Clarke, Mr. Justice Foster, and Mr. Baron Clive—Mr. Fodrell argued in Behalf of the Kinlochs in Arrest of Judgment.

He admitted that there is a Variety of Opinions in the Books touching the Power of the Court to discharge a Jury sworn and charged in a Capital Case. And that the Practice during the Reign of King Charles the Second at least, went in favour of that Power. But he said that ever since the Revolution the contrary Practice hath uniformly prevailed. And even in the Time of James the Second, the Judges in Lord Delmeré's Case (IV. State-Trials, 232.) declared, that a Jury sworn and charged in a Capital Case cannot be discharged, but must give a Verdict. And Common Justice, he said, requires, that when a Prisoner is brought upon his Trial, and a Jury is once sworn and charged with him, he is to stand or fall by the Event of that Trial; otherwise his Life may be brought in Jeopardy for the same Fact as often as the Court pleases, and even when he is not so well prepared for his Defence.

To shew that the Law and Practice before the Restoration was with his Clients, he relied on the Authority of Lord Coke in his 1st Inst. 227 b. and 3d Inst. 110. And to shew that the Judges since the Revolution concurred with Lord Coke, he cited Carthew 465; where it is reported to have been said by Holt at the Sittings in Guild-Hall, on the ninth Day of November 1698, in the Case of the King and Perkins, " That All the Judges " of England upon Debate among themselves had agreed, that a Jury " sworn and charged in a Capital Case cannot be discharged, though all " the Parties consent to it."

He said that he had seen a MS. Note of the same Resolution by the late Mr. Justice Tracy, which agrees in Substance with Carthew's Report of it.

He observed, that according to Carthew's Report and Tracy's MS. the Judges at the same Time came to a Resolution, That in Criminal Cases, not Capital, a Juror may be withdrawn, or Jury discharged by consent of all Parties, but not otherwise.

That the Practice since that Time in Criminal Cases hath been conformable to this Rule. For this he cited the Cases of the King and Morgan, Hillary 9 Geo. II. on an Indictment for Perjury, and the King and Jelf, Trinity 7 Geo. II. an Indictment for Barratry; In both these Cases Lord Hardwick, he said, at the Sittings, refused to withdraw a Juror at the Prayer of the King's Counsel, because the Defendant's Counsel refused to consent to it, and cited this Resolution in Carthew. The Use he made of these two Cases was, that since this Regard hath been paid to the Authority of the Resolution in Criminal Cases, as reported by Carthew, he hoped the same Regard would be now paid to that touching Capital Cases.

As to the Matter of Consent, he observed that Consent may cure an Irregularity, but cannot justify the breaking through any of the funda-

* This was the Case of William Hay upon the Special Commission at Carlisle, in the Year 1716. The Objection was then introduced, not by way of Plea to the Jurisdiction, but by Demurrer. And the Court after hearing the Prisoner's Counsel adjourned to the next Day. And having considered the Arguments of the Prisoner's Counsel, agreed to over-rule the Demurrer. Which being intimated to his Counsel, he by Leave of the Court, and with the Consent of the Sollicitor-General, withdrew his Demurrer, and pleaded Guilty.

mental Principles of Law; eſpecially ſuch Rules as are in favour of a Priſoner who is anſwering for his Life. A Priſoner in this Circumſtance, is hardly Sui Juris; he may be over-awed or ſurprized into a Conſent, manifeſtly to his Prejudice: And therefore the Judges in the Reſolution cited from Carthew (on which he relied as an Authority in Point with him) threw the Circumſtance of the Conſent quite out of the Caſe.

Upon the whole, he concluded that Judgment ought to be arreſted.

To this it was anſwered by the Counſel on the Part of the Crown, (Mr. Attorney General, Sir John Strange, Mr. Solicitor General,) that except the Reſolution reported by Carthew, there is not a ſingle Authority in the Books which ſaith that a Juror may not be withdrawn, or the Jury diſcharged, even in Capital Caſes, with the Conſent of all Parties. That it was done in the Caſe of Manſell ſo long ago as the 26th of Eliz. (1. Ann 103, 104.) And all the Judges of Serjeant's-Inn in Fleet-Street then agreed, that it might be done; and had often to their Knowledge been done. That the Rule laid down by Lord Coke in his firſt and third Inſtitutes runneth in general Terms, and doth not indeed except the Caſe of Conſent; but that Caſe muſt be ſuppoſed to be excepted.

That it frequently hath been done ſince Lord Coke's Time, even without Conſent, where the Circumſtance of the Priſoner, or the Demands of Publick Juſtice did require it. And for this they cited 2 Hale, 295, 296, 297. 1 Vent. 69. Keil. 46, 47. 52.

They ſaid they did not cite theſe Books with an entire Approbation of the Practice in every Inſtance in which it prevailed; for ſome of the Caſes, particularly Whitebread's, (II. State Trials,) ought never to be drawn into Example; but only to ſhew what the Opinion of thoſe Times was.

That the Opinion of the Judges in Lord Delamere's Caſe doth not affect the preſent Queſtion. For the only Queſtion propoſed to the Judges was, whether in the Trial of a Peer in the Court of the Lord High-Steward, the Court might, after Evidence given, adjourn the Peers Triers from Day to Day. The Judges did not preſume to anſwer that Queſtion, it being a Point of Judicature of which that Court alone was the proper Judge. But they did ſay, that in the Caſe of a Common Jury ſworn and charged, they ought to give their Verdict before they are diſcharged: Meaning only, that a Jury in a Capital Caſe cannot be adjourned and ſeparated after Evidence given, but muſt be kept together till they agree on their Verdict. The Occaſion which led them to ſay this ſheweth, that the Caſe of an Adjournment was what they had then in Contemplation, and not the Caſe of a total Diſmiſſion of the Jury. And ſo doth the Reaſon they give for the Practice; this, they ſay, is done for fear of Tampering and Corruption. In the Caſe of a bare Adjournment there may be Room for this Fear, but in the Caſe of a total Diſmiſſion, when no Verdict is to be given, there cannot.

They inſiſted on Rookwood's Caſe (IV. State Trials) as a Caſe in Point. For had the Priſoner's Counſel taken Exceptions to the Indictment coming within the Reſtrictions of the Act of the 7th of King William, and had thoſe Exceptions been allowed, the Indictment muſt have been quaſhed, and the Jury, though ſworn and charged, muſt have been diſmiſſed; and yet it cannot be imagined that the quaſhing that Indictment, and diſcharging that Jury, would have diſcharged the Priſoner from anſwering to the Treaſon on a freſh Bill of Indictment.

As to the three Reſolutions reported by Carthew, the two laſt, they ſaid, are manifeſtly againſt Law, in the Latitude laid down in that Book. The King in a Civil Caſe may by his Prerogative withdraw a Juror, for he cannot be nonſuit; and it is frequently done in Informations in the Exchequer on account of the Revenue: And though the Court refuſed to do it in the Caſes of Morgan and Jelfs, cited on the other Side, yet in the Caſe of one Wilkinſon, Paſchæ 6 Geo. II. which was an Indictment for miſapplying Money raiſed on the Scavengers Rate, the Court did diſcharge the Jury at the Prayer of Mr. Juſtice Abney, then one of the King's Counſel, without the Defendant's Conſent.

It is objected, that a Priſoner may be drawn into a Conſent to his own Prejudice: But certainly a Priſoner may do much more than conſent, he may abandon all Defence, he may plead Guilty. He may on his Trial wave all his Challenges, and put himſelf on the firſt Twelve that ſhall appear. An Acceſſory cannot be brought to his Trial before the Principal is convicted or outlawed; (2. Hale 224.) But if he pleaſeth, he may wave that Privilege, and ſubmit himſelf to a Trial, and it ſhall not be Error, becauſe he conſented. Beſides, in the preſent Caſe, what was done was at the Prayer of the Priſoners, and, as the Court then took the Caſe, manifeſtly for their Advantage.

Caſes may happen, where the Court, ex debito Juſtitiæ, and out of Regard to the Priſoner, ought to diſcharge the Jury, (1 Hale 35.) and poſtpone the Trial. The Caſe put by Lord Hale of a Madman putting himſelf on his Trial is ſtrong to this Purpoſe. And other Caſes of the like kind may be put.

On the whole, they prayed Judgment for the King.

Sir John Strange cited a Record of Hilary 8. H. VII. Rot. 3. a Copy whereof he brought into Court. It was an Indictment for Murder, and Not Guilty pleaded. The Jury having heard all the Evidence, withdrew to conſider of their Verdict, and being returned, delivered their Verdict into Court in Writing. And being examined by the Court how they came by that Writing, confeſſed that it was delivered into their Hands by the Priſoner at the Bar as they paſſed by him. The Court thereupon diſcharged the Jury of the Priſoner, and committed them for this Miſbehaviour. And a new Venire was awarded. And the ſecond Jury brought him in Not Guilty.

The Arguments being long, and the Day far ſpent, the Court deferred giving their Opinion to the 20th.

December 20, 1746. On this Day, preſent the ſame Judges as on the 15th, the Court delivered their Opinions ſeriatim. And all except one (Wright) agreed that Judgment ought to paſs upon the Priſoners They agreed, That admitting the Rule laid down by Lord Coke to be a good general Rule, yet it cannot be univerſally binding: Nor is it eaſy to lay down any Rule that will be ſo. The Rule cannot bind in Caſes where it would be productive of great Hardſhip or manifeſt Injuſtice to the Priſoner.

In the preſent Caſe, the Priſoners were adviſed upon their Trial to object to the Juriſdiction of the Court: But having pleaded to Iſſue, it was ſaid that they were too late with that Objection. In order therefore to let them into the Benefit of this Objection, Liberty is given them, at their Requeſt, to withdraw their Plea of Not Guilty, before Evidence given, and to plead to the Juriſdiction. Now the Plea of Not Guilty being withdrawn, the Jury had no Iſſue to try, nor Evidence before them, and muſt of courſe therefore be diſcharged; and conſequently the Priſoners have no Right to complain of that which was a neceſſary Conſequence of an Indulgence ſhewn them by the Court.

The Judges who concurred in this Opinion paid very little Regard to the Reſolution reported by Carthew; not only for the Reaſons inſiſted on by the Counſel for the Crown, but becauſe, as no other printed Report of that Time taketh any Notice of this Reſolution, it is very doubtful whether there ever was any ſuch Reſolution or no; eſpecially ſince Mr. Baron Clarke informed the Court that he hath a MS. Report of the late Lord Chief-Juſtice Eyre of the Caſe of the King and Perkins, in which Caſe Carthew ſuppoſeth Holt to have reported this Reſolution.

The Caſe was thus: Perkins was indicted for Perjury in an Anſwer in Chancery: The Iſſue came on to be tried before Holt at the Sittings in Guildhall the ninth Day of November 1698. When the Bill was produced by the Counſel for the Proſecution in order to intitle them to read the Anſwer, it appeared that the Bill had never been filed, ſo that neither Bill or Anſwer could be read. Holt offered to ſtay till the Proſecutors could ſend the Bill to the Office and have it filed. But they foreſeeing that it could not be done in any reaſonable Time, their Counſel inſiſted on behalf of the Crown, upon withdrawing a Juror; Holt would not allow of it, and the Defendant was acquitted.

Holt upon this Occaſion ſaid, "I have had Occaſion to conſider of this "Matter. In Criminal Caſes, a Juror cannot be withdrawn but by "Conſent. And in Capital Caſes it cannot be done, even with Conſent."

This is the whole of the Caſe as reported by Eyre, not a Word of any Reſolution of the Judges on the Point. And Holt's Manner of Expreſſion, I have had Occaſion to conſider, ſeemeth to imply that the Opinion he gave was the Reſult of his own Thoughts on the Subject.

With regard to Tracy's MS. it was obſerved by Mr. Juſtice Abney, that Tracy was * not an Engliſh Judge at the Time the Judges are ſuppoſed to have come to theſe Reſolutions, or even ſo early as the Year 1698. And therefore he muſt have taken up the Matter upon Report at ſecond-hand.

They all agreed that the Opinion of the Judges in Lord Delamere's Caſe doth not affect this Queſtion, for the Reaſons inſiſted on by the King's Counſel; and joined in condemning the Proceedings in the Caſe of Whitebread and Fenwick, as cruel and illegal.

The learned Judge (Wright) who diſſented, admitted that the diſcharging the Jury in the preſent Caſe was an Inſtance of great Indulgence towards the Priſoners. But he thought it ſafer to adhere to the Rule of Law, which is clearly laid down by Lord Coke, than upon any account to eſtabliſh a Power in Judges, which it is admitted hath been groſsly abuſed, and may be ſo again.

He obſerved, that Manſell's Caſe was the firſt, and except the preſent, is the only Caſe wherein the Priſoner's Conſent appears to have been taken: And that the aſking the Priſoner's Conſent in Manſell's Caſe plainly betrayeth a Conſciouſneſs in the Judges that the Thing was irregular, and could not be done at the Diſcretion of the Court.

Caſes he ſaid have been put where the Circumſtances of the Priſoner ſeem to require that ſuch a Power ſhould be lodged in the Court. And other Caſes may be put, where publick Juſtice ſeemeth to require the ſame. But theſe are particular and ſingle Inconveniencies. And the Policy of the Law of England, and indeed the true Principles of all Government, will rather ſuffer many private Inconveniencies than introduce one publick Miſchief.

He conſidered the Trial by the ſame Jury which is ſworn and charged with the Priſoner, as Part of the Jus Publicum; as a ſacred Depoſitum committed to the Judges, which they ought to deliver down inviolate to Poſterity. And concluded, that the Trial on the 29th being irregular, no Judgment ought to be given on that Conviction.

But Judgment was given as in Caſes of High-Treaſon.

Mr. Juſtice Foſter delivered his Opinion in this Caſe as followeth:

This Caſe hath been very well argued at the Bar; but the Counſel on both Sides went into the general Queſtion, touching the Power of the Court to diſcharge Juries ſworn and charged in capital Caſes, farther than I think was neceſſary.

The general Queſtion is a Point of great Difficulty, and of mighty Importance. And I take it to be one of thoſe Queſtions, which are not capable of being determined by any general Rule that hath hitherto been laid down, or poſſibly ever may be. For I think it is impoſſible to fix upon any ſingle Rule which can be made to govern the infinite Variety of Caſes which may come under this general Queſtion, without manifeſt Abſurdity; and in ſome Inſtances, without the higheſt Injuſtice.

I therefore chooſe to conſider the preſent Queſtion ſingly as it ſtandeth upon the Record, and to throw out of it every Conſideration that is foreign to it. And poſſibly by ſo doing, moſt of the Objections that have been made in the preſent Caſe may receive this ſhort Anſwer, That they are levelled at an improper Exerciſe of the Power, but do not reach the preſent Caſe.

The Queſtion therefore is not, Whether a Jury may be diſcharged after Evidence given, in order to the preferring a new Indictment better ſuited to the Nature of the Caſe; where, through the Ignorance or Colluſion of the Officer, or the Miſtake of the Proſecutor, the Fact laid varieth from the real Fact, or cometh ſhort of it in Point of Guilt?

This was frequently done before the Revolution, (Keil. 46. 52. Comb. 401.) and in one or two † Inſtances ſince. But this is not the preſent Queſtion.

Nor is the preſent Queſtion, Whether the Court may diſcharge a Jury ſworn and charged, where undue Practices appear to have been uſed to keep material Witneſſes out of the Way; (1. Vent. 69.) or where ſuch Witneſſes have been prevented by ſudden and unforeſeen Accidents?

* He was an Iriſh Judge at this Time.

† See Anne Hawkins's Caſe, inf.

This likewiſe is not the Queſtion, and I give no Opinion on it; only let it be remembered, that Lord Chief-Juſtice Hale juſtifieth this Practice, (2. Hale, 295, 296, 297.) which he ſaith prevailed in his Time, and had long prevailed, by ſtrong Arguments drawn from the Ends of Government and the Demands of public Juſtice.

Nor is it now a Queſtion, nor I hope will it ever be a Queſtion again, Whether in a Capital Caſe the Court may in their Diſcretion diſcharge a Jury after Evidence given and concluded on the Part of the Crown, merely for Want of ſufficient Evidence to convict; and in order to bring the Priſoner to a ſecond Trial, when the Crown may be better prepared.

This was done in the Caſe of Whitebread and Fenwick, (II. State Trials) and it was certainly a moſt unjuſtifiable Proceeding. I hope it will never be drawn into Example.

Nor is the preſent Queſtion, Whether the bare Conſent of the Priſoner, unaſſiſted by Counſel, and conſenting to his own Prejudice, will render the Court quite blameleſs in diſcharging a Jury after Evidence on both Sides gone through and concluded?

This was done in the Caſe of Manſell (1 Ann. 103.) which hath been cited at the Bar. But I think it ought not to have been done; for notwithſtanding what the Record ſaith of the Uncertainty and Inſufficiency of the Verdict, the Truth of the Caſe was no more than this: The Jury were not agreed on any Verdict at all; and therefore nothing remained to be done by the Court, but to ſend them back, and to keep them together, 'till they ſhould agree to ſuch Verdict as the Court could have received and recorded; and the Priſoner ought not to have been drawn into any Conſent at all: For in Capital Caſes I think the Court is ſo far of Counſel with the Priſoner, that it ſhould not ſuffer him to conſent to any Thing manifeſtly wrong, and to his own Prejudice.

I thought proper to premiſe theſe Things, in order to clear the preſent Queſtion of every Conſideration which I take to be foreign to it.

And now I will ſtate what I take to be the preſent Queſtion: And that is,

Whether in a Capital Caſe, where the Priſoner may make his full Defence by Counſel, the Court may not diſcharge the Jury upon the Motion of the Priſoner's Counſel, and at his own Requeſt, and with the Conſent of the Attorney General before Evidence given, in order to let the Priſoner into a Defence, which, in the Opinion of the Court, he could not otherwiſe have been let into.

And I am clearly of Opinion that a Jury may in ſuch a Caſe be diſcharged. And that the diſcharging the Jury under theſe Circumſtances, will not operate ſo as to diſcharge the Priſoner from any future Trial for the ſame Offence.

It ſeems that an Opinion did once prevail, that a Jury once ſworn, and charged in any Criminal Caſe whatſoever, could not be diſcharged without giving a Verdict; but this Opinion (Ray, 84.) is exploded in Ferrar's Caſe; and it is there called a Common Tradition which had been held by many learned in the Law.

My Lord Coke was one of thoſe learned Men who gave into this Tradition, as far at leaſt as concerneth Capital Caſes: And he layeth down the Rule in very general Terms, in the Paſſages which have been cited on Behalf of the Priſoners from his firſt and third Inſtitutes.

The ſame Rule is laid down in Hale's Summary of the Pleas of the Crown (p. 269.); a very faulty, incorrect Piece, never reviſed by him, nor intended for the Preſs.

But as his Lordſhip, in his Hiſtory of the Pleas of the Crown, juſtifieth the contrary Practice, his Authority is clearly on the other Side of the Queſtion. And his Authority is the more to be regarded, becauſe he had ſeen and well conſidered the Paſſages cited from Lord Coke; though I believe the Rule, as it ſtandeth in his Summary, hath contributed not a little to the confirming many People in Coke's Opinion.

My Lord Coke layeth down the Rule in very general Terms; but he hath not given us any of the Principles of Law or Reaſon whereon he groundeth it. He hath indeed, in his firſt Inſtitute, cited one, and but one Authority, in Support of it, and that Authority doth not, to my Apprehenſion, in the leaſt warrant it.

A Man was indicted for Larceny, (21 E. III. 18.) and upon his Arraignment pleaded Not Guilty, and put himſelf upon the Country: And afterwards, when the Jury was in Court, he prayed the Liberty to become an Approver, and this was denied him; for when Iſſue is joined, it ought to be tried. And he was tried, and found Guilty, and hanged.

This is the Whole of that Caſe. Here is not the leaſt Intimation given of any general Principle, that a Jury once ſworn and charged cannot be diſcharged without giving a Verdict; nor did the Court, as I apprehend, go upon that Principle: It went upon a Principle quite different, a Principle adapted ſolely to the Caſe then before the Court, which I ſhall mention preſently.

Indeed Fitzherbert (Corone 449.) who abridgeth this Caſe, doth ſay, that the Reaſon of the Judgment was, that the Inqueſt having been once charged, could not be diſcharged: Which poſſibly might induce Lord Coke to draw the ſame Concluſion from that Caſe.

But the Reaſon given by Fitzherbert is not the Reaſon given in the Book; nor doth it ſo much as appear by the Book that the Jury was ſworn. The Words of the Book are, "Apres quant l' Enqueſt fuit icy," afterwards when the Jury was here, or in Court, whether ſworn or not doth not appear by the Book. But whether the Jury was ſworn or not, there was not the leaſt Occaſion to reſort to any general Principle, That a Jury once ſworn cannot be diſcharged; becauſe there was, as I hinted before, another Rule at hand adapted to the Caſe of an Approver, which I think wholly governed that Caſe.

And the Rule was this; That a Perſon who had once pleaded to Iſſue, could not after that be admitted to a Confeſſion in order to ſave his own Life, by charging other Perſons ſuppoſed to be his Accomplices in the ſame Fact. For by once ſolemnly denying the Fact upon his Arraignment, he had, in the Opinion of thoſe Times, loſt all Credit, and ſo could not be received as an Evidence againſt other People.

This Rule is laid down by Stamford, (Pl. Cor. 144. B. Bro. Corone 42.) and it prevailed for a long Time: And 'tis obſervable, that Brooke, who abridgeth this very Caſe, carrieth the Reaſon the Court went upon no farther than the Law then went in the Caſe of an Approver: His Words are, "A Man was arraigned for Felony and pleaded Not Guilty, "and afterwards would have become an Approver, and was not ſuffered, "becauſe he had joined Iſſue before." Not becauſe the Jury was ſworn, and could not be diſcharged, but becauſe he had, on his Arraignment, denied the Fact.

Thus then ſtandeth the Caſe with regard to the ſingle Authority cited by Lord Coke: The Judgment did not go upon the general Principle laid down by him and Fitzherbert, but upon a Principle peculiar to the Caſe of an Approver.

It muſt be owned, that the Judges did in After-times abate of their Rigour with regard to the Caſe of Approvers: and did admit Perſons to the Liberty of approving, not only after Iſſue joined, but even after the Jury was ſworn and Evidence in part given; but ſeldom after the Evidence gone through and concluded; as appeareth from ſeveral Inſtances mentioned by Lord Hale. 2. Hale, 288.

But then it muſt be owned, on the other hand, that whenever they did ſo, they went in flat Contradiction to the general Rule laid down by Coke and Fitzherbert.

I will only add, with regard to this Point, That the admitting, or not admitting Perſons to become Approvers, was always conſidered as a Matter of mere Diſcretion in the Court; as a Matter of Grace and not of Right. And yet we ſee that in a Matter of mere Diſcretion, the Court did frequently, upon the ſpecial Circumſtances of the Caſe, diſcharge Juries after they were ſworn and charged, and had in Part heard the Evidence.

Theſe Inſtances therefore muſt be conſidered as ſo many Exceptions to the General Rule: Though I confeſs they do not come up to the Caſe of diſcharging one Jury, and bringing the Priſoner to his Trial by another.

But ſtill they ſhew that the Rule now contended for on the Part of the Priſoners cannot be true, in the Latitude the Words import. And I think they do in Part ſhew, what I hinted in the Beginning, that no General Rule can govern the Diſcretion of the Court on this Queſtion in all poſſible Caſes and Circumſtances.

But this will appear in a ſtronger Light in thoſe Caſes where the Circumſtances of the Priſoner appear on his Trial to be ſuch, as that the Trial cannot proceed without manifeſt Injuſtice to him.

A great Variety of Caſes might be put upon this Head. But as this is a Point which ought to be treated with great Caution, I think it ſafer to cite a Caſe which I find ſtated to my Hand, than to ſuppoſe and argue from any Caſes of my own.

The Caſe I mean is that put by Lord Hale (1. Hale, 35.) which was mentioned the laſt Time at the Bar.

"In caſe a Man in a Phrenzy happen by ſome Overſight to plead to "his Indictment, and put himſelf on his Trial; and it appeareth to the "Court on his Trial that he is mad, the Judge in Diſcretion may diſ-"charge the Jury of him; and remit him to Gaol to be tried after the "Recovery of his Underſtanding."

But without reſorting to Authorities in a plain Caſe, the common Senſe and Feeling of Mankind, the Voice of Nature, Reaſon and Revelation, all concur in this plain Rule, that no Man is to be condemned unheard; and conſequently no Trial ought to proceed to the Condemnation of a Man, who by the Providence of God is rendered totally incapable of ſpeaking for himſelf, or of inſtructing others to ſpeak for him. And common Senſe will at the ſame Time tell us, that the bare poſtponing a Trial under theſe Circumſtances, will not diſcharge the Priſoner from a future Trial, when his preſent Diſability ſhall be removed.

This Caſe is ſurely an Exception to any general Rule that the Wit of Man can lay down on this Point.

Another Caſe which I take to be an Exception to the general Rule contended for in Behalf of the Priſoners, is, when by the Indulgence of the Court, and the Conſent of the Attorney-General, the Trial of the Iſſue goeth off after the Jury ſworn and charged; in order to intitle the Priſoner to ſome Advantage in Point of Defence, which in the Rigour of the Law he could not otherwiſe be entitled to.

And this, I apprehend, appeareth from the Caſe of Rookwood (IV. State Trials), which alſo was cited at the Bar.

In that Caſe the Jury was ſworn and charged, and the Indictment opened by the King's Counſel. The Priſoner's Counſel then offered ſome Exceptions to the Indictment, apprehending, as they ſaid, that ſince the Act of 7th King William declareth that the Exceptions therein mentioned ſhall not be taken after Evidence given, the Priſoner, by a favourable Conſtruction of the Act, had Liberty to take Exceptions at any Time before Evidence.

The Court was unanimouſly of Opinion, that the Priſoner's Counſel had lapſed their Time for taking any Exceptions at all. That the proper Time for taking Exceptions is before Iſſue joined, or at leaſt before the Jury ſworn.

And yet it being a Caſe of Life, and on a new Act of Parliament, the Court did agree that in that Inſtance only, the Counſel ſhould be at Liberty, with the Conſent of the Attorney-General, to take their Exceptions; confining themſelves to the Exceptions mentioned in the Act, of which they could not have the Benefit in Arreſt of Judgment.

The Priſoner's Counſel declined to enter into their Exceptions under that Reſtriction, and ſo the Trial went on. But had Exceptions under the Reſtrictions of that Act been taken and allowed, the Indictment muſt have been quaſhed; and the Jury then ſworn and charged muſt have been diſcharged without giving a Verdict.

Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt did not come readily into the Expedient propoſed by the reſt of the Judges, of letting the Priſoner's Counſel into their Exceptions, even with the Conſent of the Attorney-General: And in the Concluſion declareth, that the Attorney could not conſent to it, (IV. State Trials, 666.) unleſs he would alſo conſent to diſcharge the Jury.

Theſe are his Words, as I have taken them from the printed Trial. His Lordſhip ſurely at that Time entertained no Doubt, that at the Prayer of the Priſoner and his Counſel, and with the Conſent of the Attorney-General, a Jury ſworn and charged in a Caſe of High Treaſon might be diſcharged. The other Judges preſent (who were the Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common Pleas, the Lord Chief Baron, and four of the puiſne Judges) muſt certainly be of the ſame Opinion; otherwiſe they would never have given Way to the taking of Exceptions, which, if they had been allowed, muſt have ended in diſcharging the Jury; and at the ſame Time could not in the Nature of Things have operated, ſo as to diſcharge the Priſoner from anſwering to another Indictment for the ſame Offence.

It is ſaid, on the Authority of a very ſhort and imperfect Note in Carthew, That in leſs than two Years afterwards, all the Judges of England, upon

Debate

Debate among themſelves came to a Reſolution, that in Capital Caſes a Juror cannot be withdrawn, though all Parties conſent to it.

It was very properly aſked by the Counſel for the Crown, Upon what Occaſion this Debate among the Judges was had? Whether any Caſe was then depending in Judgment before them which gave riſe to the Conference, and which was to be governed by this Reſolution, and what were the particular Circumſtances of that Caſe, if any ſuch there was? Theſe Queſtions, I ſay, were very properly aſked. For the true Extent of all Rules of this kind, however generally they may be penned, is, and always will be, in a great meaſure, adjuſted by the Circumſtances of the Caſe under Conſideration, at the Time when the Rule appears to be given.

It ſeems Endeavours have been uſed to come at the neceſſary Light in theſe Particulars, but to no Purpoſe. Only it is ſaid upon the Authority of a MS. of a late learned Judge (Tracy), that this Reſolution, among others, was taken upon a Conference among the Judges in relation to an Indictment againſt the then Sheriffs of London for a bare Miſdemeanour; but what were the Circumſtances of that Caſe, or what became of it, doth not appear. And therefore I freely own, this extrajudicial Opinion (for with regard to Capital Caſes it is extrajudicial) weigheth very little with me in the preſent Queſtion; and doth by no means ſhake the Authority of Rookwood's † Caſe, which I take to be a Caſe very nearly in point with the preſent; and moreover was a Caſe where the Point did judicially come before the Court, and in which the Court had the Aſſiſtance of very able Counſel on both Sides of the Queſtion.

The only Difference between the Caſes is this: Rookwood could not have had the Benefit of his Exceptions without the Indulgence of the Court, and Conſent of the Attorney General; whereas the Priſoners at the Bar might, in my Opinion, have had the full Benefit of their Point of Law without either. I need not repeat what I ſaid on this Head the laſt Time I ſpoke of this Matter. But as a Doubt aroſe on that Point, the Expedient now under Conſideration was thought of. This Expedient the Court came into at the Prayer of the Priſoners and their Counſel, and with the Conſent of the Attorney General.

Not to bring the Priſoners Lives twice in Jeopardy, (which is one great Inconvenience of diſcharging Juries in Capital Caſes) but merely in order to give them one Chance for their Lives, which it was apprehended they had loſt by pleading to Iſſue.

Nor was it done to poſtpone their Trials to an unreaſonable Diſtance, when their Witneſſes might be dead or wearied out by a long and expenſive Attendance, (which is another great Inconvenience which may attend the diſcharging of Juries at Diſcretion, and was an Ingredient of great Hardſhip in the Caſe of Whitebread and Fenwick) but in order to bring them to a Trial with all the Speed that might be, in caſe their Plea ſhould be over-ruled. And accordingly they were tried the very next Day, as ſoon as Judgment was given on their Plea.

Upon the whole, my Opinion is, that all general Rules touching the Adminiſtration of Juſtice muſt be ſo underſtood, as to be made conſiſtent with the fundamental Principles of Juſtice. And conſequently all Caſes where a ſtrict Adherence to the Rule would claſh with thoſe fundamental Principles, are to be conſidered as ſo many Exceptions to it. The Caſes I have mentioned, and many others that might be mentioned, are Exceptions to the general Rule inſiſted on in behalf of the Priſoners.

The Caſe at Bar is I think an Exception to that Rule; and at the ſame time ſtandeth clear of the Inconveniencies mentioned by the Priſoners Counſel.

The diſcharging the Jury in this Caſe was not a Strain in favour of Prerogative, it was not done to the Prejudice of the Priſoners; on the contrary, it was intended as a Favour to them.

In that Light I ſay it was conſidered by the Court, in that Light it was conſidered by the Priſoners and their Counſel, and accordingl they prayed it; and in that Light Mr. Attorney General, with his uſual Candour, conſented to it.

And in that Light I know of no Objection in point of Law or Reaſon to it. And therefore I am of Opinion that Judgment ought not to be arreſted.

The Difference of Opinion in the Court relating to their Caſes, it is thought ſaved their Lives; for they were not executed, but pardoned, on Condition of being ſent abroad.

XXXVII. The Trial of James Bradshaw, at St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark, October 27, 1746. for High-Treaſon.

JAMES BRADSHAW was indicted for High Treaſon, &c. The Counſel for the King opened the Indictment, that the Priſoner at the Bar ſtood indicted by the Name of James Bradſhaw, for High-Treaſon, in compaſſing and imagining the King's Death, adhering to his Majeſty's Enemies, and levying (with other falſe Traitors) a cruel and deſtructive War in theſe Kingdoms, &c. And the Treaſon was laid to be committed on the 10th of November, at Carliſle, in the County of Cumberland, in the nineteenth Year of his Majeſty's Reign, againſt the Duty of his Allegiance, againſt the King's Peace, and the Forms of the Statute, &c.

Then Sir John Strange ſet forth, that the Priſoner, contrary to his Allegiance to our Sovereign Lord King George the Second, met at Manchеſter to raiſe a Regiment, which the Pretender intended to diſtinguiſh by the Name of the Manchеſter Regiment, of which Townley, who was lately executed, was made Colonel, and that the Priſoner Bradſhaw accepted of a Captain's Commiſſion in the ſaid Regiment, and acted as ſuch; that afterwards he marched with the ſaid Regiment to Derby in a hoſtile Manner, and in a Highland Dreſs, armed with Piſtols and a Sword, a white Cockade on his Bonnet: That he paid his Company and exerciſed them: That afterwards he retreated with the Rebel Army from Derby to Manchеſter, and from thence to Cliſton-Moor, where he in a Skirmiſh headed his Men againſt the Duke's Troops: That when he came to Carliſle he often waited on the Young Pretender's Levee: That when the Rebels found themſelves cloſely purſued by his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland, there was a Counſel of War directly held amongſt them, which Part of their Army ſhould march for Scotland, and what Number ſhould ſtay in the Garriſon at Carliſle, to ſecure a Retreat for the reſt of the Rebels.

The Priſoner, to purſue his avowed Diſloyalty to the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, deſired he might go on with the Rebels to Scotland, and accordingly did go with them in their Route to Glaſgow, was at the Battle of Falkirk, where was ſuch a Storm of Hail and Rain, that his Majeſty's Men could not prime or diſcharge their Pieces: From thence he marched with the Rebel Army to Sterling, thence to Perth and Strathbogie, and finally was at Culloden Moor, in the Lord Elcho's Troop of Horſe, commonly called the Pretender's Life-Guards, where he was taken a Priſoner by his Majeſty's Troops.——To prove which he called the following Witneſſes.

Samuel Maddox being ſworn, ſaid, that Mr. Bradſhaw, the Priſoner, was at the Bell in Manchеſter (the Young Pretender being preſent) where was a Conſultation to raiſe a Regiment of Foot, for which Mr. Murray, the Pretender's Secretary, delivered a Commiſſion for that End; and that Francis Townley, a Roman Catholick Gentleman, was appointed Colonel of the ſaid Regiment, which was to be called the Manchеſter Regiment; and that Mr. Bradſhaw was nominated Captain, and himſelf (Mr. Maddox) was alſo appointed an Officer; that afterwards he enlиted ſeveral private Men and Volunteers into the ſaid Corps; that he ſaw the Priſoner march with the Rebel Army to Derby, and from thence back again to Manchеſter (when they found his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland's Army was near them), and from thence to Carliſle, in a Highland Dreſs, with Piſtols and a Sword by his Side, and a White Cockade in his Bonnet: That at Carliſle, when the Young Pretender had ſent for the Officers of the Manchеſter Regiment, to take his leave of them, and to direct them how to act if attacked by his Majeſty's Forces, the Priſoner was there in the Chamber; but on account of ſome Miſunderſtanding between him and Townley, the Priſoner refuſed to ſtay behind with the Rebel Army at Carliſle, and deſired the Young Pretender would permit him to go on with them to Scotland; and that accordingly the Priſoner did march out of the Gates of Carliſle to go with the Young Pretender to Scotland.

James Patterſon being produced and ſworn, ſaid, that Mr. Bradſhaw, the Priſoner at the Bar, marched with the Rebel Army from Manchеſter to Derby, armed with Piſtols and Broad Swords, Drums beating, Pipes playing, Colours flying, and retreated with them from Derby to Manchеſter, and from thence to Carliſle, which Place he left (upon ſome Diſcontent with Col. Townley, who commanded the Manchеſter Regiment under the Young Pretender) to go in the Rebel Army, and then he engaged a Volunteer in Lord Elcho's Troop of Horſe Guards, who were eſteemed the Life-Guards to the Young Pretender.

Henry Gibſon was alſo produced and ſworn, who ſaid, that he himſelf was unfortunately ſeduced into the Rebel Army, and entered into Lord Elcho's Troop of Horſe Guards; that the Priſoner, Mr. Bradſhaw, marched with them as a private Man in the ſaid Corps; that the Troop was drawn up at the Battle of Culloden, and that he there ſaw the Priſoner on Horſe-back in the ſaid Troop, with Piſtols, and a broad Sword by his Side, and a white Cockade, and that he continued with the ſaid Troop till he was taken Priſoner by his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland's Army.

Then Captain Moore, an Officer in the Duke of Cumberland's Army was examined on Oath, and gave the Court the following Account of the Priſoner: That he ſaw the Priſoner (whom he had been acquainted with at Manchеſter) beyond the Wood of Culloden Moor, and told him, that he was ſorry to ſee him in ſuch bad Company, having had Orders from his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland to take an Account of all the Officers and Soldiers that ſhould be made Priſoners; that Mr. Bradſhaw

† See IV. State Trials, and Holt's and Tracy's Opinion in 1704, in the Caſe of Anne Hawkins, were as followeth:

Mr. Juſtice Tracy's MS. having been cited in the foregoing Caſe by the Priſoner's Counſel, and taken ſome Notice of by the Court, I think it not amiſs to ſubjoin from the ſame MS. which I had not then ſeen, a Report of the following Caſe:

" At the Seſſions at the Old Bailey before Eaſter Term 1704, Anne Hawkins was indicted for breaking the Manſion-houſe of Samuel Story in the Night-time. It appeared " on Evidence that the Houſe belonged to the African Company; that Story was an Officer of the Company, and that he and many other Perſons, as Officers of the Com- " pany, had ſeparate Apartments in the Houſe in which they inhabited and lodged; and that the Apartment of Story was broke open. It was held by Holt Chief Juſtice, " myſelf, and Baron Bury, that the Apartment of Story could not be called his Manſion-houſe, becauſe he and the others inhabit in the Houſe merely as Officers and Servants " of the Company; and thereupon the Jury was diſcharged of this Indictment, and it was amended, and laid to be the Manſion-houſe of the Company."

The Record hath been looked into; it warranteth the Report of the learned Judge in the ſubſtantial Parts of it, though in ſome Points it is defective. Two Bills were in fact preferred againſt the Woman; the firſt for Burglary and Larceny in the Dwelling-houſe of Samuel Story, to which ſhe pleaded Not Guilty, and put herſelf upon the Country; the ſecond for Burglary and Larceny in the Manſion-houſe of the African Company, in which ſhe is charged to have committed the Burglary upon the ſame Day, and to have ſtolen the very ſame Goods, as in the former Bill.

It appeareth upon this ſecond Bill, that ſhe was acquitted of the Burglary and found guilty of the Larceny. But it doth not appear by any Entry on the firſt, that the Court proceeded on it farther than the receiving and recording her Plea, and remanding her to Newgate, probably 'till the ſecond amended Bill could be prepared and ſent to the Grand Jury. But certainly it is more reaſonable to impute this Defect to the Neglect of the Officer who omitted to make the proper Entry, than to imagine that the learned Judge was totally miſtaken in a plain Matter of Fact, falling within his own Knowledge.

Another Circumſtance which may beget ſome Doubt, might be, and probably was, owing to mere Accident. The firſt Bill is now found upon the File among the Indictments of the then next preceding Seſſions (March 8th 1703). But it ought to be remembered that neither Holt, Tracy nor Bury attended at that time; and that it appeareth by the Record, that they all did attend at the following Seſſions. At which Time, according to the Judge's Report, the Point came under Conſideration, upon Evidence given on the firſt Bill, and the ſecond amended by the Direction of the Court was preferred.

ſaid he was a Captain in the Manchester Regiment, but afterwards (on the Road to Inverneſs) he ſaid that he belonged to Lord Elcho's Troop of Life-Guards.

After they had gone through the Witneſſes for the Crown, Mr. Fodrell and Mr. Ford, who were Counſel for the Priſoner, ſtood up and pleaded on his Behalf, admitting that what the Evidence for the King had ſaid was true, that the Priſoner did unfortunately engage himſelf in the Rebel Army, and did march with them from Manchester to Derby, and from thence retreated with them to Manchester, and ſo on to Carliſle, and then accompanied them to Scotland, until they came to Culloden Moor, where he was taken Priſoner; but that the unfortunate Gentleman at the Bar, had been troubled with an Inſanity of Mind, from his Youth, ſo that he was Non Compos Mentis, and conſequently, if they ſhould prove it, he could not be deemed guilty of the High Treaſon laid in the Indictment: For, ſaid they, he hath been melancholy from his Childhood, and in his Apprenticeſhip endeavoured to deſtroy himſelf by flinging himſelf out of the Window; and we ſhall be able to prove that once he did fling himſelf out of the Window, that he attempted to kill the worthy Gentleman his Maſter, that he hath been confined in a Madhouſe for theſe Lunatick Pranks, that after the Expiration of his Apprenticeſhip he married a fine Lady, whom he dearly loved, and on whoſe Death his Inſanity of Mind increaſed; that the Rebels eſteemed him no other than a Lunatick, firſt giving him the titular Name of a Captain in their Manchester Regiment, where he ſometimes marched in the Columns, and ſometimes rambled from them, and at other times a private Man in Lord Elcho's Troop of Horſe, and ſometimes he was left behind. We ſhall likewiſe, ſays he, be able to prove to your Lordſhips Satisfaction, and the Court, that this unfortunate Gentleman, after the Death of his only Son, was in ſuch a mad Condition, that he was ſtrapp'd down to his Bed, and a Watch ſet over him, to prevent him from injuring himſelf, and thoſe about him; and quoted a Caſe from Lord Chief Juſtice Hale, wherein it is mentioned, that a Perſon inſane in Mind cannot be deemed Guilty of Treaſon or Felony.

Then Thomas Buerdſell was called and ſworn, who ſaid, that he ſerved his Apprenticeſhip with the Priſoner, to Mr. Worral, a Manchester Factor in Lawrence-lane, in London; that when he came out of his Time he went down to Manchester to ſet up for himſelf with a handſome Fortune; that in Part of his Apprenticeſhip he lay in the ſame Bed with the Priſoner, who uſed often to jump out of the Bed, and ſkip about the Room, like a Madman, and ſeveral times attempted to jump out of the Window; that he (the Evidence) was in danger of his Life, and particularly, one time he caught him by the Throat, in ſuch a manner as had like to have deſtroyed him, whereupon he complained to his Maſter, who ordered them ſeparate Beds: that at another time, his Maſter called him to an account, to ſettle the Books, and make up his Caſh, when the Priſoner attempted to ſtab his Maſter with a Penknife, and that he was diſcharged from his Maſter before the time of his Apprenticeſhip was out.

Croſs-Examined.

The Witneſs admitted that he did Buſineſs ſometimes very regular for his Maſter; and that he was deficient in his Caſh; but that he (the Witneſs) was obliged to put the Poker, Tongs, Fire-ſhovel, and Chairs out of the Room, to prevent him from doing any Miſchief, and that he uſed to walk in his Sleep.

Then the Judge aſked this Witneſs, if the Priſoner uſed to get drunk? which he could not deny.

John Davis was examined, and ſaid, he had known the Priſoner ſixteen Years; that he uſed to be out of his Mind in the Night, and heard him make a Noiſe inwardly; and that he was often ſtrapp'd down; but being croſs-examined by the Attorney General, he admitted that his being ſtrapp'd down was to prevent him from walking in his Sleep; and that the Priſoner uſed to help to fix the Straps, which in the Morning he uſed to unlooſe himſelf.

Charles Jernagan ſaid, that there were Iron Bars put in the Window to prevent the Priſoner from jumping into the Streets, and that he was often ſtrapp'd down for the like Conſequences. He often appeared in the Day-time melancholy, and had on him the Symptoms of a Man out of his Mind. The Witneſs (being croſs-examined) admitted, that he kept his Books regular, that he drew Bills of Exchange that were always honoured by his Correſpondents, who made no Heſitation on account of his Infirmity; but at other times he was attended by the Doctors for his Diſorder of Mind.

A Clergyman, Brother-in-law to the Priſoner's deceaſed Wife, ſaid the Priſoner was diſordered in his Mind, that he often laid with him, that he was ſtrapp'd down in the Night, to prevent him from doing Miſchief. That once he ſeized him by the Throat, and if he had not been a ſtrong Man, he would have killed him; and that he once jumped out of the Window and bruiſed himſelf.

Being croſs-examined by the Attorney General, if his being ſtrapp'd down was not to prevent his hurting himſelf in his Sleep, and if he did not uſe to walk in his Sleep? the Witneſs appeared puzzled to anſwer the Queſtion, 'till the Lord Chief Juſtice demanded a categorical Anſwer, Whether his Illneſs, or Inſanity of Mind, was any otherwiſe, than from Fits, or walking in his Sleep? The Witneſs, after being aſked the Queſtion ſix or ſeven times, with ſome Heſitation anſwered in the Affirmative.

Then Mr. Reile, a Country Farmer, was produced and ſworn, and ſaid the Priſoner came to his Houſe, ſeven Miles from Manchester, ſix Months before the Rebels came there, to be retired, and take Phyſick for his Illneſs; that he did ſeveral frantick Tricks that appeared to him to be the Acts of a Lunatick; but being examined by the Sollicitor-General, what particular Inſtances he could give, he ſaid, one Day he adviſed him to plow the Field the wrong way, but could not remember any other Acts of Frenzy; but inſiſted, that he uſed to walk up and down in the Day-time melancholy, and ſometimes walked in his Sleep.

Jane Richardſon was produced and ſworn, who depoſeth, That ſhe lived a Servant-maid with the Priſoner ſeveral Years; that he was very fond of his Wife, and that in his Frenzy he uſed to come into her Room, and without Provocation tear off her Cap, and pull her by the Hair of her Head; that he uſed to be diſtracted a Week together, ſometimes would go into his Wife's Chamber, when ſhe was in Bed, and pull off all the Cloaths, and fling them about the Room; and that at Manchester, he had jumped out of the Window; ſo that they contrived Straps to tie him down in his Bed.

[Here ſhe opened a Handkerchief with two Setts of Straps, and ſhewed them to the Court.]

Theſe Straps, ſays ſhe, I made myſelf; one Sett we kept at home, to tie him down in his Bed at Nights, to prevent him from hurting himſelf, or any Body elſe; and the other Sett he carried with him when he intended to lay Abroad; that when the Rebels came to Manchester, and ſome of them in his Parlour, ſhe went into the Room to aſk him how he did; upon which he got up, and pulled the Cap off her Head, and that ſhe thought him a Lunatick. She farther added, That his Wife, on her Death-bed, deſired, that ſhe (the Witneſs) would live with her Huſband, on account of his Weakneſs of Mind, to take Care of him; but on account of his rough Uſage to her, ſhe had ſome Thoughts of leaving him juſt before the Rebels came to Manchester: She likewiſe added, that the Priſoner's Illneſs had increaſed ſince the Death of his Child.

The Counſel for the Crown not being apprized that the Priſoner would make ſuch a Defence, occaſioned ſome Debate, whether they ſhould examine more Witneſſes, and then agreed they had a Right to examine Witneſſes ſo far as to prove the Priſoner Compos Mentis, from the time of entering into the Rebellion, to the time of his being taken Priſoner at Culloden.

Sir John Strange then called Samuel Maddox; but firſt obſerved to the Court and Jury, that to him the Priſoner appeared to be the wiſeſt Man in the Manchester Regiment, for nothing but Madmen would enter into ſuch a Rebellion againſt ſo good and merciful a Prince, who had violated no Man's Property, and who, during a long Reign, had never invaded the Rights and Liberties of the Subject; but if an Inſtance could be given of the Wiſdom of any of thoſe People, who had madly engaged in the Rebellion, it was the Priſoner, who refuſed to ſtay with the others at Carliſle, where there was all the Probability that could be of their being taken by the Duke of Cumberland, to be delivered up to the Juſtice of their Country, ſome of whom had already been executed, and more like to undergo the ſame Fate, which the Priſoner hoped to avoid by the Retreat he made with the Rebels into Scotland.

Samuel Maddox being re-examined, ſaid, That the Priſoner was his Captain, and inveigled him into the Rebel Army; that being ſhort of Money, and diſcontented, the Priſoner gave him a Guinea; that he never knew the Priſoner out of his Mind; that often he uſed to ſend to Maddox's Maſter, who was an Apothecary, for Medicines that were cooling, which he apprehended to be for no other uſe, than after hard Drinking; that the Priſoner had ſometimes been afflicted with Fits, but never to continue ſo as to deprive him of his Senſes, ſo as not to know whether he was, or was not, engaging in a rebellious Act.

My Lord Chief Juſtice then ſummed up the Evidence in a very learned Manner, and explained the Quotations out of Hale's Pleas of the Crown; and without going out, the Jury brought the Priſoner in Guilty.

James Bradſhaw, aged 29 Years, was deſcended from very ſubſtantial and reputable Parents, his Father being a large Dealer at Manchester in Lancaſhire, who having but an only Child, (this unfortunate Perſon) he gave him a liberal Education, by putting him to the Free School, where he learnt Writing and Arithmetick, and made a conſiderable Progreſs in the Claſſicks. His Father then ſent him up to London, James chuſing to be a Tradeſman rather than go to the Univerſity, of which he had his Choice; and accordingly was bound Apprentice to Mr. Charles Worral, an eminent Manchester Factor at the Golden Ball in Lawrence-Lane near Cheapſide, where he continued ſix Years, well reſpected by his Maſter and the Cuſtomers, being very diligent and obliging in the Buſineſs; and by the young Gentlemen in the Neighbourhood, and through the whole Circle of his Acquaintance was very well beloved, being a very facetious, good-natured young Fellow. In the ſixth Year of his Time, a young Lady, Daughter of Mr. Waggſtaff, a wealthy Gentleman of Manchester, coming to London to ſee ſome of her Acquaintance as well as the Faſhions and Curioſities of this Place, Mr. Bradſhaw had frequent Opportunities of viſiting her, and waiting upon her to all the gay and polite Places of Diverſion which this Place afforded; he at length informed her of his Affection for her, and that his Intentions were honourable; if ſhe could like him for a Huſband, he ſhould think himſelf the moſt happy Man in the World: After ſeveral Overtures and Addreſſes of this Sort, the young Lady kindly anſwered, that if both their Parents approved of it, ſhe would conſider on it; and Mr. Bradſhaw growing very much in her Favour, ſhe deſired him to write to Manchester about it, which he did accordingly; but before he received an Anſwer to his Letter, he had Advice that his Father, who had been ſome time in a bad State of Health, was ſo very ill, that his Life was deſpaired of. On this he determined to go down to Manchester; and acquainting his Maſter with his Intention, and of his Father's Illneſs, Mr. Worral generouſly conſented thereto; and moreover told him, that if his Father did not get over his Illneſs, or continued ſo long ill, that his Abſence might be prejudicial to the Buſineſs, he ſhould be at his Liberty with reſpect to ſerving out the Remainder of his Time and, that he ſhould be glad to ſee him well ſettled where there was a good eſtabliſhed Trade. Soon after his Arrival at Manchester his Father expired, and left him in Poſſeſſion of a conſiderable Fortune to carry it on; and after he had made a decent Burial for his Father, he then renewed his Addreſſes to Miſs Waggſtaff, and in a little time was married to her, with whom he had a handſome Fortune, and an accompliſhed Lady ſufficient to make any reaſonable or prudent Man happy, in the State of Matrimony.

Not long after he entered into Partnerſhip with Mr. James Dawſon, a Manchester Warehouſeman, near the Axe-Inn in Aldermanbury. In about two Years time he was ſo unfortunate as to loſe his Wife, which it was believed affected him ſo as ſometimes to cauſe an Inſanity of Mind, and at other times, in his lucid Intervals, he appeared a bright Wit; but he gave himſelf up to the keeping of Company, whereby he contracted an Acquaintance with Jeſuits and Popiſh Prieſts (for in thoſe Principles he had been always educated), from whom he imbibed the Principles of Jacobitiſm more ſtrongly, and from time to time contracted ſuch an Affection to the Cauſe of the Pretender and his Adherents, as to declare publickly (ſoon after the Pretender landed) amongſt his Aſſociates, that he would embrace the firſt firſt Opportunity to ſerve the Cauſe. When the Pretender came to Manchester, he with ſeveral others of the ſame Principles, waited on that mock Prince, and tendered his Service to him; who finding Mr. Bradſhaw to be a young Gentleman of a good Family and Fortune, and of ſome Intereſt, conferred on him the Truſt of a Captain of a Regiment to be raiſed in Manchester, under the Command of Col. Townley, who was ſince executed on Kennington-Common, for High-Treaſon; and Mr. Bradſhaw had no ſooner got his Commiſſion, than he went about Manchester, and the neighbouring Villages, to recruit for the ſame Regiment, in which he had ſuch Succeſs, that he raiſed a Number of Men for the Service of the ſaid Pretender, by whom he was greatly careſſed, and at whoſe Levee he often attended, and was conſulted with in ſeveral of their Councils of War. He afterwards marched in a gallant Manner at the Head of his Company with the Rebels to Derby, and accompanied them in their Flight back to Manchester, when they heard the Duke was at their Heels, and from thence to Carliſle, where he waited (with the reſt of the Officers) on the Young Pretender to take his Leave of him, it being agreed, that ſome Part of their Army ſhould ſtay at Carliſle to ſecure a Retreat for the Rebels; and then he inſiſted that he would not ſtay behind under the Command of Col. Townley, with whom there was no good Harmony; for ſome Miſunderſtanding happened between them, on Account of a young Lady, which they had ſeverally addreſſed at a Ball, which was kept at the Bull-Head Inn in Manchester, for the neighbouring Gentry; and indeed this Animoſity was increaſed by the haughty Behaviour of Col. Townley, who now imagined the other to be under his Dominion, and uſed often to put Mr. Bradſhaw upon Duty that was diſagreeable to him.

What gave Mr. Bradſhaw the greateſt Diſquiet was, that when the Pretender propoſed to raiſe a Regiment of Horſe, of which Townley was to be Colonel, Townley was labouring for Thomas Deacon (executed with Townley, &c. at Kennington) to ſucceed him in the Command; and ſoon after the Rebel Army had left Carliſle, Bradſhaw went away incognito, and joined them again in Scotland, where he liſted himſelf a Volunteer in Lord Elcho's Horſe, commonly called amongſt the Rebels the firſt Troop of Guards; and he continued with the Rebels in that Rank, until he was taken Priſoner at the Battle of Culloden.

As to Mr. Bradſhaw's Conduct in general, even from the Time of his engaging in the Rebellion, and till within a ſhort Time of his Death, it muſt be confeſſed, that his Behaviour has been all of a Piece. Nothing but Infatuation could determine a Man to ſhut up his Shop, leave his Buſineſs and Effects, and ruin (with all honeſt Men) his Character, to follow a wicked and rebellious Multitude: And truly for what?——To be made a Captain!———Nay, it is Matter of Fact, that he was worth ſeveral thouſand Pounds, his Trade flouriſhing, and his Credit well eſtabliſhed in the World; yet was he ſo hearty in the good old Cauſe (as he called it), that he advanced Caſh out of his own Pocket to ſupport his ragged Company.

Soon after the Battle of Culloden-Moor, which put a happy End to this wicked and unnatural Rebellion, an Order was ſent from the Secretary of State's Office for bringing to London ſuch of the Rebels as had been moſt active in the Young Pretender's Service, and amongſt thoſe that were put on Ship-board was Mr. Bradſhaw: There he behaved with the greateſt Inſolence imaginable, and did not ſcruple voluntarily to tell thoſe Officers belonging to his Majeſty who had the Care of him, that they could not hurt him, for he was above their Cut, or Words which carried the ſame Meaning.

When the Veſſel on board of which they embarked arrived in the River, they were (viz. 43.) committed to the New Gaol in Southwark, by his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle's Warrant, and continued Priſoners there till the neceſſary Proceſſes were prepared for their Proſecution.

About the Time the Manchester Rebels were ordered for Execution (Bradſhaw being at that Time a Priſoner in the New Gaol, Southwark), the Night before they ſuffered, he ſpoke to Mr. Townley and Mr. Berwick in a diſreſpectful Manner, ſaying, I find you muſt ſhortly march into other Quarters. Mr. Townley made no Anſwer; but Mr. Berwick, always remarkable for his Jocularity, ſaid, "Jemmy, you need not triumph at "our Misfortunes, for, take my Word on't, you will find Mocking is "catching."

Bradſhaw, the Night preceding the Execution of the Manchester Rebel Officers, drank very freely, and ſeemed quite unconcerned at the melancholy Fate which was inevitably next Day to be the Conſequence of their wicked Undertaking. Mr. Berwick told Mr. Chadwick, that Bradſhaw ſeemed to reflect on them, rather than pity or condole with them. Mr. Chadwick replied, "What can you expect from him? I am only ſorry "that it reflects ſo much Diſhonour on us all, as to admit ſuch a Fellow "an Officer in the Regiment."

In the Morning of the Execution of the Manchester Rebels, about ſeven o'Clock, when the Sledges came in to draw the Priſoners to Execution, Bradſhaw was walking about the Gaol-Yard in his Morning Grown, with ſome Gentlemen, who came thither either out of Curioſity, or to take Leave of their dying Friends, and with a ſneering and ungentleman-like Air, ſaid, (pointing to the Sledges) "Don't you think theſe Things are "very well contrived? Upon my Word, they will do exceeding well for "the Purpoſe;"—and then raked amongſt the Straw in the Sledges, telling the Drivers, that if they did not get more Straw, the Lads (meaning the Priſoners) would be wet; and many other ſilly Expreſſions, which, if inſerted, the Reader would hardly credit.

When he was called upon his Trial, he appeared very gay, in a new Suit of Green Cloth Cloaths, and ſtood very unconcerned at the Bar, minding very little what was ſworn againſt him: But when the Evidence was cloſed, and ſummed up to the Jury, and they brought him in Guilty, he was quite thunder-ſtruck, and changed Colour very much, and was ſo feeble that he could ſcarcely walk from the Bar.

His Conviction and Condemnation made but little Alteration in him; for though he was not ſo ludicrous as he had been all along, he ſupplied that Part with an undaunted Aſſurance, and ill-grounded Hopes of a Reprieve, till his Maſter informed him on Tueſday Night, that all Endeavours that had been uſed to ſave his Life were ineffectual; and perſuaded him to make his Peace with God.

He was executed as a Traitor on Friday, November 28, 1746, at Kennington-Common.

XXXVIII. The Trial of Sir John Wedderburn, Bart. at St. Margaret's-Hill, Southwark, November 4, 1746, before the Lord Chief Juſtice Lee, Sir Martin Wright, Sir James Reynolds, Sir Michael Foſter, Knts. and Mr. Baron Clive, for High-Treaſon.

SIR John Wedderburn, Bart. was indicted for High-Treaſon; which Treaſon was laid to be committed on the 16th of April, in the 20th Year of his preſent Majeſty's Reign.

Andrew Johnſon ſaid, He ſaw Sir John with the Officers of Lord Strathallan's Horſe, in plain Cloaths, and a Sword by his Side, after the Battle of Preſton Pans, free and not forced.

John Falkener ſaid, He ſaw the Priſoner at Holyrood-Houſe, amongſt the Officers in the Rebel Army, in plain Cloaths, with a Small-ſword by his Side.

Roger MacDonald ſaid, He ſaw the Priſoner at Aberdeen, in a plain Dreſs and Small-ſword (but no Cockade) with the Officers of Lord Strathallan's Horſe, and that he lodged with Mr. Johnſon at Aberdeen, without a Billet.

James Mortimer ſaw him at Aberdeen, with the Officers of Lord Ogilvie's Regiment, under no Reſtraint or Force.

John Bruce ſaid, That he paid Sir John Ten Shillings for Ale-exciſe, and Twelve Shillings for Malt-exciſe; and unleſs he had paid it to him, the Rebels threatened to ſeize his Copper; for which Exciſe he took Receipts, but did not produce them, becauſe he left them at Home.

Henry Edwards depoſed, That he ſaw the Priſoner the latter End of October, at old Gordon of Glenbucket's Houſe at Perth; that Sir John declared, he was not concerned in the Rebellion, that he had a Commiſſion ſent to him to collect the Exciſe; but it was in his Father's Name, and that he would go to Edinburgh to get it rectified; and he accordingly did go to Edinburgh, and about the Middle of November returned to Perth, where a Drum went about the Town proclaiming, that all Brewers, and Dealers in Leather, Candles, and other exciſeable Goods, ſhould go to Sir John and pay the Exciſe, on Pain of Military Execution.

Then ſeveral Receipts for Money paid to him for Exciſe, were produced, and proved to be Sir John Wedderburn's Hand-writing for Exciſe, dated progreſſively from the 25th of November, to the 8th of January following.

Alexander Ruſſell depoſed, That he ſaw the Priſoner, Sir John, at Holy-Rood Houſe, after the Battle of Preſton-Pans, in a plain Dreſs, and a Small-ſword by his Side, and that the Young Pretender iſſued an Order, forbidding any Body from carrying Arms, but thoſe who belonged to his Army; and that if Sir John had not belonged to the Rebels, he dared not wear a Sword.

Captain Eyre ſaid, The Priſoner acknowledged himſelf a private Man in the Pretender's Life-Guards.

Andrew Robinſon ſaid, He was a Servant to Major Glaſgoe, and ſaw the Priſoner at Dundee with the Rebels, and at Burroughburgh, going to the Young Pretender's Quarters; that the Priſoner collected the Exciſe from ſix Perſons in this Witneſs's Preſence.

John Adamſon ſaid, he paid Exciſe to the Priſoner twice; and that the Priſoner had a Guard with him at his Quarters, where he received the Exciſe Duty.

The Priſoner's Defence.

The Counſel for the Priſoner alledged, by the Seventh of William the Third, No Overt-Acts of High-Treaſon ſhall be proved, unleſs the ſame is laid in the Indictment; and the bare Collecting the Exciſe was no Overt-Act, without they could prove him armed in the Rebellion; that the Priſoner's Father did collect the Exciſe for his preſent Majeſty King George the Second; that the Rebels came and took his Horſe out of his Park, and that he went after them to get them back again, where they ſeized him, and detained him a Priſoner, and forced him to continue with them to collect the Exciſe.

George Waters, Working-maſon, was the firſt Witneſs examined for the Priſoner, and he depoſed, That the Rebels came to Sir John's Houſe in September 1745, and took away three of his Horſes, for the Pretender's Service; when Sir John ſaid, That he would not let his Horſes go for ſuch a Uſe; and went to get them back again; and that ſome of the Rebels told him, if he would not give them freely, he himſelf ſhould go with them, and ſo forced him with them; that this Evidence went to ſee him, when he found him guarded by the Rebels, ſo cloſe, that he could not go out of the Room without Liberty from Lord Strathallan; that ſome time after he came to his Houſe, and ſtaid four Days at Home; that afterwards one hundred Men came armed, who guarded his Houſe and carried him away; that the Witneſs ſaid, he ſaw him at the Dee, carried away by the MacIntoſhes; that afterwards he came from the Dee to his Houſe, and ſtaid at his Houſe 'till the fifth of February, when forty or fifty Men came and preſſed him, and carried him to Elgin-moore, in the Middle of March. The Witneſs further ſaid, That his Brother was Collector of the Exciſe at Inverneſs for King George; that he had known the Priſoner two Years; that he always wore a Small-ſword, and that that he was a Priſoner at his own Houſe every Day, from November to the Beginning of February.

David Hutchenſon depoſed, That he was a Servant to the Priſoner Sir John Wedderburn; that five armed Men came and ſeized ſeveral of his Horſes in his Park, and that his Lady went to them, and prevailed on them to releaſe a Mare; that they abuſed her and called her Rebel-Bitch; that they ſeized the Priſoner when he went after his Horſes, to get them back, and carried him to Lord Ogilvie's; that the Priſoner returned, and a hundred armed Men came and retook him Priſoner, and threatened to ſtab him with their Bayonets.

The Jury, without going out, brought him in Guilty. Death.

Sir John Wedderburn's Caſe *.

"THE Overt-Acts were laid at Aberdeen, in the Shire of Aberdeen. It "was proved by two Witneſſes, that he was with the Rebels at "Aberdeen; and by thoſe and other Witneſſes, that he was at divers "other Places with them.

"The King's Counſel called Witneſſes, who proved likewiſe, that "he was appointed by the Pretender's Son, Collector of the Exciſe; "and that he did actually collect the Aſſize in ſeveral Places where the "Rebel Army lay, by virtue of that Appointment, for the Uſe of the "Rebel Army.

"The Priſoner's Counſel inſiſted, that this Sort of Evidence ought "not to be admitted. For though collecting Money for the Service of "Rebels is an Overt-Act of High-Treaſon, yet it not being laid in the "Indictment, no Evidence ought to be given of it; and they relied on "the Statute of 7 K. W. But in this they were over-ruled, upon the "Reaſons given in the Caſe of Deacon †."

Sir John Wedderburn, Bart. was the Son of Alexander Wedderburn, of Aberdeenſhire, whoſe Family have been long reſident in that Part of Scotland, ſeveral of whoſe Anceſtors are honourably mentioned in the Scottiſh Hiſtories, eſpecially Sir David Wedderburn, who was killed at the Battle of Muſſelburgh. The late Sir Alexander, Father to this unfortunate Gentleman, was greatly eſteemed for his known Attachment to the Revolution Principles, and the Hanover Succeſſion; inſomuch that the Government thought proper to make him a Receiver of the Exciſe, and other Duties, which, with a ſmall Eſtate he had near Dundee, enabled him to bring up a numerous Family; but being of a liberal and generous Spirit, he left the Eſtate incumbered, ſo that when Sir John arrived to his Honour of a Baronet, he had nothing to ſupport it; though on the Expectation of having an Eſtate to deſcend to him free, he married a young Lady of a reputable Family in his Neighbourhood; for on his Father's Death the Eſtate was deſtined to be ſold, in order to ſatisfy the Father's Debts; that when Sir John found nothing coming in order to ſupport his Family, he retired to a ſmall Farm, with a thatched Houſe and Clay Floor; which he occupied with great Induſtry, and thereby made a laborious but ſtarving Shift to ſupport a Wife and nine Children, who uſed to run about in the Fields bareſoot.

The extreme Poverty of Sir John, and his numerous Dependants, overcame Sir John's Duty to all kind of Society, and the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment; and being tempted with a Commiſſion from the Pretender to collect the Exciſe, yet in ſome Meaſure forced to do it, Sir John's Loyalty at laſt gave way to his Poverty; though it is admitted, that he never did any Acts of Violence to his Majeſty's Subjects, any other than receiving the Duties ariſing by the Exciſe, having never bore Arms, or cauſed any one to enliſt into the Rebel Service.

After Sir John was made a Priſoner, he was delivered to the Care of Captain Eyre, an Officer appointed by the Duke of Cumberland, to take charge of the Rebel Officers, who treated him with great Humanity, according to his Birth and Dignity; and conveyed him on board one of his Majeſty's Ships of War to the River Thames, from whence he was carried with the other Officers, to the New-Gaol in Southwark, where he was lodged in the Maſter-Side of the Gaol with Sir James Kinloch, Mr. Hamilton, and others, during which Time he behaved like a Gentleman; being plentifully ſupplied, and indeed flattered himſelf with being acquitted, as he thought he had not armed himſelf in the Rebellion, but was very much ſhocked when the Jury found him Guilty; and after Sentence of Death, his Behaviour was conſiſtent with the Character of a Gentleman, being ſenſible of his Error, and the Calamity he had brought on himſelf, his inoffenſive Lady, and innocent Poſterity.

He was executed at Kennington-Common as a Traitor, Nov. 28, 1746.

XXXIX. Proceedings at the Court of King's-Bench, Weſtminſter, 21 Nov. 1746, againſt Charles Ratcliffe, Eſq. on a Conviction and Attainder of High-Treaſon in May 1716, before ſpecial Commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer ‡.

HE was concerned with his Brother, the late Earl of Derwentwater, in the Rebellion of 1715; and in May 1716, was convicted and attainted of High-Treaſon before ſpecial Commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, purſuant to the Act of the firſt of the late King. While he was under Sentence of Death, and probably before the Act of general Pardon of the third of the late King paſſed, (See the 45th Section of the Act) he made his Eſcape out of Newgate, and got over to France.

At the latter End of the Year 1745, he was, with ſome other Officers, French, Scotch, and Iriſh, taken on the Coaſt on board a French Ship of War; which was loaden with Arms, Ammunition, and other warlike Stores, bound, as was ſuppoſed, for Scotland, where the Rebels were at that Time in Arms.

On Friday the 21ſt of November 1746, he was brought to the Bar by virtue of a Habeas Corpus, directed to the Conſtable of the Tower, or his Deputy; and the Record of his Conviction and Attainder was at the ſame Time removed thither by Certiorari.

The Habeas Corpus, with the Return, and alſo the Certiorari and Record of the Conviction and Attainder being read, the Subſtance of the Record was opened to him in Engliſh by the Secondary on the Crown Side; who then aſked him what he had to ſay why Execution ſhould not be done upon him according to the Judgment. He prayed that Counſel might be aſſigned him, and named Mr. Ford and Mr. Fodrell; who were accordingly aſſigned his Counſel.

They prayed a few Days Time that they might have an Opportunity of knowing from the Priſoner himſelf the Truth and Merits of his Caſe, which was granted.

They alſo prayed a Copy of the Record, which was denied them. But the Officer, by the Direction of the Court, read over the Indictment a ſecond Time very diſtinctly, and the Priſoner's Counſel took Notes of it, and the Priſoner was ordered up on Monday next.

His Counſel moved for a Rule of Court that they might have Acceſs to their Client at all ſeaſonable Times. But his Solicitor admitting that he had obtained a Warrant from a Secretary of State to the ſame Purpoſe, the Court did not make any Rule in the Caſe; nor did the Counſel preſs it; but the Court declared, That if the Secretary's Warrant had not been obtained, they would have made ſuch Rule; for the Priſoner is now the Priſoner of this Court; and the Lieutenant of the Tower is, as far as concerneth the Priſoner's Caſe, a Miniſter of this Court, and ſubject to the Rules of it.

November 24, 1746. The Priſoner was brought to the Bar, and being again arraigned, he, ore tenus, pleaded that he is not the Perſon mentioned in the Record before the Court. The Attorney-General, ore tenus, replied, the Priſoner is the ſame Charles Ratcliffe mentioned in the Record, and this I am ready to verify; and Iſſue was joined.

The Priſoner's Counſel preſſed ſtrongly to put off the Trial of this Iſſue, upon an Affidavit of the Priſoner, which was ſworn in Court, that two material Witneſſes named in the Affidavit are abroad; one of them at Bruſſels, and the other at Saint Germains; and that he believeth they will attend the Trial, if a reaſonable Time be allowed for that Purpoſe. But the Court refuſed to put off the Trial, and a Venire was awarded returnable inſtanter. For, ſaid the Cout, this Proceeding is in Nature of an Inqueſt of Office, and hath been always conſidered as an inſtantaneous Proceeding; unleſs proper Grounds for poſtponing the Trial be laid before the Court. It was ſo conſidered in the Caſe of the King againſt Barkſtead and others (Keil. 13, 1 Lev. 61. 1. Sid. 72.) upon the ſame Iſſue as this is; a Venire was awarded, and a § Jury returned and ſworn inſtanter to try that Iſſue. It was ſo conſidered likewiſe in the Caſe of the ‖ King againſt Roger Johnſon in this Court, Michaelmas the Second of this King.

If Mr. Ratcliffe hath any thing to offer, which may give the Court reaſonable Grounds to believe that his Plea is any thing more than a Pretence to delay Execution, we are ready to hear him; the ſingle Iſſue is, whether he be or be not the Perſon mentioned in this Record. This is a Fact well known to him, and if he is not the Perſon, he might, if he had pleaſed, have made that Matter Part of his Affidavit; he may do ſo ſtill if he can do it with Truth, And if he refuſeth to give the Court this Satisfaction, touching the Truth of his Plea, the Court doth him no manner of Injuſtice in denying him the Time he prayeth.

As the Jurymen were called to the Book, the Priſoner challenged one of them, and inſiſted on his Right to a peremptory Challenge; but his Challenge was over-ruled. For though there are ſome Opinions in the Books (S. P. C. 163. Co. L. 157.) that in collateral Iſſues of this Kind, the Priſoner hath a peremptory Challenge, yet the later and better Opinion is, that he hath not; and the modern Practice hath gone accordingly.

Chief

Chief Juſtice Hale (2. Hale. 267.) ſaith, "In caſe of an Iſſue joined "on Error in Fact aſſigned for reverſing an Outlawry, the Priſoner hath "no peremptory Challenge;" and in p. 378. of the ſame Book, it ſeemeth to be admitted as a general Rule, that in Inqueſts of Office (and the preſent Trial is in nature of an Inqueſt of Office) the Priſoner hath no peremptory Challenge. In Barkſtead's Caſe cited before, (1 Lev. 61. 1 Keb. 244.) the Priſoners were not permitted to challenge peremptorily; and in the Caſe of Roger Johnſon, which hath likewiſe been already cited, the Court declared that the Priſoner had no peremptory Challenge.

The Jury being ſworn to try the Iſſue, the Indictment was read over to them in Engliſh for their Information as to the Name and Addition of the Priſoner; and the Evidence being concluded, the Jury withdrew for a few Minutes, and then returned with their Verdict, that the Priſoner at the Bar is the ſame Charles Ratcliffe that is mentioned in the Record.

Note. The Priſoner, during the Trial of this Iſſue, had the Aſſiſtance of his Counſel; who croſs-examined the King's Witneſſes, and obſerved fully upon the Evidence.

After the Verdict was brought in, the Priſoner's Counſel took notice of the Act of general Pardon paſſed in the third of the late King; and ſaid, that poſſibly their Client might upon Conſideration be found to be intitled to the Benefit of it; and concluded with a Motion, that the Court, before they award Execution, would give them ſome Time to conſider the Act, and to be informed by their Client touching the Circumſtances of his Caſe, that they might be able to ſubmit his Caſe to the Opinion of the Court, how far he is, or is not intitled to the Benefit of the Act.

But the Court declared, that the Priſoner having once pleaded in Bar of Execution, and that Plea having been falſified by the Verdict, his Plea is peremptory, and the Verdict concluſive; and nothing now remaineth but for the Court to award Execution.

Mr. Juſtice Foſter was ſatisfied that the Principle the Court went upon is a good general Rule, but he thought it not univerſally true. He conſidered the Caſe of a parliamentary Pardon as an Exception to it; for ſurely the Court will never, in any State of a Cauſe, award Execution upon a Man who plainly appeareth to be pardoned. And therefore he thought that if any Perſon, whether as Counſel for the Priſoner, or as Amicus Curiæ, will now ſhew that the Priſoner is intitled to the Benefit of the Act, he ought to be heard. But to this it was anſwered by the Chief Juſtice, That the Act of Pardon containing many Exceptions, both as to Perſons and Crimes, the Party who would take the Benefit of it muſt plead it ſpecially with all proper Averments; ſo as to ſhew that he is not within any of the Exceptions, according to the Reſolution (Carth. 131.) in the Earl of Saliſbury's Caſe.

The Counſel for the Crown did not urge either of theſe Points againſt the Priſoner. And I have been ſince informed that, in favour of Life, they were determined to wave them; and were provided with Evidence, then attending in the Hall, to prove (which was the Truth of the Caſe) that the Priſoner, after his Attainder, made his Eſcape out of Newgate, which brought him within the Excepion in the 45th Section of the Act. And the Priſoner's Counſel being apprized of this by the Counſel for the Crown in a Converſation between them at the Bar, thought it in vain to preſs their Motion any farther. And Execution was accordingly awarded, and a Rule made that it be done on Monday the 8th of December. And a Writ was ordered to the Lieutenant of the Tower to deliver the Priſoner to the Sheriff of Middleſex on that Day; and another to the Sheriff to receive him, and to cauſe Execution to be done.

N. B. Since the Priſoner's Counſel, after ſufficient Time allowed them to inform themſelves of the true State of his Caſe, had nothing to offer to induce the Court to think that their Client was intitled to the Benefit of the Act, only that poſſibly upon further Conſideration, he may appear to be ſo intitled, there was certainly no Room to delay the awarding Execution upon ſo ſlight a Suggeſtion from the Bar. And Mr. Ratcliffe had no Injuſtice done him in that reſpect.

He was beheaded on Tower Hill on the Day mentioned in the Rule.

The Award of Execution in Mr. Ratcliffe's Caſe was agreeable to the Precedent in the Caſe (Cro. Jac. 495. Hutt. 21.) of Sir Walter Raleigh. He was convicted and attainted at Wincheſter before ſpecial Commiſſioners, and being brought into the King's Bench by Habeas Corpus, Execution was there awarded on the former Judgment; Judgment not being pronounced afreſh, it having been pronounced before.

In the Caſes of H. Stafford (1 H. VII. 23, 24, 25. 1. Lev. 61. 1 Sid. 72.) and of Barkſtead, Okey and Corbet, (State Trials, Vol. VIII.) who were attainted by Act of Parliament, the Tenour of the Acts was removed by Certiorari into Chancery, and ſent thence by Mittimus into the King's Bench: and the Chief Juſtice pronounced the uſual Judgment as in Caſes of High-Treaſon.

There was no Proceeding of this Kind in the Caſe of the Duke of Monmouth, who was attainted by Act of Parliament 1 Jac. II. For the Action at Sedgemoor happened on the 8th of July 1685, which in that Year fell out to be the laſt Day of Trinity Term; and on the 15th he was executed. But that was a Time of great Heat and Violence, and few Things then done ought to be drawn into Example

N. B. The Act of the Third of the late King giveth the Party Liberty to take Advantage of it on the general Iſſue without ſpecially pleading the ſame; (2 W. and M.) and ſo doth that on which the Earl of Saliſbury relied. The Court therefore could not in the Earl's Caſe, ground itſelf on the Rule of Pleading laid down in Carthew *; though the Rule might poſſibly be mentioned obiter by ſome of the Judges. I think the true Ground the Court went upon, which indeed the Reporter himſelf ſeemeth to hint at but very darkly, was, that the Earl having been committed by the Houſe of Peers upon an Impeachment by the Commons for High-Treaſon, this Court cannot allow him the Benefit of the Act; it hath no Cognizance of the Crime he ſtandeth charged with; the Matter lieth before another and higher Judicature, and thither his Lordſhip muſt reſort.

And there he afterwards had the full Benefit of the Act without being put to plead it. For on the of October 1690, upon reading the Earl's Petition, ſetting forth that he had been long a Priſoner in the Tower, notwithſtanding the late Act of free and General Pardon, and praying to be diſcharged, the Lords ordered the Judges to attend on the Monday following to give their Opinions, whether the Earl be pardoned by the ſaid Act; on the 6th the Judges delivered their Opinions, that if his Offences were committed before the 13th of February 1688, and not in Ireland, or beyond the Seas, he is pardoned. Whereupon it was reſolved that he be admitted to Bail; and the next Day he was bailed, and on the 30th of October (See the Journals of the Lords) he and his Sureties were diſcharged from their Recognizances.

Charles Ratcliffe, Eſq. according to a Rule of the Court of King's-Bench †, was executed on Little Tower-Hill; whither, two Troops of Life Guards, and one Troop of Horſe Grenadier Guards, and a Battalion of Foot Guards, marched about eight in the Morning. The Horſe lined the Way from the Scaffold to Iron-Gate, and the Foot with ſome of the Horſe encompaſſed the Scaffold. About Ten, the Block, covered with Black, with a Cuſhion, and two Sacks of Sawduſt, were brought up, and the Block fixed; and ſoon after the Coffin of the unhappy Gentleman, covered with Black Velvet, and having eight Handles, but no Plate upon it, was placed on the Scaffold.

In the mean Time, Mr. Alderman Winterbottom and Mr. Alderman Aſſop, the two Sheriffs, with their Under-Sheriffs, met at the Mitre Tavern in Fenchurch-ſtreet, and from thence proceeded, the Under-Sheriffs in a Mourning-Coach, and the Sheriffs in their Chariots, to the lower End of the Minories, where they were met by their Officers, who marched before them till they came over-againſt the Victualling-Office, where they ſtopt, and then the Under-Sheriffs went down to the Eaſt-Gate of the Tower, which is next to Iron-Gate, when getting out of the Coach, they went up to the Gate, and ſeeing the Warders thro' the Gate, they demanded Admittance to the Lieut. Governor of the Tower; upon which the Gate was opened, and they went in, and in about ten Minutes returned, and went into the Mourning-Coach again, which waited for them; and in a ſhort time after, the Priſoner was brought in a Landau, out at the Eaſt-Gate, and then the Proceſſion began as follows; Firſt, the Sheriffs Officers, then the Mourning-Coach in which were the two Under-Sheriffs with their Wands; then the Landau with the Priſoner, and the Officers of the Tower who had him in Cuſtody; the Landau was guarded by a party of Foot-Guards with their Bayonets fixed. Thus they proceeded up Little Tower-Hill, till they came over-againſt the Victualling-Office, where the Sheriffs waited to receive him; and where the Priſoner got out of the Landau, and was put into the Mourning-Coach, which carried him about 100 Yards further, to a Booth built on purpoſe to repoſe himſelf in, and hung with Black, at the Foot of the Stairs of the Scaffold. When he got out of the Landau, ſeeing ſome Gentlemen he knew, he paid his Compliments in a very genteel Manner, and ſmiled, and coming to the Side of the Mourning-Coach, he aſked the Officers who ſtood to wait, whether he was to go in there? And being anſwered that he was, he only ſaid, It is well, and ſtepped in directly. Being come to the Booth, attended with the Sheriffs, he ſtaid there about ten Minutes, which he ſpent chiefly in his Devotions, ſpeaking but very little to any body. He then walked up upon the Scaffold with great Calmneſs, being dreſſed in a Scarlet Coat, with Gold Buttons, the Sleeves faced with black Velvet, Scarlet Waiſtcoat trimmed with Gold Lace, a Scarlet Pair of Breeches, and white Silk Stockings, and his Hat with a white Feather round it. He ſoon aſked for the Executioner, who coming to him, he took a Parcel of Gold out of his Pocket, and gave it him, ſaying, I am but a poor Man, there's ten Guineas for you; if I had more I would give it you; and I deſire you to do your Execution ſo as to put me to the leaſt Miſery you can. He then kneeled

* The Rule laid down in Carthew from Plowden is laid down in the ſame Latitude in many of the old Books; but it is to be obſerved, that the Acts of General Pardon in thoſe Times, had no Clauſes enabling the Party to avail himſelf of the Pardon on the General Iſſue without ſpecially pleading the ſame. The firſt Act which hath that Clauſe, that I have met with, is the Act of Oblivion (12th Car. II.) and all Acts of general Pardon ſince that Time have had Clauſes to the ſame Purpoſe. Foſter. p. 45.

† On Nov. 21, Charles Ratcliffe, Eſq. (who was taken on board a French Ship bound for Scotland, with Fitz James's Horſe) was brought under a ſtrong Guard from the Tower to the King's-Bench Bar, Weſtminſter, in order to prove him the Perſon convicted of High-Treaſon for the Rebellion in 1715; and who eſcaped out of Newgate; when his former Judgment was read to him; but he told the Court he was quite unprepared, and deſired longer Time, and prayed that Counſel might be aſſign'd him; accordingly the Court granted him Mr. Jodrell and Mr. Ford for his Counſel, and ordered him to be brought up to Weſtminſter the Monday following.

Accordingly, on that Day, Nov. 24, he was again brought to the Bar, but refuſed to hold up his Hand, or acknowledge any Juriſdiction over him, but that of the King of France, where he had lived about 30 Years, inſiſting on a Commiſſion he had in his Pocket from the French King; but on hearing his former Indictment and Conviction, which were read to him in Engliſh, he ſaid he was not the Charles Ratcliffe therein named, but that he was the Earl of Derwentwater; and his Counſel informed the Court, that this was the Plea he relied on; to which the Attorney General replied, with an Averment of his being the ſame Charles Ratcliffe; and thereupon Iſſue was joined. Then the Counſel for the Priſoner moved to put off his Trial, upon his own Affidavit (to which he had ſubſcribed himſelf the Count de Derwentwater), that two of his material Witneſſes were abroad. To which Affidavit the Counſel for the Crown objected, as not being intitled in the Cauſe before the Court, nor the two Witneſſes ſworn to be material, in the Iſſue then joined between the King and the Priſoner; and alſo, becauſe the Priſoner had not ſo much as undertaken to ſwear for himſelf that he was not the Perſon; which, as it was a Fact entirely in his own Knowledge, ought to be required of him, if he would intitle himſelf to this Favour from the Court; this being a Proceeding very different from the Trial upon a Not Guilty, in an original Proſecution on a Charge of High-Treaſon or other Crime, the Identity of the Perſon being the ſingle Fact to be enquired of, and a Caſe in which the Crown had a Right by Law to proceed in inſtanter. Upon this, the Priſoner amended his Affidavit as to the Witneſſes, but refuſed to ſupply it ſo far as to ſwear he was not the ſame Perſon. And the Court ſaid this was a new Precedent, there being no Inſtance of any Application to put off the Trial of a Queſtion of this Sort before; and that this was like an Inqueſt of Office, in Order to inform the Conſcience of the Court, and what the Publick had a Right to proceed in inſtanter: And therefore that the Priſoner ought to give all reaſonable Satisfaction to induce them to grant ſuch a Favour as he deſired, for that they could not in Conſcience and Juſtice to the Publick, indulge him, without a reaſonable Satisfaction, that his Plea was true. But the Priſoner ſtill refuſing to ſwear to the Truth of his Plea, the Jury were called, and after two or three of the Pannel were ſworn, Mr. Ratcliffe challenged the next that was called, as of Right, without aſſigning any Reaſon; but upon Debate of the Queſtion, How far he had right to challenge? the Court ſaid it had been determined before in all the later Caſes, and particularly in the Caſe of one Jordan, that the Priſoner in ſuch a Caſe as this had no peremptory Challenge: Upon which the reſt of the Jury were ſworn, and after a clear Evidence of the Identity of the Perſon on the Part of the Crown, the Priſoner producing none on his Part, the Jury withdrew about ten Minutes, and then found their Verdict, that he was the ſame Charles Ratcliffe that was convicted of Treaſon in 1716. Then the Attorney General moved to have Execution awarded againſt the Priſoner on his former Judgment; to which the Priſoner's Counſel objected, tendering a Plea of Pardon by Act of Parliament, in Bar of Execution. But the Court ſaid, as he had already pleaded ſuch a Plea as he choſe to rely on and ſtand by, and as that was found againſt him, nothing more remained for them to do at preſent, but to award Execution; and if his Counſel had any thing to offer on his behalf, they would have Time to do it before the Day of Execution: Then they ordered a Rule to be made for the proper Writs for his Execution on Dec. 8, and remanded the Priſoner to the Tower. From his Caſe, printed at that Time.

down before the Block, and putting his Hands together, made a ſhort Prayer, when two of the Warders of the Tower came to him, one of each Side of him; one of them took off his Wig, and the other put a white Cap upon his Head; and then the unhappy Criminal roſe upon his Legs, and with their Aſſiſtance pulled off his Coat and Waiſtcoat. He then turned about and took his Leave, in a reſpectful Manner, of the Sheriffs, and then untied the Collar of his Shirt, which was faſtened with a black Ribbon, and began to tuck the Collar of his Shirt down; but not being able to reach far enough behind, he deſired the Executioner to do it for him; which he did accordingly. Then, after ſaying a ſhort Prayer to himſelf, and croſſing himſelf ſeveral Times, he laid his Head down upon the Block; and deſired the Executioner to ſtrike far enough, adding theſe his laſt Words, When I ſpread my Hands thus, do you take my Head off. Which Signal he gave in leſs than half a Minute, when one Stroke of the Axe ſever'd his Head, except a Bit of Skin, which was cut aſunder at two or three Chops. The Body then fell down upon the Scaffold; and the Executioner ſearching his Pockets, found half a Guinea, a Silver Crucifix, and his Beads. Four Undertaker's-Men ſtood ready with a Piece of red Bays to receive the Head as it fell off, and the Body and Head were put into the Coffin, and conveyed in a Hearſe, to the Nagg's-Head, in Gray's-Inn-Lane, and ſoon after interr'd at St. Giles's in the Fields.

Thus fell this unhappy Man, aged 53, 30 Years within three Days after his Eſcape out of Newgate, Part of which Time he ſpent with the Pretender in Italy, but the greateſt part in France; where he married the Lady Newburgh, Relict of Levingſton, Lord Newburgh, a Scots Nobleman, by whom he had a Son, who was ſome time Priſoner with him in the Tower, and thought at firſt to be the Pretender's younger Son. He was the youngeſt Brother of James Earl of Derwentwater, who was beheaded in 1716; they both being taken at Preſton. They were the Sons of ſir Francis Ratcliffe, by the Lady Mary Tudor, natural Daughter to K. Charles II. by Mrs. Mary Davis.

Mr. Ratcliffe behaved with much more Decency at his Execution, than at the Bar of the King's-Bench, when the only Trial was, whether he was the ſame Perſon who was condemned for the Rebellion in 1715, and made his Eſcape out of Newgate: For there he behaved himſelf in an inſolent Manner, which did him no Service: But at his Execution he was calm and ſedate, and ſuffered with much Compoſure and Reſignation.

XL. Proceedings againſt Æneas Macdonald, alias Angus Macdonald, at St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark, December 10, 1747, and at the Court of King's-Bench, Eaſter Term, 21 Geo. II*.

IN the Year 1747, a Bill of Indictment was found againſt him under the ſpecial Commiſſion in Surry for the Share he had in the late Rebellion. The Indictment ran in the ſame Form as thoſe againſt the other Priſoners, without any Averrment that he was in Cuſtody before the firſt of January 1746. But the Counſel for the Crown were aware of the Exception taken in the Caſe of Mr. Townley and others, and that ſince the whole Proceeding againſt the Priſoner was ſubſequent to January 1746, the Anſwer then given would not ſerve the preſent Caſe. That Bill was therefore withdrawn before the Priſoner pleaded to it: And a new Bill, concluding with an Averrment that he was apprehended † and in Cuſtody before the firſt of January 1746, was preferred and found againſt him. On that Bill he was arraigned in July 1747, and his Trial came on the 10th of December following.

The Overt Acts charged in the Indictment were ſufficiently proved. And alſo that the Priſoner was apprehended and in Cuſtody before the firſt of January 1746.

The Counſel for the Priſoner inſiſted that he was born in the Dominions of the French King, and on this Point they put his Defence.

But apprehending that the Weight of the Evidence might be againſt them, as indeed it was, with regard to the Place of the Priſoner's Birth, they endeavoured to captivate the Jury and Byſtanders, by repreſenting the great Hardſhip of a Proſecution of this kind againſt a Perſon, who, admitting him to be a Native of Great Britain, had received his Education from his early Infancy in France; had ſpent his riper Years in a profitable Employment in that Kingdom, where all his Hopes centered. And ſpeaking of the Doctrine of natural Allegiance, they repreſented it as a ſlaviſh Principle, not likely to prevail in theſe Times; eſpecially as it ſeemed to derogate from the Principles of the Revolution.

Here the Court interpoſed and declared, that the mentioning the Caſe of the Revolution as a Caſe any way ſimilar to that of the Priſoner, ſuppoſing him to have been born in Great Britain, can ſerve no Purpoſe but to bring an Odium on that Great and Glorious Tranſaction. It never was doubted that a Subject born, taking a Commiſſion from a Foreign Prince, and committing High Treaſon, may be puniſhed as a Subject for that Treaſon, notwithſtanding his Foreign Commiſſion. (Dyer. 298. 300. 1 Hale, 68. 96.) It was ſo ruled in Doctor Storey's Caſe: And that Caſe was never yet denied to be Law. It is not in the Power of any private Subject to ſhake off his Allegiance, and to tranſfer it to a foreign Prince. Nor is it in the Power of any Foreign Prince by Naturalizing or employing a Subject of Great Britain, to diſſolve the Bond of Allegiance between that Subject and the Crown.

However, as the Priſoner's Counſel had mentioned his French Commiſſion as a Circumſtance tending in their Opinion to prove his Birth in France, the Court permitted it to be read, the Attorney-General conſenting. It was dated the firſt of June 1745, and appointed the Priſoner Commiſſary of the Troops of France, which were then intended to embark for Scotland.

The Court, with the Conſent of the Counſel for the Crown, permitted the Cartel between France and Great Britain for the Exchange or Ranſom of Priſoners likewiſe to be read. And obſerved, that as it relateth barely to the Exchange or Ranſom of Priſoners of War, it can never extend to the Caſe of the Priſoner at the Bar, ſuppoſing him to be a Subject born. Becauſe by the Laws of all Nations, Subjects taken in Arms againſt their lawful Prince, are not conſidered as Priſoners of War, but as Rebels; and are liable to the Puniſhments ordinarily inflicted on Rebels.

Lord Chief Juſtice Lee in his Direction to the Jury, told them that the Overt Acts laid in the Indictment being fully proved, and not denied by the Priſoner, or rather admitted by his Defence, the only Fact they had to try was, whether he was a Native of Great Britain? If ſo, he muſt be found Guilty. And as to that Point, he ſaid the Preſumption in all Caſes of this Kind is againſt the Priſoner; and the Proof of his Birth out of the King's Dominions, where the Priſoner putteth his Defence on that Iſſue, lieth upon him. But whether the Evidence that had been given in the preſent Caſe (which he ſummed up very minutely) did or did not amount to ſuch Proof he left to their Conſideration.

The Jury found him Guilty, but recommended him to Mercy. He received Sentence of Death as in Caſes of High Treaſon; but was afterwards pardoned upon the Conditions mentioned afterwards.

Macdonald at the Suit of Ramſay.

While Mr. Macdonald lay under Sentence of Death, a Creditor of his, —— Ramſay, obtained Leave from my Lord Chief Juſtice at his Chambers to charge him in Cuſtody of the Sheriff, in an Action for a conſiderable Sum of Money; and accordingly he was ſo charged.

In Eaſter-Term, the 21ſt of the King, Mr. Attorney General acquainted the Court, that his Majeſty had given Orders for preparing a Pardon for Mr. Macdonald to paſs the Great Seal, upon Condition of his retiring out of his Majeſty's Dominions, and continuing abroad during his Life. And that one of the Secretaries of State had ſent his Warrant to the Keeper of the New Priſon to deliver Mr. Macdonald into the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger; but that the Keeper refuſed to obey this Warrant, alledging, that as his Priſoner ſtood charged in an Action at the Suit of Mr. Ramſay, he could not deliver him into the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger without incurring the Danger of an Eſcape. Mr. Attorney concluded with a Motion, that the Proceſs Mr. Macdonald ſtood charged with at the Plaintiff's Suit might be diſcharged.

He was ſupported in this Motion by Sir John Strange and the Solicitor General. It was ſaid by Mr. Attorney, but not ſtrongly inſiſted on, that a Perſon under an Attainder is civiliter mortuus; his Perſon and Eſtate are abſolutely at the Diſpoſal of the Crown; and conſequently he is not liable to Civil Suits. And to this Purpoſe he cited Truſſel's Caſe. (1 Leon. 326. Cro. Eliz. 213.)

To this Point Mr. Henley and Mr. Ford for the Plaintiff inſiſted, and ſo the Court agreed, that the later Reſolutions have been, and the Law hath been long ſettled, that an attainted Perſon is liable to Civil Suits: but by the Rules of the Court he ought not be charged, without Leave of the Court, or of a Judge at his Chambers.

The Point reported by Leonard and Croke to have been adjudged in Truſſel's Caſe came afterwards under Conſideration in Actions brought by other Perſons againſt that very Man (Co. Ent. 246. a. b. Cro. Eliz. 516. Co. Ent. 248. 2 Ann. 38. Moo. 753. 3. Inſt. 215.) and was ruled quite otherwiſe.

The Point chiefly inſiſted on by the Counſel on the Side of the Motion was, that to charge the Defendant in this Caſe, ſo as to make his Perſon liable, would be a Means of defeating the King's Pardon; becauſe he would be thereby diſabled to comply with the Terms of it. It would be in effect ſaying, that his Majeſty ſhall not grant a Pardon on theſe Conditions, he ſhall pardon abſolutely, or not at all.

To this Purpoſe they cited Foxworthy's Caſe, reported in Salk. 500. 2. Ld. Raym. 848. Far. 153. And the Caſe of Coppin and Gunner in 2. Ld. Raym. 1572.

But the Court ſaid, We cannot judicially take notice of his Majeſty's Intentions touching the Pardon. The Crown, in caſe of Pardons, ſignifieth its Pleaſure finally and irrevocably by the Great Seal, and by that alone. A Pardon may not paſs at all, or it may be upon other Conditions than are ſuggeſted at the Bar, or it may be a free Pardon. And therefore till the Pardon is paſſed, it is too early for the Court to give any Opinion upon the main Queſtion. Accordingly the Court gave no Opinion; and Mr. Attorney took nothing by his Motion †.

Mr. Macdonald having afterwards made his Creditor Mr. Ramſay eaſy with regard to his Debt, the Action was withdrawn. And he was in December 1749, delivered into the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger by virtue of a Warrant for that Purpoſe from the Duke of Newcaſtle, one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State.

N. B. The Perſon of a Man under an Attainder is not abſolutely at the Diſpoſal of the Crown. It is ſo for the Ends of publick Juſtice, and for no other Purpoſe. The King may order Execution to be done upon him according to Law, notwithſtanding he may be charged in Cuſtody at the Suit of Creditors. But 'till Execution is done, his Creditors have an Intereſt in his Perſon for ſecuring their Debts. (6 H. IV. 6. b. 7. a.) And he himſelf as long as he liveth, (Crom. 113. a.) is under the Protection of the Law. To kill him without Warrant of Law is Murder; for which the Murderer is liable to a Proſecution at the Suit of the Crown, and likewiſe to an Appeal (Bro. Appeal 5.) at the Suit of the Widow. For though his Heir is barred by the Attainder, which corrupteth his Blood, and diſſolveth all Relations grounded on Conſanguinity, yet the Relation grounded on the matrimonial Contract continueth 'till Death.

* Foſter's Reports, p. 59.

† N. B. The Rule in Foxworthy's Caſe ſeems to have been over-haſty, and the Reaſons on which it is grounded appear to me to be inconcluſive: That in Coppin and Gunner ſeems more equitable; ſince it ſecured to the Defendant the Benefit of his Pardon, without Prejudice to the Plaintiff, who might reſort for Satisfaction to the Effects of the Defendant, if he could find any.

And if a Perſon under an Attainder be beat or maimed, or a Woman in the like Circumſtances raviſhed, they may, after a Pardon, maintain an Action or Appeal, as their Caſes reſpectively may require (3. Inſt. 215.) And though before a Pardon they are diſabled to ſue in their own Names, I make no doubt that they are intitled to proſecute, according to the Nature of their reſpective Caſes in the Name of the King; who will do equal Right to all his Subjects.

N. B. During the Trials of the Rebels at St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark, under the Commiſſion of 1746, one of the Priſoners challenged peremptorily, and for Cauſe, ſo many of the Jurors, that there was not a ſufficient Number left on the Pannel to proceed on his Trial. In that Caſe the Court, ore tenus, (for it was, as hath been already obſerved, a Commiſſion of Goal Delivery as well as of Oyer and Terminer) ordered a new Pannel, and adjourned for ſeveral Days. On the Day of Adjournment the Sheriff returned a Pannel of the ſame Jurors that had ſerved through the whole Proceeding, thoſe who had been challenged by the Priſoner, or ſworn before, included. And a ſufficient Number appearing, he was tried.

The like Caſe happened on the Trial of one of the Aſſaſſins in King William's Time. (IV. State Trials, 728, to 733) Mr. Cook on the 9th of May challenged in the like manner 'till the Jurors remaining on the Pannel were not ſufficient to make a full Jury; whereupon the Court, ore tenus, ordered a new Pannel, and adjourned to the 14th. On that Day his Counſel inſiſted that a new Pannel ought not to have been ordered; but that an Habeas Corpora with a Tales ſhould have been awarded, according to the Opinion in Stanford (f. 155). But the Court declared, that this being a Proceeding under a Commiſſion of Goal Delivery as well as Oyer and Terminer, they might, and indeed always do in the like Caſe, award a new Pannel if neceſſary, ore tenus, without Writ or Precept.

In a mere Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer no Pannel is ordered 'till the Defendant hath pleaded to Iſſue, and Iſſue is actually joined; and then it is done by Precept in the Nature of a Venire. And if in ſuch Caſe there ſhould be a Want of Jurors, an Habeas Corpora with a Tales may, ſaid the Court, poſſibly iſſue; but no Tales can be granted upon a Commiſſion of Goal Delivery. And Mr. Juſtice Powel upon that Occaſion ſaid, that if the Sheriff had returned all new Men without regard to thoſe who appeared and were ſworn or challenged on the 9th, it had been well enough.

The Reaſon of the Adjournments in theſe Caſes was, that the Priſoners might have Copies of the new Pannels in due Time, purſuant to the 7th of King William; otherwiſe new Pannels might have been ordered returnable inſtanter.

The original Pannel in 1746 was upon great Deliberation ordered, ſitting the Court, ore tenus, as under the Commiſſion of Goal Delivery; though, as I have already obſerved, a Precept in common Form for holding the Seſſions had iſſued under the Seals of the three Chiefs and three ſenior Judges.

XLI. The Whole Proceedings in the Houſe of Peers, upon the Indictments againſt William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, for High-Treaſon, in Levying War againſt his Majeſty: Begun on Monday the 28th Day of July, and continued on Wedneſday the 30th of July, and Friday the Firſt of Auguſt, 1746.

Die Martis, 24o Junii, 1746.

THE Duke of Newcaſtle, by His Majeſty's Command, acquainted the Houſe, That Bills of Indictment of High-Treaſon were Yeſterday found, by the Grand Jury of the County of Surrey, againſt William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino.

Ordered, That the ſaid Indictments be removed before this Houſe by Certiorari: And that a Writ or Writs of Certiorari be iſſued for that Purpoſe.

Then a Committee was appointed to inſpect the Journals of this Houſe upon former Trials of Peers in Capital Caſes; and to conſider of the proper Methods of Proceeding, in order to bring the Lords above named to a ſpeedy Trial: And to report to the Houſe, What they ſhall think proper thereupon.

Their Lordſhips, or any Five of them, to meet To-morrow, at the uſual Time and Place; and to adjourn as they pleaſe.

Ordered, That the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of King's Bench, the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of Common Pleas, and the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, do attend the ſaid Committee.

Die Jovis, 26o Junii, 1746.

THE Houſe being informed, That the Writ of Certiorari, iſſued for removing the Indictments of High-Treaſon, found by the Grand Jury of Surrey againſt William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, was brought into the Houſe;

The ſaid Writ, Return thereof, and Indictments, were read.

The Lord Monſon acquainted the Houſe, That the Committee appointed to inſpect their Lordſhips Journals upon former Trials of Peers in Capital Caſes; and to conſider of the proper Methods of Proceeding, in order to bring the Lords abovementioned to a ſpeedy Trial, had agreed upon a Report: Which they had directed him to make to the Houſe, when their Lordſhips will pleaſe to receive the ſame.

Ordered, That the ſaid Report be received To-morrow; and the Lords to be ſummoned.

Die Veneris, 27o Junii, 1746.

THE Lord Monſon (according to Order) reported, from the Lords Committees appointed to inſpect the Journals of this Houſe upon former Trials of Peers in Capital Caſes; and to conſider of the proper Methods of Proceeding, in order to bring William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, lately indicted of High-Treaſon, to a ſpeedy Trial; That the Committee have met, and inſpected the Journals of this Houſe, in relation to the Trials of Peers in Capital Caſes; and were attended by the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of King's Bench, the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of Common Pleas, and the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer: And having heard the ſaid Judges upon the Conſtruction of the Act of the Seventh and Eighth Year of King William the Third, intituled, An Act for regulating Trials in Caſes of Treaſon, and Miſpriſion of Treaſon, and conſidered the Matter to them referred, have come to the following Reſolution, viz.

I. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That, by virtue of the ſaid Act, upon the Trial of any Peer or Peereſs in any of the Caſes of Treaſon, or Miſpriſion of Treaſon, within that Act, all the Peers, who have a Right to ſit and vote in Parliament, ought to be ſummoned Twenty Days at leaſt before every ſuch Trial, to appear at ſuch Trial.

II. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That ſuch Summons ought to be by Order of this Houſe, requiring, That every Peer, who hath a Right to ſit and vote in Parliament, do appear at, and attend ſuch Trial; and by Letters, to be wrote by the Lord Chancellor, or Speaker of the Houſe for the Time being, to each particular Peer: And that ſuch Order of the Houſe be fixed upon the Doors of this Houſe, and of Weſtminſter-Hall; and alſo be publiſhed in the London Gazette, at leaſt Twenty Days before ſuch Trial; and that ſuch Letters be ſent at leaſt Twenty Days before ſuch Trial.

III. That it appearing to this Committee, That the antient and uſual Method of ſummoning the Lords to attend upon Trials of Peers in Capital Caſes, in Parliament, has been, by ſending the Letters of Summons, to ſuch Lords as are not in Town, by the Poſt; it is the Opinion of this Committee, That the Letters, to ſuch Lords as are not in Town, be ſent by the Poſt, according to the antient Uſage.

IV. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That the Houſe be moved to reſolve and declare, That ſuch Order, ſo fixed up and publiſhed as abovementioned, and ſuch Letters, ſo ſent as abovementioned, are a due Summons of the Peers in Caſes of Trials during the Sitting of Parliament, within the true Intent and Meaning of the ſaid Act of the Seventh and Eighth of King William the Third.

V. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That every Lord, before he ſhall ſit or vote upon ſuch Trial, ought to take the Oaths, and make and ſubſcribe the Declaration required by Law to be taken and ſubſcribed by Lords, in order to their Sitting and Voting in Parliament.

VI. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That, in the Letters to be wrote, purſuant to the Reſolutions abovementioned, Notice be taken, that the Lords are ſummoned, purſuant to the ſaid Act of the Seventh and Eighth Year of King William the Third; and that their Attendance is required at ſuch Trial, upon Pain of incurring the utmoſt Diſpleaſure of the Houſe; and that, in caſe the Lord, to whom any ſuch Letter is directed, ſhall be incapable of attending, by reaſon of Sickneſs, or other Diſability, he do ſend Two Witneſſes to atteſt the ſame upon Oath.

Then the ſaid Report was read by the Clerk.

And the Three Firſt Reſolutions, being read a Second time, were ſeverally agreed to by the Houſe; and ordered accordingly.

And the Fourth Reſolution being read, the Houſe was moved purſuant to the Direction of the Committee.

And thereupon,

Reſolved and Declared, That the Order for the Attendance of the Peers, who have a Right to ſit and vote in Parliament, fixed up and publiſhed as abovementioned, and ſuch Letters wrote by the Lord Chancellor, or Speaker of this Houſe, and ſent as aforeſaid, are a due Summons of the Peers in Caſes of Trials during the Sitting of Parliament, within the true Intent and Meaning of the ſaid Act of the Seventh and Eighth Year of King William the Third.

Then the Two laſt Reſolutions being read a Second time, were ſeverally agreed to by the Houſe; and ordered accordingly.

Ordered, That William Earl of Kilmarnock be tried on Monday the Twenty-eighth of July next, at Nine of the Clock in the Morning, upon the Bill of Indictment for High-Treaſon found againſt him: And that George Earl of Cromertie be tried on the ſame Day, at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon, upon the Bill of Indictment for High-Treaſon found againſt him: And that Arthur Lord Balmerino be tried on the ſame Day, at Eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon, upon the Bill of Indictment for High-Treaſon found againſt him.

Ordered, That the Trials of the ſaid Peers be had in Weſtminſter-Hall.

Ordered, That an humble Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, to acquaint his Majeſty, That this Houſe hath appointed the Trials of William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, to begin, in Weſtminſter-Hall, on Monday the Twenty-eighth Day of July next; and humbly to deſire, That his Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to give Orders, That a Place be prepared in the ſaid Hall for the ſaid Trials; and alſo to appoint a Lord High Steward, to continue during the ſaid Trials.

Ordered, That the ſaid Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty by the Lords with White Staves.

Ordered, That every Peer, who hath a Right to ſit and vote in Parliament, do appear at, and attend, the ſaid Trials: And that this Order be affixed on the Doors of this Houſe, and of Weſtminſter-Hall; and alſo be printed and publiſhed in the London Gazette, at leaſt Twenty Days before the ſaid Trials.

Ordered,

Ordered, That the Lord Chancellor do write Letters to all the Peers, requiring their Appearance and Attendance at the ſaid Trials, purſuant to the Directions contained in the foregoing Report.

Die Lunæ, 30° Junii, 1746.

THE Lord Chamberlain reported, That the Lords with White Staves had, according to Order, preſented to his Majeſty the Addreſs of this Houſe Yeſterday, for a Place to be prepared in Weſtminſter-Hall, for the Trials of the Peers indicted of High-Treaſon, and for the Appointment of a Lord High Steward: And that his Majeſty was pleaſed to ſay, He would give Orders accordingly.

Die Lunæ, 7° Julii, 1746.

UPON reading the Petition of William Earl of Kilmarnock, now a Priſoner in the Tower of London, praying, in regard he has Notice given him, that his Trial is appointed upon the Twenty-eighth Day of this preſent July, That their Lordſhips will pleaſe to appoint Mr. George Roſs to be his Sollicitor;

It is Ordered, That the ſaid George Roſs be aſſigned Sollicitor for the Petitioner, as deſired; and that he may have Acceſs to him at all ſeaſonable Times.

Upon reading the Petition of George Earl of Cromertie, now a Priſoner in the Tower of London, praying, That this Houſe will be pleaſed to appoint Mr. Adam Gordon, Attorney at Law, to be his Sollicitor;

It is Ordered, That the ſaid Adam Gordon be aſſigned Sollicitor for the Petitioner, as deſired; and that he may have Acceſs to him at all ſeaſonable Times.

Die Martis, 8° Julii, 1746.

THE Lord Monſon reported from the Lords Committees appointed to inſpect the Journals of this Houſe, upon former Trials of Peers in Capital Caſes; and to conſider of the proper Methods of Proceeding, in order to bring William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, lately indicted of High Treaſon, to a ſpeedy Trial, That they had again met, and taken into further Conſideration the Matter to them referred; and were come to the following Reſolutions; viz.

That it is the Opinion of the Committee, That all the Lords, who ſhall attend the ſaid Trials, do attend the Houſe, to take the Oaths, in order to their Sitting and Voting upon ſuch Trials, on the Thurſday and Friday next preceding the Day appointed for the ſaid Trials.

That it is the Opinion of the Committee, That the ſaid Reſolution be printed and publiſhed in the London Gazette.

Which, being read twice by the Clerk, were agreed to by the Houſe; and ordered accordingly.

Die Mercurii, 9° Julii, 1746.

UPON reading the Petition of Arthur Lord Balmerino, now a Priſoner in the Tower of London, praying, That this Houſe will appoint Mr. George Roſs to be his Sollicitor;

It is Ordered, That the ſaid George Roſs be aſſigned Sollicitor for the Petitioner, as deſired; and that he may have Acceſs to him at all ſeaſonable Times.

Die Veneris, 11° Julii, 1746.

ON a Report made by the Lord Monſon, from the Committee beforementioned:

Ordered, That the Lord High Steward be directed to acquaint the Lords to be tried, and all other Perſons, who may have Occaſion to ſpeak to the Court, that they addreſs themſelves to the Lords in general, and not to the Lord High-Steward.

Die Martis, 15° Julii, 1746.

UPON reading the Petition of George Earl of Cromertie, now a Priſoner in the Tower, praying, in regard he is informed, ſeveral Reſolutions have been agreed to by this Houſe, in order to the ſpeedy Trials of the Petitioner, and others, that he may have Copies thereof, the Indictment found againſt him, the Certiorari for removing the ſame, and the Return thereof, or any other Proceedings that ſhall be agreed upon in relation to his Trial:

Ordered, That the Petitioner may have Copies of ſuch Proceedings as have been had in this Houſe concerning him; together with a Copy of the ſaid Indictment, Certiorari, and Return, as deſired.

Die Mercurii, 23° Julii, 1746.

ORDERED, That the Conſtable of his Majeſty's Tower of London, or the Lieutenant of the ſame, or his Deputy, do bring to the Bar of this Houſe in Weſtminſter-Hall, on Monday next, at Nine of the Clock in the Morning, the Bodies of William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, now in his Cuſtody; together with Copies of their reſpective Commitments, ſigned by the ſaid Conſtable or Lieutenant.

Die Jovis, 24° Julii, 1746.

THE Lord Monſon reported, from the Lords Committees appointed to inſpect the Journals of this Houſe upon former Trials of Peers in Capital Caſes; and to conſider of the proper Methods of Proceeding in order to the Trials of William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, lately indicted of High Treaſon; That the Committee have taken into further Conſideration the Matter to them referred; and have come to the following Reſolutions (amongſt others); viz.

That it is the Opinion of the Committee, That all Proclamations to be made in the Court in Weſtminſter-Hall, during the ſaid Trials, be made in the King's Name.

That it is the Opinion of the Committee, That the Three Lords, indicted of High Treaſon, be brought to the Bar of the Court in Weſtminſter-Hall, at the ſame time, in order to be arraigned.

That it is the Opinion of the Committee, That in caſe the Three Lords, indicted of High Treaſon, ſhould plead Guilty to their Indictments, the Houſe be immediately adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament; but if one or more of the ſaid Lords ſhould plead Guilty, and the other Not guilty, in that caſe, the Lord or Lords ſo pleading Guilty be forthwith remanded, in Cuſtody of the Chief Governor of the Tower of London, to the ſaid Tower; and that the Trial of the other Lord or Lords pleading Not guilty do proceed.

Which Report, being read twice by the Clerk, was agreed to by the Houſe; and ordered accordingly.

Die Lunæ, 28° Julii, 1746.

THE Lords met in the Houſe of Lords in their Robes; and, after Prayers, adjourned into Weſtminſter-Hall.

The First Day in Weſtminſter-Hall.

ABOUT Eleven of the Clock, the Lords came from their own Houſe into the Court erected in Weſtminſter-Hall, in the Manner following:

The Lord High Steward's Gentlemen Attendants, Two and Two.

The Clerks Aſſiſtant to the Houſe of Lords; and the Clerk of the Parliament.

Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, bearing the King's Commiſſion to the Lord High Steward; and the Clerk of the Crown in the King's-Bench.

The Maſters in Chancery, Two and Two.

The Judges, Two and Two.

The Peers eldeſt Sons, Two and Two.

Peers Minors, Two and Two.

York and Windſor Heralds.

Four Serjeants at Arms with their Maces, Two and Two.

The Yeoman Uſher of the Houſe.

Then the Peers, Two and Two, beginning with the youngeſt Baron.

Then Four Serjeants at Arms with their Maces, Two and Two.

The Serjeant at Arms attending the Great Seal, and Purſe-Bearer.

Then Garter King at Arms, and the Gentleman Uſher of the Black-Rod, carrying the White Staff before the Lord High-Steward.

Philip Lord Hardwicke, Lord High-Chancellor of Great Britain, Lord High Steward, alone; his Train borne.

When the Lords were placed in their proper Seats, and the Lord High-Steward upon the Wool-Pack;

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery having his Majeſty's Commiſſion to the Lord High Steward in his Hand, and the Clerk of the Crown in the King's Bench ſtanding before the Clerk's Table with their Faces towards the State, made Three Reverences; the Firſt at the Table, the Second in the Midway, and the Third near the Wool-Pack; then kneeled down; and the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, on his Knee, preſented the Commiſſion to the Lord High Steward, who delivered the ſame to the Clerk of the Crown in the King's-Bench to read: Then riſing, they made Three Reverences, and returned to the Table. And then Proclamation was made for Silence; in this manner:

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Our Sovereign Lord the King ſtrictly charges and commands all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then the Lord High Steward ſtood up, and ſpoke to the Peers.

Lord High Steward. His Majeſty's Commiſſion is about to be read: Your Lordſhips are deſired to attend to it in the uſual Manner; and all others are likewiſe to ſtand up, uncovered, while the Commiſſion is reading.

All the Peers uncovered themſelves; and they, and all others, ſtood up uncovered, while the Commiſſion was read.

GEORGE R.

GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and ſo forth. To our Right Truſty and Well-beloved Councillor Philip Lord Hardwicke, Baron of Hardwicke, in Our County of Glouceſter, Our Chancellor of Great Britain, Greeting. Know ye, That whereas William Earl of Kilmarnock, late of the City of Carliſle, in our County of Cumberland; George Earl of Cromertie, late of the Town of Perth, in the Shire of Perth; and Arthur Lord Balmerino, late of the ſaid City of Carliſle, in Our ſaid County of Cumberland; ſtand ſeverally indicted before Our Juſtices and Commiſſioners, aſſigned and conſtituted by Our Letters Patent under our Great Seal of Great Britain, bearing Date the Fifth Day of June, in the Nineteenth Year of our Reign, by virtue and according to the Form of the Statute, made in this Our preſent Parliament, intituled, An Act for the more eaſy and ſpeedy Trial of ſuch Perſons as have levied, or ſhall levy, War againſt His Majeſty; and for the better aſcertaining the Qualifications of Jurors in Trials for High Treaſon, or Miſpriſion of Treaſon, in that Part of Great Britain called Scotland; made to them, and to any Three or more of them; to deliver Our Gaol of Our County of Surry of the Priſoners therein being, or ſuch as ſhall or may be detained in the ſame, on or before the Firſt Day of January, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand Seven hundred and Forty-ſix, for or on Account of the High Treaſon mentioned in the ſaid Act, in levying War againſt Us within this Realm; and to inquire, by the Oath of good and lawful Men of the ſame County, of all ſuch High Treaſons, in levying War againſt Us within this Realm by the ſaid Priſoners, or any of them, or by any other Perſon or Perſons who are now in actual Cuſtody for or on Account of the ſame, or who are or ſhall be guilty of High-Treaſon, in levying War againſt Us within this Realm, and ſhall be apprehended and impriſoned for the ſame, on or before the ſaid Firſt Day of January, in the ſaid Year of our Lord One thouſand Seven hundred and Forty-ſix; and the ſame Treaſons to hear and determine, according to the Form of the ſaid Statute, by the Oath of Twelve Jurors, good and lawful Men of the ſaid County of Surry, of High-Treaſon, by them the ſaid William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, committed and perpetrated in levying War againſt Us within this Realm; and conſidering, that Juſtice is an excellent Virtue, and pleaſing to the Moſt High; and being willing that the ſaid William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, ſhould be heard, examined, ſentenced and adjudged before Us, in this Our preſent Parliament, touching and concerning the ſaid High-Treaſon whereof they ſtand ſeverally indicted as aforeſaid; and that all other Things which are neceſſary in this behalf, ſhould be in due Manner done and executed; and for that the Office of Steward of Great Britain (whoſe Preſence is required upon this Occaſion) is now vacant (as We are informed); We, very much confiding in your Fidelity, Prudence, provident Circumſpection,

Circumſpection, and Induſtry, have for this Cauſe ordained and conſtituted you Steward of Great Britain, to bear, execute and exerciſe (for this Time) the ſaid Office, with all Things due and belonging to the ſame Office in this behalf: And therefore We command you, that you diligently ſet about the Premiſſes, and (for this Time) do exerciſe, and execute with Effect, all thoſe Things which belong to the Office of Steward of Great Britain, and which are required in this Behalf. In Witneſs whereof, We have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patent. Witneſs Ourſelf at Weſtminſter, the Twenty-eighth Day of July, in the Twentieth Year of Our Reign.

By the King Himſelf, ſigned with his own Hand.

Biſſe.

Serjeant at Arms. God ſave the King.

Then Garter, and the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod, after Three Reverences, kneeling, jointly preſented the White Staff to his Grace the Lord High Steward: And then his Grace, attended by Garter, Black Rod, and the Purſe-Bearer (making his proper Reverences towards the Throne), removed from the Wool-Pack to an armed Chair, which was placed on the uppermoſt Step but one of the Throne, as it was prepared for that Purpoſe; and then ſeated himſelf in the Chair, and delivered the Staff to the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod on his Right Hand, the Purſe-Bearer holding the Purſe on the Left.

Clerk of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, make Proclamation.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Our Sovereign Lord the King ſtrictly charges and commands all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then the Clerk of the Crown, by Direction of the Lord High Steward, read the Certiorari, and the Return thereof; together with the Captions of the Indictments, and the Indictments certified thereupon, againſt the Earl of Kilmarnock, the Earl of Cromertie, and the Lord Balmerino, in hæc verba:

The Certiorari and Return. } GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, To Our Juſtices and Commiſſioners aſſigned and conſtituted by Our Letters Patent under our Great Seal of Great Britain, made to them, and to any Three or more of them, to deliver Our Gaol of Our County of Surry of the Priſoners therein being, or ſuch as ſhall or may be detained in the ſame, on or before the Firſt Day of January, in the Year of Our Lord One thouſand Seven hundred and Forty-ſix, for or on Account of the High-Treaſon mentioned in the Statute made in this Our preſent Parliament, intituled, An Act for the more eaſy and ſpeedy Trial of ſuch Perſons as have levied, or ſhall levy War againſt his Majeſty; and for the better aſcertaining the Qualifications of Jurors in Trials for High-Treaſon, or Miſpriſion of Treaſon, in that Part of Great Britain called Scotland, in levying War againſt Us within this Realm; and to enquire, by the Oath of good and lawful Men of the ſame County, of all ſuch High-Treaſons, in levying War againſt Us within this Realm, by the ſaid Priſoners, or any of them, or by any other Perſon or Perſons who are now in actual Cuſtody for or on Account of the ſame, or who are or ſhall be guilty of High-Treaſon in levying War againſt Us within this Realm, and ſhall be apprehended and impriſoned for the ſame, on or before the ſaid Firſt Day of January, in the ſaid Year of our Lord One thouſand Seven hundred and Forty-ſix, and the ſame Treaſons to hear and determine, according to the Form of the ſaid Statute, and to every of them, Greeting. We command you, and every of you, that all and ſingular Indictments for High-Treaſon, in levying War againſt Us within this Realm, whereof William Earl of Kilmarnock, late of the City of Carliſle, in the County of Cumberland; Arthur Lord Balmerino, late of the ſame Place; and George Earl of Cromertie, late of the Town of Perth, in the Shire of Perth; ſtand ſeverally indicted before you in our ſaid County of Surry; which ſaid Indictments now remain in your Power, or in the Power of ſome or one of you, with all Things touching the ſame, as fully and perfectly as the ſame were taken before you, by what names, Stiles or Titles ſoever the ſaid William Earl of Kilmarnock, Arthur Lord Balmerino, and George Earl of Cromertie, may be called or diſtinguiſhed in the ſame, you do, without Delay, deliver, under your Seals, or the Seals or Seal of ſome or one of you, to Us, in this Our preſent Parliament, together with this Writ. Witneſs Ourſelf at Weſtminſter, the Twenty-fifth Day of June, in the Twentieth Year of Our Reign.

Lord High Steward. Is it your Lordships Pleasure that the Judges have Leave to be covered?

Lords. Ay, ay.

Clerk of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, make Proclamation for the Lieutenant of the Tower to bring his Prisoners to the Bar.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, oyes, oyes! Lieutenant of the Tower of London, bring forth your Prisoners, William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, to the Bar, together with Copies of their respective Commitments, pursuant to the Order of the House of Lords.

Then William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, were all brought to the Bar, by the Deputy-Governor of the Tower, having the Ax carried before them by the Gentleman-Gaoler, who stood with it, on the left Hand of the Prisoners, with the Edge turned from them. The Prisoners, when they approached the Bar, made three Reverences; and then fell upon their Knees at the Bar. The Deputy-Governor of the Tower also delivered in the Copy of the Commitment.

Lord High Steward. Your Lordships may rise.

Then the Prisoners rose up, and bowed to his Grace the Lord High Steward, and to the House of Peers; which Compliment was returned them by his Grace, and the Lords.

L. H. S. Let the Copy of the Commitment be read.

Which was read as follows:

Thomas Holles, Duke of Newcastle, Marquis and Earl of Clare, Viscount Haughton, Baron Pelham of Laughton, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, one of the Lords of his Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, and Principal Secretary of State, &c.

THESE are in his Majesty's Name to authorize and require you to receive into your Custody the Bodies of William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, herewith sent you, for High-Treason, in levying War against his Majesty; and to keep them safe and close, until they shall be delivered by due Course of Law: And for so doing, this shall be your Warrant. Given at Whitehall, the Twenty-seventh Day of May 1746, in the Nineteenth Year of his Majesty's Reign.

HOLLES NEWCASTLE.

To the Right Honourable the Lord Cornwallis, Constable of his Majesty's Tower of London, and in his Absence to the Lieutenant of the said Tower, or his Deputy.

This is a true Copy of the original Warrant.

CORNWALLIS.

Then Proclamation having been again made for Silence, the Lord High Steward spake to the Prisoners as follows:

L. H. S. WILLIAM Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, Arthur Lord Balmerino, your Lordſhips are brought before the moſt auguſt Judicature in this Kingdom, in order to receive your ſeveral Trials, upon different Charges of High-Treaſon againſt you, returned before this Houſe.

As the Crimes, whereof you ſtand accuſed, are of the moſt heinous Nature, ſo the Accuſations againſt you are grounded upon no ſlight Foundations: They are no leſs than Indictments for levying War, and raiſing a Rebellion againſt his Majeſty, found by a Grand Jury of Gentlemen, of great Worth and Conſideration, in the County of Surry, upon Evidence produced before them.

But though your Charge is thus weighty and ſolemn, it is ſtill but a Charge, and open to all ſuch Defences as the Circumſtances of your ſeveral Caſes, and the Rules of Law and Juſtice will admit.

The Law is the ſolid Baſis and Support of the King's Throne: It is the great Bulwark of the Property, the Liberty, and Life of every Subject; and it is the Security of the Privileges and Honours of the Peerage. By this Meaſure, which is uniform and equal to every Member of the Community, your Actions, which are now called in Queſtion, are this Day to be examined and judged.

If your Lordſhips are innocent, this will be one Ground of a reaſonable Confidence in your preſent unhappy Circumſtances: But to this Conſideration your own Thoughts cannot fail to add another; I mean, that the Rules of this Law are to be expounded and diſpenſed to you by this illuſtrious Aſſembly, the whole Body of the Peers of Great-Britain, in whoſe noble and diſcerning Minds nothing can have Weight but Evidence and Juſtice: Guilt alone can take place againſt you, and Innocence alone can acquit you.

Your firſt Conſideration will be, What Pleas to put in to theſe Indictments: If your Lordſhips ſhall put yourſelves upon your Trials, you may reſt aſſured, from the Motives I have already mentioned, that they will be legal, fair, and impartial; and as you ſtand here to anſwer for your Eſtates, your Lives, your Honours, and your Poſterity, it is incumbent upon you to recollect yourſelves, and to call up all thoſe Succours of Reaſon, Diſcretion, and Temper, which you are Maſters of.

There is a Circumſtance in your Caſe which is new, and makes it unneceſſary for me to ſay much, by way of Admonition, concerning your Defence: Your Lordſhips are the firſt of your Rank and Quality who have been brought to Trial upon Indictments for High-Treaſon, ſince the Act made in the Reign of our great Deliverer King William the Third, for regulating of Trials in Caſes of High-Treaſon, and Miſpriſion of Treaſon.

It has been the peculiar Happineſs of this Nation, ſince the Revolution, that our Princes have had that Confidence in the Affections of their People, and the Intereſts of both are become ſo evidently the ſame, that the regal Sanction has, ſince that Period, been graciouſly granted to Laws for the Security of the Subject, which were in vain wiſhed for in former Reigns.

However injuriouſly that Revolution has been traduced, whatever Attempts have been made to ſubvert this happy Eſtabliſhment founded upon it, your Lordſhips will now have the Benefit of that Law in its full Extent.

Before I conclude, I am by Command of the Houſe to acquaint your Lordſhips, and all other Perſons who ſhall have Occaſion to ſpeak to the Court, during theſe Trials, that they are to addreſs themſelves to the Lords in general, and not to any Lord in particular.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips will do well to give Attention, while you are ſeverally arraigned upon your Indictments.

Here the Earl of Kilmarnock was arraigned, in the Form of the ſaid Indictment againſt him, by the Clerk of the Crown in the King's-Bench.

Clerk of the Crown. How ſay you, William Earl of Kilmarnock, are you guilty of this High-Treaſon whereof you ſtand indicted, or not guilty?

Earl of Kil. Guilty.

L. H. S. The Diſtance I am at from the Bar is ſo great, that I am not ſure whether I heard your Lordſhip right; and therefore deſire to aſk you, Whether you plead guilty, or not guilty?

Earl of Kil. Guilty, my Lords.

George Earl of Cromertie was arraigned in the ſame Manner, upon the ſaid Indictment againſt him.

Clerk of the Crown. How ſay you, George Earl of Cromertie, are you guilty of this High-Treaſon whereof you ſtand indicted, or not guilty?

Earl of Crom. Guilty.

L. H. S. Not perfectly hearing your Lordſhip's Anſwer, I muſt give you the ſame Trouble as I did the Earl of Kilmarnock, by aſking your Lordſhip the ſame Queſtion, Whether you plead guilty, or not guilty?

Earl of Crom. Guilty, my Lords.

Arthur Lord Balmerino was arraigned in the ſame Manner, upon the ſaid Indictment againſt him.

Cl. of the Cr. How ſay you, Arthur Lord Balmerino, Are you guilty of this High Treaſon whereof you ſtand indicted, or not guilty?

Lord Balmerino. Will your Lordſhips be pleaſed to hear me, and I will be very ſhort: I have only Two or Three Words to ſay: I will not take up your Time, my Lords.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhip is now arraigned; and the Indictment has been read to you: Now is your Time to plead.

Lord Bal. If I ſhould plead guilty, there is no occaſion to ſpeak after that.

L. H. S. This is not a proper Time to ſpeak to other Matters. It is my Duty to inform your Lordſhip of the Rules of Law, and Methods of Proceeding; which require that you ſhould firſt plead to the Indictment.

Lord Bal. Then, my Lords, you will oblige me to take up more of your Lordſhips Time than I intended; for I cannot plead guilty. I deſire to be heard: I will not take up your Lordſhips Time. I want an Anſwer to one Queſtion, and then I will plead.

L. H. S. If your Lordſhip has any thing material, you may mention it.

Lord Balm. My Lords, if there be any Fault in the Form of the Indictment, or if it is ſo faulty, that no Judgment can be given upon it, I want to know, Whether I can be indicted again.

L. H. S. If your Lordſhip has any Exception to take to the Indictment for Miſ-writing, Miſ-ſpelling, or any Informality of that Nature, now is your proper Time to offer ſuch Exceptions.

Lord Bal. My Lords, I am indicted by the Title of Lord Balmerino, of the City of Carliſle; and, I am ſure, that is no Title belonging to me: And I am indicted for being at the Taking of his Majeſty's City and Caſtle of Carliſle on the 10th of November; and I can prove, that, at that Time, I was not within Twelve Miles of it: Now, my Lords, Will that be of any Uſe to me? I can prove I was Twelve Miles off, when they ſay I was at Carliſle.

Cl. of the Cr. Serjeant at Arms, make Proclamation for Silence.

Serj. at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Our Sovereign Lord the King doth ſtrictly charge and command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

L. H. S. My Lord Balmerino, you have made Two Objections of different Natures; the firſt of them is to the Addition of Place given to you in this Indictment; and the other goes to the Fact thereby charged upon you. As to the Firſt, I muſt inform your Lordſhip, that the Words late of the City of Carliſle in the County of Cumberland, are not made Part of your Title, but are only an Addition of Place, which the Law, for good Reaſons, requires to be inſerted by way of Deſcription of the Defendant in all Indictments; and it is moſt commonly taken from that Place, where the Crime is by ſuch Indictment charged to have been committed. As to your other Objection, it relates to the Fact alledged in the Indictment, and will depend upon the Evidence; which cannot be entered into till your Lordſhip has pleaded.

Lord Bal. Then, my Lords, though I could prove I was elſewhere, it would be of no Uſe to me at all.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhip miſtakes me; I do not tell you ſo; but only, that this your laſt Objection cannot be taken into Conſideration, till after you have pleaded, and the Evidence appears.

Lord Bal. I can make it appear, that I was not at Carliſle at that Time.

L. H. S. I have acquainted your Lordſhip according to my Duty, with the Method of Proceeding, and the proper Time for making uſe of your Objection. It muſt be left to your Conſideration, how far you think it for your Advantage to inſiſt upon it.

Cl. of the Cr. Arthur Lord Balmerino, Are you guilty of the High-Treaſon whereof you ſtand indicted, or not Guilty?

Lord Bal. Not Guilty, my Lords.

Cl. of the Cr. Culprit, How will your Lordſhip be tried?

Lord Bal. By God and my Peers.

Cl. of the Cr. God ſend your Lordſhip a good Deliverance.

L. H. S. Let the Lieutenant of the Tower take my Lord Kilmarnock and my Lord Cromertie from the Bar.

Theſe Two Lords were then taken from the Bar by the Lieutenant of the Tower; who returned again, and ſtood on the Right Hand of Lord Balmerino; the Gentleman-Gaoler ſtanding all the Time on his Left Hand, with the Ax turned from him.

Cl. of the Cr. Serjeant at Arms, Make Proclamation.

Serj. at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! All manner of Perſons, that will give Evidence on behalf of our Sovereign Lord the King, againſt Arthur Lord Balmerino, the Priſoner at the Bar, let them come forth, and they ſhall be heard; for now he ſtands at the Bar, upon his Deliverance.

L. H. S. My Lords, The Diſtance of this Place from the Bar is ſo great, that I muſt deſire your Lordſhips Leave to go down to the Table, for the Convenience of Hearing.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Then his Grace removed to the Wool-pack, and delivered the White Staff to be held by the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod; who, during the whole Trial, always received and delivered back the White Staff upon his Knee.

Sir Richard Lloyd, Counſel for the King.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

ARTHUR Lord Balmerino ſtands indicted at your Lordſhips Bar for High-Treaſon; and the Charge againſt him, in the Indictment, is, That he being a Subject of our preſent moſt Serene Sovereign Lord King George, and not having any Regard for the Duty of his Allegiance, as a falſe Traitor and Rebel againſt our Sovereign Lord the King, his ſupreme, true, natural, and lawful, Sovereign, and withdrawing that cordial Love, and true and due Obedience, which every Subject of his Majeſty ſhould and ought to bear toward him; and wickedly and traitorouſly deviſing and intending to change and ſubvert the Rule and Government of this Kingdom, and to depoſe and deprive his Majeſty of his Title, Honour, and Royal State, and Imperial Rule and Government of theſe Kingdoms, and to put and bring him to Death and final Deſtruction, and to raiſe and exalt the Perſon pretending to be Prince of Wales, during the Life of James the Second, and ſince pretending to be, and taking upon himſelf the Stile and Title of, King of England, by the Name of James the Third, to the Crown, and to the Imperial Rule and Government of this Kingdom; that he did, upon the Tenth Day of November, in the Nineteenth Year of his preſent Majeſty's Reign, at Carliſle, in the County of Cumberland, with a Multitude of Rebels, armed, and arrayed, in a warlike and hoſtile Manner, with Arms, as well offenſive as defenſive, aſſemble themſelves together; and then and there did falſly and traitorouſly array themſelves, with Force and Arms, againſt our ſaid Lord the King; and then and there did levy a public and cruel War againſt the King, and make a miſerable and cruel Slaughter of his Majeſty's Subjects, and, with the ſaid Traitors and Rebels, ſo armed and arrayed, did enter into, and take Poſſeſſion of, the ſaid City and Caſtle of Carliſle, the ſame being a City and Caſtle of our ſaid Lord the King, and did falſly and and traitorously keep and defend the same against our said Lord the King, against the Duty of his Allegiance, against the Peace of our said present Sovereign Lord the King, and against the Form of the Statute in such Case made and provided.

My Lords, to this Indictment he has pleaded, That he is not guilty: It is incumbent upon us, who have the Honour to serve the Crown in this Prosecution, to prove this Guilt upon him; and then nothing remains for us, but to pray your Lordships Judgment accordingly.

Mr. Serjeant Skinner, the King's Serjeant.

My Lords,

I AM Counsel, in this Cause, for the King, against the unfortunate Peer at your Lordships Bar; who stands accused of a Crime, the highest which is known to the Laws of this Realm.

For High Treason comprehends all other Offences: Murder and Rapine accompany, and are closely connected with High-Treason; and Waste, Destruction, and Famine, are the Marks it leaves behind.

To be guilty of the lowest of these, as a single Offence, would be abhorrent to a Person of a noble Heart: To be guilty of each of these Offences, is such a Weight of Crime, as would depress and bear down a noble Mind: Yet such is the Case of that unhappy Person, who is guilty of the Crime of High-Treason.

I will not bring a railing Accusation against this unfortunate Lord: Indeed, the Offence cannot admit of Aggravation: But, when I consider the inevitable Ruin which must have befallen our Country, if these pernicious Designs had taken their Effect; the total Subversion of our Religious and Civil Liberties; I then cannot help lamenting that neither high Blood, nor those generous Sentiments of Gratitude and Humanity, which are usually implanted in a noble Breast, that these could not restrain a high-born Peer from engaging in those wicked Councils; the uniting in which is a Stain to his Honour, and will be a Mark of Infamy to his Posterity.

For the most grievous Thought, to this unhappy Lord, must be, That the Consequences of his Crime will affect his Descendants: He was their Root of Honour; he now derives to them Disgrace and Infamy.

But the Law in this proceeds with great Reason and Justice: The Punishment of the guilty Person alone may not be sufficient to deter Men from the Commission of this Crime: He may be so hardened, as to think his own Suffering to be light; but he may lament for the Fate of his Children and Family: Such likewise were the Laws of Nations the most famed for their Rule and Polity.

In this House, so eminently distinguished for Learning as well as Honour, I want no Apology, when I repeat the Opinion of the great Roman Lawyer and Orator, upon this Subject: Tully states this as an Objection; and I submit, that he gives an Answer, natural and affecting: His Words are:

Nec verò me fugit, quàm sit acerbum Parentum Scelera Filiorum Pœnis lui; sed hæc præclarè Legibus comparatum est; ut Caritas Liberorum amicieres Parentes Reipublicæ redderet.

Rebellion surely is the Sin of Witchcraft; otherwise what can engage a Person in an Attempt to destroy the Religious and Civil Liberties of his Country, tho' in the same Ruin he thus involves the Fate of himself and his Posterity? Our Religion is a reasonable Service; its Establishment is the Law of the Land; and for a Protestant Peer to endeavour to extirpate this our most holy Religion, and to introduce Superstition and Idolatry amongst us, is a Proposition as absurd as Transubstantiation: Our Civil Rights must have fallen a Sacrifice to the Ambition of France; for it was a vain Imagination, to think, that France would in earnest have set any King over us. Whoever is a British King, must, in Time, at least, act upon British Principles: From that Moment he is equally an Enemy to France, as any of the boldest or best of his Predecessors. France knows, and will pursue, her natural Interest: To make us Tributary, to make us Provincial, to destroy us as a Nation, was, and must, and can only be, the true Design of France.

But the Genius of the Nation exerted itself in the Cause of Liberty, under the Command of his Royal Highness the Duke; and when we consider our Misfortunes under former Leaders, and how the true English Valour prevailed, when animated and influenced by the Presence and Example of so great a Commander, we may justly apply to his Royal Highness what was said of Scipio, Tantus Exercitus, quantus Imperator.

Before I come to the particular Part, which the Lord at the Bar has acted; it may be necessary to give a short History of this unnatural Rebellion: And here the Names of the Two unfortunate Peers, who have just confessed their Guilt at your Lordships Bar, must often occur.

In June 1745, the Son of the Pretender landed in the West Highlands of Scotland: Few then were his Company or Followers; but the Cloud, which seemed, at first, to be no larger than a Man's Hand, quickly gathered, and blackened that Part of the Hemisphere. The first who appeared were the Macdonalds and the Camerons, Men famed for Rebellious Acts: They were soon joined by the Duke of Perth, the Marquis of Tullibardine, Lord Elcho, and Lord George Murray; and when they came to Perth, their Number was five thousand Men; from thence they marched to Edinburgh, and there they proclaimed the Pretender; and soon after, September the Twenty-first, followed the Battle of Preston-Pans. I wish that we could forget the Miscarriages of that Day!

In October the Pretender's Son was joined by another Body of Rebels, under the Command of the Earl of Kilmarnock: His Lordship made his first Appearance on the Banks of the River which divides England from Scotland: Here I wish, for the Sake of the Nation, and for his own Sake, that the noble Lord had made some Stop, and had well considered the Enterprize on which he was going: Could he have then foreseen the Calamities, which his rash Undertaking has brought upon his Native Country; could he have then beheld with his Eyes the Rapine, the Violence, and the Oppression, which have ensued; the Opposition of the Son to the Father, of the Brother to the Brother, and how all the Charities of one Man to another were destroyed; could he have foreseen his own shameful Retreat, and final Overthrow, his Feet had never passed the Banks of that River.

From thence they marched into England, laid Siege to Carlisle, and took it; and here again they proclaimed the Pretender: From thence they went to Penrith, and to many other Places in England, till they came to Derby: In this Town they heard, that his Royal Highness the Duke was advancing towards them. Here Rebellion grew pale; the Fame of the Duke's Approach made them retreat: Their March was expeditious; yet they left behind them so many Marks of their Cruelty and Barbarity, as if their only Design was to plunder and destroy.

His Royal Highness, with a Detachment, pursued the Rebels to Clifton; and it is doubtful, whether their Cowardice or Cruelty was here the most remarkable: They fled, and yet, in their Haste, they took Time to murder the King's Soldiers, who lay wounded on the Ground: From hence they got back to Carlisle, and from thence proceeded to Dumfreys and Glasgow. And here I must remember the noble Zeal and Firmness which the Magistrates and Citizens of Glasgow expressed for their Royal Master, Our most Gracious Sovereign: They paid, indeed, most heavy Exactions for this their Loyalty; which remain like so many Scars; but the Wounds were honourable.

From thence they marched to Bannockburn, and so to Stirling: Here they were joined by the Earl of Cromertie, and then laid Siege to Stirling-Castle: This occasioned the Battle of Falkirke: To this Place the Lord Balmerino, the Prisoner at the Bar, marched at the Head of his Regiment: Here the Rebels retired; but Victory was reserved for his Royal Highness. But, before I leave this Field, I must lament the Fate of a valiant Soldier and Commander; wounded, indeed, in the Field of Battle, but afterwards murdered in cold Blood: Let one more Mark of Infamy, at least, be fixed on this Rebellion, for this murderous Act, committed on so worthy and brave a Gentleman.

From Falkirke the Rebels retired to Stirling; from thence into the Highlands, those Hills of the Robbers: After some Time they joined again at Inverness; they attacked Fort George, then in the Possession of his Majesty's Forces, and took it; they took Fort Augustus, and demolished it; before Fort William they met with a Repulse: From thence they marched to Culloden Field; a bloody Field! where fell Rebellion, I hope, never to rise again. To point out the Conduct, to celebrate the Courage of his Royal Highness, to paint the Glory of that memorable Day, is an Attempt too bold: The Gratitude of the Nation, the united Thanks of the Parliament, and the Approbation of his Royal Father, shew the Greatness of the Merit by the Richness of the Reward.

My Lords, the particular Circumstances attending the Case of the unfortunate Peer at your Lordships Bar are considerable: High-Treason is an Offence foul and black in itself; it wants no Colouring to make it appear more deformed and hideous: But the Lord Balmerino has heightened every Feature of this Deformity: He was, in the Service of the King, a Captain in the Regiment commanded by the Lord Shannon; not only therefore by his Oath of Allegiance, as a Subject, but by his Military Oath, as his Majesty's Soldier, as a Soldier trusted by his Sovereign with a Command, he lay under the strongest Obligations to be faithful: But he betrayed this Trust; he deserted his Station, in the which Virtue bid him stand.

As a Reward for his Treachery, the Prisoner, my Lords, was advanced to be the Captain of the Second Troop of Life-Guards attending on the Person of the Pretender's Son: We shall shew, that soon after the City of Carlisle surrendered to the Rebels, the Prisoner entered that City at the Head of his Troop, with his Sword drawn, Colours displayed, and Drums beating; he, dressed in the Uniform of the Regiment, with a white Cockade in his Hat: He went the same Progress through the several Places in England with the Rebel Army, an Army of Locusts; as they went, they devoured the Land: Before them was Plenty, behind them Destruction and Desolation: He was present at the several Places and Times when the Pretender was proclaimed; and, on the Return of the Rebels into Scotland, he appeared in all Places at the Head of his Troop: He commanded them at the Battle of Falkirke; and with them he was defeated, and made a Prisoner, in the Field of Culloden.

To answer for these Treasons is this unfortunate Peer now brought to your Lordships Bar: An awful Tribunal! The Illustrious Judges who here preside, are under the strictest Obligation to do impartial Justice; for their only Oath is their Honour: To this Tribunal we submit the Cause of the King, and of our Country: We will endeavour to prove the Fact; and then we shall, with all Deference and Submission, expect your Lordships Judgment.

Mr. Attorney-General.

May it please your Lordships,

YOUR Lordships have heard the Nature of the Charge against the Noble Lord at the Bar, as it is laid in the Indictment; and have likewise heard the Rebellion, in which he was engaged, traced from its Rise to its happy Conclusion. There is little Room, in a Case so notorious, for me to trouble your Lordships in the Opening. But, as the Crime charged on the Noble Lord, is Part of that great Treason which was aimed against his Majesty's Throne and Royal Person, it may be incumbent on me to say something upon this very solemn Occasion.

And however disagreeable it must be, to prosecute and try a noble Person, one of your Lordships high Order, for a Crime of this Nature, publick Justice requires it, and it must be submitted to. Even your Lordships, from your great Regard to your King and Country, will be easy in the Discharge of that Part of it, which belongs to your Lordships.

As the Noble Lord has thought proper to plead Not guilty, and thereby put the Proof of his Guilt on the King's Counsel; there are Two Things that will fall under your Lordships Consideration: The one, relating to the Nature of the Crime; the other, to the Proof in Support of it.

As to the former, your Lordships can have no Trouble: It is a Charge of High Treason, in levying War against his Majesty; a Crime declared to be so by the express Words of the Statute of the Twenty-fifth of Edward the Third, framed on Purpose for the Ease and Safety of the Subject; to remove that Anxiety which attended the Obscurity of the Law, in a Point of the greatest Importance to themselves and their Posterity; and to reduce the Law of Treasons, which before lay hid in the Breast of the Judges,

Judges, to a Certainty: Or, if that Law had never been made, This is one of thoſe Sorts of Treaſons that never did admit of a Doubt; and, if the Noble Priſoner had impartially conſulted his own Breaſt, it muſt have told him it never could.

As that Act makes it neceſſary to Conviction, that the Treaſon ſhould be proved by ſome Overt Act; it has been uſual, in Indictments for this Species of Treaſon, not only to charge the levying War generally, but to ſpecify thoſe Circumſtances of Hoſtility which uſually accompany it, as a kind of Overt Act; ſuch as joining himſelf to great Numbers of other Traitors, armed and arrayed with various Sorts of Weapons in a warlike Manner, with Colours diſplayed, Drums beating, and the like: Theſe Circumſtances are charged in the preſent Indictment; to which another more particular Overt Act is added, of entering, poſſeſſing, and detaining the City of Carliſle againſt his Majeſty.

If theſe Charges are proved, the Conſequence cannot be diſputed. This brings me to that which alone will demand your Lordſhips particular Attention; how this Charge is brought home, in Point of Evidence, to the Priſoner at the Bar.

And in this likewiſe, I believe I may venture to ſay, your Lordſhips will have no Difficulty; but you will have that great Satisfaction, of being perfectly clear in the Judgment you ſhall give.

The Charge is not of that Nature, which reſts principally in the Breaſt of the Offender, to be diſcovered and proved by a Variety of Circumſtances, ſet together and connected by Art, to find out the ſecret Deſigns of Conſpirators. It conſiſts in a great Number of Facts, done in open Day-light, in the Face of the World, avowed and juſtified, and in which the Noble Lord did not rely on the Secrecy of his Treaſon, but the Power of the Traitors, for his Defence.

Your Lordſhips therefore will permit me very ſhortly to point out ſome of thoſe Facts, which will be fully proved by the Witneſſes: I don't mean to enter into a Detail of what paſſed during the Courſe of the Rebellion; but only to touch on thoſe Matters, which will directly affect the Priſoner, and ſhew the particular Part he acted in this great Scene of Treaſon and Confuſion.

The Noble Priſoner ſeems to have engaged early in the Rebellion. Whether it was owing to that, or his former Attachments, he ſoon obtained a Truſt about the Perſon of the Pretender's Son; which could be repoſed in none but the moſt zealouſly affected to that Cauſe. He was made the Commander of the Second Troop of Horſe, called His Life-Guards.

In this Poſt, he accompanied the Rebel Army in their Firſt March into England, and entered Carliſle, at the Head of his Troop, in November laſt. In the ſame Command, he followed them through the Counties of Cumberland, Lancaſter, Cheſhire, Staffordſhire, and Part of Derbyſhire, till they came to Derby; and when they were ſtopped there by the Approach of his Royal Highneſs the Duke, and forced to fly before him by the Way they came, he kept with them in their Flight, and entered Carliſle a ſecond Time, with his Troop. He did not wait till his Royal Highneſs came up, but with the reſt of the Rebel Army, except the Garriſon, continued his Flight into Scotland. He went with them to Glaſgow and Sterling, was preſent at the Battle of Falkirke, and, tho' not perſonally engaged, was drawn up at the Head of his Troop, to ſupport the Rebels that were. He ſtill continued to attend the Rebellion in all its Stages, till the ſame great Commander, who gave the firſt Check to its Progreſs, put a final End to it at Culloden.

Your Lordſhips will ſee him, by the Evidence, in all the Places I have mentioned, cloathed in the Uniform of the Rebel Guards, with a white Cockade, his Sword drawn, heading, commanding, and leading his Troops, guarding the Pretender's Son, proclaiming the Pretender, entering and ſeizing his Majeſty's Towns, and acting as an Enemy in his Majeſty's Dominions, in open Defiance of the Laws, and to the infinite Miſchief of his Majeſty and his Subjects; and all this with a direct View of Dethroning his Majeſty, Extirpating his Royal Family, and Setting up a Popiſh Pretender in his Room.

The ſeveral Inſtances of his Lordſhip's marching with the Rebels in a hoſtile Manner, will be ſo many diſtinct Proofs of the Firſt Part of the Charge; and the particular Acts of his Entering and Continuing in Carliſle, in the ſame hoſtile Manner, will fully prove the Second.

I have ſtated all theſe Things, not becauſe they are all neceſſary to the Conviction of the Noble Lord, but for the clearer Manifeſtation of his Guilt. A very ſmall Part of theſe Facts would be ſufficient, if proved to your Lordſhips Satisfaction: Nor would it avail his Lordſhip, if we ſhould fail in the Proof of any Part of the Charge on the very Day it is laid in the Indictment, as the Noble Lord vainly ſeems to think. The preciſe Point of Time, as it is, in its own Nature, immaterial to the Guilt, is equally ſo in the Forms of our Law.

All that remains is to call the Witneſſes; which, I doubt not, will fully make out the Facts we have ſtated.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, we will now proceed to call our Witneſſes.

Lord Balmerino. My Lords, may I be heard? I thought, when a Perſon was indicted, if there was any one Article in the Indictment that was not good againſt him, that all the reſt was good for nothing.

Lord High Steward. You muſt hear the Evidence. This cannot now be determined, till the Evidence is heard.

Lord Bal. Will your Lordſhips pleaſe to examine them as to the Time of my being at Carliſle?

Lord H. S. The King's Counſel muſt proceed in their own Method, provided they proceed according to Law.

Lord Bal. My Lords, I humbly thank you for your Advice.

L. H. S. Would your Lordſhip have Counſel aſſigned you?

Lord Bal. No, my Lords; I don't want any.

Sir John Strange. Call William M'Ghie.

William M'Ghie ſworn.

Sir John Strange. Look at the Noble Lord at the Bar. Do you know him?——M'Ghie. Yes; I know him very well.

Sir J. Strange. Pray, will you acquaint my Lords, whether you ſaw him at any time, and where, in the Rebel Army?

M'Ghie. I ſaw the Noble Lord at Carliſle, going and coming.

Sir J. Strange. Do you mean the Noble Lord at the Bar?

M'Ghie. Yes, I do.

Sir J. Strange. Pray, do you recollect the Firſt Time of your ſeeing him?

M'Ghie. It was ſome time in November laſt; but the Day I am not very ſure of.

L. H. S. The Witneſs's Voice is ſo low, that ſome of my Lords deſire, That a Clerk may repeat what he ſays. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure; that one of your Clerks be appointed to ſtand by the Witneſs, and report to your Lordſhips what he ſays?

Lords. Ay, ay.

Then One of the Clerks was ſworn, truly to report what the Witneſs ſhould ſay; and ſtood within the Bar, near the Witneſs, and repeated his Anſwers.

Sir J. Strange. If it is your Lordſhips Pleaſure, I will begin the Examination again.

L. H. S. I deſire he may repeat again what he has ſaid.

Sir J. Strange. I aſk you, if you know the Noble Lord at the Bar?

M'Ghie. Yes; I do know the Noble Lord at the Bar.

Sir J. Strange. Will you pleaſe to acquaint their Lordſhips, at what time, and where, you ſaw his Lordſhip with the Rebel Army?

M'Ghie. I ſaw him at Carliſle, going and coming. The Firſt time I ſaw his Lordſhip there was in November laſt.

Sir J. Strange. Did not you ſee him before you came to Carliſle?

M'Ghie. I ſaw him before we came to Carliſle; I alſo ſaw him coming into Carliſle, and in Carliſle.

Sir J. Strange. What Company was he in then?

M'Ghie. He was in Company with the Rebels.

Sir J. Strange. How did he appear, and what Command had he then?

M'Ghie. I don't know whether he had a Command; but he was heading a Troop of Horſe.

Sir J. Strange. What Horſe were they called?--M'Ghie. I don't know.

Sir J. Strange. Were they Part of the Rebel Army?——M'Ghie. Yes.

Sir J. Strange. Did you ſee them enter into the City of Carliſle?

M'Ghie. Yes.

Sir J. Strange. Fix the Time as near as you can.

M'Ghie. It was about the Eighteenth of November, as near as I can gueſs.

Sir J. Strange. Can you tell what Number there was of them?

M'Ghie. I cannot really.

Sir J. Strange. Will you acquaint the Lords, whether the Noble Lord at the Bar had any Arms?

M'Ghie. He had Piſtols, and a Sword.

Sir J. Strange. Was his Sword drawn, or undrawn?

M'Ghie. I do not mind to have ſeen it drawn.

Sir J. Strange. Did you obſerve, whether he had any thing in his Bonnet or Hat, by way of Diſtinction?

M'Ghie. I do not mind that.

Sir J. Strange. Did you obſerve in what Manner the Noble Lord was dreſſed?——M'Ghie. In a common Dreſs.

Sir J. Strange. When you call it a common Dreſs, do you mean the Dreſs that the Officers wore, or his own Habit?

M'Ghie. I mean his own former Habit.

Sir J. Strange. Was there any thing particular in the Form of the Habit that the Officers of that Regiment wore?

M'Ghie. I do not mind any body, but himſelf.

Sir J. Strange. You ſaw him march at the Head of that Body going to Carliſle, after it was in Poſſeſſion of the Rebels?

M'Ghie. Yes; and I ſaw him in the Going back from Derby.

Sir J. Strange. I aſk you, Whether you obſerved the Noble Lord in Carliſle, after it was in Poſſeſſion of the Rebels, and after the Marching you talk of, and before the Rebels left Carliſle, to come Southwards?

M'Ghie. Yes; I ſaw him in Carliſle when the Rebels were there.

Sir J. Strange. Did you obſerve what he was doing then?

M'Ghie. Nothing, but riding on Horſeback.

Sir J. Strange. Was that with the Troop, or without?

M'Ghie. It was with the Troop.

Sir J. Strange. Did you obſerve whether his Sword was drawn?

M'Ghie. I did not.

Sir J. Strange. How long did the Rebels ſtay in Carliſle, before they marched Southwards?——M'Ghie. About Two Days.

Sir J. Strange. Did you obſerve the Noble Lord to go out of Carliſle?

M'Ghie. No; I was not South.

Sir J. Strange. Did you obſerve him then?

M'Ghie. I was in the Hoſpital; but when I came back again, I ſaw this Lord.

Sir J. Strange. Did you obſerve him to march out of Carliſle?

M'Ghie. Yes.

Sir J. Strange. What time was that?—M'Ghie. It was in November.

Sir J. Strange. What Diſtance of Time was there between their going and coming back? You can tell us when they marched back again?

M'Ghie. It was about Chriſtmas, or a Day or Two before it.

Sir J. Strange. Did you obſerve the Noble Lord coming into Carliſle upon the Return? Or do you only ſpeak of ſeeing him there?

M'Ghie. I ſaw him coming back again from Derby to Carliſle.

Sir J. Strange. Will you acquaint my Lords, whether you ſaw him at the Head of his Troop, or in what Manner?

M'Ghie. I ſaw him at the Head of a Troop of Horſe in Carliſle.

Sir J. Strange. What were they? Were they Part of the Rebel Army?

M'Ghie. Yes.

Sir J. Strange. Had they any Drums, Colours, and Muſick?

M'Ghie. They had both Colours and Drums, and Pipes playing.

Sir J. Strange. How long did my Lord ſtay at Carliſle upon his Return?

M'Ghie. Only one Night.—I am very ſure of it.

Sir J. Strange. Did the Noble Lord go out of Carliſle in the Manner you have mentioned, at the Head of his Troop?

M'Ghie. In the ſame Manner, riding at the Head of a Troop of Horſe.

Sir J. Strange. Will you acquaint my Lords, Whether, at the Time the Noble Lord was there, the Young Pretender was in Carliſle?

M'Ghie. Yes, he was there.

Sir J. Strange. Was he there when they first went into Carlisle, before they came Southward?

M'Ghie. No, he did not come till the next Day.

Sir J. Strange. Did you see the Pretender's Son the next Day?

M'Ghie. Yes.

Sir J. Strange. In what Manner did he enter Carlisle?

M'Ghie. He came in with Horse Life-Guards.

Sir J. Strange. Whose Life-Guards were they?

M'Ghie. The Young Pretender's.

Sir J. Strange. Who commanded those Guards at that Time, or any Part of them?

M'Ghie. I don't well know, there were so many commanded.

Sir J. Strange. Did you observe the Noble Lord at the Bar to command any?—M'Ghie. No, I did not.

Sir J. Strange. When they marched away from Carlisle for Scotland, did the Young Pretender go along with them?——M'Ghie. Yes.

Sir J. Strange. And did the greatest Part of the Rebel Army go with him?

M'Ghie. All, except those that were left at Carlisle, and those that were upon the Road.

Sir J. Strange. Was there a Garrison left at Carlisle?—M'Ghie. Yes.

Sir J. Strange. By whose Order?

M'Ghie. By Order of the Young Pretender.

Att. Gen. My Lords, we have done with this Witness: Will the Noble Lord ask him any Questions?

L. H. St. My Lord, if you would ask this Witness any Questions, now is your Time.

Lord Bal. I think, my Lords, he has contradicted himself: He says first it was in November, and then in December, and then in January.

L. H. St. If you want him to explain himself as to the Time, you may ask him any Question.

Lord Bal. What was done in November?

M'Ghie. The Rebels came first to Carlisle in November; and, when they came back, on their Return, it was December, about Christmas.

L. H. S. He applies November to your first coming to Carlisle, and December to your returning thither.

Lord Bal. I can't tell the time myself, unless I was at home to look at my Notes.

L. H. S. Will your Lordship ask him any more Questions?

Lord Bal. No, my Lords.

Sir J. Strange. I would beg Leave to ask the Witness one Question. He says there was a Garrison left in the City of Carlisle; I would ask him, Who that Garrison was to defend the Place against?

M'Ghie. Against his Majesty King George.

Hugh Douglas sworn.

Mr. Solliciter General. Look at the Noble Lord at the Bar, and see whether you know him.

Douglas. Yes, I know him.

Sol. Gen. Then give my Lords an Account, Whether you saw him in the Rebel Army at any Time; and when, and where, and what he did: And give your Account, as near as you can, in Order of Time.

Doug. I saw him at Diddeston, before the Pretender marched out of Edinburgh.

Sol. Gen. Now, go on: Where did you see him next?

Doug. I saw him at Kelso.

Sol. Gen. Where next?——Doug. At Carlisle.

Sol. Gen. In what Manner did he march along with them from these several Places to Carlisle?

Doug. He was Colonel of the Second Troop of the Pretender's Life-Guards.

Sol. Gen. Did he, during this March, command this Second Troop, or ride at the Head of them?

Doug. He commanded them, and rode at the Head of them.

Sol. Gen. How were they armed?

Doug. They had each a Carbine, a Brace of Pistols, and a Broad Sword.

Sol. Gen. Did you see him at Carlisle?

Doug. He marched from Penrith to Carlisle, and back again into Scotland, at the Head of the Troop of Life-Guards. I saw him all the Way.

Sol. Gen. What did you see him do at Carlisle?

Doug. I saw him at the Head of his Troop of Horse in the Street, when they were drawn up, upon coming in there.

Sol. Gen. Where did you see him else? Did you see him in the Return?

Doug. I saw at Derby, and at Manchester, in returning.

Sol. Gen. Did you see him any where else?

Doug. I saw him at Falkirke, and saw him march all the Way from Penrith to Carlisle, in returning.

Sol. Gen. Did you see him at Carlisle, on his Return?---Doug. Yes.

Sol. Gen. When you saw him at Carlisle, was he with the Rebel Army?

Doug. Yes.

Sol. Gen. Did you see him at the Head of his Troop?

Doug. Yes; I saw him at the Head of his Troop of Horse march from Penrith to Carlisle.

Sol. Gen. Did you see him, at any Time in that March, act as an Officer?

Doug. Yes, he acted so far as an Officer, that he rode at the Head of his Troop all the Way.

Sol. Gen. Did you afterwards see him?

Doug. Yes, I saw him at Diddeston.

Sol. Gen. Do you speak of your seeing him in Going, or in the Return?

Doug. I speak of the Return. I saw him at Carlisle, and at the Battle of Falkirke.

Sol. Gen. Did you see him engaged in that Battle?

Doug. No, he was not engaged; none of the Horse were engaged.

Sol. Gen. Did you see him with his Sword drawn?

Doug. All the Men had their Swords drawn; but I don't remember particularly as to him, whether I saw him with his Sword drawn, or not.

Sol. Gen. Did you see him there at the Head of any Troop of Horse?

Douglas. I saw him at the Head of the second Troop of Life-Guards at the Battle of Falkirke.

Solliciter General. Did you see him after that Time?

Doug. I don't remember that I saw him afterwards.

Sol. Gen. What Sort of Dress had he?

Doug. He had a blue Coat faced with Red, a Gold-laced Hat, and a Cockade.

Sol. Gen. What Colour was the Cockade?—Doug. White.

Sol. Gen. What was the Uniform of the Troop?

Doug. They all had blue Coats with red Facings, and Gold-laced Hats.

Sol. Gen. Had they all white Cockades?——Doug. Yes.

Sol. Gen. Had the Troop their Swords drawn?

Doug. Yes, at Falkirke they were all drawn up together, and every one had his Sword drawn.

At. Gen. Where was this Troop at the Battle of Falkirke?

Doug. They were drawn up together in a Field, with the Earl of Kilmarnock, and Lord Pitsligo.

At. Gen. Was a white Cockade any distinguishing Mark of belonging to the Rebel Army?

Doug. Every one who was in the Rebel Army had a white Cockade.

Lord High Steward. Will your Lordship ask this Witness any Questions?

Lord Balmerino. No, my Lords.

James Barclay sworn.

Mr. Noel. Look upon the Noble Lord, the Prisoner at the Bar. Do you know him?——Barclay. Yes.

Mr. Noel. Did you see him at any Time in January last?

Barclay. Yes, I did.

Mr. Noel. Where did you see him?——Barclay. At Glasgow.

Mr. Noel. I think you say you saw him at Glasgow in January last?

Barclay. Yes.

Mr. Noel. Who was he with at Glasgow?

Barclay. He was with the Pretender's Son.

Mr. Noel. Was he with any Forces, and what Forces, at Glasgow?

Barclay. He was Colonel of the second Troop of Guards.

Mr. Noel. Who did those Guards belong to?

Barclay. He was Colonel of the second Troop of the Pretender's Son's Life-Guards.

Mr. Noel. Were they called by any particular Name?

Barclay. They were called Mr. Arthur Elphinston's Guards.

Mr. Noel. What Elphinston?

Barclay. He that is Lord Balmerino now, the Prisoner at the Bar.

Mr. Noel. How was he armed?

Barclay. He was armed with a Broad Sword, and a Brace of Pistols.

Mr. Noel. How did he march?—Barclay. At the Head of his Troop.

Mr. Noel. Where did you see him march?

Barclay. I saw him march out of Glasgow and Kelso.

Mr. Noel. Did he march out with his Sword drawn?

Barclay. I don't remember.

Mr. Noel. Had he Pistols?——Barclay. He had Pistols.

Mr. Noel. How was he dressed?

Barclay. He had a blue Coat turned up with Red, a Gold-laced Hat, and a white Cockade.

Mr. Noel. I desire to know what Cockades were worn by the Forces in the Service of the Pretender's Son?——Barclay. White Cockades.

Mr. Noel. Were they the distinguishing Mark of the Rebel Forces?

Barclay. Yes.

Mr. Noel. Did you see the Noble Lord at the Bar at Bannockburn?

Barclay. Yes, I saw him there several Times at the Head of his Troop.

Mr. Noel. Were they drawn up in any Form?

Barclay. They were drawn up at the Pretender's Lodging-Door.

Mr. Noel. Where was that?—Barclay. At one Mr. Paterson's.

Mr. Noel. Was he armed then?——Barclay. Yes.

Mr. Noel. How was he armed?

Barclay. With a Broad Sword, and a Brace of Pistols.

Mr. Noel. Did you see him at any Time at Stirling?

Barclay. I saw him at Stirling; but not at the Head of his Troop.

Mr. Noel. I desire to ask one general Question, Whether, at all the Places where you saw him, he was armed, and with Troops belonging to the Pretender?——Barclay. Yes.

Sir John Strange. He says, he saw the Troop drawn up at the Pretender's Lodging-Door: I desire to know, Whether the Pretender's Son saw the Troops drawn up?

Barclay. I don't know whether he saw them drawn up; but I know he was there at that Time.

Lord High Steward. Would you ask this Witness any Questions?

Lord Balmerino. No, my Lords.

David Gray sworn.

Sir Richard Lloyd. Do you know the Prisoner at the Bar?

Gray. Yes, Sir.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. How long have you known him?

Gray. I have known him about six or seven Years.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Do you remember him at any Time marching with any Guards or Soldiers with him?

Gray. Yes, I saw him march with a Troop of Horse.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Where was that, and when?

Gray. After Carlisle was taken by the Rebels, I saw him marching Southward with the second Troop of Life-Guards.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. What, the Pretender's Life-Guards?—Gray. Yes.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Whither were they marching?——Gray. Southwards.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Did the rest of the Rebel Army march at that Time?

Gray. Yes, and the same Way.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Was the Prisoner armed?——Gray. Yes.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. How was he armed?

Gray. With a Broad Sword and Pistols.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. What Dress was he in?

Gray. He was in Blue, turn'd up with Red.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Whose Dress was that?

Gray. It was the Dress of all the Guards.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. What Diſtinction had he in his Hat?

Gray. Nothing but a white Cockade.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Was that any Mark of Diſtinction?

Gray. No, it was no Mark of Diſtinction at all; for they all wore it.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. You ſay you ſaw his Lordſhip march Southward: Did you ſee him afterwards on his March Northward?

Gray. I ſaw him march from Elgin of Murray towards Inverneſs, a little before the Battle of Culloden.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Was he then armed?——Gray. Yes.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. How was he armed?

Gray. In the ſame Form as he was before.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. How was he dreſſed?

Gray. In the ſame Cloaths he was before.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Was he then at the Head of his Troop?

Gray. Yes, he was.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. Do you ſpeak of the ſame Life-Guards?—Gray. Yes.

Sir Rich. Lloyd. How long was it before the Battle of Culloden that you ſaw him at the Head of his Troop?—Gray. About ten Days.

Mr. Attorney General. I deſire he may explain who he meant, when he ſaid, they all wore a white Cockade.

Gray. The Rebel Army.

Lord Bal. I obſerve, that none of the Witneſſes who have been called, have made good the Charge againſt me, that I was at Carliſle on the 10th of November, nor for ſome time afterwards. I believe it will be to little Purpoſe to go any further; and am ſorry I have taken up ſo much of your Lordſhips Time; for I was of Opinion, that, if any Article in the Indictment was not good againſt me, all the Indictment fell.

Lord High Steward. What does your Lordſhip inſiſt upon? Do you inſiſt on the Day being miſtaken in the Indictment, or that you were not preſent at the actual Taking either of the Town or Caſtle of Carliſle by the Rebels?

Lord Bal. That I was not at Carliſle, either at the Taking of the Town or the Caſtle.

Mr. Serjeant Skinner. I beg Leave to call another Witneſs.

James Paterſon ſworn.

Serj. Skin. Look at the Noble Lord there: Do you know the Noble Lord?——Pater. Yes, I know the Noble Lord very well.

Serj. Skin. How long have you known him?

Pater. Ever ſince we marched from Lauder.

Serj. Skin. What Time was that?

Pater. I remember it was the firſt Night we marched from Dalkeith.

Serj. Skin. What Time was that you marched from Dalkeith?

Pater. I don't remember the Time particularly.

Serj. Skin. How long before Chriſtmas was it?

Pater. I can't ſay I remember how long it was before Chriſtmas.

Serj. Skin. Where was it this Noble Lord lodged?

Pater. He lodged at the ſame Houſe I happened to be in.

Serj. Skin. What Command had he at that Time?

Pater. I did not know that he had any Command then.

Serj. Skin. Do you remember his coming to England?——Pater. Yes.

Serj. Skin. Do you remember what Month that was?

Pater. No; I don't remember the Time exactly.

Serj. Skin. Do you remember being at Long Town?——Pater. Yes.

Serj. Skin. Was the Pretender's Son at Long Town?——Pater. Yes.

Serj. Skin. Was Lord Balmerino there?

Pater. He was there as a Witneſs to the proclaiming the Pretender.

Serj. Skin. Was you preſent when the Pretender was proclaimed? And was he there?——Pater. Yes.

Serj. Skin. In what Manner did the Noble Lord attend there, when the Pretender was proclaimed?

Pater. My Lord only appeared as one of the Volunteers with the Pretender's Life-Guards.

Serj. Skin. Was that Lord at the Bar with them?——Pater. Yes.

Serj. Skin. Was he at the Head of them then?

Pater. No; he ſtood only among the reſt.

Serj. Skin. What Dreſs had he on?

Pater. A blue Coat with red Facings.

Serj. Skin. What was the uniform Dreſs of thoſe Guards?

Pater. A blue Coat with red Facings.

Serj. Skin. Had he any Thing in his Hat?

Pater. Yes; he wore a Cockade.

Serj. Skin. What Colour was his Cockade?——Pater. White.

Serj. Skin. Was that wore by all the Pretender's Forces?—Pater. Yes.

Serj. Skin. Where did you ſee my Lord next?—Pater. At Lancaſter.

Serj. Skin. What was he doing there?

Pater. He was Witneſs to the proclaiming the Pretender there.

Serj. Skin. Were there any Guards there?

Pater. I remember very well all the Life-Guards were preſent there, and the Priſoner was with them.

Serj. Skin. How did the Priſoner at the Bar appear there?

Pater. He was at the Head of his Troop there.

Serj. Skin. How was he armed?

Pater. With a Brace of Piſtols and a Sword.

Serj. Skin. What Sort of a Sword was it?—Pater. A Highland Sword.

Serj. Skin. Was it drawn?——Pater. Yes.

Serj. Skin. Where did you ſee him next?

Pater. I remember to have ſeen him at the Battle of Falkirke.

Serj. Skin. Was he at the Head of any Forces there?

Pater. Yes; he was at the Head of his Corps there.

Serj. Skin. Was his Sword drawn then?——Pater. Yes.

Serj. Skin. Was the Troop engaged?—Pater. No; I think it was not.

Serj. Skin. Do you know what became of him afterwards?

Pater. I ſaw him frequently afterwards; but I can't tell any particular Place, but at the Battle of Culloden.

Serj. Skin. Where did you ſee him then?

Pater. I remember to have ſeen him drawn up at the Head of his Corps at the Battle of Culloden.

Serj. Skinner. Was his Sword drawn?

Pater. Yes, his Sword was drawn.

Serj. Skin. Did you ſee him any where afterwards?

Pater. I ſaw him afterwards at Caſtle Grant; I ſaw him come in there after the Battle of Culloden.

Serj. Skin. Was he taken Priſoner there?

Pater. As far as I can tell, my Lord ſurrendered there.

Mr. At. Gen. Do you remember to have ſeen the Noble Lord at Carliſle?

Pater. Yes, I remember to have ſeen my Lord march into Carliſle on their Retreat, at the Head of his own Corps.

Mr. At. Gen. We have done with this Witneſs: Will the Noble Lord aſk him any Queſtions?

Lord Bal. He might ſee me at Long Town, but not at Carliſle at the proclaiming the Pretender; for I was not there till a Fortnight after.

Mr. At. Gen. Did you ſee the Priſoner at Carliſle?

Pater. As far as I remember any thing in the World, I ſaw my Lord there.

Lord Bal. What was this Witneſs there?

Pater. My Lord, I was a Gentleman's Servant.

Lord Bal. I don't remember him: I want to know what Regiment this Man was in; or what he was; and what was his Buſineſs?

L. H. S. You hear what his Lordſhip ſays: What was you there?

Pat. I was a Gentleman's Servant in the Firſt Troop of Life-Guards.

L. H. S. Whoſe Life-Guards?

Pat. The Pretender's Guards: I was Servant to Mr. Hume.

Lord Bal. I was at Long Town then.

Roger M'Donald ſworn.

Mr. At. Gen. Give an Account, whether you ſaw the Priſoner march with the Rebel Army, at the Time of their firſt Setting-out, either in Scotland or England, and where.

M'Don. The firſt Time I ſaw him was at Holyrood-Houſe.

At. Gen. What did you ſee him do there?

M'Don. The only Thing that I obſerved was, That I ſaw the Priſoner with the Guards; but he was in no Place of Diſtinction.

At. Gen. What Guards?---M'Don. The Pretender's Guards.

At. Gen. Where did you ſee him with them?

M'Don. In the Court of Holyrood-Houſe.

At. Gen. Was the Pretender's Son at Holyrood-Houſe at that Time?

M'Don. He was at Edinburgh at that Time.

At. Gen. Where did you ſee him the next Time?

M'Don. The ſecond Time that I remember to have ſeen the Priſoner, was on the Retreat, coming from Derby, entering into the Town of Manchеſter, when the Horſe were formed at the Outſide of the Town of Manchеſter.

At. Gen. How did the Priſoner appear there?

M'Don. With his Sword drawn at the Head of his Squadron.

At. Gen. Was the Priſoner at the Bar at the Head of thoſe Rebels that were drawn up?

M'Don. Yes; I remember to have ſeen the Priſoner in particular.

At. Gen. Did he command any Part of the Rebel Army?

M'Don. Not to my Knowledge; but I remember to have ſeen him there.

At. Gen. Do you remember ſeeing him any where elſe?

M'Don. The next Time I particularly remember was, that I ſaw him at the Battle of Falkirke, after the Squadron was formed, and Lord Elcho's Horſe were drawn up there.

At. Gen. Did you ſee the Priſoner command any Horſe there?

M'Don. The Squadron was not fully formed when I ſaw him; but I remember to have ſeen the Priſoner at the Bar at the Head of a Squadron of Horſe there.

At. Gen. Did you, at any Time ſee him marching out of Elgin of Murray to Inverneſs, at the Head of the ſame Squadron?

M'Don. I remember to have ſeen the Priſoner at the Head of the ſame Squadron at Inverneſs.

At. Gen. Did you ſee him in any particular Dreſs at that Time?

M'Don. I don't remember his Dreſs then; but at Manchеſter I remember it was a Suit of Blue turned up with red Cuffs.

At. Gen. Was it the Uniform Dreſs of any Part of the Pretender's Army?

M'Don. It was the Uniform Dreſs of the Pretender's Guards.

At. Gen. Was there any particular diſtinguiſhing Mark that he wore?

M'Don. I can't ſay I do remember any.

At. Gen. Had he a white Cockade?---M'Don. Yes; he had.

At. Gen. Was that the common diſtinguiſhing Mark of the Rebel Army?

M'Don. Yes; it was the diſtinguiſhing Mark. They all wore white Cockades; that was the general Thing that was worn.

At. Gen. We will trouble your Lordſhips with no more Witneſſes.

L. H. S. Will your Lordſhip aſk this Witneſs any Queſtions?

Lord Bal. No, my Lords; I am ſorry I have taken up ſo much of your Lordſhips Time.

L. H. S. The King's Counſel having gone through their Evidence, now is your Lordſhip's Time to make your Defence.

Lord Bal. My Lords, I have ſaid all that I have to ſay. I obſerve, that none of the Witneſſes have agreed upon the Day charged in the Indictment; and I have nothing elſe to ſay.

L. H. S. You ſay the Witneſſes have not proved, That your Lordſhip was at Carliſle on the particular Day laid in the Indictment: But the Witneſſes have proved, That they ſaw you in Arms at the Head of your Troop of Rebels at Carliſle. If your Lordſhip can diſprove that Fact, this is your Time to do it. Have you any Thing to ſay in Support of what you have obſerved, about the particular Day not being proved, as laid in the Indictment? I ſhould be glad to know upon what your Lordſhip would put your Defence. They have proved you to be in Arms at Carliſle in November.

Lord Bal. But not at the Taking of Carliſle; and I can prove, I was not there at the Time Carliſle was taken; but was twelve Miles off.

Mr. Serj. Skinner. The Witneſſes don't ſay he was at the Surrender of the Town; but he was in the Town after it was taken by the Rebels; and that he marched into the Town at the Head of his Troop. He was with them, on their March, at Long Town and Lancaſter, and ſeveral other Places; and, if we have made out any one Fact laid in the Indictment, ment, it is sufficient, and, I hope, your Lordships will think the Treason is proved.

Mr. At. Gen. I beg your Lordships would spare me a few Words upon this Occasion: And, if I am right, I take the Prisoner's Objection to be this, That the Witnesses for the Crown have not proved the Facts to be committed on the precise Day laid in the Indictment.

Lord Bal. That is not the Case: You mistake it intirely.

L. H. S. My Lord Balmerino objects, That it is not proved he was at Carlisle, when it was actually taken by the Rebels.

At. Gen. Then I apprehend the Objection to be only this, That he was not there at the Taking of Carlisle.

Lord Bal. That is the Objection.

L. H. S. What have the King's Counsel to say to that Objection?

Mr. Serj. Skinner. My Lords, the Objection made by the Noble Peer at your Lordships Bar, is, That on the tenth Day of November, the Day laid in the Indictment, he was not at Carlisle; and that he was not at the Taking of that City and Castle.

My Lords, The Day laid in an Indictment is merely Matter of Form. Some Day, previous to the Indictment, must be laid; but the Proof is not tied up to that Time: Any Proof, before or after the Day, may be admitted; and it is sufficient, if it be before the Time of preferring the Indictment.

And suppose the Noble Lord was not present at the Time that the City and Castle of Carlisle were actually taken; yet it is proved, that he marched into the City armed, and at the Head of his Troop, the second Day after the Castle was taken; so that he was in the Possession of the City and Castle. And the Detainer of the King's Town or Castle is High Treason: And where many Acts of Treason are laid in an Indictment of High Treason, if any one Charge be made good the Person must be convicted.

I therefore submit, That there is no Weight in the Objection made by this Noble Lord.

At. Gen. My Lords, The Objection, if it can be of any Use to the Noble Lord, must be to shew, that the Evidence is not sufficient to induce your Lordships to find him guilty. The Indictment consists of a general Charge of levying War, together with the Circumstances of being arrayed and assembled in a warlike Manner against his Majesty, and the particular Fact of entering, possessing, taking, and defending the City and Castle of Carlisle against his Majesty. The former is fully proved; for every one of the Witnesses prove, he marched in the Rebel Army, arrayed in a hostile Manner, riding at the Head of the second Troop of the Pretender's Son's Horse-Guards. As to the other Fact, of his entering and taking of Carlisle; it is proved by three Witnesses, That the Prisoner came into Carlisle, at the Head of his Troop, when the Rebels were in Possession of it, and held it for the Pretender: Which is a full, positive Proof of that Fact.

But the Noble Lord objects, That he was not present at the Taking.

There are two clear Answers to this: One, That neither the Law, nor the Charge in the Indictment makes that necessary, if it appears that he did enter it, and was in Possession of it, in a hostile Manner.

Another is, That if that particular Fact was not at all proved, it could be of no Service to his Lordship, while there is another Act of Treason charged and proved.

By the Law, every Entry and Possession of the King's Town or Fortress in a hostile Manner, against the King, is High Treason; nor does the Law distinguish how that Entry and Possession is obtained, if it is done by Rebels, and in Opposition to the Royal Authority. His Lordship neither denies his Entry and holding the Possession for the Pretender, nor disputes the Weight of the Evidence that proves it: And it can do him no good, if it appeared never so clearly, that the Time of his personal Entry was not till after the Rebel Army had made themselves Masters of it.

But if this Fact was as doubtful as it is clear, the Evidence of the other Part of the Charge is certain and unobjected to; and there is nothing plainer, in Point of Law, than that the Proof of any one Overt Act, laid in the Indictment, is sufficient, though no Evidence is given of any others that are charged.

The Noble Lord, though he now seems to give it up, did object at first, That the Evidence did not prove the Treason on the Tenth of November, the Day charged in the Indictment. Lest that should have any Weight, I would only say, That it has been frequently adjudged, that, though a precise Day must be charged, the Day is immaterial in Point of Proof: So it was particularly in the Case of Sir Henry Vane, in the Time of King Charles the Second: He was indicted for High Treason; and it was laid in the Indictment, That the Facts were committed on a certain Day, in the Eleventh Year of King Charles the Second. It was only proved, that they were committed in the First Year of his Reign, and yet held it was sufficient to support the Indictment.

The Question, therefore, on the Whole, will only be, Whether treasonable Acts of Hostility have been proved upon the Noble Lord? And, as that can admit of no Doubt, neither can his being guilty of the Treason, charged on him by this Indictment, admit of any.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, I don't know whether it is necessary for all of us to speak in this Case. For my Part, I shall say but a Word or two. Here are several Acts of Treason that are alledged in the Indictment; and whoever hath given the Noble Lord, who is the Prisoner, to understand, that every particular Act must be proved (if any such Advice can have been given him) hath been mistaken; because it is clear and certain, in Point of Law, that though ever so many Facts are laid in the Indictment, yet, if there is legal Proof of any one of those Facts, which is High Treason, it is sufficient to found your Lordships Judgment, that the Person so proved guilty of any particular Fact, is to be adjudged guilty of High Treason.

Your Lordships, however, will be pleased to observe, how many particular Acts are laid in the Indictment, and whether they are not all proved. First, It is laid, That the Noble Lord at the Bar did, with many others, arm, array, and dispose himself in a warlike and hostile Manner against the King. This, my Lords, is clearly proved; for the Witnesses have told your Lordships, That he had the Command of the second Troop of the Pretender's Life-Guard, which was Part of the Rebel Army: That he marched at the Head of this Troop, with Drums beating, and Colours displayed: That he wore a particular Habit, which was Blue turned up with Red, a laced Hat, and a white Cockade, being the Uniform Dress of the Troop: And the being thus arrayed in this hostile Manner, my Lord Hale, in his first Volume, H. P. C. 150, 152. says, is levying War against the King; and this has been fully proved to your Lordships against this Noble Lord, the Prisoner at the Bar, by more than two Witnesses. His being present at several Places at the Proclaiming of the Pretender has been likewise proved to your Lordships: And we use it as a Circumstance to lead your Lordships Judgment, with what Intent he was thus armed and arrayed in a hostile Manner, which was plainly in order to dethrone his Majesty, and place a Pretender upon the Throne. This has been proved against the Noble Lord at the Bar to have occurred at two Places, where this Proclamation was made.

Another Circumstance which has been proved, is, his being drawn up and formed at the Battle of Falkirke; and though the Witnesses do not say, that that Party of the Pretender's Life-Guards was actually engaged upon this Occasion, yet, I humbly apprehend, that is not material. There can be no Doubt, in Point of Law, but that every body, who is so drawn up in a warlike and hostile Manner, is waging War, though every Party is not engaged. He was there drawn up with his Forces, with his Broad Sword drawn, and ready to engage at that Time. And, my Lords, we trace him from thence to the glorious Field of Culloden; and your Lordships observe, he was there an Officer, leading his Squadron, and commanding the second Troop of Life-Guards of the Pretender; and after the Disaster which befel them that Day, and for which we have great Reason to be thankful, the Noble Lord at the Bar surrendered himself to the King's Forces, as one of those engaged against the King at that Battle. My Lords, lay all these Things together, and your Lordships will see, it is no way necessary to prove, whether this Noble Lord was present at the first Taking of Carlisle, or not: Which seems to be the only Point on which the Noble Lord has rested his Defence.

But, my Lords, if it was necessary to shew that, I apprehend it is proved. The Taking of a Town or a City is not the Act of a single Man, but the Act of a great Number of Persons, got together for that Purpose; therefore, as to any Man, who was a Part of the Rebel Army, and went into the City of Carlisle, after it surrendered to the Rebels, and joined with them, it is an actual Taking of that City: For it was the Force and Terror without the City, and the appearing in the hostile Manner, already described, which occasioned the Surrender of the Place. Every one, therefore, who joined in this Force and Terror, is instrumental in the Taking of the Town. It is proved, that he entered into Carlisle, and was in Possession of the Town; it is proved, by more than one Witness, that he did it at the Head of the Pretender's Life-Guards: He lay there one Night, while the Rebels were in Possession of the Town, and then he marched out Southward. Then there is his returning back to Carlisle; taking Possession of it the second Time; his being there with the Young Pretender; his going away with him and the Rebel Army, and leaving a Garrison in the Town, to defend it against the King's Forces, when they should come up. My Lords, this, with Submission to your Lordships, is a strong and clear Proof, that he entered and took Possession of Carlisle, and kept it against the King, as laid in the Indictment; and whether he remained there a longer or a shorter Time, whether he lay one Night or twenty Nights in it, makes no Difference in Point of Law.

I don't observe, the Noble Lord lays much Stress upon the Tenth of November's being laid in the Indictment, as the Day on which the Treason was committed; and therefore I forbear to trouble your Lordships upon it; for, to be sure, it does not signify, whether the Facts committed were on the Tenth of November, or any other Day.

My Lords, I apprehend every particular Act of Treason laid in the Indictment, against the Noble Lord at the Bar, is fully proved; and therefore I submit the Whole to your Lordships Judgment.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords,——

Lord Bal. I am satisfied I was mistaken; and ask your Lordships Pardon, for taking up so much of your Time.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I was going to have said, That I did not apprehend it necessary for me to speak upon this Point from any Difficulty in the Objection. But as the Answer to the Objection depended not upon natural, but legal Reasoning, and established Forms, and as the Noble Lord had chose not to have the Assistance of Counsel in stating and enforcing his Objection, I would, for his Satisfaction, have said a Word or Two, not only to shew that the Matter is settled by the uniform Authority of all our Books, and many adjudged Cases; but to have explained why it has been settled, that the Treason must be laid in the Indictment to have been committed on a particular Day, and yet, at the Trial, need not be proved to have been committed on that precise Day. As he has declared himself satisfied, there is no Occasion to say any thing.

Then the Lord High-Steward returned back to his Chair.

Lord Pref. My Lords, I move your Lordships to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

L. H. S. Is it your Lordships Pleasure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?

Lords. Ay, ay.

L. H. S. This House is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords and others returned to the Chamber of Parliament, in the same Order they came down: And after some Time, the House was adjourned again into Westminster-Hall; and the Peers being there seated, the Lord High Steward in his Chair, and the House resumed, the Serjeant-at-Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as usual.

L. H. S. Your Lordships were pleased, in the Chamber of Parliament, to come to a Resolution, That the Opinion of the learned and reverend Judges should be taken upon the following Question, viz. Whether it is necessary, that an Overt Act of High-Treason should be proved to have been committed on the particular Day laid in the Indictment? Is it your Lordships Pleasure, that the Judges do now give their Opinions on that Question?

Lords,

Lords. Ay, ay.

L. H. S. My Lord Chief-Juſtice.

L. C. J. Lee. The Queſtion propoſed by your Lordſhips is, Whether it be neceſſary, that an Overt Act of High-Treaſon ſhould be proved to be committed on the particular Day laid in the Indictment?

We are all of Opinion, that it is not neceſſary to prove the Overt Act to be committed on the particular Day laid in the Indictment: But as Evidence may be given of an Overt Act before the Day, ſo it may be after the Day ſpecified in the Indictment; for the Day laid is Circumſtance and Form only, and not material in Point of Proof: And this is the known, conſtant Courſe of Proceeding in Trials.

L. H. S. Lieutenant of the Tower, take my Lord Balmerino from the Bar.

Lord Bal. Will your Lordſhips be pleaſed to allow me to ſpeak two Words?

L. H. S. If you think fit, my Lord:

Lord Bal. Your Lordſhips may think I have had very bad Advice in this Caſe: But to do Juſtice to my Solicitor, Mr. Roſs, he laid my Caſe before Counſel; and he told me, they were of the ſame Opinion with what the King's Counſel have offered: But I myſelf had a Notion, that not being at Carliſle at the Time it was taken, I was not within the Indictment; and I thought there was ſomething in the Objection; and that was the Reaſon of my giving your Lordſhips ſo much Trouble. I am very ſorry for it; and aſk your Lordſhips Pardon.

L. H. S. Has your Lordſhip any thing further to offer?

Lord Bal. No, my Lords.

L. H. S. Lieutenant of the Tower, take my Lord Balmerino from the Bar.

Which was done accordingly.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips have heard the Evidence, and every thing that has been alledged on both Sides; and you have alſo heard the Opinions of the learned and reverend Judges on a particular Queſtion ſtated to them. The Solemnity of your Proceedings requires, that your Lordſhips Opinions on the Queſtion of Guilty or Not Guilty, ſhould be delivered ſeverally in the Abſence of the Priſoner, beginning with the Junior Baron; and that the Priſoner ſhould afterwards be acquainted with the Reſult of thoſe Opinions by me. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to proceed now to give your Opinions on the Queſtion of Guilty, or Not Guilty?

Lords. Ay, ay.

Then the Lord High Steward ſtood up uncovered; and beginning with the youngeſt Peer, ſaid,

L. H. S. Henry Arthur Lord Herbert of Chirbury, what ſays your Lordſhip? Is Arthur Lord Balmerino Guilty of the High-Treaſon whereof he ſtands indicted, or Not Guilty?

Whereupon Henry Arthur Lord Herbert of Chirbury, ſtanding up in his Place uncovered, and laying his right Hand upon his Breaſt, anſwered, Guilty, upon my Honour.

In like Manner the ſeveral Lords aftermentioned, being all that were preſent, anſwered as followeth:

Lionel Cranfield Duke of Dorſet, Lord Preſident of the Council. Guilty, upon my Honour.

Then the Lord High Steward, laying his Right Hand upon his Breaſt, ſaid;

Lord High Steward. My Lords, I am of Opinion, that Arthur Lord Balmerino is guilty of the High-Treaſon whereof he ſtands indicted, upon my Honour.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips have unanimouſly found, that Arthur Lord Balmerino is guilty of the High-Treaſon whereof he ſtands indicted. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure, that he ſhould be called in, and acquainted therewith?—Lords. Ay, Ay.

Proclamation

Proclamation was then made for the Lieutenant of the Tower to bring the Priſoner to the Bar: Which was done in the ſame Order as before; and afterwards Proclamation made for Silence, as uſual.

L. H. S. Arthur Lord Balmerino, The Lords have conſidered of the Charge of High-Treaſon which has been brought againſt you; they have likewiſe conſidered the Evidence, and every thing which your Lordſhip has alledged in your Defence; and, upon the whole Matter, their Lordſhips have unanimouſly found, that you are Guilty of the High-Treaſon, whereof you ſtand indicted.

Lord Preſident. My Lords, I move your Lordſhips to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament: Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?

Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

Then the Lords returned, in the Order before mentioned, to the Chamber of Parliament: And the Houſe being there reſumed;

Ordered, That the ſaid Earls of Kilmarnock and Cromertie, and Lord Balmerino, ſhould be remanded Priſoners to his Majeſty's Tower of London, there to be kept in ſafe Cuſtody; and that they ſhould be brought to the Bar of the Houſe in Weſtminſter-Hall on Wedneſday next, at Eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon, that their Lordſhips might proceed in order to Giving of Judgment upon them.

Wedneſday, July 30, 1746. The Second Day.

THE Lords and others came from the Chamber of Parliament into Weſtminſter-Hall, in the ſame Order as on Monday laſt; and the Peers were there ſeated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair.

L. H. S. The Houſe is reſumed. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure, that the Judges may be covered?

Then the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as uſual; and afterwards the following Proclamation:

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Lieutenant of the Tower of London, bring forth your Priſoners, William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, to the Bar, purſuant to the Order of the Houſe of Lords.

The Deputy Governor of the Tower brought the Priſoners to the Bar in the like Form as before; and then they kneeled down.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips may riſe.

The Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as uſual.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, it appears, That the Three Noble Lords at the Bar have been ſeverally indicted for High-Treaſon, in levying War againſt his Majeſty. They have ſeverally been arraigned; and, to their Indictments, Two of the Noble Lords, the Earls of Kilmarnock and Cromertie, have pleaded Guilty; and the other, my Lord Balmerino, has pleaded Not guilty, and put himſelf upon his Trial by his Peers. As to the Two Noble Lords, who have pleaded Guilty, I pray your Lordſhips Judgment againſt them, according to that Confeſſion; and, as to the Lord Balmerino, who hath pleaded Not guilty, and put himſelf upon his Trial by his Peers, your Lordſhips, upon hearing the Evidence, having found him Guilty, I alſo pray your Lordſhips Judgment accordingly againſt him.

L. H. S. William Earl of Kilmarnock, you ſtand indicted of High-Treaſon, in levying War againſt his Majeſty; to which you have pleaded Guilty, and are thereby convicted: What has your Lordſhip to ſay, Why Judgment of Death ſhould not paſs upon you, according to Law?

Here the Lord High Steward aſked Leave to go down to the Table: Which being done; Proclamation was made for Silence, as uſual.

EARL of KILMARNOCK.

My Lords,

I SHALL not attempt to ſay any thing in Juſtification of a Crime, which is of too heinous a Nature to be vindicated; and which any Endeavour to excuſe would rather aggravate than diminiſh. With unfeigned Humility I am ready to ſubmit to the Sentence I am too conſcious I have deſerved. I have already owned myſelf guilty; and, covered with Confuſion and Grief, I throw myſelf at his Majeſty's Feet for Mercy.

I ſhall plead no Excuſe for my Behaviour, in a Circumſtance which makes me ſo much the more unhappy, as it has effaced my former Character, and blotted out the Memory of my conſtant Attachment to his Majeſty's Intereſt all the preceding Part of my Life.

But, if a Man's former uniform Conduct can be any Evidence of his Principles, and Way of Thinking, I may appeal to mine. My Lords, I appeal to the World, if ever any Sentiment, of the Nature of the Crime I am now arraigned for, ever appeared in it; or if the contrary was not very conſpicuous through my whole Life and Converſation.

My Sphere of Action, indeed was narrow; but, as much as I could in that Sphere, it is well known, I always exerted myſelf to the utmoſt in every Part of his Majeſty's Service I had an Opportunity to act in, from my firſt Appearance in the World, to the Time I was drawn into this Crime, for which I now appear before your Lordſhips; in which I did not engage till very late, not till many Weeks after the Battle of Preſton.

While I was engaged, it was my conſtant Care, as far as it lay in my Power, to protect and prevent any Injuries to his Majeſty's faithful Subjects in their Perſons, Houſes, or Eſtates: For the Truth of which I can appeal to every Town and Country, through which I paſſed, or at any time halted in.

I had the ſame Regard for the Priſoners that were taken: And, I believe, Officers, private Men, and others, will vouch for me, That they had better Uſage, and their Condition was rendered more ſupportable, through my Means, though I never had any particular Charge of them. I muſt at the ſame time own, that all I did, or could do, in this Way, for the Service of particular Perſons, is no Atonement for the Blood I have been acceſſary to the Spilling of; nor do I plead it as ſuch, or at all in Defence of my Crime.

I have a Son, my Lords, who has the Honour to carry his Majeſty's Commiſſion; whoſe Behaviour, I believe, will ſufficiently evince, that he has been educated in the firmeſt Revolution Principles, and brought up with the warmeſt Attachment to his Majeſty's Intereſt, and the higheſt Zeal for his moſt Sacred Perſon, and the Title of his Illuſtrious Houſe to the Crown of theſe Realms.

That he was impreſſed with a firm and ſettled Opinion, That the Revolution was juſt and neceſſary; and that Civil and Religious Liberty and Property cannot be ſecured to the Nation, otherwiſe than by the ſtricteſt Adherence to theſe Principles, and maintaining and ſupporting the Succeſſion to the Crown, as it is by Law eſtabliſhed in the Perſon of his moſt Sacred Majeſty, and his Illuſtrious Houſe.

It was my chief Care to inſtruct him in theſe Principles from his earlieſt Youth; and to confirm him, as he grew up, in the Juſtice and Neceſſity of them to the Good and Welfare of the Nation. And, I thank God, I have ſucceeded: For his Father's Example did not ſhake his Loyalty; the Ties of Nature yielded to thoſe of Duty: He adhered to the Principles of his Family, and nobly expoſed his Life at the Battle of Culloden, in Defence of his King, and the Liberties of Britain; which I, his unfortunate Father, was in Arms to deſtroy.

I was inſtructed in the ſame Principles myſelf from my Infancy, by the beſt of Fathers, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf early on his late Majeſty's Acceſſion, by his Zeal and Activity in ſuppreſſing the Rebellion in 1715 (in which he contracted his Death, that followed ſoon after), as was well known then, and may ſtill be remembered by ſome of your Lordſhips. I then had the Honour to ſerve under him, as far as my Years would admit of, in the ſame Cauſe which my Family had always been remarkable for ſupporting, and which I have ever ſince ſtrictly adhered to, both in my Heart and Practice, till this unhappy Period.

My Lords, I am not one of thoſe dangerous Perſons, who can raiſe a Number of Men when they will, and command them on any Enterprize they pleaſe: My Intereſts lie on the South Side of Forth, in the well inhabited and well affected Counties of Kilmarnock and Falkirk, in the Shires of Ayr and Stirling. I have the Honour to ſpeak to thoſe who know the Map, the Situations of theſe Countries, and the Diſpoſitions of their People: Theſe Places are ſo well affected (and, perhaps, partly through my Means), that any Influence I, or any other, could have on them to the contrary, would be very ſmall; and if I could have had any, I did not uſe it on this Occaſion. Though I was, in the Months of December and January laſt, ſome Weeks at Falkirk, I did not raiſe a ſingle Man out of it; and though, immediately before that, I was a Week at Glaſgow, a few Miles, from Kilmarnock, I brought Nobody from thence. Theſe laſt, indeed, were much ſtrengthened in their loyal Principles by my Father's long Reſidence, and by my being much among them; and I uſed my Endeavours, with Succeſs, to confirm them in thoſe Sentiments, in a Viſit I made them laſt September; when I paſſed ſome Days with them, about the Time of, and after the Battle of Preſton: At that time I got them put in as much Readineſs to act for his Majeſty's Service, as the Law would then admit of; and procured their ſettling a Correſpondence with their neighbouring Boroughs of Ayr and Irvine, for their common Defence: which had ſo good an Effect, that the Town of Kilmarnock alone had ſoon a good Body of Militia on Foot, which marched into Glaſgow the Beginning of Winter.

I cannot omit to inform your Lordſhips, That, at the Battle of Culloden, I not only ſurrendered myſelf, but I ſurrendered when it was very eaſy for me to have eſcaped, as all that Body did with whom I was when they gave Way. Lord Ancram, to whom I made my Surrender, can acquaint your Lordſhips, That, when I came up to him, I was quite alone, at a very great Diſtance from thoſe I had left; and that I neither was running, nor purſued by any Enemy. But though I could have eſcaped, I did not chooſe it; becauſe the Conſequences, in an Inſtant, appeared to me more terrible, more ſhocking, than the moſt painful or ignominious Death. To throw myſelf into the Hands of a Foreign Power, the natural Enemy to my Country, with whom to have Merit, I muſt perſiſt in continued Acts of Violence to my Principles, and of Treaſon and Rebellion againſt my King and Country; I had already been too far engaged with thoſe, who were encouraged by that Power, to think of continuing in ſo criminal an Error; and therefore I choſe to ſurrender, and commit myſelf to his Majeſty's Mercy.

I beg leave to repeat what I ſaid before, That I did not mean to advance any thing in Excuſe, or even in Mitigation of my Crime: I only pray to be looked on, by your Lordſhips, as an Object of his Majeſty's Compaſſion; and, if I am ſo happy, I beg leave to implore your Lordſhips Interceſſion with his Majeſty for Mercy, in my Behalf. It is your Lordſhips Interceſſion, and that of my Countrymen alone, that I implore. I heard there was an Offer of Mediation made by a Foreign Prince at War with his Majeſty; and I heard it with an Indignation that ought to fire the Heart of every Briton, when a French King dares attempt to direct, or in any reſpect influence, the Counſels or Determinations of a King of Britain; or preſume to interpoſe between his Majeſty and his offending Subjects. I was but too far drawn in, and unhappily engaged, with thoſe who were aſſiſted and influenced by that Prince; and I never can ſufficiently teſtify my Sorrow and Repentance for it: But I would look on it as the higheſt Aggravation of my Crime, to hope, or even to wiſh for Favour through his Office, by whoſe Means chiefly, I believe, they were miſled, with whom I was acceſſary to the diſturbing the Peace of theſe Nations, and ſwerving from my Duty and Allegiance to his Majeſty, which all the former Part of my Life I had kept inviolable.

It is by Britons only, that I pray to be recommended to a Britiſh Monarch. If his Majeſty ſhall be pleaſed, from the ſteady Loyalty of my Family, from my Father's paſt Services, from my own conſtant Adherence to his Majeſty's Intereſt, from my preſent Anguiſh for having ever been concerned in this unnatural Rebellion, and from my undiſſembled Sorrow and Remorſe for it, which muſt attend me to my laſt Moments: If from theſe, but much more from his own unbounded Mercy, my Royal Maſter ſhall incline to ſpare that Life which I have juſtly forfeited, let me owe it to his Majeſty through the Interceſſion of your Lordſhips, who are Witneſſes to my Grief and Repentance.

But if Juſtice will not allow of Mercy, my Lords, I will lay down my Life with Patience and Reſignation: My laſt Breath ſhall be employed in the moſt fervent Prayers for the Preſervation and Proſperity of his Majeſty, and his Auguſt Houſe, and to beg his Forgiveneſs, and the Forgiveneſs of my Country.

Lord High Steward. George Earl of Cromertie, You ſtand indicted of High Treaſon, in levying War againſt his Majeſty; to which you have pleaded Guilty, and are thereby convicted: What has your Lordſhip to ſay, Why Judgment of Death ſhould not paſs upon you, according to Law?

EARL of CROMERTIE.

I HAVE now the Misfortune to appear before your Lordſhips, guilty of an Offence of ſuch a Nature, as juſtly merits the higheſt Indignation of his Majeſty, your Lordſhips, and the Publick: And it was from a Conviction of my Guilt, that I did not preſume to trouble your Lordſhips with any Defence. As I have committed Treaſon, it is the laſt Thing I would mean to juſtify it: My only Plea ſhall be, your Lordſhips Compaſſion; my only Refuge, his Majeſty's Clemency.

Under this heavy Load of Affliction, I have ſtill the Satisfaction, my Lords, of hoping, that my paſt Conduct, before the Breaking out of the Rebellion, was irreproachable, as to my Attachment to the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, both in Church and State: And, in Evidence of my Affection to the Government, upon the Breaking out of the Rebellion, I can appeal to the then Commander in Chief of his Majeſty's Forces at Inverneſs, and to the Lord Preſident of the Court of Seſſion in Scotland, who, I am ſure, will do Juſtice to my Conduct upon that Occaſion.

But, my Lords, notwithſtanding my determined Reſolution in Favour of the Government, I was moſt unhappily ſeduced from that Loyalty in an unguarded Moment, by the Arts of deſperate and deſigning Men: And it is notorious, my Lords, that no ſooner did I awake from that Deluſion, than I felt a Remorſe for my Departure from my Duty; but it was too late.

Nothing now, my Lords, remains, but to throw myſelf, my Life, and Fortune upon your Lordſhips Compaſſion; but thoſe, my Lords, as to myſelf, are the leaſt Part of my Miſery.

I have involved an innocent Wife (no Party to my Guilt), and, with her, an unborn Infant, to ſhare its Penalty: I have involved my eldeſt Son, whoſe Infancy, and Regard to his Parent, hurried him down the Stream of Rebellion: I have involved alſo Eight innocent Children, who muſt feel their Parent's Puniſhment, before they know his Guilt.

Let them, my Lords, be Pledges to his Majeſty; let them be Pledges to your Lordſhips; let them be Pledges to my Country, for Mercy: Let the ſilent Eloquence of their Grief and Tears, let the powerful Language of innocent Nature, ſupply my Want of Eloquence and Perſuaſion: Let me enjoy Mercy no longer than I deſerve it; and let me no longer enjoy Life, than I ſhall endeavour to efface the Crimes I have been guilty of. Whilſt I thus intercede for your Lordſhips Recommendation to his Majeſty for Mercy, let my Remorſe for my Guilt, as a Subject; let the Sorrows of my Heart, as a Huſband; let the Anguiſh of my Mind, as a Father, ſpeak the reſt of my Miſery! Your Lordſhips are Men, you feel as Men; but may none of you ever ſuffer the ſmalleſt Part of what I ſuffer!

But, after all, if my Safety ſhall be found inconſiſtent with that of the Publick, and nothing but my Blood thought neceſſary to atone for my unhappy Crimes; if the Sacrifice of my Life, my Fortune, and Family, are judged indiſpenſable for ſtopping the loud Demands of publick Juſtice; if, notwithſtanding all the Allegations that can be urged in my Favour, the bitter Cup is not to paſs from me; not mine, but thy Will, O God, be done!

Lord High Steward. Arthur Lord Balmerino, When you were laſt at this Bar, I acquainted your Lordſhip, That upon your Trial, your Peers had unanimouſly found you guilty of the High Treaſon of which you ſtand indicted, whereby you are convicted: What have you to ſay, why Judgment of Death ſhould not paſs upon you, according to Law?

Lord Bal. My Lords, I have here a Paper in my Hand, which ſays, There are ſome Reaſons, why Judgment ſhould not paſs againſt me. I deſire your Lordſhips will let it be read.

L. H. S. Will your Lordſhip pleaſe to read it yourſelf?

Lord Bal. I deſire your Lordſhips would let it be read.

L. H. S. My Lords, This Paper, which is offered by my Lord Balmerino, cannot be read at the Table; but your Lordſhips may give Leave, that a Clerk may go down to the Bar, and read it for the Priſoner.

Lords. Ay, ay.

Clerk of the Crown reads the Paper; viz.

July 29th, 1746.

IT is conceived, that the late Act of Parliament, impowering his Majeſty to tranſport ſuch as are taken in Arms from one County to another, where they may be tried by the Courſe of the Common Law, did not take place, till after the Time that the Facts, implying Treaſon, were actually committed by the accuſed Priſoners; and, if ſo, the Grand Jury of Surry, or of any other County whatſoever, where theſe Acts of Treaſon are not alledged to have been committed, could not, agreeable to Law, find Bills againſt ſuch Priſoners: And it may, on that ſcore, be prayed, That the Indictment be quaſhed, or that an Arreſt of Judgment be thereupon granted.

Nat. Williamſon.

If the Bill, found by the Grand Jury, has any Flaw, ſo as to make it illegal, all the Superſtructure falls of Courſe.

Nat. Williamſon.

L. H. S. What has your Lordſhip to offer upon this Paper?

Lord Bal. I ſay, my Lords, if the Grand Jury of the County of Surry had not Power to find a Bill of Indictment againſt me, I can't have Judgment paſs againſt me; for I can't ſee, how the Indictment can be good.

L. H. S. Has your Lordſhip any thing more to offer?

Lord Bal. No, my Lords.

Lord High Steward. Your Lordſhips hear what is alledged by my Lord Balmerino.

Earl of Bath. I deſire my Lord Balmerino may be aſked, Whether he knows, that he is intitled to have Counſel, if he thinks fit?

L. H. S. Has not your Lordſhip been acquainted, before this Time, that you were intitled to have Counſel, if you thought fit to apply for it?

Lord Bal. Yes, my Lords; I was acquainted ſome Time ago, that I might have Counſel; but I have not had Time to ſpeak to any on this Paper. I received this Paper but within this half Hour from the Conſtable of the Tower.

L. H. S. If you were told, that you might have Counſel, why did not your Lordſhip apply for Counſel before?

Lord Bal. I told your Lordſhips the other Day, That I did not know I ſhould have Occaſion for Counſel. I have had no Counſel to adviſe me on this Paper. Do your Lordſhips think fit to allow me Counſel now?

L. H. S. Doth your Lordſhip now move for Counſel?

Lord Bal. Yes, my Lords, I do, upon this Point only.

The Lord High Steward went back to his Chair.

L. H. S. My Lords, By the Statute of the Seventh of King William the Third, for regulating Trials in Caſes of High-Treaſon, my Lord Balmerino might have had Counſel aſſigned him by your Lordſhips to make his full Defence, if he had thought fit to apply for that Purpoſe: And as he had long ago, by your Order, a Sollicitor aſſigned him, with Liberty of Acceſs to him at all ſeaſonable Times, he admits, that he was rightly informed concerning that Matter. It ſeems his Lordſhip did not think it proper to apply for Counſel before now, though he admitted, on Monday laſt, that he had had the Advice of Counſel upon his Caſe; but he has now moved your Lordſhips to aſſign him Counſel, to ſpeak to one particular Point offered by him in Arreſt of Judgment. As this is the State of the Proceeding, it is proper for your Lordſhips Conſideration, Whether before you appoint Counſel to argue a particular Point, you will not have that Point ſo far opened, as to ſee, whether there is any Colour in it, or not. This will beſt appear, by hearing one of the King's Counſel ſtate the Matter upon the Act of this Seſſion of Parliament, referred to by the Paper which was juſt now read; and then poſſibly my Lord himſelf may be ſo well ſatisfied, as not to inſiſt on having Counſel aſſigned to argue it.

Duke of Newcaſtle. As the Priſoner at the Bar has made his Objection, and moved an Arreſt of Judgment, I think one of the King's Counſel ought to have Liberty to be heard to that Matter. Your Lordſhips will then ſee, what Weight there is in the Objection inſiſted on by the Priſoner, and be the better able to determine about aſſigning Counſel to argue it. I am therefore of Opinion, that the King's Counſel ſhould be heard in the Manner propoſed by my Lord High Steward.

Earl Granville. By the known Rules and Uſage of Parliament, there can be no Debate in this Place; and therefore I move your Lordſhips to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

L. H. S. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?

Lords. Ay, ay.

L. H. S. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

The Lords, and others, returned to the Chamber of Parliament in the ſame Order they came down; and, after ſome time, the Houſe was adjourned again into Weſtminſter-Hall; and the Peers being there ſeated, the Lord High Steward in his Chair, and the Houſe reſumed, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence, as uſual.

L. H. S. My Lord Balmerino, The Lords have, in their Houſe above, unanimouſly come to this Reſolution, That I ſhould aſk your Lordſhip, Whether you do now deſire that Counſel ſhould be aſſigned you; and that I ſhould acquaint you, that in caſe you do deſire it, their Lordſhips will aſſign you ſuch Counſel as you think fit to propoſe.

Lord Bal. Yes, my Lords, I do.

L. H. S. What Counſel does your Lordſhip deſire ſhould be aſſigned you?

Lord Bal. Mr. Wilbraham and Mr. Forreſter, my Lords.

Lord Preſident. I move, that your Lordſhips will adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

L. H. S. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?

Lords. Ay, ay.

L. H. S. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

Then the Lords went back, in the Order beforementioned, to the Chamber of Parliament.

And the Houſe being there reſumed;

Ordered, That Mr. Wilbraham and Mr. Forreſter be aſſigned Counſel for the Lord Balmerino, as deſired; and that they may have Acceſs to him at all ſeaſonable Times.

Ordered, That the Earls of Kilmarnock and Cromertie, and the Lord Balmerino, be remanded Priſoners to his Majeſty's Tower of London, and there kept in ſafe Cuſtody, until the further Order of this Houſe.

Ordered, That this Houſe will proceed further, in order to the giving Judgment againſt the ſaid Lords on Friday next, at eleven of the Clock; and that they be then brought to the Bar of this Houſe, in Weſtminſter-Hall, for that Purpoſe.

Friday, Auguſt 1ſt, 1746.

THE Lords, and others, came from the Chamber of Parliament into Weſtminſter Hall, in the ſame Order as on Monday laſt; and the Peers were there ſeated, and the Lord High Steward in his Chair.

Lord High Steward. My Lords, the Houſe is reſumed.

Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure, that the Judges have Leave to be covered?

The Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence; and afterwards the following Proclamation:

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Lieutenant of the Tower of London, bring forth your Priſoners, William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, and Arthur Lord Balmerino, to the Bar, purſuant to the Order of the Houſe of Lords.

The Deputy-Governor of the Tower brought the Priſoners to the Bar, in the like Form as before; and then they kneeled down.

Lord

Lord High Steward. Your Lordſhips may riſe.

Mr. Wilbraham and Mr. Forreſter, the Counſel aſſigned to the Lord Balmerino, attended.

L. H. S. My Lord Balmerino, when you were laſt at this Bar, you thought fit to move in Arreſt of Judgment; and deſired, that Counſel might be aſſigned you: Whereupon the Lords have been pleaſed to aſſign you ſuch Counſel as you propoſed. Does your Lordſhip now deſire that your Counſel may be heard?

Lord Bal. As your Lordſhips have been pleaſed to allow me Counſel, I have adviſed with them; and my Counſel tell me, there is nothing in that Paper, which I delivered in on Wedneſday laſt, that will be of any Uſe to me: So I will not give your Lordſhips any further Trouble about it.

L. H. S. If I underſtand your Lordſhip right, you do not deſire your Counſel ſhould ſpeak to that Matter.

Lord Bal. No, my Lords.

L. H. S. Do you deſire your Counſel ſhould be heard?

Lord Bal. I deſire they ſhould not plead.

L. H. S. My Lords, though the Priſoners have already been aſked what they had to ſay, why Judgment ſhould not paſs upon them according to Law; yet as they are now brought up at a ſubſequent Day, it is the regular Courſe to aſk them the ſame Queſtion over again; becauſe ſomething material may poſſibly have ariſen or occurred ſince the former Day.

William Earl of Kilmarnock, Has your Lordſhip any thing further to ſay, why Judgment of Death ſhould not paſs upon you, according to Law?

Earl of Kilmarnock. No, my Lords, I have nothing farther to offer.

L. H. S. George Earl of Cromertie, Has your Lordſhip any thing further to ſay, why Judgment of Death ſhould not paſs upon you, according to Law?

Earl of Cromertie. No, my Lords, I have nothing further to trouble your Lordſhips with.

L. H. S. Arthur Lord Balmerino, Has your Lordſhip any thing further to ſay, why Judgment of Death ſhould not paſs upon you, according to Law?

Lord Balmerino. No, my Lords; I only deſire to be heard a Moment. My Lords, I am very heartily ſorry, that I ſhould take up ſo much of your Lordſhips Time, and give you ſo much Trouble: It was not to delay Time, or to gain a few Days; but only as I believed there was ſomething in the Objection that would do me Service; and I beg your Lordſhips Pardon for the Trouble I have given you.

My Lords, I acknowledge my Crime, and I beg your Lordſhips will intercede with his Majeſty for me.

L. H. S. Make Proclamation for Silence whilſt Judgment is giving.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Our Sovereign Lord the King doth ſtrictly charge and command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence whilſt Judgment is giving, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Lord High Steward.

William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, Arthur Lord Balmerino,

IN the Courſe of this ſolemn Proceeding, you have already been acquainted, That you ſtand convicted of the High-Treaſon charged upon you by the ſeveral Indictments on which you have been arraigned.

By this Conviction it is now finally determined, That your Lordſhips are guilty of that Crime, which not only the Laws of Great Britain, but of all other Countries, for the wiſeſt Reaſons, adjudge to be the higheſt.

As it gives the deepeſt Concern to every one of my Lords your Peers, to find Perſons of your Birth and Quality ſtained with ſo foul an Offence, ſo it muſt give them ſome Satisfaction, that all of you, in effect, have confeſſed it; two of your Lordſhips by expreſly pleading Guilty upon your Arraignment; and the other, by openly declaring himſelf ſatisfied with the Determination of this Houſe, upon the only Point on which his Defence was reſted. Charity makes one hope, that this is an Indication of ſome Diſpoſition to that Repentance which your Guilt ſo loudly calls for.

You, my Lord Balmerino, have ſince moved in Arreſt of Judgment; and their Lordſhips were pleaſed to aſſign the Counſel you deſired, to ſupport that Motion: But, upon adviſing with your Counſel, you have now voluntarily at the Bar withdrawn it, as being wholly without Foundation.

To attempt to aggravate Crimes of ſo deep a Dye, and in themſelves ſo incapable of Aggravation, againſt Perſons in your unhappy Circumſtances, would be a vain, as well as a moſt diſagreeable Taſk. And yet the Duty of that Place, in which I have the Honour to ſit, requires that I ſhould offer ſome Things to your Conſideration, to explain more fully the Neceſſity of that Juſtice which is this Day to be adminiſtered, and to awaken in your Minds a due Senſe of your own Condition.

If any Rebellion can be heightened by the Circumſtances attending it, it is that in which your Lordſhips have been engaged: A Rebellion againſt a King celebrated through the World for his mild and gracious Government; the whole Series of whoſe Reign has been diſtinguiſhed by the ſtricteſt Adherence to the Laws, and the moſt indulgent Care of the Rights of his People, unblemiſhed with any ſingle Inſtance of an Attempt or Deſign to violate either.

To overturn the Government of ſuch a King, you took Arms; and, in Conſequence of this, to deſtroy the pureſt Religion, and ſubvert the beſt Conſtitution, formed and eſtabliſhed upon the juſteſt Balance of Prerogative in the Crown, and Liberty in the Subject, for the Preſervation of the Whole.

What did your Lordſhips, who profeſs the Proteſtant Religion, and claim the Benefits of this Conſtitution, ſeek to introduce in the Room of theſe invaluable Bleſſings? In Religion, Popery, attended with its Train of Superſtitions, and inhuman Principles of Perſecution; in Government, Deſpotiſm and Tyranny; and to cement and ſupport this horrid Syſtem, an abjured Pretender, deriving his Principles of Religion and Civil Policy from Rome and France.

When I name France, I find myſelf obliged to remind your Lordſhips of one Circumſtance, which it will become you to reflect upon in your moſt ſerious Moments. The Time you choſe to arm againſt your Country, was, whilſt it ſtood engaged in a juſt and neceſſary War againſt that Crown, and Spain; a War, to preſerve its own Commerce and Independency; and its ancient natural Allies. Though ſome of your Lordſhips have thought it proper, at this Bar, to diſclaim that Connexion, or any Advantage from it; yet, with that ambitious and incroaching Power, you avowedly joined yourſelves; by this Aid, you endeavoured to effect the dreadful Change you meditated; and, to ſuch a Maſter, to enſlave this free Nation.

Nor were the other Countries of Europe, which have united themſelves againſt the pernicious Views of France, leſs eſſentially, though more remotely, intereſted in the Event. From Great Britain they derived their chief Aſſiſtance in this War: In her centered their Hopes of Support: But the Contrivers of this Scheme laid the Ax to the Root of the Tree; and, by endeavouring to deliver up this Kingdom a Province to France, ſtrove to cut off that Reſource, without which the Cauſe of publick Liberty muſt have ſunk for ever.

Thus widely ſpread were the Calamities, which this Rebellion was formed to introduce. By calling off the Arms of Great Britain to her neceſſary Self-defence, ſome Progreſs was made towards effectuating one Part of the intended Miſchief. How far it may be retrieved, and in what Manner, is ſtill in the Womb of Time, and in the Hands of Providence: But is it not aſtoniſhing that Men, who call themſelves Britons and Proteſtants, ſhould become the Dupes and Abettors of ſo execrable a Deſign? A Deſign to eraſe the very Foundations of true Religion and Freedom, and to turn the Riches and Strength of this Kingdom, through a Courſe of Ages ſo differently employed, into Inſtruments of the common Slavery?

After all this, to mention the Plundering and Devaſtation of particular Towns and Counties; the Miſeries brought upon private Perſons and Families; or the many Murders committed (for the Death of every loyal Subject killed in this Rebellion was a Murder); to mention theſe Things, though moſt important and moving in themſelves, after the other more extenſive Conſiderations, would make them appear of leſs Weight.

Some of your Lordſhips, in what you have been pleaſed to offer for yourſelves, have urged ſeveral Topics to excite Mercy and Compaſſion. Thoſe, if of any Moment, are only proper for that Place, where the Seat of Mercy muſt be acknowledged to be fixed. But, when Arguments of Compaſſion have been urged in Behalf of the Guilty, let us balance thoſe Arguments with a becoming Compaſſion for our Country, for thoſe who have ſuffered innocently by the Miſeries which this Rebellion brought upon it, and for thoſe who died glorioufly in its Defence.

Give me Leave to urge this a little further. Even the Sufferings of thoſe, who ſo far forgot their Allegiance, as to adhere to, or favour, this impious Cauſe, are in Juſtice to be charged only to the Account of ſuch as fomented and ſupported it. They who take Arms againſt a lawful eſtabliſhed Government, create the Neceſſity of all Acts requiſite to be done on the Side of that Government, in order to repel and ſubdue them; or which, in the Nature of Things, become unavoidable in the Courſe of ſuppreſſing them.

Upon ſuch a Subject it is more difficult to ſtop than to inlarge. But, whilſt I am endeavouring to raiſe in your Minds a juſt Senſe of the many Evils involved in your Crimes, permit me to intreat your Lordſhips to deal impartially with yourſelves, and to conſider ſeriouſly, what could be your Temptation to commit them.

Every one of you enjoyed the common Benefits of that legal and mild Government, which, in Violation of the moſt ſolemn Oaths, you ſought to deſtroy; and ſome of you had received particular Advantages from it. You, my Lord Kilmarnock, and my Lord Cromertie, have thought fit to appeal to your former Conduct as a Proof of your good Principles for the Support of the Revolution, and of our preſent happy Eſtabliſhment. With real Grief I lament that you ever deviated from thoſe Sentiments. If, as your Lordſhips would have us believe, they were ſincere, and proceeded from the Heart, What could poſſibly be your Inducement to this ſudden Apoſtacy? Your Lordſhips have left that a Blank in your Apologies; and I chooſe rather to leave it to be filled up by the Conſtructions of others, than to ſupply it myſelf.

Thus much I am warranted to ſay: No glittering Proſpect of Succeſs in the Beginnings of this Rebellion could tempt you. On the one hand, thoſe Beginnings were ſo weak and unpromiſing, as to be capable of ſeducing none, but the moſt infected and willing Minds, to join in ſo deſperate an Enterprize. On the other hand, it was impoſſible, even for the Party of the Rebels, to be ſo inconſiderate or vain, as to imagine that the Body of this free People, bleſt in the Enjoyment of all their Rights both Civil and Religious under his Majeſty's Protection; ſecure in the Proſpect of tranſmitting them ſafe to their Poſterity, under the Proteſtant Succeſſion in his Royal Houſe (of which they ſee ſo many illuſtrious Branches); I ſay, it was impoſſible that they could imagine, the Body of this free People, under theſe Circumſtances, would not riſe up, as one Man, to oppoſe and cruſh ſo flagitious, ſo deſtructive, and ſo unprovoked an Attempt.

Happy is it for ourſelves, happy for our Poſterity, that this was verified by the Event. The Rebels ſoon ſaw his Majeſty's faithful Subjects, conſcious both of their Duty and Intereſt, contending to outdo one another in Demonſtrations of their Zeal and Vigour in his Service. The Merchants and Trading Part of this great Metropolis, one of the moſt uſeful and reſpectable Branches of the Community, to their laſting Honour, aſſociated themſelves, at the Riſque of their private Fortunes, to ſupport the publick Credit of their Country. Men of Property, of all Ranks and Orders, crouded in with liberal Subſcriptions, of their own Motion, beyond the Examples of former Times, and uncompelled by any Law; and yet in the moſt legal and warrantable Manner, notwithſtanding what has been ignorantly and preſumptuouſly ſuggeſted to the contrary. The Clergy, with a Zeal becoming their holy Function, regulated by Chriſtian Charity, inſtructed their Hearers by their Doctrine, and led them by their Example, in Defence of the Crown, and of our common Liberties; of this Reformed Church, and conſequently of the Reformation itſelf.

The Rebels ſoon ſaw many of the Nobility and Gentry, from amongſt the firſt Families, the greateſt Eſtates, and the beſt Blood in the Kingdom, ſurrounding the Throne, ſoliciting to be permitted to hazard their Lives in this glorious Cauſe, and to be authorized, at their own Expence, to raiſe Forces for the Support of it.

But,

But, above all, they ſaw both Houſes of Parliament, the great Council of the Nation, the Repreſentative Body of this People, warmed with a truly Britiſh Spirit, and treading in the Steps of their Anceſtors, overcoming all Difficulties, and unanimouſly concurring in every Meaſure to ſtrengthen the King's Hands, and to maintain that Government, on which the very Being of Parliaments, and the Preſervation of this limited Monarchy, depend.

If theſe Enemies of our Peace had formed to themſelves any falſe Hopes of contrary Appearances, it muſt be owing to the higheſt Degree of Infatuation, that they were not ſoon convinced of their Miſtake. Great Reaſon have we to offer up our Thanks to Heaven, that they have been effectually diſappointed. Even your Lordſhips, if you will allow yourſelves to weigh your own Caſe in the juſt Balance of Religion and Conſcience, will find Cauſe to be thankful that the Meaſure of your Guilt was not ſuffered to be filled up and enhanced by the final direful Succeſs of it.

If, from any unforeſeen Accidents, not uncommon in military Operations, thoſe deluſive Hopes were for ſome time kept alive, it ſeems to have been judicially deſigned by Providence to render the more ſignal that Vengeance, which was reſerved for them at the Battle of Culloden. How much was owing, on that memorable Day, to the Bravery and Diſcipline of his Majeſty's Troops, to the animating Example, the intrepid Valour, and the wiſe Conduct of a Prince deſcended from him, is ſo deeply engraven on the Heart of every Member of this Great Aſſembly, that I could only repeat what their own grateful Minds have already ſuggeſted to themſelves, and repreſented to the Throne.

Then was experienced how much that Courage, which Virtue, true Loyalty, and the Love of our Country, inſpire, is ſuperior to the Raſhneſs and falſe Fire of Rebellion, accompanied with the Terrors of Guilt.

I will add no more. It has been his Majeſty's Juſtice to bring your Lordſhips to a legal Trial; and it has been his Wiſdom to ſhew, that, as a ſmall Part of his National Forces was ſufficient to ſubdue the Rebel Army in the Field, ſo the ordinary Courſe of his Laws is ſtrong enough to bring even their Chiefs to Juſtice.

What remains for me, is a very painful, though a neceſſary Part. It is, To pronounce that Sentence, which the Law has appointed for Crimes of this Magnitude;—a Sentence full of Horror! ſuch as the Wiſdom of our Anceſtors has ordained, as One Guard about the Sacred Perſon of the King, and as a Fence about this excellent Conſtitution, to be a Terror to Evil-doers, and a Security to them that do well.

The Judgment of the Law is, and this High Court doth award;

" That You, William Earl of Kilmarnock, George Earl of Cromertie, " and Arthur Lord Balmerino, and every of you, return to the " Priſon of the Tower, from whence you came; from thence you " muſt be drawn to the Place of Execution; when you come there, " you muſt be hanged by the Neck, but not till you are dead; for " you muſt be cut down alive; then your Bowels muſt be taken " out, and burnt before your Faces; then your Heads muſt be " ſevered from your Bodies, and your Bodies muſt be divided " each into Four Quarters; and theſe muſt be at the King's " Diſpoſal.

" And God Almighty be merciful to your Souls!"

L. H. S. Lieutenant of the Tower, Take the Priſoners from the Bar.

Which being done, Proclamation was made for Silence, as uſual.

L. H. S. My Lords, This Proceeding being at an End, nothing remains to be done here, but to determine the Commiſſion.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. Let Proclamation be made for diſſolving the Commiſſion of High Steward.

Serj. at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Our Sovereign Lord the King does ſtrictly charge and command all manner of Perſons here preſent, and that have here attended, to depart hence in the Peace of God, and of our Sovereign Lord the King; for his Grace my Lord High Steward of Great Britain intends now to diſſolve his Commiſſion.

Then the White Staff being delivered to the Lord High Steward by the Gentleman Uſher of the Black Rod, upon his Knee, his Grace ſtood up uncovered; and holding the Staff in both his Hands, broke it in two, and declared the Commiſſion to be diſſolved; and then leaving the Chair, came down to the Wool-Pack, and ſaid, Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?

Lords. Ay, Ay.

L. H. S. This Houſe is adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament.

Then the Lords and others returned in the ſame Order they came down.

And the Priſoners were carried back to the Tower of London.

XLII. The Whole Proceedings in the House of Peers, upon the Impeachment exhibited by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes, in Parliament aſſembled, in the Names of Themſelves, and of all the Commons of Great Britain, againſt Simon Lord Lovat, for High-Treaſon: The Proceeding in Weſtminſter-Hall being begun on Monday the 9th Day of March, and continued on Tueſday the 10th, Wedneſday the 11th, Friday the 13th, Monday the 16th, Wedneſday the 18th, and Thurſday the 19th Days of March, 1746-7.

Die Jovis, 11° Decembris, 1746.

A Meſſage was brought from the Houſe of Commons, by Sir William Yonge, and others, to acquaint this Houſe, That they, having Matters to communicate to their Lordſhips, of great Importance to the King and Kingdom, do deſire that their Lordſhips will continue ſitting for ſome Time.

To which the Houſe agreed.

And the Meſſengers were called in again; and acquainted by the Lord Chancellor, That the Lords will continue ſitting for ſome Time, as deſired.

The Houſe was adjourned during Pleaſure.

The Houſe was reſumed.

A Meſſage was brought from the Houſe of Commons, by Sir William Yonge, and others, as follows:

My Lords,

THE Commons of Great Britain, in Parliament aſſembled, having received Information of divers Treaſons committed by a Peer of this Realm, Simon Lord Lovat, have commanded me to impeach the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat of High-Treaſon: And I do here, in their Names, and in the Names of all the Commons of Great Britain, impeach the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat of High-Treaſon: And I am further commanded to acquaint your Lordſhips, That they will, with all convenient Speed, exhibit Articles to make good the Charge againſt him.

Die Mercurii, 17° Decembris, 1746.

A MESSAGE was brought from the Houſe of Commons, by Sir William Yonge, and others, who ſaid, he was commanded by the Houſe of Commons to deliver to this Houſe Articles of Impeachment of High-Treaſon againſt Simon Lord Lovat.—He ſaid, He was alſo commanded by the Commons to acquaint their Lordſhips, That they are ready to maintain their Charge: And he delivered in the ſaid Articles.

Which Articles being read:

The Duke of Newcaſtle acquainted the Houſe, That the ſaid Lord Lovat is already under Commitment for High-Treaſon in his Majeſty's Tower of London.

Then the following Order was made:

Whereas the Commons, aſſembled in Parliament, have this Day exhibited to this Houſe Articles of Impeachment of High-Treaſon againſt Simon Lord Lovat; It is Ordered, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled, That the ſaid Lord Lovat be brought to the Bar of this Houſe To-morrow at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, to hear the ſaid Articles read; and to abide ſuch further Order, as this Houſe ſhall think fit to make concerning him.

To Charles Lord Cornwallis, Conſtable of his Majeſty's Tower of London, and, in his Abſence, to the Lieutenant of the ſaid Tower, or his Deputy.

Die Jovis, 18° Decembris, 1746.

THE Order being read, for bringing Simon Lord Lovat to the Bar of this Houſe, to hear the Articles of Impeachment of High-Treaſon, exhibited againſt him Yeſterday by the Houſe of Commons, read unto him;

The ſaid Lord Lovat was accordingly brought to the Bar, by the Deputy-Gentleman-Uſher of the Black Rod: Where he kneeled until the Lord Chancellor directed him to riſe.—Then

The ſaid Articles of Impeachment were read unto him: Which done, the Lord Chancellor aſked him, What he had to ſay thereunto; and informed him, That, if he had any Thing to requeſt of the Houſe, this was his proper Time.

Whereupon he acquainted the Houſe with his Infirmities occaſioned by old Age, and particularly alledged his Deafneſs, that he could not hear what the Contents of the ſaid Articles were: Wherefore, having a Petition prepared to make known to the Houſe his Requeſts, he deſired the ſame might be read: Which being delivered in, was read by the Clerk, and is as follows; viz.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament Aſſembled,

The Humble Petition of Simon Lord Fraser of Lovat,

Sheweth,

THAT your Petitioner, by reaſon of his great Age, labours under many Infirmities and Weakneſs; and, being intirely ignorant of the Forms of Law, and Method of Proceedings in this Auguſt Court, is unable to make any Defence, or give in a proper Anſwer to the Articles of Impeachment exhibited againſt him, without the Aſſiſtance of able Counſel and Sollicitors.

That your Petitioner, during his cloſe Confinement in the Tower of London, for now near Five Months, has not been able to obtain One Shilling either out of his Eſtate or otherwiſe; which has been occaſioned, as your Petitioner has been informed, by ſome Grants of a very extraordinary Nature, and which your Petitioner hopes, ſhall never again, in this Iſland, be drawn into Precedent; authorizing and impowering other Perſons, Strangers to your Petitioner, to take Poſſeſſion of his Eſtate, and to levy the Rents thereof; while ſuch as had in their Hands any Money or Effects of your Petitioner's, were prohibited and reſtrained from paying any Part thereof to your Petitioner, or his Order.

That your Petitioner applied ſeveral Times to one of His Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, complaining of the Hardſhips your Petitioner ſuffered by Means of ſuch Proceedings; and your Petitioner is informed, that Two ſeveral Orders were made thereupon, in order to remove the ſaid Prohibitions and Reſtraints, and to recal the ſaid Powers ſo granted as above: But notwithſtanding thereof, your Petitioner is ſtill in in the ſame deplorable Circumſtances, without any Money even to procure him the common Neceſſaries of Life, and is wholly indebted to General Williamſon for his Support.

That your Petitioner, when he was apprehended by a Party of his Majeſty's Troops in Scotland, had, in his Strong-Box, Money and Jewels to the Amount of Seven hundred Pounds and upwards, which they ſeized, and retain; inſiſting the ſame is lawful Prize.

Your Petitioner therefore humbly prays, that your Lordſhips, moved by your innate Goodneſs, may be pleaſed to aſſign your Petitioner ſuch and ſo many Counſel and Sollicitors as your Lordſhips ſhall think proper: That your Petioner may have a Copy of the Articles of Impeachment; and may not be ordered by your Lordſhips to begin and enter upon his Defence, while he remains ſtripped and deprived of all the neceſſary Means which the Law allows him for his Defence and Support; but that ſuch a reaſonable Time may be allowed your Petitioner to prepare and put in his Anſwer, that he may be enabled to receive Money ſufficient to retain and fee his Counſel and Sollicitors; without which, your Petitioner apprehends, he cannot have their Aſſiſtance and Advice: And that, for that Purpoſe, the Money and Jewels contained in the Strong-Box, and unjuſtly taken as above, may be immediately reſtored to your Petitioner, by your Lordſhips Order.

And your Petitioner ſhall ever pray, &c.

LOVAT.

The Counſel that Lord Lovat deſires may be aſſigned are, Mr. Starkie Mr. Forreſter, Mr. Ford, and Mr. Wilmott: And the Sollicitors are, Mr. George Roſs, Mr. Hugh Fraſer, and Mr. Gooſtrey.

The Petition being read, the ſaid Lord Lovat was aſked by the Lord Chancellor, If he had any Thing further to offer.

To which he anſwering in the Negative;

He was directed to withdraw.

And the Houſe taking the Requeſts of the ſaid Petition into Conſideration;

Ordered, That the ſaid Lord Lovat may have a Copy of the ſaid Articles of Impeachment exhibited againſt him: And that he do put in his Anſwer thereunto, in Writing, on or before Tueſday, the 13th Day of January next: And that Mr. Starkie, Mr. Forreſter, Mr. Ford, and Mr. Wilmott, the Counſel mentioned in the ſaid Petition, be aſſigned to aſſiſt him in preparing his Anſwer, and likewiſe in his Defence, in Matters of Law: And that Mr. George Roſs, Mr. Hugh Fraſer, and Mr. Gooſtrey, be alſo aſſigned Sollicitors for him: And that ſuch Counſel and Sollicitors may have Acceſs to him at all ſeaſonable Times: And that the ſaid Lord Lovat have Liberty to cauſe Search to be made, and Copies of Records and Journals to be taken out, in order to his Defence: And that he ſhall have Summons iſſued for ſuch Witneſſes as he ſhall ſend in the Names of, to be by him made uſe of at his Trial; which Witneſſes ſhall have the Protection of this Houſe for their ſafe Coming and Going, during the Time of the ſaid Trial.

Ordered, That the Lord Chancellor do acquaint the Lord Lovat, That it is expected by their Lordſhips, that he would ſend in the Names of ſuch Witneſſes as he ſhall deſire to be ſummoned, as ſoon as conveniently he can; and that, in Caſe he do not, he muſt not expect to be indulged with any further Delay on that Account.

Ordered likewiſe, That the ſaid Lord Lovat be permitted to receive the Rents and Profits of his Eſtate, by his Factors or Agents, in like Manner as if he was not under an Accuſation of High Treaſon: And that his Majeſty's Advocate for Scotland do take the proper Methods to carry this Order into Execution.

Then the ſaid Lord Lovat was called in again: And the Lord Chancellor acquainted him with what the Houſe had ordered.

And then he was a ſecond Time directed to withdraw.

Ordered, That Lord Lovat do ſtand committed to his Majeſty's Tower of London, to be there ſafely kept, in order to his Trial, till he ſhall be thence delivered by due Courſe of Law: And that no Perſon ſhall have Acceſs to him without the ſpecial Leave of the Houſe.

Ordered, That the Lord Chancellor do write Letters to all the Lords who have not been preſent in the Houſe either this Day or Yeſterday, in the uſual Manner, requiring their Attendance on the Service of this Houſe (all Excuſes ſet apart), on Wedneſday, the 21ſt Day of January next, on Occaſion of the Proceedings now depending in this Houſe againſt Simon Lord Lovat, who ſtands impeached by the Houſe of Commons of High Treaſon.

Die Martis, 23° Decembris, 1746.

A PETITION of Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat was preſented, and read; praying, That he may be allowed to the 1ſt Day of February for anſwering the Articles of Impeachment exhibited by the Houſe of Commons againſt him; within which Time he hopes, that the Care and Diligence of his Agents in Scotland will, notwithſtanding the Seaſon of the Year, furniſh him with the Papers and Materials neceſſary for that End.

And thereupon Mr. George Roſs, one of the Petitioner's Sollicitors, being called in, and heard at the Bar, touching the Contents of the ſaid Petition;

He was directed to withdraw.

Ordered, That the ſaid Petition be rejected.

Ordered, That the Lieutenant of the Tower of London, or his Deputy, do bring the ſaid Lord Lovat to the Bar of this Houſe, on Tueſday, the 13th Day of January next, at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, in order to the putting in his Anſwer to the Articles of Impeachment of High Treaſon, exhibited againſt him by the Houſe of Commons.

Die Martis, 13° Januarii, 1746.

THE Order of the Day being read, for bringing Simon Lord Lovat to the Bar of this Houſe, in order to the putting in his Anſwer to the Articles of Impeachment of High Treaſon, exhibited againſt him by the Houſe of Commons, he was brought to the Bar accordingly: Where he kneeled, till the Lord Chancellor acquainted him he might riſe. He then delivered in his Anſwer to the ſaid Articles: And the ſame was read.

Then the Lord Lovat was aſked by the Lord Chancellor, If he had any Thing further to offer. Whereupon he acquainted the Houſe, He had cauſed to be prepared two Petitions to their Lordſhips, which he conceived did concern the Juſtice as well as the Honour of the Houſe. And his Lordſhip delivering in the ſaid Petitions, the ſame were ſeverally read;

The firſt complaining, That the Order of this Houſe of the 18th of December laſt, relating to the Factory or Receiverſhip of the Petitioner's Rents, had not ben obeyed, ſo as to be made effectual to him; nor had the Contents of the Strong-Box taken from him, and now in Captain Ferguſon's Poſſeſſion, been delivered to his Agent, as had been promiſed him: And praying, that Obedience to the ſaid Order might be compelled, and an immediate Reſtitution of the Money taken out of the ſaid Box; or that ſuch Order might be made concerning this Matter, as to the Houſe ſhould ſeem meet.

The other Petition ſetting forth; That Mr. William Fraſer, Writer to the Signet, who for many Years had acted as his chief Agent, and had the Management of his Eſtate in Scotland, was by his Direction come to Town; but could not have Acceſs to him without the Permiſſion of this Houſe: And praying, That the ſaid Fraſer might have Liberty to come to the Petitioner at all ſeaſonable Times.

Then the Lord Lovat was directed to be taken from the Bar.

Which done; The firſt Petition was again read: And, after Debate, and reading the ſaid Order, relating to the Receipt of the Rents and Profits of the ſaid Lord Lovat's Eſtate,

Ordered, That the ſaid Petition be rejected.

Then the other Petition being likewiſe read;

Ordered, That the ſaid William Fraſer be permitted to have Acceſs to the Petitioner at all ſeaſonable Times, between the Hours of Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon, and Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, in the Preſence of ſuch Officer belonging to the Tower of London, as the Conſtable thereof ſhall appoint.

Ordered, That a Copy of the Anſwer of the ſaid Lord Lovat to the Articles of Impeachment of High Treaſon, exhibited againſt him by the Houſe of Commons, be prepared: And that, when the ſame has been carefully examined by the Clerk, it be ſent by a Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons, and left with that Houſe.

Ordered, That the ſaid Lord Lovat be conveyed back to the Tower of London, by the Lieutenant of the ſame, or his Deputy, to be there kept in ſafe Cuſtody, until he ſhall be thence delivered by due Courſe of Law.

Die Veneris, 16° Januarii, 1746.

A MESSAGE was brought from the Houſe of Commons by Sir William Yonge, and others, to acquaint this Houſe, That they have conſidered the Anſwer of Simon Lord Lovat to the Articles of Impeachment exhibited againſt him by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes, aſſembled in Parliament; and do aver their Charge againſt the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat for High Treaſon, to be true; and that the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat is guilty in ſuch Manner as he ſtands impeached: And that the Commons will be ready to prove their Charge againſt him at ſuch convenient Time as ſhall be appointed for that Purpoſe.

Die Jovis, 22° Januarii, 1746.

A PETITION of Simon Lord Lovat, ſtiling himſelf Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat, was preſented, and read; praying, That Mr. William Fraſer may be appointed one of his Sollicitors, in the Room of Mr. Hugh Fraſer, he being neceſſarily required to go into the Country.

Ordered, That the ſaid Mr. William Fraſer be aſſigned the Petitioner's Sollicitor, in the Room of the ſaid Mr. Hugh Fraſer, as deſired: And that the ſaid Mr. William Fraſer may have Acceſs to the Petitioner at all ſeaſonable Times.

Ordered, That Monday, the 23d Day of February next be, and is hereby appointed for, the Trial of Simon Lord Lovat, in Weſtminſter-Hall, upon the Articles of Impeachment exhibited againſt him by the Houſe of Commons for High Treaſon.

And a Meſſage was ſent to the Houſe of Commons, by Mr. Spicer and Mr. Edwards, to acquaint them therewith.

Then the Houſe appointed a Committee to inſpect the Journals of this Houſe, relating to former Caſes of Impeachments; and to conſider of the proper Methods of proceeding on the Impeachment againſt Simon Lord Lovat; and to report to the Houſe what they ſhall think proper thereupon.

Die Lunæ, 2° Februarii, 1746.

THE Earl of Warwick reported from the Lords Committees appointed to inſpect the Journals of this Houſe, relating to former Caſes of Impeachments; and to conſider of the proper Methods of Proceeding on the Impeachment againſt Simon Lord Lovat; and to report to the Houſe what they ſhall think proper thereupon;

That the Committee had met, and inſpected the Journals of this Houſe, in former Caſes of Impeachments; and had conſidered the Matters to them referred; and had come to ſeveral Reſolutions: Which his Lordſhip reported. And thereupon ſeveral Orders were made, touching the Courſe of Proceeding to, and at the enſuing Trial, and for preſerving the Peace; and amongſt them as follows; viz.

Ordered, That an humble Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, to acquaint his Majeſty, That this Houſe hath appointed the Trial of Simon Lord Lovat, upon the Articles of Impeachment of High Treaſon exhibited againſt him by the Houſe of Commons, to begin in Weſtminſter-Hall on Monday, the 23d Day of this Inſtant February: And humbly deſire, That his Majeſty will be pleaſed to appoint a Lord High Steward, to continue during the ſaid Trial.

Ordered, That the ſaid Addreſs be preſented to his Majeſty by the Lords with White Staves.

Ordered, That the Counſel aſſigned the ſaid Lord Lovat may be preſent when he is at the Bar, in order to be heard touching any Point or Matter of Law, if any ſuch ſhall ariſe during the ſaid Trial.

Ordered, That the Witneſſes, which ſhall be produced by the Lord Lovat to be examined in his Defence, ſhall be examined upon Oath; which Oath ſhall be adminiſtered in the like Form as an Oath was directed by this Houſe to be adminiſtered to any Witneſſes, who ſhould be produced by the Earl of Wintoun at his Trial.

Ordered, That the Lord Great Chamberlain be deſired to take Care and give Order, that Accommodations be made in the Scaffold already erected in Weſtminſter-Hall for the Commons, as hath been uſed in Trials in Weſtminſter-Hall upon Impeachments.

Die Mercurii, 4° Februarii, 1746.

THE Lord Steward reported, That the Lords with White Staves had (according to Order) preſented to his Majeſty the Addreſs of this Houſe of Monday laſt, for the Appointment of a Lord High Steward, to continue during the Trial of Simon Lord Lovat; and that his Majeſty had been pleaſed to give Orders accordingly.

Ordered, That the ſaid Commiſſion for appointing a Lord High Steward ſhall be in the like Form as that for the Trial of the Lord Viſcount Stafford, as entered in the Journal of this Houſe the 30th of November, 1680, except that the ſame be in the Engliſh Language.

Die Mercurii, 18° Februarii, 1746.

A PETITION of Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat was preſented and read; ſetting forth, That upon the Appointment of his Trial, he immediately diſpatched one of his Sollicitors to ſummon the Petitioner's material Witneſſes, who are at great Diſtances from each other, inhabiting in the Counties of Inverneſs and Roſs; but by reaſon of the Inclemency of the Weather, the Badneſs of the Roads, and other unavoidable Accidents, none of them are yet arrived, nor can poſſibly be got to London by the Time of Trial; and praying, That this Houſe will appoint ſome more diſtant Time for that Purpoſe.

And thereupon William Fraſer and William Gooſtrey, two of the Petitioner's Sollicitors, were called in, and heard at the Bar, to verify the Truth of the Allegations of the ſaid Petition: And being withdrawn,

Ordered, That the Time appointed for the Petitioner's Trial be, and is hereby, inlarged till To-morrow Fortnight, the 5th Day of March next.

Ordered, That a Meſſage be ſent to the Houſe of Commons, to acquaint them, That upon the humble Petition of Simon Lord Lovat, for putting off his Trial to a further Day, for the Reaſons therein alledged, the Lords have inlarged the Time appointed for the Trial of the ſaid Lord Lovat till Thurſday the 5th Day of March next.

And a Meſſage was accordingly ſent to the Houſe of Commons, by Mr. Holford and Mr. Bennet, to acquaint them therewith.

Die Lunæ, 2° Martii, 1746.

A PETITION of Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat, with an Affidavit of Hugh Fraſer thereto annexed, were preſented to the Houſe, and read, as follows:

To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled;

The Humble Petition of Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat,

Sheweth,

THAT your Lordſhips having appointed your Petitioner's Trial for the 23d of February, your Petitioner did lately take the Liberty humbly to repreſent the Impoſſibility he was under to prepare ſo ſoon for Trial, in reſpect his Witneſſes, from the Badneſs of the Road, were not then arrived; and your Lordſhips were pleaſed to indulge your Petitioner with a Delay till Thurſday next.

That Hugh Fraſer, whom your Petitioner had directed to ſerve your Lordſhips Summons upon your Petitioner's Witneſſes, arrived in Town, with ſundry of them, late on Friday Night, having duly ſerved your Lordſhips ſaid Order upon ſeveral other Perſons, who were all material Witneſſes for your Petitioner.

That Thomas Fraſer of Struy, and Donald Fraſer, alias Down, two of the Witneſſes, ſerved as aforeſaid, were prevented, by Sickneſs, from ſetting out as early as ſome of the reſt; but had declared to the ſaid Hugh Fraſer their Willingneſs to obey your Lordſhips Summons as ſoon as they were able to travel; which your Petitioner hopes may ſoon be the Caſe.

That William Fraſer of Belloan, Alexander Fraſer of Belnain, Thomas Fraſer of Garthmore, Alexander Fraſer of Beloloyne, and the Reverend Mr. Donald Fraſer, Miniſter at Killearnan, who are all material Witneſſes for your Petitioner, and without whoſe Teſtimony your Petitioner cannot ſafely proceed to Trial, have abſolutely refuſed to attend, though regularly ſerved with your Lordſhips Summons, as by Affidavit annexed appears; and that the Perſons, named as aforeſaid, are material and neceſſary Witneſſes, your Petitioner is ready to make Affidavit of; but being ſtrictly confined in the Tower, and no Perſon having Acceſs to him without your Lordſhips Order, he has no Opportunity ſo to do.

That under theſe Circumſtances, and that your Petitioner, without your Lordſhips Interpoſition, cannot compel the ſaid Perſons to attend his Trial, he is under a Neceſſity to apply to your Lordſhips for Relief, without which he muſt, as to the Charge in ſome of the aforeſaid Articles, remain defenceleſs, ſhould your Lordſhips in the Interim proceed to Trial.

Your Petitioner therefore humbly prays, your Lordſhips would be pleaſed to appoint a more diſtant Day for his Trial; and that your Lordſhips would be pleaſed to compel the ſaid William, Alexander, Thomas, Donald, and Alexander Fraſers, to attend your Petitioner's Trial at ſuch Time as your Lordſhips ſhall think fit; or to grant him ſuch other Relief, as to your Lordſhips, in your great Wiſdom, ſhall ſeem meet.

And your Petitioner ſhall ever pray.

LOVAT.

In the Houſe of Lords.

Upon an Impeachment for High-Treaſon againſt Simon Lord Lovat.

HUGH FRASER, of Grays-Inn, in the County of Middleſex, Gentleman, maketh Oath, That he this Deponent did, on the Tenth Day of February laſt, perſonally ſerve Thomas Fraſer of Struy, and on the twelfth Day of the ſaid Month of February, did alſo perſonally ſerve William Fraſer of Belloan, Alexander Fraſer of Belnain, Thomas Fraſer of Garthmore, Alexander Fraſer of Beloloyne, and Donald Down, alias Fraſer, with an Order of this Honourable Houſe, bearing Date the Sixteenth of January laſt paſt; whereby it was ordered, That the ſaid ſeveral Perſons, and others named in ſuch Order, ſhould attend this Houſe as Witneſſes for the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat, who ſtands impeached of High-Treaſon by the Houſe of Commons, by delivering to each of them a true Copy of the ſaid Order, and, at the ſame Time, ſhewing to each of them the ſaid original Order. And this Deponent further ſaith, That the ſaid William Fraſer of Belloan, Alexander Fraſer of Belnain, Thomas Fraſer of Garthmore, and Alexander Fraſer of Beloloyne, though ſerved with the ſaid Order as aforeſaid, abſolutely refuſed to obey the ſaid Order; and this Deponent verily believes will not attend the ſaid Trial: And the ſaid Thomas Fraſer of Struy, and Donald Down, alias Fraſer, were both at the Time of ſuch Service ſick, and unable to travel; and declared themſelves incapable of complying with the ſaid Order. HUGH FRASER.

Sworn the 2d Day of March, 1746. before me, at the Court of Requeſts.
M. THURSTON.

Afterwards the ſaid Hugh Fraſer, and Mr. Gooſtrey, one of the Priſoner's Sollicitors, were called in, and examined at the Bar: And being withdrawn,

Ordered, That the ſaid Petition be rejected.

Ordered, That the Lieutenant of the Tower of London, or his Deputy, do bring to the Bar of this Houſe, in Weſtminſter-Hall, on Thurſday next, at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon, Simon Lord Lovat, in order to his Trial upon the Impeachment of High-Treaſon exhibited by the Houſe of Commons againſt him.——Then

A Meſſage was ſent to the Houſe of Commons by the former Meſſengers, to acquaint them that the Lords will be ready to go down into Weſtminſter-Hall, at the Time above-mentioned, in order to the Trial of the ſaid Lord Lovat.

Die Martis, 3° Martii, 1746.

A PETITION of Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat, with the Affidavits of Mr. George Roſs, and Mr. William Fraſer, thereto annexed, were preſented and read as follows:

To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament aſſembled;

The Humble Petition of Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat,

Sheweth,

THAT nothing but the utter Impoſſibility the Petitioner and his Agents are under, of preparing his Defence againſt Thurſday the Fifth of this Inſtant March, could have induced him to trouble your Lordſhips with this ſecond Application for ſome Days further Time.

But none of your Petitioner's Witneſſes coming to Town till late on Friday Night laſt; and one of your Petitioner's Agents having received an Account by laſt Night's Poſt, that two other Perſons, who were ſummoned as Witneſſes for your Petitioner, ſet out from Edinburgh on the 24th and 25th of laſt Month, and are not yet arrived in London, but expected here by the End of this Week, your Petitioner cannot poſſibly be prepared to take his Trial before Monday next.

The Petitioner begs Leave further to repreſent to your Lordſhips, that in the preſent unhappy Situation of his Affairs, he has no Means of furniſhing himſelf with Money, either for applying to Counſel, bearing the Charge of his Witneſſes, or other neceſſary Expence, but from the Supply afforded him by his Agents, who have already advanced him conſiderable Sums for the above Purpoſes, which are already expended: That the Solemnity, and unavoidable Length of the Proceedings, making further Sums of Money ſtill neceſſary, the Petitioner is afraid that his Defence may ſuffer on that account, unleſs your Lordſhips are pleaſed, in Compaſſion to his preſent Difficulty, to give ſome kind of Encouragement to his Agents, to hope they ſhall be repaid what they already have, or may hereafter diſburſe on the Petitioner's Account; it being, by the Loſs of the Petitioner's Moveables, out of his own Power to give them any kind of Indemnification.

The Petitioner alſo prays your Lordſhips to aſſign Mr. Charles Hamilton Gordon to be one of his Counſel, in place of Mr. Starkey, who, on account of the bad State of his Health, has declined giving the Petitioner his Aſſiſtance.

May it therefore pleaſe your Lordſhips, in Conſideration of the Premiſes, to put off the Petitioner's Trial until the next Monday; and to make ſuch other Order upon this Application as to your Lordſhips ſhall ſeem meet.

And your Petitioner ſhall ever pray, &c.
LOVAT.

In the Impeachment of the Commons of Great-Britain againſt Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat.

GEORGE ROSS, one of the Solicitors aſſigned by the Right Honourable the Houſe of Lords to the ſaid Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat, maketh Oath, That ſince his Appointment, he has at different Times laid out and expended upwards of Six Hundred Pounds, out of his own Pocket, in Feeing of his Lordſhip's Counſel, bringing up his Witneſſes, and other Charges attending the ſeveral Steps already taken, towards preparing for the ſaid Lord's Defence, without receiving any Money or Security whatſoever for his Indemnification. WILLIAM FRASER, Writer to his Majeſty's Signet, maketh Oath, That laſt Night he received Advice from Edinburgh, that Thomas Fraſer of Struy, and Mr. Donald Fraſer, two of the Witneſſes ſummoned on the Behalf of Lord Lovat, are now upon the Road, and will be here by Saturday or Sunday next: Which Information this Deponent believes to be true. WILL. FRASER.

Sworn at the publick Office, 3d March 1746, before THO. BENNET.

Ordered, That the Trial of the Petitioner be put off to Monday next, as desired.

A Message was sent to the Commons, by Mr. Burroughs and Mr. Allen, to acquaint them, that this House, upon the Petition of the said Lord Lovat, for the Reasons therein contained, hath inlarged the Time of his Trial upon the Impeachment of High-Treason exhibited against him by the House of Commons, to Monday next, at Eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon; and that their Lordships will be ready to go down into Westminster-Hall at the Time above-mentioned, in order to his Trial.

Ordered, That the Lieutenant of the Tower of London, or his Deputy, do bring the said Lord Lovat to the Bar of this House in Westminster-Hall, at Ten of the Clock in the Forenoon, on Monday next, in order to his Trial upon the said Impeachment.

Monday, the 9th Day of March, 1746.

THE Lords met in the House of Lords in their Robes; and, after Prayers, adjourned into Westminster-Hall.

The First Day, in Westminster-Hall.

ABOUT Eleven of the Clock, the Lords came from their own House into the Court erected in Westminster-Hall, in the Manner following:

The Lord High-Steward's Gentlemen Attendants, Two and Two.

The Clerks Assistant to the House of Lords, and the Clerk of the Parliament, with the Clerk of the Crown in the Court of Chancery, bearing the King's Commission to the Lord High Steward.

The Masters in Chancery, Two and Two.

The Judges, Two and Two.

The Peers eldest Sons, Two and Two.

Peers Minors, Two and Two.

York and Windsor Heralds.

Four Serjeants at Arms, with their Maces, Two and Two.

The Yeoman Usher of the House.

Then the Peers, Two and Two, beginning with the youngest Baron.

Then Four Serjeant at Arms, with their Maces, Two and Two.

The Serjeants at Arms attending the Great Seal, and Purse-Bearer.

Then Garter King at Arms, and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, carrying the White Staff before the Lord High Steward.

Philip Lord Hardwicke, Lord High Chancellor of Great-Britain, Lord High Steward, alone, his Train borne.

The Lords having taken their Places in the Court, according to their Degrees, the Lord High Steward being upon the uppermost Woolpack; and the Commons, and their Managers, being also in the Seats respectively prepared for them;

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, having his Majesty's Commission to the Lord High Steward in his Hand, standing before the Clerk's Table, with his Face towards the State, made Three Reverences, the First at the Table, the Second in the Midway, and the Third near the Woolpack; then kneeled down, and, on his Knee, presented the Commission to the Lord High Steward; who delivered the same back to him; who, rising, made Three Reverences, and returned with it to the Table: And then Proclamation was made for Silence in this Manner:

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Our Sovereign Lord the King strictly charges and commands all manner of Persons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Then the Lord High Steward stood up, and spoke to the Peers.

Lord High Steward. His Majesty's Commission is about to be read: Your Lordships are desired to attend to it in the usual Manner; and all others are likewise to stand up, uncovered, while the Commission is reading.

All the Peers uncovered themselves; and they, and all others, stood up, uncovered, while the Commission was read; which is as follows: viz.

GEORGE R.

GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of GOD, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, To Our right trusty and well-beloved Councillor Philip Lord Hardwicke, Baron of Hardwicke in Our County of Gloucester, Our Chancellor of Great Britain, greeting. Whereas Simon Lord Lovat, before Us in Parliament, by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, in Our Parliament assembled, in the Name of the said Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, and in the Name of all the Commons of Our Kingdom of Great Britain, is and stands impeached and accused of High-Treason, by him the said Simon Lord Lovat committed and perpetrated; We, considering that Justice is an excellent Virtue, and pleasing to the Most High, and being willing, that the said Simon Lord Lovat should, before Us in our present Parliament, according to the Law and Custom of this our Kingdom of Great Britain, and according to the Custom of Parliament, be heard, sentenced, and adjudged, touching and concerning the said High-Treason whereof he stands impeached and accused, as aforesaid, and that all other Things, which are necessary in this Behalf, should be in due Manner done and executed; and forasmuch as the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in our present Parliament assembled, have most humbly besought Us, that We would vouchsafe to appoint a Steward of Great Britain for this Time; We, very much confiding in your Fidelity, Prudence, provident Circumspection, and Industry, have, for this Cause, ordained and constituted you Steward of Great Britain, to bear, execute, and exercise, for this Time, the said Office, with all Things to the same Office in this Behalf due and belonging: And therefore We command you, that you diligently set about the Premises, and, for this Time, do exercise and execute, with Effect, all those Things, which belong to the Office of Steward of Great Britain, and which are required in this Behalf. In Witness whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made patent. Witness Ourself at Westminster, the Ninth Day of March, in the Twentieth Year of Our Reign.

By the King Himself, signed with his own Hand.

YORKE and YORKE.

Serjeant at Arms. God save the King!

Then Garter, and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, after Three Reverences, kneeling, jointly presented the White Staff to his Grace the Lord High Steward: And then his Grace, attended by Garter, Black-Rod, and the Purse-Bearer (making his proper Reverences towards the Throne), removed from the Woolpack to an armed Chair, which was placed on the uppermost Step but one of the Throne, as it was prepared for that Purpose; and then seated himself in the Chair, and delivered the Staff to the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod on his Right Hand, the Purse-Bearer holding the Purse on the Left.

Clerk of the Crown. Serjeant at Arms, Make Proclamation.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Our Sovereign Lord the King strictly charges and commands all manner of Persons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Lord High Steward. It it your Lordships Pleasure, that the Judges have Leave to be covered?——Lords. Ay.

Then another Proclamation was made, as follows:

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Lieutenant of the Tower of London, bring forth your Prisoner to the Bar, according to the Order of the House of Lords to you directed.

Then Simon Lord Lovat was brought to the Bar by the Deputy-Governor of the Tower, having the Ax carried before him by the Gentleman Gaoler, who stood with it on the Left-Hand of the Prisoner, with the Edge turned from him. The Prisoner when he approached the Bar, made Three Reverences, and then fell upon his Knees at the Bar.

Lord High Steward. Your Lordship may rise.

Then the Prisoner rose up, and bowed to his Grace the Lord High Steward, and to the House of Peers: Which Compliment was returned him by his Grace, and the Lords.

And Proclamation being again made for keeping Silence,

The Lord High Steward spake to the Prisoner as follows:

Lord High Steward.

SIMON Lord Lovat, You stand impeached of High-Treason by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses in Parliament assembled, in the Names of themselves, and of all the Commons of Great-Britain; and your Lordship is now brought to the Bar of this House to receive your Trial upon that Impeachment.

The Weight of this Accusation, the solemn Manner of exhibiting and prosecuting it, and the Awfulness of this supreme Judicature, the most illustrious in the World, are Circumstances, that may naturally strike your Mind with anxious and alarming Apprehensions. Reasonable and well-grounded must those Apprehensions be, if they proceed from that greatest of all Terrors, a Consciousness of Guilt. But if your Lordship is innocent; if you have really preserved yourself untainted with the heinous Crimes laid to your Charge, as you have averred by your Answer; these very awful Circumstances, when duly considered, ought to have a contrary Effect, and to afford you Support and Consolation.

Your Lordship can never doubt of the greatest Fairness and Candour in the Management of a Prosecution carried on by the House of Commons, intrusted and highly concerned to preserve the Rights and Liberties of their Fellow-Subjects. Neither can you entertain the least Doubt of a just and impartial Trial, where the Law of the Land, and the Custom and Usage of Parliament (an essential Part of that Law), constitute the Rule of Proceeding; and the Decision and Judgment rest in the Breasts of these noble Lords your Peers, who are to try you upon that Honour, which is inseparable from them, and to judge you by that Law, which is the great Security of themselves and their Posterity.

It is my Duty to put your Lordship in mind of some Things, which may be of Use to you in the Conduct of your Defence; but in this I shall be the shorter, since, at your own Request, Counsel have been already assigned you, with whom you must be presumed to have advised.

Your Lordship must give due and patient Attention to the Reading of the Articles of Impeachment, and what shall be said by the Managers for the House of Commons, or offered in Evidence against you, without giving any Interruption: But when the Managers shall have finished the Examination, on their Part, of any Witness produced by them, you will have Liberty to cross-examine that Witness.

When the Managers for the Commons shall have gone through their Evidence, and closed what they shall think fit to offer by way of Charge, then will be your Lordship's Time to make your Defence. In doing this, you and your Witnesses will be heard with the greatest Attention and Equity.

But your Lordship must take Notice, that your Counsel are not to examine or cross-examine any Witness, nor to give you any Assistance, while Matter of Fact only is in question; but, if any Point or Matter of Law shall arise during this Proceeding, they will, according to the known Rules in such Cases, be heard to it in your Behalf; and, for that Purpose, are permitted to be present whilst your Lordship is at the Bar.

The Witnesses produced in your Defence, must be examined upon Oath, pursuant to a very just and wise Provision made by Act of Parliament in the First Year of the late Queen Anne, and according to the Form established by their Lordships in former Cases of Impeachments.

By Command of their Lordships, I am further to acquaint you, and all other Persons, who shall have occasion to speak to this Court, that they are to address themselves to the Lords in general, and not to any Lord in particular.

Before I conclude, I must beg the Indulgence of the House to add one Thing more. If your Lordship shall desire to have the Use of Pen, Ink, and Paper, to take Notes in order to your Defence, I presume it will be permitted; and if, in the Course of your Trial, you should happen to omit any Advantage which in Law and Justice ought to be allowed to you for your Defence, such is the Candour of my Lords your Judges, that I trust I shall meet with their Approbation in giving you Notice of it.

The

The Articles of Impeachment, and the Lord Lovat's Anſwer thereunto, as alſo the Replication of the Commons to the ſaid Anſwer, were (by Command of the Lord High Steward) read, and the ſame are as follow.

Articles of Impeachment of High-Treaſon againſt Simon Lord Lovat.

WHereas the Imperial Crown and Government of theſe Kingdoms have been long, duly, and happily eſtabliſhed, in the Royal Family of his preſent moſt Sacred Majeſty, upon Principles equally conducive to the Honour and Safety of the Crown, and to the Protection and Liberty of the Subject; whereby ſettled Laws are made the common Meaſure of Juſtice to both, and a Prerogative wiſely calculated to promote the greater Good of the People, and anſwer the Exigencies of Government, has been aſcertained and ſecured:

And whereas the Reigns of his preſent Majeſty, and his Royal Father, have given the ſtrongeſt and moſt illuſtrious Proofs of the happy Effects of thoſe Principles, in the Exerciſe of their legal, mild, and equal Adminiſtration, under which every Subject, from the higheſt to the loweſt, has had his Religion, his Perſon, and his Property, fully protected by the moſt inviolable Obſervance of the Laws, which have had their free Courſe, without the leaſt Interruption on the Part of his Majeſty, or of his Royal Father:

Notwithſtanding which, there have been found many wicked and ungrateful Perſons, who have themſelves enjoyed all theſe Bleſſings in common with the reſt of their Fellow-Subjects, and yet have been weak and deſperate enough, from time to time, to contrive the Subverſion of this happy Eſtabliſhment, in order to introduce Popiſh Bigotry and Superſtition, inſtead of the Proteſtant Religion, and an Arbitrary, Tyrannical Power, inſtead of a Free Government; and as the only Means of eſtabliſhing and perpetuating thoſe great Evils, to place the Pretender to his Majeſty's Crown upon the Throne of this Kingdom; and, the more eaſily to obtain theſe Ends, have, from time to time, taken Advantage of the Diſtreſſes, which, in the Courſe of human Affairs, have happened to their Native Country, to ſet on foot and proſecute their traitorous Deſigns:

And whereas divers of the ſaid Traitors to his Majeſty have laid hold of the Opportunity ariſing from the juſt and unavoidable, but difficult and expenſive Wars, in which this Nation has been for ſome time engaged, to renew their Treaſonable Conſpiracies, for the bringing their wicked Purpoſes to Effect, by the Aſſiſtance of Troops and Money from his Majeſty's Enemies Abroad, and by raiſing a Rebellion at Home:

And whereas, by the Inſtigation of, and in Concert with the ſaid Traitors, a great Number of French Troops, accompanied by the Eldeſt Son of the ſaid Pretender, were ready, and had in part embarked, and actually ſet ſail, to invade this Kingdom, in the Year One thouſand Seven hundred and Forty-three; but were then prevented from accompliſhing their Deſign by the wiſe Precautions of His Majeſty, and the good Providence of Almighty God:

And whereas the ſame Traitors, reſtleſs and indefatigable in the Proſecution of their ſaid wicked and traitorous Purpoſes, hoping that the French, by the great Superiority of their Numbers in Flanders, might be able to invade this Kingdom, and, at the ſame time, to prevent the Return of his Majeſty's Troops from abroad, for the Defence of the Nation, did, in the Year One thouſand Seven hundred and Forty-five, encourage the ſaid Eldeſt Son of the Pretender to his Majeſty's Crown, to land, at that critical Juncture, in this Kingdom, who, in purſuance of ſuch Encouragement, did actually land in Scotland, and put himſelf at the Head of a large Body of armed Traitors, and commence and carry on, for a conſiderable Time, a cruel, unnatural, and bloody War againſt his Majeſty, within this Realm, which has at laſt been happily ſuppreſſed:

ARTICLE I.

SIMON Lord Lovat, being a Subject of his ſaid Majeſty, one of the ſaid Traitors and Rebels, and conſpiring and joining with them in their ſaid traitorous Deſigns, and having withdrawn that due Obedience, Fidelity, and Allegiance, which, as a loyal Subject, he owed, and of right ought to bear, to his ſaid preſent Moſt Sacred Majeſty, the only true, lawful, and undoubted Sovereign of this Kingdom, his true and natural Lord, did, upon the 31ſt Day of December, in the Year of our Lord 1743, in the Shire of Inverneſs, and, on the 28th Day of October, in the Year 1745, in the ſame Shire, and at divers other Days, Times, and Places, wickedly, maliciouſly, falſly, and traitorouſly, compaſs and imagine the Death of his ſaid Majeſty.

ARTICLE II.

AND for accompliſhing his ſaid wicked and traitorous Purpoſe, he, the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat, upon the ſaid 31ſt Day of December, in the ſaid Year 1743, in the Shire of Inverneſs aforeſaid, did traitorouſly correſpond with the ſaid Pretender, obtain and accept a Commiſſion from the ſaid Pretender, to be a Lieutenant General of his Forces, and another Commiſſion from the ſaid Pretender to be General of the Highlanders; and did alſo accept from the ſaid Pretender, a Patent or Grant, importing to create him the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat Duke of Fraſer; and then and there did traitorouſly conſpire and enter into an Aſſociation with many other Traitors, in order to raiſe a War and Rebellion againſt his Majeſty, within this Realm, and to obtain Troops, Money, and Succours from France, for that Purpoſe.

ARTICLE III.

AND the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat did further falſly and traitorouſly, at the Times and Place before particularly mentioned, and at divers other Times and Places, aſſemble himſelf, with divers other falſe Traitors and Rebels, againſt our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King, being armed and arrayed in a warlike Manner, and did raiſe, and cauſed to be raiſed and aſſembled, great Numbers of armed Men, his Majeſty's Subjects, for the Service of the ſaid Pretender, and his ſaid Son; and arrayed, and cauſed them to be arrayed, in a warlike Manner againſt his Majeſty, and did traitorouſly levy, and cauſe to be levied, a cruel and unnatural War againſt his Majeſty, within this Realm, at the Times and Place aforeſaid, in Favour of the ſaid Pretender.

ARTICLE IV.

AND for the more effectual bringing his ſaid Treaſons and traitorous Deſigns to Effect, he the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat did, in the Month of November, in the ſaid Year 1745, traitorouſly compoſe, write, and ſend, and cauſe to be compoſed, written, and ſent, a treaſonable Letter to the ſaid Eldeſt Son of the ſaid Pretender, then in Arms within this Kingdom, and joined by, and at the Head of, great Numbers of his Majeſty's Subjects, falſe Traitors and Rebels againſt his Majeſty, then alſo in Arms and Rebellion againſt his Majeſty within this Kingdom; in which Letter he the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat, among other Things, expreſſed the great Pleaſure it would give him to end his Days in the Service of the ſaid Pretender's ſaid Son; That he was reſolved to ſend to him his the ſaid Lord Lovat's Eldeſt Son, to venture his Life in his Service, and deliver up his Clan to him; and further expreſſed and repreſented his own great Zeal and Attachment to the ſaid Pretender, and his ſaid Son, and their Cauſe and Intereſt, and the Service he had done, was doing, and intended to do, for the ſaid Pretender and his ſaid Son, with Intent and in order to confirm, animate, and encourage him the ſaid Pretender, his ſaid Son, his Adherents, and all the other ſaid Traitors, in the Proſecution of their ſaid Treaſons, and traitorous Deſigns.

ARTICLE V.

AND the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat, in further Proſecution of his ſaid Treaſons, did, at the Times and Place before-mentioned, and at divers other Times and Places, after the ſaid War and Rebellion began, and while the ſame was carrying on, traitorouſly compoſe, write, and ſend, and cauſe to be compoſed, written, and ſent, divers other treaſonable Letters and Papers to divers falſe Traitors, then openly in Arms in this Kingdom againſt his ſaid Majeſty, and to divers others of his Majeſty's Subjects, and other Perſons, to aſſure them of his own Zeal and firm Attachment to the Cauſe and Intereſt of the ſaid Pretender, and his ſaid Son, and to confirm, ſollicit, excite, and perſuade them to engage in, continue, and proſecute the ſaid War and Rebellion, and to promiſe and aſſure them of his Aſſiſtance therein.

ARTICLE VI.

AND the more effectually to attain the End of his ſaid Treaſons, and treaſonable Deſigns, the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat did, at the ſaid Times and Place, and at divers other Times and Places, traitorouſly aid and aſſiſt the ſaid Pretender's ſaid Son, and the ſaid other falſe Traitors and Rebels, in the carrying on the ſaid Treaſons, War, and Rebellion, and furniſh and provide them with great Quantities of Arms, Ammunition, Implements of War, Cloaths, and other Things uſeful and neceſſary for that Purpoſe; and alſo ſent his eldeſt Son, and many of his Name, Family, and Dependents, to the Aſſiſtance of the ſaid Pretender's eldeſt Son, and the ſaid other Rebels; and alſo gave them Advice, Directions, and Inſtructions, in the Proſecution of the ſaid Rebellion.

ARTICLE VII.

AND the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat further, at the Times and Place aforeſaid, and at divers other Times and Places, did unlawfully and traitorouſly hold, entertain, and keep Intelligence and Correſpondence, both in Perſon and by Letters and otherwiſe, with the ſaid eldeſt Son of the ſaid Pretender, well knowing him to be ſo; and alſo with divers other Perſons, who were employed by the ſaid Pretender's ſaid Son; and particularly with John Murray of Broughton, Eſq. Donald Cameron the elder, of Lochiel, Donald Cameron the younger, of Lochiel, Alexander MacLeod, Advocate, of Edinburgh, John Roy Stuart, Doctor Archibald Cameron, and divers others: All which Perſons were employed by the ſaid eldeſt Son of the ſaid Pretender in this Kingdom, in the ſaid Rebellion, the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat well knowing they were ſeverally employed.

All which ſaid Treaſons and Crimes above-mentioned were contrived, committed, perpetrated, acted, and done, by the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat, againſt our ſaid preſent Sovereign Lord the King, his Peace, Crown, and Dignity, contrary to the Duty of his Allegiance, and againſt the Laws and Statutes of this Kingdom.

Of all which ſaid Treaſons and Crimes, the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes, in Parliament aſſembled, do, in the Name of themſelves, and all the Commons of Great Britain, impeach the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat.

And the ſaid Commons, by Proteſtations, ſaving to themſelves the Liberty of exhibiting, at any time hereafter, any other Accuſation of Impeachment againſt the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat; and alſo of replying to the Anſwer which he ſhall make to the Premiſes, or any of them, or to any Impeachment or Accuſation that ſhall be by them exhibited, according to the Courſe and Proceedings of Parliament; do pray, That the ſaid Simon Lord Lovat be put to anſwer all and every the Premiſes: And that ſuch Proceedings, Examinations, Tryal, and Judgment thereupon, may be had and uſed, as ſhall be agreeable to Law and Juſtice.

The Anſwer of Simon Lord Fraſer of Lovat, to the Articles of Impeachment of High-Treaſon exhibited againſt him, by the Name of Simon Lord Lovat, by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes, in Parliament aſſembled, in the Name of themſelves, and all the Commons of Great Britain.

THE ſaid Lord, ſaving and reſerving to himſelf all Benefit and Advantage of Exception to the Uncertainties and Inſufficiencies in the ſaid Articles contained, and alſo all Advantages and Privileges belonging to him as a Peer of this Realm, in Anſwer to the afore-mentioned Article ſays, That being as fully ſenſible as any Britiſh Subject of the many Bleſſings theſe Kingdoms have enjoyed under his preſent and late Majeſty's mild and equal Adminiſtration; and having, in the Rebellion of 1715, given the ſtrongeſt Proofs of his Zeal for, and Attachment to, his late Majeſty, and the Succeſſion of the Crown in his illuſtrious Family, againſt ſuch as had undertaken the Deſtruction of both; he cannot but lament his Misfortune, to have his Fidelity queſtioned at the End of his Days; and himſelf, when near worn out with Age and Infirmities, charged with intending intending the Subversion of a Government he had, in the Strength and Vigour of his Age, exerted his utmost Power and Address to support. Under this heavy Pressure, attended with many other Calamities and Misfortunes, particularly his own Inability to manage his Defence, his only Resource is in your Lordships Justice, who will, he is well assured, regard only plain Facts, not as aggravated by Skill and Oratory, but as clearly and manifestly proved by the Testimony of credible and unexceptionable Witnesses.

Under this firm Persuasion, therefore, the said Lord, in Answer to the First and Second Articles, denies that he did wickedly, maliciously, falsely, and traitorously, compass or imagine the Death of his said present Majesty, or correspond with the Pretender, obtain or accept any Commission or Commissions, Grant, or Letters Patent, from the said Pretender, or traitorously conspire, or enter into any Association whatsoever, for raising a War or Rebellion against his said Majesty, within this Realm, or for obtaining Troops, Money, or Succours, from France, for that Purpose, in Manner and Form as by the said Articles is alledged.

To the Third Article, the said Lord denies, That he did assemble himself with any Traitors or Rebels; or raise, or cause to be raised or assembled, any armed Men, for the Service of the said Pretender, or his eldest Son; or array, or cause to be arrayed, any Person or Persons whatsoever against his said Majesty; or levy, or cause to be levied, any War against his said Majesty, in this Realm, in Manner and Form as in this Article is charged.

To the Fourth Article, the said Lord denies, That he did compose write, or send, or cause to be composed, written, or sent, any Letter, Paper, or Writing whatsoever, to the said Pretender's eldest Son, to any such Purport or Effect as by the said Article is supposed, or to any other Purport or Effect whatsoever.

To the Fifth Article, he denies, That he did compose, write, or send, or cause to be composed, written, or sent, any Letter or Letters, Paper or Papers, to any Person or Persons, to such Purport or Effect as by the said Article is alledged.

To the Sixth Article, he denies, That he ever did furnish or provide the said Pretender's eldest Son, or any Traitors or Rebels, with any Arms, Ammunition, Implements of War, or other Things useful or necessary, for the Purpose in the said Article mentioned: Nor did he send his eldest Son, or any of his Name, Family, or Dependents, to the Assistance of the said Pretender's eldest Son, or any Rebels whatsoever; nor encourage, advise, direct, or instruct any of them, in the Prosecution of the said Rebellion.

To the Seventh Article, the said Lord denies, That he ever did hold, entertain, or keep, any Intelligence or Correspondence with the said Pretender's eldest Son, either in Person or otherwise; nor did he entertain or keep any Correspondence with any other of the Persons mentioned in the said Article, or with any other Person employed by the said eldest Son of the Pretender, in the said Rebellion, knowing any thing of them to be so employed.

And as to all other Matters and Things in the said Articles contained, and which is not herein particularly answered (if any such there be), the said Lord avers, That he is not guilty of them, or any of them, in Manner and Form as laid in the said Articles, or in any other Manner or Form whatsoever: And humbly submits himself to your Lordships Judgment.

Replication of the Commons to Lord Lovat's Answer.

Die Veneris, 16° Januarii, 1746.

A MESSAGE was brought from the House of Commons, by Sir William Yonge, and others, to acquaint this House, that they have considered the Answer of Simon Lord Lovat to the Articles of Impeachment exhibited against him by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses, assembled in Parliament: And do aver their Charge against the said Simon Lord Lovat for High-Treason, to be true: And that the said Simon Lord Lovat is guilty, in such Manner as he stands impeached: And that the Commons will be ready to prove their Charge against him, at such convenient Time as shall be appointed for that Purpose.

Lord High Steward. The Distance of this Place from the Bar is so great, that I am obliged to ask your Lordships Leave to come down to the Table, for the Convenience of Hearing.

Lords. Ay, Ay.

Which was done accordingly.

L. H. S. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, You will be pleased now to proceed.

Sir WILLIAM YONGE.

My Lords,

AS I was commanded by the House of Commons to lay before your Lordships the Articles of Impeachment of High Treason against the noble Lord at the Bar, which have been just read,

So it now becomes my Duty to open the general Charge to your Lordships, together with some of the Inducements which prevailed with the Commons to think this Accusation necessary.

In the first Place, my Lords, I cannot omit observing, That as every Impeachment is said to be in the Name of all the Commons of the Land, so this may most emphatically be declared to be so, as I am confident there is not a single Subject of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, who has not demanded Justice against this notorious Offender; excepting a few Miscreants, who may still be intestine Enemies to his Sacred Majesty on the Throne, his Royal Family, and by necessary Consequence, to the Religion and Liberties of their native Country.

The Crime of High-Treason has at all times been considered, in the most civilized and in the most free Countries, as an Offence of the blackest Dye; and as such, the severest Punishments have been inflicted on such Offenders; and this, my Lords, with the greatest Reason and Justice.

Government was instituted for the Happiness and Security of Mankind, to rescue them from the Rapine and Disorder,

The Murders and Destructions, which must be the Consequences of Anarchy and Confusion.

Treason tends to destroy all Government, whether Monarchical, or that of a Commonwealth of any Denomination; to introduce Confusion and Bloodshed: And if he that murders one Man, is by the Laws of God and Man to be punished with Death, how much more every Rebel, every Fomenter and Abettor of Rebellion, who is a Murderer of Thousands?

By our Law, He that but imagines the Death of the King (in whose Person all the Bands of Society are united), and discovers his wicked Imagination by any Overt Act, is a Traitor: If this be proved against the Prisoner (as I doubt not it will be to your Lordships full Satisfaction), the noble Lord at the Bar is then a Traitor.

Raising Rebellion, and levying War, is another Species of Treason by our Law, or rather the plainest and most notorious Overt Act of imagining the Death of the King: And we doubt not to prove the noble Lord at the Bar to be a Rebel.

It is High-Treason by Statute, to correspond with the Pretender to his Majesty's Crown, or with the Sons of the Pretender, or those employed by them.

But we shall amply prove it to your Lordships, That the noble Lord at the Bar has boasted, that he received a Patent as Duke from the Pretender; an Authority as Commander in Chief of the Highlands; is a General Officer in the Pretender's Service; and that he has openly corresponded with the Son of the Pretender, and his Followers, then in open War against his Majesty within this Realm, and given them Harbour, Encouragement, and Assistance.

Your Lordships have, I am persuaded, given due Attention to the Preamble, as well as to the Articles that have been read.

The Commons have there asserted, That, most unfortunately for this Nation, we have amongst us an obstinate, bigotted, restless Faction, who are not, and will not be, contented with the Enjoyments of Liberty, Peace, and Prosperity:

But who are perpetually watching for every favourable Opportunity to overturn our Constitution, and the present happy Establishment.

This is not only their Principle, but has been their constant Endeavour, at different times, from the late glorious Revolution to the present Hour,

By Plots and Conspiracies, by fomenting frequent Rebellions, by inviting our Enemies to invade us, and by that detestable Crime of Assassination.

These Facts require no Proof. Our Annals will afford, and your Lordships Memories will furnish, numerous Instances of some or other of these Attempts.

But, my Lords, we shall, in the Course of our Proceedings, make it appear, That the noble Lord at the Bar, so long as Seven or Eight Years ago, joined in an Association with other Traitors, under their Hands and Seals, for dethroning his present Majesty, and placing the Pretender in his Stead.

Not contented with this, the Association so signed and sealed was transmitted by a faithful Hand to the Cardinal, then Prime Minister of France,

In order to excite those our natural Enemies to give their Assistance, and to invade this Country with a foreign Force, even at a time when we were in actual Peace with that Kingdom;

His Lordship, and the other Conspirators, justly imagining, That this might be a favourable Conjuncture, a War with Spain at that Time being commenced;

Wisely concluding, That when we were engaged with one Branch of the House of Bourbon, the other would not long be neuter.

So early was his Lordship in fomenting a Rebellion at home, and inviting an Invasion from abroad.

Nor was he only early in promoting, and active in supporting, but zealous in endeavouring to prevent the Extinction of the late Rebellion;

For, when the Rebels were broken, and their Chiefs Fugitives from the Victory at Culloden, his Lordship found Means to be present at a Sort of Council of War held by those Chiefs;

Where he earnestly encouraged them to reassemble the Remains of their scattered Troops, and to revive the War:

Which was resolved on, and might have happened, had not the Vigilance of his Royal Highness the Duke prevented its taking Effect, thereby shewing his own superior Abilities in using, as eminently as his Courage and Conduct in obtaining, Victory.

The noble Lord at the Bar was, at the Time of this Victory, within Fourteen Miles of Inverness.

What would have been the Conduct of any loyal Subject on this Occasion? Would he not have hastened thither, to congratulate his Royal Highness on the Success of that glorious Day?

What was the Conduct of the Prisoner at the Bar?

He received the Young Pretender, flying from his Defeat; embraced him with open Arms; assisted him in his Flight.

And the next News we hear of his Lordship is, that he fled from Justice himself, and appeared at the Meeting of the Rebel Chiefs I have just now mentioned.

This is the Substance of our Charge. And when I have said thus much, your Lordships will not be at a Loss for the strongest Inducements to the Commons to impeach. But, my Lords, there are other Inducements.

The Commons look upon it not only as their Duty, but as a Duty of the greatest Importance to this Nation, to take this Opportunity to let the World know, by the unanimous Voice of the Representatives of all the Commons of Great-Britain, their sincere and hearty Abhorrence of every Attempt to disturb his Majesty's auspicious Government, either from abroad, or at home:

To convince all the World, That we are determined to be a Free People, under our own King:

That we are determined to continue a Protestant Nation;

And that we never will suffer an arbitrary Government, or Popish Superstition, to be imposed on us by any Power whatsoever:

That we will give convincing Proof to all Europe, that we are not that dissatisfied, disaffected, turbulent People, they have been vainly made to believe,

By having adopted as Truths, all the seditious, discontented, and traitorous traitorous Libels, which have at different Times, and on various Occaſions, been induſtriouſly ſcattered through the Nation;

And that our Enemies did fooliſhly and ignorantly imagine theſe Libels and Calumnies to be the general Senſe of the People.

Permit me, my Lords, to put you in mind, that That ſcandalous Declaration of the Young Pretender publiſhed at Edinburgh, which your Lordſhips, with the hearty Concurrence of the Commons, ordered to be burnt by the common Hangman, was but a ſhort Abſtract of thoſe very Libels.

This Belief of our Enemies was their Folly. The relying on it has proved, Thanks be to God, their Deſtruction.

Had they not been thus infatuated, would ſuch a Nation as France have attempted, or thought it poſſible, to over-run, much more to conquer, a brave and warlike People, with a Handful of Men, ſo poorly provided at firſt, and throughout ſo weakly ſupported?

To convince Mankind of theſe falſe and vain Imaginations, was one of the Inducements which prevailed with the Commons to vindicate the People they repreſent from theſe vile Aſperſions, in the moſt ſolemn Manner, in Preſence of your Lordſhips and this great Aſſembly.

But, my Lords, the Body of the People themſelves, from the higheſt to the loweſt, have vindicated their own Loyalty and Honour.

After a ſmall Body of the regular Troops had received a Check, when it was apprehended the Rebels would venture to march Southward, what a noble Spirit immediately aroſe throughout the Nation!

Not an artificial, falſe Clamour for Liberty, but the true old Britiſh Spirit of Liberty, the true REVOLUTION SPIRIT, that exerted and ſignalized itſelf, out of Hatred to Popery and arbitrary Power.

And, Thanks be to God, it ſtill remains in its full Vigour amongſt us; it cries aloud in our Streets for Juſtice againſt thoſe that would have made them Slaves and Papiſts; it cries aloud for Juſtice againſt the Priſoner at the Bar.

Calumnies of the like Nature preceded the great Rebellion in the Year 1715; and moſt juſtly may our preſent gracious King now ſay, in the Words of his Royal Father, of glorious Memory, to both Houſes of Parliament:

"My greateſt Comfort is, That I cannot reproach myſelf with having "given the leaſt Provocation to that Spirit of Diſcontent and Calumny "that has been let looſe againſt me, or the leaſt Pretence for kindling "the Flame of this Rebellion. Let thoſe whoſe fatal Counſels laid the "Foundation of all thoſe Miſchiefs, and thoſe whoſe private Diſcon-"tents and Diſappointments, diſguiſed under falſe Pretences, have be-"trayed great Numbers of deluded People into their own Deſtruction, "anſwer for the Miſeries in which they have involved their Fellow-"Subjects."

I have choſen to make this Quotation, becauſe it will appear to your Lordſhips, that the noble Lord at the Bar, ſince his being taken, has frequently declared,

That one of the Cauſes of his late Behaviour, was Revenge to the Miniſtry, for having taken from him the Command of an Independent Company, which he enjoyed.

Now, my Lords, if there is ſuch a Principle, that Men muſt be paid for being loyal, and hired to live free and happy,

Whom no Senſe of Religion, or Love to their Country, can engage,

Whom no Ties of Conſcience, Oaths, or Abjurations, can bind:

If there is ſuch a Principle, it is the loweſt, the baſeſt, and the meaneſt, as well as the moſt miſchievous and wicked, that can enter into the Heart of Man.

My Lords, the Commons have ſtill further Inducements for impeaching this particular Criminal.

Your Lordſhips have already done national Juſtice on ſome of the principal Traitors, who appeared in open Arms againſt his Majeſty, by the ordinary Courſe of Law.

But this noble Lord, who, in the whole Courſe of his Life, has boaſted of his ſuperior Cunning in Wickedneſs, and his Ability to commit frequent Treaſons with Impunity,

Vainly imagined, that he might poſſibly be a Traitor in private, and a Rebel only in his Heart,

By ſending his Son, and his Followers, to join the Pretender, and remaining at home himſelf, to endeavour to deceive his Majeſty's faithful Subjects:

Hoping, he might be rewarded for his Son's Services, if ſucceſsful; or his Son alone be the Sufferer for his Offences, if the Undertaking failed. Diabolical Cunning! Monſtrous Impiety!

My Lords, Secret Criminals of this Sort, and of all others, it is the peculiar Buſineſs of the Commons to explore, and to bring to Juſtice.

This is the firſt and great Offender: But ſhould hereafter other concealed Criminals appear, who encouraged and ſupported the late Rebellion; but who, either through the Cowardice of their Hearts, or Fondneſs for their Eſtates and Riches, durſt not join the Rebels,

I make no doubt, but the Zeal and Loyalty of the Commons will prompt them with equal Ardour, to bring them to condign Puniſhment.

Having thus opened to your Lordſhips the Nature of the Crimes of which the noble Lord at the Bar is accuſed, and ſeveral Inducements the Commons had for this Accuſation, it is needleſs for me to awaken your Lordſhips Attention, by enumerating the Miſeries which the late Rebellion occaſioned, or the utter Ruin which muſt have attended its Succeſs.

It is too freſh in your Lordſhips Memories to need any Aggravation: And I pray to God, that your Lordſhips, this Great Aſſembly, and the whole Nation, may for ever remember it.

It has too often been the Misfortune of this Country to have been involved in Civil Wars: A Calamity of all others the moſt to be dreaded.

In antient Times theſe unhappy Diviſions have ariſen from Conteſts between Princes and great Men, without the leaſt View to the Liberties, or the Benefit, of the People:

Let who would be Victors, they were ſure to be Slaves, and only fought for different Maſters.

The Power and Imperiouſneſs of Rome they were ſure to ſubmit to, while each Contender exerted his Intereſt there, for the Confirmation of his Title.

Henry the Seventh united the Two Branches of the contending Families: During his Reign, and thoſe that followed, the Commons began to grow rich, and conſequently powerful; they became jealous of their Liberties, and of their Property.

When they had ſomething of their own to loſe, they were too wiſe to riſk their Fortunes, or their Lives, in vain Quarrels of the Powerful and the Great: They ſhook off the Yoke of Rome; Laws were enacted to limit the Power of the Crown, and the Days of Freedom began to dawn.

Still there was another Struggle, when the Crown began to incroach upon thoſe Laws, and exert deſpotic Power: Theſe virtuous Struggles at firſt ſoon degenerated into Faction; Civil War and Anarchy enſued, and ended (as it always will) in the moſt abſolute Tyranny.

The Reſtoration re-eſtabliſhed the Form of our Government; and new Privileges were gained for the People.

But, in the next Reign, the impatient Luſt of Power, and the abject Bigotry of the Prince, produced the happy Revolution. The glorious Prince of Orange came to our Reſcue: The People received him with open Arms; and then, and not till then, was eſtabliſhed our preſent free Conſtitution.

Pardon, my Lords, this ſhort Deduction, and be pleaſed to reflect, how odious and deteſtable the late unprovoked Rebellion muſt appear.

A Rebellion calculated to overturn this Conſtitution, ſo hardly acquired, and ſo carefully preſerved, by all the ſucceeding Princes to this very Hour!

A Rebellion againſt our preſent indulgent Sovereign, whoſe Study has been the Happineſs of his People; under whom the boldeſt Rebel cannot complain of the leaſt Violence or Oppreſſion!

The Laws of the Land have had their full and free Courſe, except where their Rigour has been reſtrained by the Royal Mercy.

Under ſuch a Prince, and for the Deſtruction of ſuch a Conſtitution, has the noble Lord at the Bar conſpired and rebelled.

Be pleaſed then to remember the Depredations, the Bloodſhed, that ſpoiled and ſtained thoſe Countries through which the Rebels paſſed.

Let us remember the Diſtreſs of Public Credit, the Stagnation of Trade, the Loſs of our Manufacturers, the reaſonable, yet dangerous Apprehenſions, which ſeized on the Minds of all the loyal Inhabitants of theſe great and opulent Cities of London and Weſtminſter.

Let us remember the Loſs of the Lives, the Blood, and the Limbs, of thoſe gallant and brave Officers and Soldiers, who conquered, for our Sakes, in the famous Battle of Culloden. They are, and will be, a perpetual Memorial for whom, and by whom, they ſuffered.

Let us all remember theſe Calamities, and endeavour, as it is our Duty, to prevent the like Evils for the future, by doing Juſtice on Criminals; by putting a Stop to the Growth of Popery, that bloody Religion; by preventing the Education of our Youth in thoſe Principles, which the Priſoner at the Bar has inſtilled into his Son; and by leſſening the Power in thoſe Hands, which have ever been ready to diſturb this Government.

Theſe, or ſuch other Proviſions, as the Wiſdom of the Legiſlature ſhall ſuggeſt, are neceſſary to prevent the future Miſchiefs which may ariſe from the frequent Diſturbance of Government.

While we are in this State, 'tis in vain for this Country to hope to make the Figure ſhe ought to do, or retain her due Dignity among the States of Europe, or to preſerve the Peace, or hold the Balance, among foreign Powers.

If, while her Armies are employed abroad to humble the Pride of an aſſuming Nation, her Fleets to protect our Trade, or to annoy our Enemies,

If then our Troops are to be called Home to preſerve domeſtic Peace, and our Fleets to prevent Invaſions invited by theſe Patricides,

What Ally can depend on our Aſſiſtance? or what Pretence can we have to be Umpires in the common Cauſe of Europe?

Britain, united within herſelf, may, from her Situation, her Wealth, her Naval Power, and the Bravery of her Troops, juſtly claim that Title;

But divided, torn to Pieces by civil Diſcord, muſt fall under the ancient Reproach of this Country, and, while we are contending among ourſelves, become an eaſy Prey to our moſt inveterate Enemies.

Let us now, my Lords, turn our Thoughts from theſe gloomy Reflections, which the Time and Circumſtances of the late unhappy Rebellion of neceſſity muſt furniſh: And

Let us then call to Mind, with Thankfulneſs, the good Providence of God, which put an End to theſe Calamities, and a glorious Period to our Terrors.

Let us acknowledge, with Duty and Gratitude, all his Majeſty's Labours for the Safety and Happineſs of his People.

And let us remember, with Honour and Praiſe, his Royal Offspring, who, by his Courage and Conduct, has ſecured and eſtabliſhed his Majeſty's Throne, your Lordſhips Honours, our Liberties and Privileges, and the Proteſtant Religion.

Thus ended this wicked and unnatural Rebellion, of which the noble Lord at the Bar will appear to your Lordſhips to be one of the firſt Contrivers and Promoters, and a very conſiderable Support.

All I have ſaid, I know, will avail nothing with your Lordſhips, unleſs the Evidence we ſhall bring againſt the noble Lord at the Bar be clear and full, as we doubt not it will appear to be.

In Caſes where Life is concerned it is painful to be a Judge; it is uneaſy to be the Accuſers: But there is a Duty incumbent on both.

I know ſuch is the generous Compaſſion of your Lordſhips noble Hearts, that you will acquit with Pleaſure, but condemn with Reluctance.

And as I am perſuaded, from the Fulneſs of our Proofs, the latter will be your Lordſhips Judgment, give me Leave to add a few Words to leſſen that Concern, which your Lordſhips may feel as Judges, and we as Accuſers.

When I look on his Lordſhip at the Bar, I pity his Age and Infirmities; but, when I conſider that, at his Years, Pride, Vanity, Avarice, or Ambition, are ſo rooted in his Heart, as to tempt him to riſk his Honour and Eſtate, to ſacrifice the Religion and Liberty of his Country to thoſe mean Paſſions, that Pity is mixed with Indignation.

But when I reflect on his having been already pardoned for this very Crime;

That he has been amply rewarded by his Majesty's Royal Father, and intrusted by his present Majesty in preserving the Peace of those Highlands where he rebelled; I own I feel the strongest Resentment of such heinous Ingratitude.

The bringing his grey Hairs with Sorrow to the Grave seems to be a Distress to human Nature; but when we consider how different the Distress when that Expression was first used, and that the Prisoner at the Bar is not brought into that wretched Circumstance by the Misfortune or Loss of a darling Child, but by sacrificing his eldest Son to his own Ambition, and by endeavouring to save his own worthless Life by his Son's Destruction, it must almost harden the most tender Breast.

One Word more, and I have done.

When your Lordships look towards the Bar, you will please to reflect, that had the Design of the noble Lord, who stands there, had its Effect,

It would probably have happened to many of your Lordships noble Body, who should not have perished in the Defence of your Country, to have stood in that very Place;

While his Lordship, with a Number of mock Peers, had sat in Judgment on your Lordships, for the very Crime for which he is now accused.

Thus far, my Lords, I have gone, in Pursuance of the Trust reposed in me by the Commons. I am now, my Lords, for myself, humbly to implore your Lordships Indulgence for any Errors I may have been guilty of, either in Matter, or in Words. If I have omitted any Thing material, I am sure it will be supplied by the great Abilities of those who are to follow me, and who will lay before your Lordships the particular Evidence to support our Charge.

Lord Coke.

My Lords,

I AM likewise commanded by the House of Commons to assist my Honourable Friend in maintaining the Articles of Impeachment against the noble Lord at the Bar: And, my Lords, if I commit any Errors in what I shall offer to your Lordships, I hope I shall meet with your Lordships Indulgence, and, in Return, I promise you they shall not be wilful. It is a Business, my Lords, to which I am an entire Stranger; nor should I have undertaken it in a Case of so high Importance, if I did not think, that my Duty to my Country, as well as my Allegiance to his Majesty, to which I shall ever be faithful, equally called upon me to be instrumental, if I could, to find out concealed Treasons, and to bring the Contrivers of them to Justice, as to have ventured my Person and Fortune, if necessary, when the Rebels were in the Field. What I shall chiefly endeavour to prove to your Lordships, is, that the last Rebellion was not the Effect of Chance only, entered into by a few rash, inconsiderate Men, without Thought or previous Design, but the Result of long-considered and well-weighed Consultations, and of Schemes not so ill concerted, as to make the Success either impossible, or without some Degree of Probability in them: And, my Lords, the Reason why I choose to mention this general Design to your Lordships is, that, though I am not very old, I have twice seen this Country in very great Danger from the Disbelief of Jacobitism prevailing in it. In 1743, I, with Grief, remember, when a Message was sent from the King to a certain Place in this Kingdom, that an Invasion was projected from France; what popular Declamations were made to shew, that the Scheme was impracticable, and that it ought to be looked upon only as a Terror thrown out by the Ministry; because, as there was neither the Colour nor Appearance of Truth in it, there could be no Reality. And, in the Beginning of the last Rebellion, there was a Disbelief prevailed even among those who ought to have been more certain of the Truth: But that was not the Case of the Prisoner at your Bar: He did believe it; he sent one of his chief Agents into Lochaber, to the Young Pretender, to go and receive his Commands, and ordered him to express the greatest Satisfaction at his being come over. He did not content himself with beginning the Rebellion then; but in 1736, an Association was sent by him to Rome, signed and sealed by many of the People of that Country, to invite the Pretender then to come over; and that was afterwards carried to Paris, and shewed to the Cardinal; and, I believe, met with Approbation at both those Places.

My Lords, I say nothing to aggravate the Case of the Prisoner at your Bar: He is already oppressed with Misfortunes enough, and it is not in my Nature, I hope, to add to them. Nor should I, my Lords, make the following Observation, did I not think myself obliged, in Justice to an unfortunate young Man, whom this noble Lord has forced into the Rebellion: He did write a Letter, that he was afraid the disobedient Behaviour of his Son, would bring down his grey Hairs with Sorrow to the Grave; and therefore it will not appear astonishing to you, that when he had forgot that tenderest Tie of human Nature, the Love of a Father to his Child, so far as to desire to save the wretched Remains of a Life almost worn out, by the Destruction of his own Son, that he should forget his Allegiance to the Son of a King who saved his forfeit Life; the Remainder of which he has since employed in endeavouring to overturn and destroy his Family, and the Government established in him. I shall therefore conclude with my Honourable Friend, in saying, that we are ready to make good our Charge against the Prisoner at the Bar.

Mr. Attorney-General (Sir Dudley Rider).

My Lords,

I HAVE likewise the Commands of the House of Commons to assist in the Prosecution of the noble Lord at the Bar.

The Charge hath been fully stated and opened by the Managers who have spoke before me. The Prisoner has denied every Part of it, and thereby put the Proof upon us to be made out; not, as he rightly says in his Answer to the Articles, by Facts aggravated by Skill and Oratory, but by credible and unexceptionable Witnesses, in a plain and legal Way; against which he will have the full Benefit of any just Defence he can make.

I shall therefore avoid dwelling upon those many Circumstances of Aggravation, either in respect to the Rebellion in general, or to the noble Prisoner's own particular Conduct in it, which will necessarily occur in the Progress of this Prosecution: The Honourable Managers, who have preceded me, have very properly pointed them out to your Lordships. They have had their Effect already; all that Effect which your Lordships Wisdom and Justice would suffer them to have; all that the Commons would wish them to have: They have awakened your Lordships Attention, if that could possibly be wanting in the least Degree on such an Occasion: They have balanced that Compassion, which the Age, Appearance, and Quality of the noble Prisoner, must naturally raise in your Lordships humane Breasts; that is, they have cleared the Way for that Justice which the Nation calls for, and the Commons of Great-Britain in Behalf of themselves, and the People whom they represent, now demand at your Lordships Bar.

All therefore that I shall offer for your Lordships Consideration, will be a plain Narrative of Facts, with the Nature of the Evidence to prove them, and some short Observations, to shew the Force of those Facts to maintain the Charge, which the Commons of Great-Britain have undertaken to make good.

The Facts will be very numerous, to be proved by a Variety of Witnesses and Writings; and therefore must necessarily, in the Course of the Evidence, lie intermixed. I shall, therefore, in the Opening, endeavour to disentangle them: and, that your Lordships Attention may be the more easily fixed, and the Facts, as they shall arise in the Evidence, be the more readily applied to the several Parts of the Charge, I shall divide them into three distinct Periods of Time.

Those which happened precedent to the Pretender's Son's Landing.

What happened after that Time, and before the Battle of Culloden.

What arose since that happy Event.

And within each of these Periods, your Lordships will find many Things, which it will much concern the Prisoner at the Bar to give a satisfactory Answer to.

The First will open to your Lordships a wicked and traitorous Scheme begun and carried on for many Years, for bringing over the Pretender, by the Assistance of a Foreign Force, in which his Lordship will appear to have had a principal Hand.

The Second will include the more immediate Scene of Action in the late wicked Rebellion, and the particular Parts which the Prisoner took in it.

The Third will shew him in the Circumstance of a Defeat, and the Measures he then thought proper to take; and, in every Part of this whole Scene, he will appear plotting, associating, and supporting all the Steps that were taken for subverting this happy Establishment, dethroning his Majesty, and substituting a Popish Pretender in his room.

To begin with the First of these Periods: And here I shall be under a Necessity of going some Years back, in order to lay before your Lordships a View of those traitorous Schemes that have been set on foot, and prosecuted for some Time past, in order to prepare the Way for, and bring on the late Rebellion.

As soon as the War with Spain was declared, the Pretender, and his Agents, thought that a favourable Opportunity offered to promote his Interest; and a Project was immediately set on Foot, by several of his Friends in the Northern Parts of Scotland, for bringing in the Pretender by the Assistance of France; and Seven of the Chiefs of them entered into an Association for that Purpose. The Prisoner at the Bar set himself at the Head of them, and himself, together with the Earl of Traquair, Sir James Campbell of Auchinbreck, Cameron of Lochiel the younger, John Stuart, Brother to Lord Traquair, Lord Perth, and Lord John Drummond, signed and sealed an Association in Writing, in which they engaged to venture their Lives and Fortunes, to restore, as they called it, the Pretender, whom they stiled their King, and his Family. They agreed to send one Drummond, alias Mac Gregor, of Bochaldie, a Relation and intimate Friend of the Prisoner's, to Rome, in order to have the Scheme for bringing over the Pretender digested there; and from thence carried to Paris, for completing the Execution of it. It was there to be delivered to Cardinal Fleury, then Prime Minister of France, with a Memorial, pressing, in the strongest Terms, for her Assistance.

In order to engage the French Court, he was to represent the great Interest and Strength of the Conspirators in the Highlands; to assure the Cardinal, that they could raise 20,000 Highlanders for the Service, and wanted nothing but a few French Troops, and some Money, to secure the Success. The Conspirators, at the same Time, sent over a List of many other Heads of Clans, who, they pretended, would join in the same Design.

Drummond accordingly went over, and carried with him the Association and List; and after he had obtained the Sanction of Rome, and the Pretender, he came to Paris, where he was introduced to the Cardinal by one Semple, whom they called Lord Semple, an Agent at that Place for the Pretender. He delivered the Association and List to the Cardinal, with an Assurance, that any of the Seven who had signed the Association would come over, and confirm it in Person, whenever he desired it.

Any Scheme to disturb the Peace of this Nation is but too acceptable to that Court at all Times. The Cardinal received it with great Attention and Encouragement, and promised their Assistance, as soon as the Conspirators could shew a reasonable Prospect of Success. Drummond continued at Paris, and kept a constant Correspondence with those who had joined in the Association. Nothing, however, appears to have been finally resolved on, till about the latter End of the Year 1742, or the Beginning of 1743, when the Court of France, finding how necessary it was to their Views of oppressing Europe, to take off the Weight of our Assistance from our Allies upon the Continent, thought it worth their while (though then at Peace with us) to enter seriously into this Design; and Drummond was, about that time, sent over hither by the Cardinal, to assure the Conspirators, and the rest of the Pretender's Friends in Scotland, that if they could procure Encouragement from England, they might depend upon being assisted by France with an Invasion the Autumn following.

Drummond came accordingly over to Edinburgh, where he had a Meeting with the Earl of Traquair, Lochiel the younger, and Cluny, and gave them an Account of his Negotiations, and particularly of his last Message and Promise from the Cardinal. Upon this it was agreed, that the Earl of Traquair should go immediately to London, and try what Encouragement he could meet with there. The Earl went accordingly, and Drummond accompanied him. The Earl, after some time spent in England, returned to Edinburgh, and assured his Friends there, that the People here were well inclined to the Pretender, and would join in the Design, provided they could depend upon Assistance from France.

About the same time Drummond went over to Paris, to satisfy the Cardinal of the Success of his Negotiation; and he gave him such Satisfaction, that a Project for an Invasion was soon after agreed on. The Plan was, that the French should send over 3000 Men, under the Command of Earl Marshal, who were to be joined with large Bodies of Highlanders, which the Conspirators had undertaken to raise. 1500 of the French were to go directly to Inverness, where the Prisoner at the Bar was to join them with his Clan of Frasers; the remaining 1500 were to land in the West, near Sir James Campbell's, who was to go to the Isle of Mull, and raise the Clans there, who all together were to march and join the Frasers, and the other Body of French. At the same time 12,000 French, under the Command of Count Saxe, were to march to the Coast of Flanders and France, and from thence embark, and land in England, within two or three Days March of London.

As soon as this Scheme was agreed upon, Drummond, about the Middle of the Summer 1743, wrote Letters to the Earl of Traquair, to inform him of the Resolution that had been taken; to direct him to acquaint his Friends of it; and to assure them, that it would very soon be put in Execution. The Earl communicated this Intelligence to John Murray of Broughton, Lochiel, and several others, who immediately sent the same Mr. Murray to France, in order to settle Matters beforehand for the Execution of it. He went over accordingly; but the Death of the Cardinal, about that time, suspended the Prosecution of it for a little while. As soon as he arrived at Paris, he was assured by Drummond of the Cardinal's good Intentions and Zeal for the Pretender's Cause; and that nothing but his Death could have prevented the immediate Execution of it; and that the Cardinal's first Design was, that the Army under the Command of Maillebois should be employed in it; but that some Persons about the King of France had prevailed upon him to order that Army to march towards Hanover. Murray of Broughton was then introduced to Cardinel Tencin, and afterwards to M. Amelot, who assured him of the late Cardinal's Sincerity in the proposed Invasion; and that the French King had ordered him to acquaint the Gentlemen who had entered into the Association, that he had the Pretender's Interest very much at Heart, and would certainly execute the Scheme which had been settled, as soon as his Affairs would permit. M. Amelot at the same time entered into a Discourse concerning the Number of Highlanders that might be expected to join them.

With these Assurances Murray returned to Edinburgh, and made a Report of his Proceedings to the Earl of Traquair, Lord Perth, and others of the Pretender's Friends. Drummond was sent at the same time with the like Assurances to the Pretender at Rome, in order to engage him to send the Young Pretender to come and put himself at the Head of the Expedition. Drummond soon after came back to Paris, and from thence to London, in order to settle Matters here for the intended Invasion, and returned again to Paris; from whence he acquainted the Earl of Traquair, by Letter, that the French Court had now settled every Thing for the Invasion; that it would be executed immediately; and that the Pretender's Son was come from Rome to accompany it.

This was in January 1743: And in February following an Invasion was attempted by a large Embarkation from Dunkirk, where a great Number of Transports were got ready; many of the Troops actually embarked, with a Design to have come up the River of Thames; and a Fleet of Men of War actually sailed from Brest to support the Descent, or to divert our Fleet, while an Army of 12,000 Men might land without Interruption.

Nobody can have forgot how that Expedition was happily disappointed, by the good Providence of God, and the Vigilance of his Majesty; nor what Terror it struck while it was depending, at a Time that our own Troops were necessarily engaged on the Continent, in the Defence of our own and the Liberties of Europe, and consequently, when we had so few left to defend ourselves at Home.

After this Disappointment, no Letters appear to have come from France for a considerable Time; which made the Conspirators, and their Friends here, very uneasy; and the Earl of Traquair engaged Murray to go again to Paris, in order to know in what Situation their Affairs stood there: But before he was actually gone, a Letter came from Semple, to account for, and excuse the Miscarriage of the Invasion, and desiring that fresh Assurances might be sent from the Pretender's Friends both in England and Scotland, in order to engage the French Court in a new one.

This did not prevent Murray's intended Journey; and in June 1744, he went over to Paris, where he was introduced to the Pretender's eldest Son, at the House of one MacDonald a Banker, and had soon after a second Meeting with him. The Young Pretender then assured Murray, That the French had been very serious in the Invasion, which had been disappointed by nothing but Wind and Weather, and other inevitable Accidents: But, however, he had the strongest Promises, both from the French King, and the Ministry, that the Scheme should be put in Execution the then next Summer, in the Year 1745. And as for himself, whether it was or not, he was determined to come over, if he brought but a single Footman with him: And though Murray represented to him the Rashness and Danger of such an Attempt, he was so fully satisfied of Assistance from the Highlands, whenever he appeared in Person, that he would, in all Events, come over at that Time.

Murray returned to Scotland from Paris, and communicated what passed to the Earl of Traquair, Lochiel, Lord Perth, and others of the Pretender's Friends; and at the same time brought along with him several Letters from the Pretender's Son, but with blank Addresses, in order to be delivered to such as it should be thought proper, when Murray came over; and they were accordingly soon after delivered to such as it was apprehended would make the best Use of them.

The Time, however, running out, and no Preparations yet appearing in France for an Invasion, the Pretender's Friends, who were acquainted with the Design, began to fear the French would deceive them; and in June 1745, Murray received a Letter from the Pretender's Son, in which, without taking Notice of any Invasion from France, he informs Murray, that he was determined himself to come to the Northern Part of Scotland immediately; and desired his Friends might be informed of it, and ready to join him, with all the Forces they could raise. He tells him, That it would be the latter End of that same Month; and appoints the Place where he designed to land, together with the Signals that were to be given and taken.

This Letter was immediately communicated to the Pretender's Friends in the North, and, amongst the rest, to the Noble Lord at the Bar. So unexpected a Resolution, without mentioning any Assistance from France, much surprised them. They thought it, as was natural, rash, precipitate, and dangerous, to come without Force; and therefore determined, most of them, if they could not prevent his Landing, to advise him to return, and wait till he could be better prepared. About a Fortnight after, the Pretender's Son actually arrived, and landed in the North-West Part of Scotland, upon the 25th of July, 1745.

Your Lordships will permit me now to make a little Stand. I have stated these Facts as a short View of the Commencement and Progress of several wicked and treasonable Correspondences, Plots, and Schemes, contrived and carried on from the Year 1740, for bringing over the Pretender, by the Assistance of the Power of France.

I have hitherto, my Lords, but just named the Noble Prisoner at the Bar in the Account I have given of them; and I have avoided it on Purpose, that when your Lordships should have before your Eyes, in one View, the general Plan of that Series of Treasons which have been contriving, and, in Part, executing, for so many Years, I might the more easily point out to your Lordships, as it were in a Map, the particular, precise Parts which the Noble Lord acted in them; which is what I shall now apply myself to.

And in order to do this the more clearly, and agreeable to the Evidence which will be produced, I shall be under the Necessity of going back to some yet earlier Parts of his Life; and which, my Lords, I should not do, if your Lordships would not necessarily, in the Course of the Evidence, see the Prisoner himself taking Pains to connect the early with the latter Parts of his Life, in order to prove the Uniformity and Consistency of his Conduct, all tending to, and uniting in, one great Centre, the overturning the Protestant Succession, excluding or dethroning his Majesty, and his Royal Father, and setting up the Pretender to their Throne in their room.

So long ago as the Reign of Queen Anne, when the Nation was involved in a War with France, and Invasions from thence were continually set on Foot, and it became material for the Pretender's Service to arm his Friends in the Northern Part of the Island, the Prisoner, who had been from his Youth bred to War, accepted of a Commission from the Pretender of a General Officer. It must be owned, that it does not appear, that the Prisoner made any particular Use of it; and the first Time any Opportunity did offer, when the Rebellion broke out on the Death of Queen Anne, the Noble Lord at the Bar did important Services to his late Majesty. He himself will likewise admit, that he was amply rewarded for them. But he seems very soon to have repented of those Services, even while he was in the full Possession of the Reward of them.

In 1719, when a Spanish Invasion was undertaken in Favour of the Pretender, and Spanish Forces were actually landed in the North, the Prisoner thought proper to engage in it; and, while the Earl of Seaforth was raising his Men to assist in it, the Prisoner himself wrote a Letter to that Earl, with a Promise to join him with his Clan; but before he had actually done it, that Attempt was defeated.

From that Time till the Year 1736, the Managers don't take upon themselves to state to your Lordships any Thing concerning his Conduct, but that general Account, which your Lordships will find him giving of himself in his own Letters, That he had, ever since he had the Use of his Reason, been the most faithful and zealous Subject to the Person and Interest of the Pretender.

But in that Year, when one Roy Stewart, who had escaped out of Prison, to which he had been committed for High-Treason, and been afterwards harboured in the Prisoner's House, then High-Sheriff of the County where he had been imprisoned, was going to the Pretender to Rome, the Noble Lord sent by him an Assurance to the Pretender of his constant Fidelity even to Death; and desired a Commission from him to be Lieutenant-General of the Highlands, and to have a Patent of Dukedom, which he had before solicited, expedited, and which he claimed as a Matter of Right for the Services he had done that Cause.

In the Year 1740, when an Invasion was projected, the Noble Lord was not only one of those that signed the Association, and corresponded with the Persons that negotiated it beyond Sea, but himself proposed it, and seems to have been the original Projector.

In the Year 1743, when the Invasion was actually resolved, and a Person of Figure and Interest was necessary to conduct it in the Highlands, the Prisoner was pitched upon as the most proper for that Purpose, and accepted two Commissions from the Pretender at Rome in December 1743, one to be Lord-Lieutenant of all the Counties North of Spey, and the other to make him a Lieutenant-General. He likewise, about the same time, obtained the Patent, which he had been long soliciting, for creating him Duke of Fraser.

And though the Disappointment of that Expedition prevented his immediate Use of those Powers, they did not lie idly by as a private Ornament to his Person, and to gratify his Vanity only: They were made use of by him to propagate the Principles of Treason and Rebellion; to sow the Seeds of Disloyalty to his present Majesty and his Government; to discipline his Dependents in the Service of the Pretender, and make them ready, whenever his Master's Projects were ripe for Execution.

He was, as your Lordships will see him expressing himself in his Letters, always the most zealous and active Partisan that the Pretender had in those Parts. He was, in his own Words, the Life and Spirit of the Pretender's Affairs in that Country: He made it, as he says, his sole Business to keep up the Hearts of his King's Friends, though it was both fatiguing, troublesome, and expensive; and appeals for the Truth of it to the Knowledge of all the Gentlemen in the Pretender's Interest in the North.

North. He did, as he expreſſes himſelf in another Letter, more Service to the Pretender's Cauſe, than any one of his Rank in Britain.

He conſtantly made it his Buſineſs, as he ſays in another, to promote his Maſter's Intereſt, and to engage faithful Subjects to him; ſo that he had done, as he expreſſes in a ſtill higher Strain of Language, more againſt this Government than would hang fifty Lords, and forfeit fifty Eſtates.

I have now pointed out to your Lordſhips the particular Share the Noble Lord will appear to have had in the Steps towards the late Rebellion; in which you muſt have obſerved him to be a moſt active Friend to it: I ſhall now open to your Lordſhips a State of the Facts that affect the Priſoner, ſince the Young Pretender's Landing, which was, as I mentioned, upon the 25th of July 1745.

Notice was immediately ſent of it to the Chiefs of the Clans known to be in his Intereſt; and the Priſoner at the Bar was one of the firſt to whom it was communicated. The Conſpirators, who expected an Attempt at the Head of a French Army, were ſurpriſed at his coming in a ſingle Ship, without Soldiers, and without any material Friends, or even many Servants accompanying him; and were at firſt ſhocked at the Danger of a Deſign ſo prematurely executed. However, ſome of the Clans came in ſoon; and the Priſoner at the Bar ſeems to have early determined to have done ſo too, not indeed at firſt in Perſon, which he excuſed from his Age, and ſuppoſed Infirmities, but by ſending his Son, at the Head of his Clan.

For that Purpoſe, he directed the Maſter of Lovat his Son, who was then at, or but juſt come from, the Univerſity of St. Andrews, to get ready: He likewiſe directed the Inferior Heads of the Clan of Fraſers to ſend in Liſts of their Numbers and Names; with ſevere Threats on ſuch as neglected, or gave him incorrect ones.

He ordered the Arms which he had in his Houſe to be cleaned and mended, Bell-Tents and Camp-Colours to be made, and the Arms of the Fraſers Family to be painted on them: He appointed his Son the Colonel, and directed his Tenants and Dependents to follow him, exhorted them to be true to the Pretender's Cauſe, and encouraged them with an Aſſurance of Succeſs.

The Men were brought together, and twice rendezvouſed; Officers were appointed, who were entertained in his Houſe and at his Table; where he uſed to call the Pretender's Son by the Name of Royal Prince, and Prince Regent, and drank to his Succeſs. He ordered the Pretender's Declaration to be read; and when the Perſon whom he had commanded to do it, declined it, he declared it was High-Treaſon to refuſe it. He provided the Men with Arms, Meal, Proviſions, and Money; ſent for Ribbands to make white Cockades for them; and had Taylors and other Workmen in his Houſe, to make them Caps, Bonnets, and Brogues. He went ſtill further; and, as ſome of his Dependents were unwilling to engage, he ordered the Firy Croſs, as it is called, to be ſent about his Country to force them. This is the laſt and moſt extreme cuſtomary, though illegal and cruel Sort of Proceſs, if I may ſo call it, that the Highland Chiefs uſe, to compel their Dependents to perform their arbitrary Commands; and is a general publick Denunciation of Plunder, Fire, and Sword, on all that do not obey; and ſeveral were actually forced into the Rebellion, by taking away their Plaids, Beds, and Cattle, and turning their Wives and Children out of Doors.

While he was uſing Threats to ſome, he tempted others, by the Promiſes of Rewards to their Wives, and Commiſſions to themſelves.

Soon after the laſt Rendezvous of the Men, the Earl of Cromertie's Clan marched near the Priſoner's Houſe, in their Way to the Pretender's Son: The Earl, his Son, and ſome of the Officers called at the Houſe, where they were entertained as Friends: And the Priſoner told the Earl, that his Clan ſhould follow ſoon after, laying the Blame at the ſame time upon his Son, the Maſter of Lovat, that they were not yet ready.

The Priſoner, however, did not think fit, as yet, either by himſelf, or his Son, actually to join the Pretender. The Rebels were now but beginning to march Southward; the King's Troops were endeavouring to intercept them; and till they met, the Event, he thought, might be doubtful. The Rebels, however, eſcaped them; and upon the 17th of September, got Poſſeſſion of the Capital of that Part of the united Kingdom; and in a few Days afterwards, the unfortunate Battle of Preſton-Pans ſeemed, in the Opinion of thoſe deluded People, to turn the Scale in their Favour.

At that Time, one Hugh Fraſer, who had about a Year before been Secretary to the Priſoner, was at Edinburgh, where William Fraſer, a Relation of the Noble Priſoner's, happened then likewiſe to be: They had both heard of his Deſign of ſending the Maſter of Lovat into the Rebellion, and both were deſirous of preventing it: For which Purpoſe William Fraſer thought of an Expedient for getting the Maſter of Lovat out of the Way, by ſending him to Holland to compleat his Education; the Expence of which he was willing to be at. With this Meſſage Hugh Fraſer went to the Priſoner, and made him the Offer. My Lord Lovat at firſt ſeemed to yield to it; but at laſt told him, he was too far engaged; and was reſolved, that the Maſter ſhould go with his Clan to the Young Pretender.

The Priſoner had early Notice of the Battle of Preſton-Pans, and Barriſdale, one of the Heads of the Rebellion, came to his Houſe, and told him, he was going to raiſe more of the Highlanders for the Service. This Battle ſeems to have determined his Reſolution; and when Hugh Fraſer was to return to Edinburgh, he charged him with a verbal Meſſage to the Pretender's Son, to inform him, That his Age and Infirmities would not permit him to travel; and therefore hoped he ſhould be excuſed attending him in Perſon; but that he would ſend his Son, at the Head of his Clan, which would be a much greater Mark of his Loyalty. And the Meſſage was delivered accordingly.

The Rebels continued at Edinburgh till the 31ſt of October, when they were beginning their March towards England; but the Priſoner's Son not having yet joined them, it was thought neceſſary, that John Murray of Broughton, the Young Pretender's Secretary, ſhould write to the Priſoner to haſten his Men, and meet them at Carliſle. The Letter was wrote, and ſent, and ſoon after delivered by Hugh Fraſer, who at the ſame time repreſented to him the bad Condition of the Rebel Army, the State of his Majeſty's Forces, and the Arrival of the Dutch Troops; which he did, in order to prevent the Priſoner's going on with his Engagements: But the Priſoner told him, it was now too late to go back; and forbid him to mention any thing to his Son againſt it. He beſides told him, That he had put his Name down as a Captain-Lieutenant in his Son's Company, and ever after called him by that Title.

His Dilatorineſs, however, had made ſome of the Pretender's Friends uneaſy, and apprehenſive that he was playing a double Game; and as they thought it would be of great Service to their Cauſe, if the noble Priſoner would make a public Avowal of his taking Part with them, applied to him for that Purpoſe; and told him that a great deal depended upon his throwing aſide the Maſk: Upon which he pulled off his Hat, and threw it on the Ground, ſaying, There it is then.

In the Month of November he ſent a Letter to the Pretender's Son, to aſſure him of his Fidelity; and about the ſame time, two others to Lochiel, and Murray the Secretary, both of them to the ſame Effect.

Though the two firſt of theſe Letters appear by the Dates to have been wrote in November, and the latter probably at the ſame time, yet as the Rebels were then going into England, they don't ſeem to have been ſent till their Return. The Priſoner, in the mean time, went on with raiſing his Men, till it was univerſally known in that Country, that the Maſter of Lovat was to go at the Head of them, and join the Rebels.

My Lord Loudon, and the Preſident of the Seſſion, were then at Inverneſs, collecting a Body of Men to oppoſe them; and were then ſuperior to the Rebels in thoſe Parts. The Priſoner well knew, that the Deſign of the Maſter of Lovat's joining the Rebels could not be unknown to them; and that they muſt ſuſpect, at leaſt, that he himſelf was at the Bottom of it. This made him afraid for his own Perſon, as ſoon as his Son began to march. Theſe Apprehenſions made him ſuſpend the Time of their March, till he could be better informed of the Meaſures the Lord Loudon, and the Preſident, would take in that Event, with reſpect to himſelf: And therefore, after he had once ordered them to march, and thoſe of his Country of Firth had actually begun it, and proceeded as far as Strathannan, in the Way to Perth, which the Rebels were then in Poſſeſſion of, his Courage began to fail, and he ſent Orders for their Return; which they immediately obeyed, excepting Twenty: And he thought it more prudent, before they finally marched, to ſend Hugh Fraſer to Inverneſs, to ſound the Inclinations of Lord Loudon, and the Preſident; and to repreſent to them, That the intended March of his Son was againſt his Inclinations, and contrary to his Commands; that his Son was obſtinate and diſobedient; and that it would be unjuſt that a Father ſhould ſuffer for an undutiful Child.

The Lord Loudon, and Preſident, took it to be, as it really was, a Pretence only, and the Effect of that double Part which the Priſoner was acting, till he thought it worth his while to throw off the Maſk in reality. They knew that a young Man of Nineteen Years old, that had lived at the Univerſity, and but juſt come home, could have no Power over his Father's Tenants and Dependents, but juſt ſo far as his Father gave it him; and that the Priſoner was himſelf the moſt abſolute Superior in all the Highlands: They therefore gave Hugh Fraſer to underſtand, there could be no Safety for the Father, while the Son was in open Rebellion.

Hugh Fraſer returned with this Anſwer to the Priſoner, and delivered at the ſame time a Letter from the Preſident to the ſame Effect. About the ſame time News came, that Lord John Drummond, with French Troops, was landed; which ſeems to have determined the Priſoner's Reſolution: And he told Hugh Fraſer, that the Threats of the Lord Preſident were but a Bugbear; and immediately gave the Maſter of Lovat his final Orders to march; which he inſtantly obeyed, and marched accordingly: And Lord Loudon, and Lord Preſident, found Means ſoon after to ſecure the Priſoner's Perſon, who was carried a Priſoner to Inverneſs; from whence, however, he ſoon after made his Eſcape.

The Maſter of Lovat was now got to Perth, at the Head of the Clan of Fraſers, whither Hugh Fraſer attended him, as his Captain-Lieutenant; and upon Notice from the Pretender's Son, who was then come as far as Glaſgow, in his Return from England, was ſent thither by the Maſter of Lovat for a Supply of Arms. Hugh Fraſer, on his Return from Glaſgow, was charged by Murray, the Pretender's Secretary, with a Packet, in which were incloſed three Letters, one from the Pretender's Son to the Priſoner, referring to a ſecond, incloſed from Murray, Lochiel, and Clunie, to him likewiſe; and a Third to the Maſter of Lovat. There were alſo three Commiſſions incloſed, two of which were dated at Rome, 23d December 1743, from the Pretender himſelf; one of which was, to make the Priſoner Lord Lieutenant of all the Countries North of Spey, and the other, to make him a Lieutenant-General.

The Rebels, as ſoon as they had collected all their Parties together, marched towards Inverneſs. His Royal Highneſs the Duke of Cumberland followed them, as faſt as the Seaſon of the Year and the Nature of the Country would permit, till he came up with them, and obtained that ſignal and compleat Victory, at the Battle of Culloden, upon the 16th of April 1746; when all the Noble Lord's Schemes of Grandeur and Power, and for a new Revolution, were put an End to at once.

I am now come, my Lords, to that laſt Period of Time, from the Battle of Culloden. The Priſoner was waiting, not very far off, the Event of that important Day. The Night after, the Pretender's Son came to Gortuleg, where the Priſoner then was, and had an Interview with him. The Noble Lord did not even then diſavow his Cauſe, but received him as his Prince; excuſed his not joining him in Perſon; and after the tendereſt Embraces, parted from him, as a faithful Subject to his Royal Maſter.

The Priſoner, as well as thoſe who had been in open Arms, was now obliged to fly. He knew his Guilt was the ſame; and therefore deſerved the ſame Treatment. The Rebel Army, and their Chiefs that eſcaped from the Battle, were now diſperſed; but ſome Correſpondence among them was kept up; and upon the 15th of May a Meeting was had, at a Place called Mortleg, where there were preſent the Priſoner, Lochiel, his Brother Dr. Cameron, Murray the Secretary, and ſeveral others. The End of the Meeting was, to conſider what was proper to be done for their common Safety.

The noble Priſoner met them himſelf, not as an innocent Perſon, to adviſe them to lay down their Arms, confeſs their Guilt, and beg for Mercy; not as a neutral Perſon, if Neutrality, in the Cauſe of our King, Religion, Liberty, and this happy Eſtabliſhment, can be attended with a leſs Degree of Guilt; but as one involved in the ſame common Crime and Calamity, as a Chief whoſe Age and Experience intitled him to the Lead; and he took it. He adviſed them to raiſe a ſufficient Number of Men to defend themſelves againſt the King's Troops, till they could make Terms for themſelves; and, after computing what each of thoſe preſent were capable of procuring, he propoſed the Number of 3500, of which each was to raiſe a certain Proportion: And he himſelf propoſed, That his Son ſhould raiſe 400; and deſired Lochiel, as he himſelf had not been in Arms, to anſwer for his Son. Lochiel did ſo; and all the Company agreed to the Propoſal; and there having been then lately come from France, 35,000 Louidors, it was likewiſe agreed, That each ſhould have Ten Days Pay for their Men out of it; which was immediately diſtributed; and the Share of the Maſter of Lovat was paid to the Priſoner's Servant. In Conſequence of this, about 400 Men, in the Whole, only were raiſed. But the Rebels made no Stand afterwards.

The Maſter of Lovat had afterwards a Meeting with his Father at Kilbogie, when the Maſter propoſed to ſurrender to his Majeſty; but the Priſoner diſſuaded him from it, and reflected upon his Son as a Perſon of mean Spirit to think of ſo diſhonourable an Action; and determined to fly himſelf, but with a Guard of about Twenty Soldiers, whom he took into Pay for his Defence. However, he was purſued and taken by a Party ſent by the Duke, under the Command of Captain Ferguſon, who treated him with great Humanity. During the Time of his being in his Cuſtody, they had frequent Converſations together concerning the Rebellion. He was aſked by the Captain, How he could act as he had done, after all the Favours he had received from the Government? He anſwered, It was not againſt the King, but the Miniſtry, he had acted; that they had taken away his Company: And when he was told, It was a bad Revenge to endanger his own Life and Fortune; his Anſwer was, Who could have thought but that they, meaning the Rebels, would have carried all before them? And that, if the Young Pretender would have taken his Advice, he might have laughed at the King's Forces; and none but a mad Fool would have fought that Day; that they might have gone into the Mountains, and lived on Butter and Cheeſe, and given the Duke Twelve Months Work: Beſides, that they were in daily Expectation of Aſſiſtance and Money from France.

The Priſoner was afterwards brought before Sir Everard Falkener. He did not think then of denying his Treaſon: On the contrary, gave the ſame Account of the Motive to it, which he had done to Captain Ferguſon; but with this Addition, That he reſented the Loſs of his Independant Company ſo much, that if Kouli Kan had come, he ſhould have been for him. He talked much of the King's Mercy, of the former Services he had done to his Royal Family; and that he could ſtill do greater than Twenty ſuch old Heads as his were worth. However, concluded with the following Paſſage out of Virgil,

——— In utrumque paratus,
Seu verſare dolos, ſeu certæ occumbere morti.

I have now, my Lords, gone through thoſe Three Periods of Time, which I propoſed; in which your Lordſhips have obſerved many Things of great Moment to the preſent Cauſe. The Managers have, with the greateſt Care, endeavoured, amongſt that great Extent of Evidence which has come to their Knowledge, to diſcover the Truth; and I have, with the utmoſt Fidelity, ſtated to your Lordſhips no Fact, but what I take to be ſo. I know, my Lords, how unjuſt it would be to endeavour to miſlead your Lordſhips: I know how idle and fruitleſs it would be to attempt it.

I have likewiſe endeavoured to throw all the Facts together in ſuch an Order that they may ſerve to give Light to each other, and eaſe your Lordſhips in the Attention you will give to the Evidence that will prove them.

I ſhall now, therefore, endeavour to give your Lordſhips a ſhort View of that Evidence. It will be of Two Sorts, Parol, and written Evidence. The former will conſiſt of a great Number of Witneſſes, concurring in the Account of the ſecret Preparations towards the Rebellion, the Steps taken in it; and many, in charging the noble Lord as the principal Actor in both. What they ſay, will be ſupported, confirmed, and illuſtrated, by the written Evidence.

As to the Firſt Sort, it will be tedious and unneceſſary for me to give your Lordſhips a Detail of the Names and Characters of each Witneſs, or the particular Facts they ſpeak to. It will be ſufficient to ſay in general, that I don't know of one Circumſtance that I have opened, which will not be fully proved by ſome or other of them; that ſome of the Witneſſes were principal Actors in the Steps leading to the Rebellion, as well as in the proſecuting of it; that ſome have been long acquainted with the Priſoner, ſeen his Life and Converſation, and had, from his own Mouth, the Truth of many of the Facts that preceded their own Time; and have attended his Perſon, and been Eye and Ear-witneſſes of many others; that others of the Witneſſes have heard and received his Commands, felt the Weight of his Power, or been employed by him in divers of thoſe Acts of Treaſon, wherewith he is charged; that all have had full Opportunities of knowing the Facts to which they will be called; and none have any Imputation on their Characters, but that of having ſome of them been Accomplices in the ſame Treaſon.

The written Evidence which the Managers have been able to collect and produce, conſiſts of Letters from and to the noble Lord. The former are of the Hand-writing of Robert Fraſer, one of his Secretaries, dictated and ſigned originally by himſelf, though the Signatures of ſome appear now torn off.

They were all written during the Rebellion, not at the Beginning, when the Priſoner, ſurpriſed by the ſudden Appearance of the Son of him, whom he had formerly called his King, might be drawn into Expreſſions of Affection and Zeal beyond his real Meaning, but after the Rebellion was grown to a great Height, and the noble Lord had full Time to look about him, to foreſee, weigh and balance all Conſequences to his Country, himſelf, and his Family; and, upon the Whole, had deliberately choſen the Side he took.

Of this Sort of Letters there will be many produced to your Lordſhips.

One of them written and ſent to the Pretender's Son himſelf, dated November 1745. The Signature, and ſome Parts of the Body of it, are torn off; but that will be ſupplied by a Copy under the ſame Secretary's Hand, taken by his Lordſhip's own Order.

Two others were written, about the ſame Time, to Mr. Murray the Pretender's Secretary, and to Lochiel.

Two of the reſt were written to the Priſoner's own Son.

Your Lordſhips will excuſe my mentioning a few Paſſages out of them, as a Specimen of the Whole. That to the Pretender's Son, which is itſelf, in the Articles, made a diſtinct Overt Act of Treaſon, is addreſſed to him by the Title of Moſt Royal Prince; and in the Concluſion calls him, his Royal Highneſs. It mentions the Priſoner's having been made a General Officer by the Pretender himſelf above Forty Years before; excuſes his Incapacity of ſerving him in Perſon, by his Age and Infirmities; and his Reſolution to give him the next Mark of his Zeal, by ſending his eldeſt Son, the Bearer, to venture his Life in his Service, with a great Number of Gentlemen, and Heads of Families, of his Clan, and Eight hundred of his common People.

The Letter to Murray is to engage him to become his Son's Patron at the Young Pretender's Court. It boaſts of the ſame Merit in ſending his Son and Clan, and ſets out his own long Services to the Pretender in the ſtrongeſt Light.

The Letter to Lochiel complains greatly of the Treachery, as he calls it, of an Honourable Perſon, in engaging on his Majeſty's Side, and of the Miſchief his Conduct had done to the Cauſe; and magnifies his own Clan and Services to the Pretender.

His Letters to his Son open the Secrets of his Heart; acquaint him with the Aſſociation he had formerly ſigned to venture his Life and Fortune to reſtore the Pretender; informs him of the promiſed Aſſiſtance of France, the Commiſſion from the Pretender to make him General of the Highlands, the more favourite Patent for a Dukedom; and ſets them all in a Light that would render him, as he ſays, a Monſter of Ingratitude, if he was not attached to the Pretender more than ever.

The reſt of his Letters are written in the ſame Strain, and founded upon the ſame Principles of Treaſon and Rebellion.

The Letters written to the Priſoner are, one from the Pretender's Son himſelf, referring to another written to him by Lochiel, Murray and Clunie; and one from the Priſoner's own Son.

The two former were written by way of Acknowledgment for his Services, and to engage him in an open perſonal Appearance on that Side, as the beſt Means to ſecure the Succeſs of their Cauſe; and will ſhew the Pretender's Son's Employment of thoſe Perſons, with whom the Priſoner treaſonably correſponded.

The Son's Letter is Part of a Correſpondence with the Father upon the Subject of the Rebellion, and was the Occaſion of the Letters beforementioned to have been written by him.

My Lords, I have now done with that general View of the Evidence, which I propoſed to give your Lordſhips. I would not anticipate what the noble Lord may ſay by way of Defence; but as the Evidence, on the Part of the Commons, will neceſſarily mention One Sort of Defence, which the Priſoner formerly made uſe of, when he apprehended his Perſon in immediate Danger from the Preſident and Lord London, on account of the Fraſers riſing to join the Pretender;

I can't help juſt taking notice of it here. His Pretence to them was, That his Clan was raiſed by his Son alone, without his Direction, and againſt his Command; and that the whole Conduct of the Clan of Fraſer was an Act of Diſobedience in his Son to him, as well as of Treaſon to his Majeſty; and that it would be hard, that a peaceable Father ſhould be anſwerable for the Guilt of his Son.

If this ſhould be any Part of the noble Lord's preſent Defence, I ſhall obviate it only ſo far, as to obſerve to your Lordſhips, That it is as falſe as it is unnatural, and will appear to be ſo, not only by the Parol Evidence we ſhall produce, but by every one almoſt of the Priſoner's own Letters, in which he takes to himſelf the whole Merit of his Son's Services, and values himſelf to the Young Pretender, according to the Strength and Zeal of his Clan.

What remains, my Lords, is only to make a few Obſervations, tending to ſhew, how the Facts and the Evidence I have been ſtating will maintain the particular Charges, which the Commons have undertaken to make good: For which Purpoſe it will be neceſſary very ſhortly to point out the preciſe Nature of the Charge itſelf.

It contains Three Species of Treaſon; Compaſſing the Death of his Majeſty:—Levying War againſt him within the Realm:—And Correſponding with the Pretender's Son, and his Agents.

As to the Firſt of theſe: The Wiſdom of this Conſtitution, foreſeeing that the general Happineſs muſt be moſt intimately connected with the Safety of that Royal Perſon, and providing againſt the remoteſt Dangers to which it may be expoſed, has made the very Imagination of the Heart, when directed to its Deſtruction, an Act of Treaſon: But as the Intent, by itſelf alone, can be known to none but the great Searcher of Hearts, it has, with equal Prudence and Juſtice, provided, that this Imagination muſt be diſcovered by ſome external Act, which, in the ordinary Language of the Law, is called an Overt Act.

The Commons have purſued, in their Impeachment, the Law in both reſpects. They have charged the Priſoner with that traitorous Imagination; and they have ſtated many Facts that manifeſt it, ſuch as, by the eſtabliſhed Rules of Law, have, in all Times, been held ſufficient.

The Overt Acts, particularly charged, are, His entering into an Aſſociation to raiſe a War and Rebellion againſt his Majeſty, by the Aſſiſtance of French Troops; his Correſponding with a Pretender to his Majeſty's Crown; His obtaining two Commiſſions from the Pretender, one to be General of the Highlands, and the other a Lieutenant-General of his Forces; his ſending a treaſonable Letter to the Pretender's Son, with Expreſſions and Aſſurances of that Fidelity and Loyalty to his Father, which was due to his Majeſty alone; his ſending many other treaſonable Letters to his Fellow-Subjects, to engage and perſuade them to join and continue in that Rebellion, which was then begun and raged in the Northern Parts of this Kingdom; his aſſiſting the Pretender's Son with Arms, and ſending his own Son, with his Clan, into the Service of the Pretender.

Your Lordſhips will be beforehand with me, in diſtributing the various Matter I have before opened, to theſe ſeveral Heads: I would only obſerve, that, beſides the Evidence ariſing from the Witneſſes, which will appear in Perſon at your Lordſhips Bar, the Priſoner's own Letters are not only ſpecial Overt Acts of Treaſon themſelves, but will be the cleareſt Proof of the moſt material of the others.

When the Priſoner, in the Fulneſs of his Heart, opens himſelf to a Son, whoſe Parts and Proficiency were his own Pride, upon a Subject the moſt of all intereſting to both, to the future as well as preſent Happineſs of his Family, its Honours and Eſtate, your Lordſhips can have no poſſible Doubt of the Reality of that Aſſociation, thoſe Honours, thoſe Truſts, and that Attachment to the Pretender, on which he builds and communicates the Reſolution he had then taken.

When he writes to the Pretender's Son himſelf, then in the Capital of one Part of the United Kingdom, at the Head of an Army of Rebels, acting the Part of Royalty, and ſubduing his Majeſty's faithful Subjects, to boaſt of his former, and promiſing him future Loyalty, your Lordſhips muſt ſee, in the cleareſt Manner, what Side he had choſen, and whoſe Life and Throne he was ſtriking at.

As to the Treaſon of levying War, the Priſoner ſeems to have thought, that nothing but an open perſonal Appearance in Arms would bring him within that Sort of Guilt; and, in Fact, whether out of greater Caution on that account, or from peculiar Views of Management with the Pretender, or more probably from both, he ſeems ſtudiouſly to have avoided that particular preciſe Mark of Treaſon. But the Law, which, in Words, though not in Puniſhment, diſtinguiſhes, in ſome Sorts of Crimes, between Principals and Acceſſaries, makes no ſuch Diſtinction in this of the higheſt Nature; they are both, in Treaſon, equally criminal; and the various Acts of Encouragement, Perſuaſion, and Aſſiſtance, given and done by him, to thoſe who were perſonally engaged, do, in the Eye of the Law, as indeed they do in Reaſon, make their Guilt his own.

The laſt Species of Treaſon charged, is founded on the Breach of a late Act, made in the 17th Year of his Majeſty, on occaſion of the Invaſion attempted from Dunkirk in that Year, in Favour of the Pretender, and accompanied by his eldeſt Son. This Act extends the Treaſon made by the Act of the 13th of King William, of correſponding with the Pretender the Father, and his Agents, to a Correſpondence with his Sons, and their Agents.

The Proof of this Treaſon will be manifeſt to your Lordſhips, both from the written and parol Evidence. The ſame Letters, which afford ſuch concluſive Proof of the other Treaſons, are direct and immediate Proofs of this; beſides the perſonal Interview between the Priſoner and the Pretender's Son, and the many more perſonal Correſpondencies with the Pretender's Servants and Officers.

I have now, my Lords, finiſhed all that I propoſed to lay before your Lordſhips. The great Variety of Matter muſt be my Excuſe for the Length of it.

I am not under any Apprehenſion, that the Evidence will be inſufficient to convince your Lordſhips of the Juſtice of the Proſecution. I am more afraid, leſt your Lordſhips, and the World, ſhould inquire, Why all this Load of Evidence? when one of thoſe many Facts, fully eſtabliſhed, would be enough to convict the noble Lord of this higheſt of Crimes, and draw down upon him, from your Lordſhips, that heavieſt of Sentences, which is the Conſequence of it. If that Queſtion ſhould be aſked, the Anſwer I would give to it ſhould be ſhortly this:

The Managers did not think it conſiſtent with their Duty to the Commons of Great Britain, whoſe Commands they are to execute; that Regard they owe to your Lordſhips, at whoſe Bar they are to execute thoſe Commands; nor to the People of Great Britain, whom the Commons repreſent, and who are greatly intereſted in the Event of this Impeachment; to ſuppreſs any Part of that Evidence, extenſive as it is, which came to their Knowledge, material to the Priſoner's Cauſe.

The Commons have thought this a Matter worthy their own Interpoſition, and therefore have taken it into their own Hands, not to deprive the noble Lord of any legal Defence: The Candour of the Commons, and your Lordſhips Juſtice, will ſecure him againſt any Danger of that kind; not becauſe they wanted that Evidence, which would be ſufficient in the ordinary Courts of Juſtice; for far would it be from them to throw their Weight into the Scale of Evidence; but becauſe of the wide extenſive Part the Priſoner has had in this great Scene of Treaſon, as its Contriver, Promoter, and Finiſher, ſo far as Providence ſuffered it to go.

As to your Lordſhips, the Managers did not think it becoming them to prejudge your Opinion, or deprive your Lordſhips of that full Daylight in which the Crimes of this Lord appeared to them, and of that greateſt of all Satisfactions, which every Judge would wiſh to have, in every Cauſe, of being certainly right in the Sentence he is to pronounce.

As to the People ingeneral, it is of no ſmall Moment, that they ſhould be enabled to behold, in one View, the pernicious Schemes that have, for many Years, been concerting between Rome, France, and unnatural Traitors at Home, that they might ſee a Rebellion, which they have ſo lately and ſeverely felt, traced, in ſome meaſure, to its Source; and be fully convinced, that, whilſt they are themſelves enjoying, at their Eaſe, and too often aſleep, their Religion, their Liberties, and their Properties, under the Protection of the beſt of Princes, and the Influence of the wiſeſt Conſtitution, they have Enemies both abroad, and within their own native Country, who are conſtantly awake for the Subverſion of them all; and learn this certain Truth, which ſhould be imprinted, in everlaſting Characters, on the Mind of every Briton; That there is no effectual Security againſt thoſe determined and perpetual Enemies, but in a vigilant and firm Union of honeſt Men; and be perſuaded, that every Attempt to prevent, weaken, or diſſolve ſuch an Union, is little leſs than Treaſon in its Beginning, and, if it takes Effect, muſt end in a real ſucceſsful one, the worſt that can happen to this Land of Liberty, the total Deſtruction of this Royal Family, and of this happy Eſtabliſhment.

Sir JOHN STRANGE.

My Lords,

THE Managers do not think it neceſſary to take up any more of your Lordſhips Time, by way of general Opening of this Caſe; but propoſe to go directly to their Evidence: And the firſt Witneſs we deſire may be called, is Robert Chevis, of Murtoun, Eſq. a near Neighbour of the impeached Lord, but one at a very great Diſtance from his Way of Thinking or Acting.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I have not had the Uſe of my Limbs theſe Three Years: I cannot ſee, I cannot hear; and I beg, if your Lordſhips have a mind I ſhould have any Chance for my Life, that you will allow either my Counſel or Sollicitors to examine my Witneſſes, and to croſs-examine thoſe produced on behalf of the Crown, and to take Notes.

Lord High Steward. What your Lordſhip ſays, if I underſtand you right, is, that, by reaſon of your Age and Infirmities, you cannot examine the Witneſſes yourſelf; but pray, that either your Counſel or Sollicitors might have Liberty to croſs-examine the Witneſſes againſt you, and to examine your own Witneſſes. It is my Duty to acquaint your Lordſhip with what is the known and clear Law in theſe Caſes; and I did acquaint your Lordſhip with it, in what I mentioned to you at firſt, that, by the Order of this Houſe, you had Counſel and Sollicitors aſſigned you, who had Liberty to aſſiſt you in all Matters of Law that might ariſe in the Courſe of your Trial; but that, by the known Rules of Law in Proceedings of this Kind, they have not Liberty to aſſiſt you in Matters of Fact, or in the Examination of Witneſſes. As to taking Notes, I have obſerved, that one of your Sollicitors has, during the Time that the Managers for the Houſe of Commons have been ſpeaking, taken Notes; and that has been allowed.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, It is impoſſible for me then to make any Defence, by reaſon of my Infirmities. I do not ſee; I do not hear; I came up to your Lordſhips Bar at the Hazard of my Life; I fainted away ſeveral times; I got up ſo early; I was up by Four o'Clock this Morning; and I am ſo weak, that, if I am deprived of the Aſſiſtance I aſk for, your Lordſhips may do as you pleaſe; and it is impoſſible for me to make any Defence at all, if you do not allow my Counſel or Sollicitors to examine the Witneſſes. I will therefore ſubmit myſelf to the Lords.

L. H. S. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, You have heard what has been aſked by my Lord Lovat, with his Reaſons for it: Have you any thing to offer on that Head?

Sir W. Yonge. My Lords, It has been determined by your Lordſhips, That the Priſoner at the Bar cannot, in this Caſe, be allowed Counſel to aſſiſt him, except in Matters of Law: And, as that is known to be Part of the Law of the Land, whatever Inclination the Managers may have to indulge the noble Lord at the Bar, it is not in our Power to depart from the Law of the Land. We therefore hope your Lordſhips will excuſe us in not conſenting to what is contrary to the Law of the Land. We cannot do any thing of this kind without repairing to our own Houſe.

The Witneſs being produced.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I object to this Witneſs being examined, becauſe he is a Tenant of mine; and I am informed, that my Tenant cannot be Evidence againſt me.

L. H. S. My Lord Lovat, There is no Rule of Law for that in England.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I am told, that there is an Act of Parliament, that no Vaſſal, Tackſman, or Tenant, ſhall be a Witneſs againſt his Lord.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhip will pleaſe to name that Act of Parliament.

Lord Lovat. My Lord, I am told it is in the Firſt Year of King George the Firſt, Cap. 19.

Then the Clerk, by Direction of the Lord High Steward, read the Title of the Act of Parliament paſſed in the Firſt Year of his late Majeſty King George the Firſt, intituled,

"An Act for Encouraging all Superiors, Vaſſals, Landlords, and Tenants, in Scotland, who do and ſhall continue in their Duty and Loyalty to his Majeſty King George; and for Diſcouraging all Superiors, Vaſſals, and Landlords, and Tenants, there, who have been, or ſhall be, guilty of rebellious Practices againſt his ſaid Majeſty; and for making void all fraudulent Entails, Tailzies, and Conveyances, made there, for barring or excluding the Effects of Forfeitures, that may have been, or ſhall be, incurred there on any ſuch Account; as alſo for calling any ſuſpected Perſon or Perſons, whoſe Eſtates or principal Reſidence are in Scotland, to appear at Edinburgh, or where it ſhall be judged expedient, to find Bail for their good Behaviour, and for the better diſarming diſaffected Perſons in Scotland."

And alſo the Firſt Section, whereby it is Enacted,

"That if any of his Majeſty's Subjects of Great Britain, having Lands or Tenements in Scotland in Property or Superiority, has been, or ſhall be, guilty of High Treaſon, by holding, entertaining, or keeping any Intelligence or Correſpondence in Perſon, or by Letters, Meſſages, or otherwiſe, with the ſaid Pretender, or with any Perſon or Perſons employed by him, knowing ſuch Perſon to be ſo employed, or ſhall, by Bill of Exchange, or otherwiſe, remit or pay any Sum or Sums of Money for the Uſe or Service of the ſaid Pretender, knowing ſuch Money to be for ſuch Uſe or Service; and that whether the ſaid Facts or Things be done within or without this Realm, or has been, or ſhall be, adherent to the ſaid Pretender in this Realm, giving him Aid or Comfort in this Realm, or elſewhere; every ſuch Offender, who ſhall be thereof duly convicted and attainted, ſhall be liable to the Pains, Penalties, and Forfeitures for High Treaſon. All and every Vaſſal and Vaſſals in Scotland, who ſhall continue peaceable, and in dutiful Allegiance to his Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſſors, holding Lands or Tenements immediately of the Crown, ſhall be veſted and ſeized, and are hereby Enacted and Ordained, to hold the ſaid Lands or Tenements of his Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſſors, in Fee and Heritage, for ever, by ſuch Manner of Holding, as any ſuch Offender held ſuch Lands or

"Tenements

" Tenements of the Crown at the Time of the Attainder of ſuch Of" fender: And where Lands or Tenements, belonging to any ſuch
" peaceable and dutiful Subjects to his Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſ-
" ſors, lie within any Regality or Conſtabulary in Scotland, the ſame
" ſhall be, and they are hereby, diſſolved from every ſuch Regality or
" Conſtabulary for ever: And, in like manner, all and every Tenant
" and Tenants in Scotland, who ſhall continue peaceable, and in dutiful
" Allegiance to his Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſſors aforeſaid, bruick-
" ing and occupying any Lands, Milns, Mines, Woods, Fiſhing, or
" Tenements, as Tenant or Tenants, Tackſman or Tackſmen, from and
" under any ſuch Offender, ſhall, and they are hereby ordained to bruick
" and occupy all and every ſuch Lands, Mines, Milns, Woods, Fiſh-
" ings, and Tenements, for the Space of Two Years, or Crops, to be ac-
" counted from and after ſuch Attainder, freely, without Payment of any " Rent, Duty, or Service, for the ſaid Two Years or Crops: And the " Court of Exchequer in Scotland is hereby authorized and required, on
" Production of any ſuch Attainder, to reviſe, compound, and paſs Signa-
" tures, and that without paying any Compoſition, in favours of every
" ſuch Vaſſal or Vaſſals, and his, her, or their Heir or Heirs, of the ſaid
" Lands and Tenements above-mentioned reſpectively to be holden of his
" Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſſors, in Fee and Heretage, for ever, and
" by ſuch Holdings as is above-mentioned, with Clauſes of Novo Damus,
" and (where ſuch Lands or Tenements hold Ward or Few cum Mari-
" tagio, or with Clauſes irritant) with Change of Holdings from Waird
" to Taxed-Waird, according to the Rules now obſerved in the Court of " Exchequer in Scotland, diſpenſing with Recognition and Clauſes irri-
" tant in favours of the Crown in Time coming, in the moſt ample and
" beſt Form, to the End that Chartours and Infeftments may be there-
" upon duly exped."

And alſo the Ninth Section; whereby it is

" Provided always, and be it Enacted, by the Authority aforeſaid,
" That no Perſon or Perſons, who may reap, or have any Benefit or
" Advantage by the Attainder, Conviction, or Forfeiture, of any Perſon
" or Perſons, by virtue of this Act, ſhall be capable of being a Witneſs
" or Witneſſes, againſt any Perſon or Perſons, by whoſe Attainder,
" Conviction, or Forfeiture, any Benefit ſhall or may accrue to ſuch
" Witneſs or Witneſſes."

Lord High Steward. My Lord Lovat, are thoſe the Clauſes your Lordſhip means? or will you have any other Clauſe read?

Lord Lovat. My Lord, That is what I mean.

L. H. S. What your Lordſhip inſiſts upon ſeems to me to be, That, by this Act of Parliament, as you underſtand it, a Perſon who is a Tenant or Tackſman to any Lord, if his Lord is convicted of Rebellion, and ſuch Tenant remains peaceable, the Tenant is diſcharged from Two Years Rent of the Lands held by him. And by the Ninth Section, No Perſon can be a Witneſs, who may reap or have any Benefit by the Attainder of the Perſon he is to be a Witneſs againſt. I am not now going to give any Opinion upon that Section, neither is it proper that I ſhould; but it is neceſſary for me to inform your Lordſhip, that it is incumbent upon you to lay a Foundation of Fact, to ſhew, that the Perſon produced as a Witneſs is a Tenant or Tackſman under your Lordſhip, within the Deſcription of this Act of Parliament: And your Lordſhip may either prove this Fact, by calling Witneſſes of your own, for that Purpoſe; or by putting the Queſtion to the Perſon now produced by the Managers. Has your Lordſhip any Witneſs to prove this Fact; or will you examine the Gentleman produced upon a Voire dire?

Lord Lovat. I will aſk it of this Gentleman.

L. H. S. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, Have you any Objection to my Lord Lovat's aſking the Queſtion of this Witneſs?

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, We have no Objection to having that Queſtion aſked of the Witneſs.

L. H. S. As the Queſtion is to the Competency of the Witneſs, and he is to be examined touching that, he is not now to be ſworn as a Witneſs in Chief; but the Oath is to be adminiſtered upon a Voire dire.

Then the Witneſs was ſworn by the following Oath:

You ſhall true Anſwer make to all ſuch Queſtions as ſhall be demanded of you; and you ſhall ſpeak the Truth, the whole Truth, and nothing but the Truth.
So help you GOD.

L. H. S. My Lords, As my Lord Lovat's Voice is low, whatever Queſtions his Lordſhip has to aſk of this Gentleman, your Lordſhips, I preſume, will (as you did upon a former Occaſion) let my Lord Lovat propoſe the Queſtion, and let the Clerk repeat it to your Lordſhips, and to the Witneſs. My Lord Lovat, You will now propoſe the Queſtion, and the Clerk will repeat it to my Lords, and the Witneſs.

Lords. Ay, ay.

Then one of the Clerks was ſworn to make true Report of what ſhould be ſaid by the Priſoner.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I beg this Witneſs may be aſked, Whether he holds any Lands of me, or within my Regality, either by Tack, Leaſe, or otherwiſe?

Chevis. I hold my Lands of the Crown: I never had a Tack of Land of my Lord Lovat.

L. H. S. Do you hold any Lands, either by Vaſſalage, Leaſe, or Tack, from my Lord Lovat?

Chevis. I never had a Tack of Land from my Lord Lovat.

L. H. S. You are to anſwer to the Whole of the Queſtion, Whether you hold any Land, either by Vaſſalage, Leaſe, or Tack, of my Lord Lovat?

Chevis. I never had a Leaſe from my Lord Lovat: I was in Poſſeſſion of a Farm of his there, which, by his own Conſent, was given to other People; but I never had a Leaſe from him.

L. H. S. Did you hold that Land of my Lord Lovat?

Chevis. The Farm belonged to my Lord Lovat.

L. H. S. How did you hold it of him; by Tack, or Leaſe, or how?

Chevis. It was ceded to me by other People, who were in Poſſeſſion before me.

L. H. S. Did you hold it by Leaſe, or Tack, or in what Manner?

Chevis. I never had any Leaſe, or Tack, from the Lord.

Mr. Att. Gen. Do you now hold any Lands from my Lord Lovat.

Chevis. No, I hold none of him.

Mr. Att. Gen. Have you held any Lands of him ſince the Beginning of the Rebellion?

Chevis. I have held none ſince the Beginning of the Rebellion; nor been in Poſſeſſion of a Fur of Land under him.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, I ſhould be glad to know of this Witneſs, whether he holds any Lands within the Regality of Lovat.

Chevis. No, I hold no Lands of my Lord Lovat there: I had that ſmall Farm I before mentioned.

Lord Cholmondeley. My Lords, The Queſtion put to the Witneſs, at firſt, was, Whether he held any Lands of my Lord Lovat, either as Vaſſal, Tenant, or Tackſman, according to the Deſcription mentioned in the Act of Parliament? And if he does, then he comes within the Deſcription there mentioned. He has told your Lordſhips, That he does not hold any Lands, by Tack or Leaſe, from my Lord Lovat. My Lords, I pray that the Queſtion may be now aſked him, Whether he holds any Lands of my Lord Lovat, either by Vaſſalage, Tack, or Leaſe?

L. H. S. Sir, You hear the Queſtion propoſed by the noble Lord. Do you hold any Lands under my Lord Lovat, as Vaſſal?——Chevis. No.

L. H. S. Do you hold any Lands under my Lord Lovat, as Tenant?

Chevis. No.

L. H. S. Do you hold any Lands under my Lord Lovat, as Tackſman?

Chevis. No.

Lord Talbot. My Lords, I deſire this Witneſs may be aſked, Whether he apprehends he can receive any Benefit under this Act of Parliament, by my Lord Lovat's being convicted of High-Treaſon?

L. H. S. Sir, You hear the Queſtion aſked by the noble Lord.

Chevis. I never heard the Act of Parliament mentioned till this Day: I know of no Benefit I am to receive under it.

L. H. S. Do you know of any Benefit that you are to receive; or do you apprehend, that you can receive any Benefit from the Conviction of my Lord Lovat?——Chevis. No.

L. H. S. Do you hold any Lands at all within the Regality of Lovat?

Chevis. No.

Proclamation for Silence.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I beg this Witneſs may be aſked, Whether he owes me any Money?

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, on Behalf of the Commons, we do object to that as an improper Queſtion, becauſe I muſt ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that no Queſtion is proper to be aſked, but what tends to the Diſcovery of ſomething material to the Point in Controverſy. Now, my Lords, The Queſtion propoſed to be aſked, be it anſwered one Way or the other, cannot tend to prove any thing material to the preſent Purpoſe.

Lord Lovat interrupting,

L. H. S. My Lord Lovat, You are not to interrupt the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons: You ſhall be fully heard in your Turn.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, I ſay your Lordſhips will not permit a Queſtion to be aſked, which is totally immaterial to the preſent Purpoſe: And, I apprehend, this Queſtion is totally immaterial, becauſe the Queſtions now to be put to the Witneſs are only for the Purpoſe of diſqualifying him to be an Evidence, which this Queſtion does not in the leaſt relate to; and be it anſwered the one Way or the other, it cannot tend to diſqualify the Witneſs: Whether it be anſwered Yea or No, it cannot tend to diſqualify the Witneſs.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I beg, that the Witneſs may be aſked, Whether he receives any Rents, or other Profits, from thoſe Lands lying within the Regality of Lovat?

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, If this amounts to a Queſtion, to bring the Witneſs under the Deſcription of the Act of Parliament, it is a Queſtion that has been already put by your Lordſhips; and anſwered particularly and preciſely. If the Queſtion tends to any other Matter, I cannot conceive to what Purpoſe it is to be aſked. But, my Lords, it is incumbent on the noble Lord at your Bar, to mention what he intends to ſhew by the Queſtion he aſks.

L. H. S. My Lord Lovat, the Witneſs on this Examination hath ſworn, That he holds no Lands or Tenements under your Lordſhip, either as Vaſſal, Tenant, or Tackſman; and your Lordſhip would now have him aſked, Whether he receives any Rents, or other Profits, from any Lands lying within the Regality of Lovat? As what the Witneſs has already ſworn does fully anſwer all the Diſqualifications mentioned in the Act of Parliament which your Lordſhip has quoted, what do you intend by the preſent Queſtion?

No Anſwer being made by the Priſoner, Robert Chevis, of Murtoun, was ſworn in Chief.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, I deſire this Witneſs may inform your Lordſhips, How long he has been acquainted with the noble Lord at the Bar.—Chevis. From about the Year 1733.

Sir John Strange. Whether he has been acquainted with him ever ſince the Year 1733?—Chevis. Ever ſince.

Sir John Strange. Do you live near the noble Lord at the Bar?

Chevis. I live within Two Miles of him.

Sir John Strange. Whether he has not been often in his Company ſince the Year 1733?

Chevis. A great many times.

Sir John Strange. Whether he went to his Houſe frequently?

Chevis. Yes.

Sir John Strange. Whether he has had any Converſation, and what Converſation, with him, in relation to publick Affairs?

Lord High Steward to the Witneſs (perceiving him to have a Paper in his Hand),

L. H. S. What Paper is that in your Hand?

Chevis. Notes of my own.

L. H. S. Are they of your own Hand-writing?—Chevis. Yes.

L. H. S. To what Purpoſe did you take them?

Chevis. Only to refreſh my Memory.

L. H. S. Was that the only Reason you took them for?

Chevis. The only Reason.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, I beg this Witness may be asked, What was the general Turn of the Conversation of the noble Lord at the Bar?

Chevis. The general Turn of his Conversation was in Favour of the Pretender, and his Family.

Sir John Strange. Whether the Witness speaks of the Conversation so far back as the Year 1733?——Chevis. Yes.

Sir John Strange. Whether the Witness had ever any Conversation with the noble Lord at the Bar, in relation to the Year 1719?

Chevis. I had.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, I beg he will give an Account, What the noble Lord at the Bar has said to him, in relation to what was going to be done in the Year 1719?

Chevis. My Lord Lovat told me of a Letter he had written to the late Lord Seaforth; and that he had sent it by his own Lieutenant to Lord Seaforth, to encourage and desire him to come down with his Men; and that he, Lord Lovat, would join him with all his, in favour of the Pretender.

Notice being taken by some Lords, at the upper End of the Court, that they could not well hear the Witness, the Lord High Steward directed the Clerk to repeat the Answers of the Witness as he delivered them: Which was done accordingly.

Sir John Strange. Whether the noble Lord at the Bar acquainted him with his having sent such a Letter?

Chevis. He told me he had sent such a Letter by his Lieutenant.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, I beg he may be asked, whether he ever knew, from the noble Lord at the Bar, that That Letter was delivered, or not?

Chevis. Lord Lovat told me; that the Letter was delivered.

Sir John Strange. To whom did he say the Letter was delivered?

Chevis. He said the Letter was first shewn to Chisholm of Knockford; and after that it was delivered to my Lord Seaforth.

Sir John Strange. I shall be glad to know, whether my Lord Lovat said any thing to the Witness, in relation to any Affidavit that had been made concerning that Letter?

L. H. S. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, The Transaction now inquired of happened in the Reign of his late Majesty; and there is no Charge, in the Articles of Impeachment, of any High-Treason committed against his late Majesty: You will therefore open to my Lords, how you would apply the Evidence which you are now examining to.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, Your Lordships will please to observe, that, in the Answer of the noble Lord at the Bar, he does particularly mention his great Duty and Affection for his late Majesty, and his Behaviour from time to time, in that respect; and we are now introducing this particular Evidence, in regard to that Matter, by first taking it up so long ago as the Year 1719, to shew what was then the Disposition, Behaviour, and Conduct, of the noble Lord at the Bar.

My Lords, We say, that, in the Year 1719, there was that Letter written, with a View to assist the Spanish Invasion then intended, in favour of the Pretender: That that Letter was sent; but before it was delivered to the Person to whom it was addressed, there was a Communication of it, in the manner the Witness hath mentioned; and that Person gave proper Notice, and made Affidavit of it, which was sent up to the Government, giving an Account of it: And, by the great Dexterity of the Prisoner at the Bar, he got the Letter back again.

My Lords, The Use we make of this is to shew, that this is no new Matter, arising from the present Rebellion: But, by deducing it from the Year 1719, we shall make the noble Lord's Conduct to be one continued Act of Treason, consistent with the Article of the Charge.

L. H. S. Then I apprehend you apply this Piece of Evidence, to encounter and contradict the Allegation in my Lord Lovat's Answer, which you have mentioned.

Then the Lord High Steward repeated to the House that Allegation, out of the Prisoner's Answer.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, That is what we propose to shew by this Evidence. The Witness has gone so far as to acquaint your Lordships, that That Letter, before it was delivered to the Person to whom it was addressed, was shewn to one Chisholm of Knockford. My Lords, I desire he may inform your Lordships, what the noble Lord at the Bar said was done, in consequence of that Communication.

Chevis. Chisholm made Affidavit of it, which was sent up to Court.

Sir John Strange. Did Lord Lovat acquaint you whether he heard of such Affidavit being transmitted?---Chevis. He did.

Sir John Strange. Did he tell you what he did upon that Occasion?

Chevis. That he went immediately to Court, and got himself introduced there. And Lady Seaforth being then in London, she applied to him to do something in favour of her Son; which he then absolutely refused, till her Son should return him that Letter; which being done, he shewed it to a certain Friend, who read the Letter, and who told him, That there was enough to condemn Thirty Lords there; and threw it into the Fire.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, I desire he will give an Account whether the noble Lord at the Bar said any thing at that Time, whether he had signed and sealed the Letter.

Chevis. He said he had not signed it; and therefore they could not fix him with it.

Sir John Strange. I desire this Witness may inform your Lordships, whether, when the noble Lord at the Bar told him, that he had not signed it, he said any thing further to him upon that Occasion, than that he had not signed it?

Chevis. He said, That he could not be fixed with it; and that That was the Way he intended to get off, by its not being signed.

Sir John Strange. I desire you will please to inform their Lordships, whether you remember the Time when Roy Stuart broke out of Inverness Gaol?

Chevis. Yes; it was in 1736.

Sir John Strange. Who was Sheriff at that Time?

Chevis. My Lord Lovat.

Sir John Strange. After Roy Stuart had escaped out of Inverness Gaol, where did he go to live? By whom was he entertained?

Chevis. He came to my Lord Lovat's House, and was entertained there.

Sir John Strange. How long was he entertained there?

Chevis. Much about Six Weeks, to the best of my Remembrance.

Sir John Strange. Was you often at my Lord Lovat's during these Six Weeks?—Chevis. Frequently.

Sir John Strange. Was you ever there when Lord Lovat and Roy Stuart were together?———Chevis. Very often.

Sir John Strange. Do you remember whether Roy Stuart was going abroad about that Time?

Chevis. He was going abroad then; and the Ship was prepared for him before he left Lord Lovat's House; and he went in my Lord Lovat's Chaise or Chariot.

Sir John Strange. I desire you will inform their Lordships, whether any Message was sent from the noble Lord at the Bar by Roy Stuart, and to whom?

Chevis. I heard the noble Lord at the Bar charge him with a Message to the Pretender.

Sir John Strange. What do you mean by charging him with a Message?

Chevis. To assure the Pretender, whom he called his King, of his Fidelity; and that he was determined to live and die in that Cause.

Sir John Strange. I beg that he may inform your Lordships, whether there was any Thing said at that Time in relation to any Commission or Patent.

Chevis. He charged him to expedite his sending his Commission of Lieutenant-General of the Highlands, and his Patent of a Duke.

Sir John Strange. I beg he may inform your Lordships, whether, at any other Time or Times, he heard the noble Lord at the Bar say any thing whether he had, or had not, succeeded in what he had sent for?

Chevis. About 1742, he owned to me, That he got his Commission and Patent to be a Duke.

Sir John Strange. What Commission did he tell you he had got?

Chevis. A Commission of Lieutenant-General of the Highland Clans.

Sir John Strange. From whom did he say he had received this Commission, and Patent to be a Duke?

Chevis. From his lawful Sovereign King James the Eighth.

Sir John Strange. Pray recollect yourself. Did he make use of that Expression which you have now repeated, that he had it from his lawful Sovereign King James the Eighth? Are you certain he did?

Chevis. Yes.

Sir John Strange. Did he tell you any thing what he would do, now he was invested with that Command, and had got such a Commission and Patent?

Chevis. He said, That he was in a Condition thereby to humble his Neighbours.

Sir John Strange. Have you at any other Time heard him speak of this Patent, or of this Commission?——Chevis. Several Times.

Sir John Strange. Is it often that you have heard him?

Chevis. Often.——He has told me, That he had a Right to it by his Services for that Family; and that he had the like Commission from the Pretender's Father from St. Germains.

Sir John Strange. I desire the Witness may inform your Lordships, whether, during the Time that the noble Lord at the Bar and Roy Stuart were together, they diverted themselves with composing any thing, and what.

Chevis. They did, in composing Burlesque Verses, that, when young Charles came over, there would be Blood and Blows.

Sir John Strange. You have not mentioned it in a poetical Manner: Pray, can you recollect the Lines?

Chevis. When young Charley does come o'er,
There will be Blows and Blood good Store.

Sir John Strange. I beg that you will acquaint their Lordships, whether this Verse, that you mention, is a Translation, or whether this is the original Language in which it was composed?

Chevis. It was framed in Erse; and this is the Substance of one Verse.

Sir John Strange. I beg this Witness may inform your Lordships, whether he has at any Time heard the Prisoner say any thing in relation to any Association?

Chevis. I have.

Sir John Strange. Please to tell the Time you heard this Discourse, and what the noble Lord at the Bar said.

Chevis. It was between 1737 and 1740.

Sir John Strange. What did you hear the noble Lord at the Bar say then?

Chevis. That there was an Association of the Highland Clans in favour of the Pretender, whom he called his lawful Sovereign King James the Eighth; and that he had entered into that Association, and would live and die in that Cause.

Sir John Strange. I beg he may be asked, whether, at the Time he is speaking of, one Drummond of Bochaldie was at Lord Lovat's House.

Chevis. Drummond of Bochaldie was there much about this Time; and used to drink Success to the Association?

Sir John Strange. Do you remember Bochaldie's being at Castle-Downey, and staying there any Time?

Lord High Steward. What Place is Castle-Downey?

Chevis. It is Lord Lovat's Place of Residence.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, It is sometimes called Beaufort, and sometimes Castle-Downey. To whom does it belong?

Chevis. To my Lord Lovat.

Sir John Strange. Do you know whether you heard my Lord Lovat say any thing to Bochaldie at that Time?

Chevis. He mentioned an Invasion of Britain in favour of the Pretender.

Sir John Strange. What Year are you now speaking of?

Chevis. The Year 1739.

Sir John Strange. You say, That Drummond was then at Lord Lovat's, staid there a considerable Time, and heard my Lord Lovat propose an Invasion of Britain in favour of the Pretender?

Chevis. I did.

Sir John Strange. Did you hear him propoſe it? And did you hear of any-body elſe he propoſed it to?

Chevis. I have heard the like was propoſed to Cameron of Lochiel, and others.

Sir John Strange. From whom have you heard it?

Chevis. From my Lord Lovat himſelf.

Sir John Strange. Do you remember any Thing to have happened at Lord Lovat's about the Time of Oſtend's being taken by the French?

Chevis. I was not there then; but he wrote a Letter to me, and told me, That the whole Coaſt of Flanders was now clear.

Sir John Strange. Did you hear my Lord Lovat ſay any thing in relation to the Coaſt of Flanders upon Oſtend's being taken?

Chevis. I have heard him ſay as much as he wrote in that Letter.

Sir John Strange. What have you heard him ſay?

Chevis. That the Coaſt of Flanders was then cleared; and that the French would be over in one Night's Time, and carry all before them.

Sir John Strange. I ſhould be glad you would inform their Lordſhips, whether, at any Time in the Year 1745, Lord John Drummond was at Caſtle-Downey, or not?

Chevis. To the beſt of my Memory, he was about that Time at Caſtle-Downey.

Sir John Strange. I ſhould be glad you would inform their Lordſhips about what Time of the Year this was, whether it was Summer, or Winter?

Chevis. I think it was Summer; to the beſt of my Memory, between Summer and Harveſt.

Sir John Strange. I beg you will inform their Lordſhips, whether at any Time, and in what Month, in the Year 1745, the Maſter of Lovat came to my Lord's Houſe; or whether you ſaw him at my Lord's in 1745?

Chevis. I ſaw him there ſeveral Times in 1745.

Sir John Strange. Did you ſee him there when any Paper or Manifeſto was produced?

Chevis. I ſaw him there when the Manifeſto was produced.

Sir John Strange. At what Time was this?

Chevis. It was in September 1745. The Manifeſto came in a Packet incloſed to Lord Lovat.

Sir John Strange. What Manifeſto was it?

Chevis. The Pretender's Manifeſto and Declaration, which he ordered the Maſter immediately to read.

Sir John Strange. Was it read accordingly by the Maſter of Lovat?

Chevis. It was accordingly read.

Sir John Strange. What did Lord Lovat ſay when it was read, or before it was read?

Chevis. I objected to the Manifeſto's being read; and Lord Lovat told me I talked Treaſon.

Sir John Strange. Did he tell you what was his own Diſpoſition in regard to that Manifeſto, after it had been read?

Chevis. He told me, after reading the Manifeſto, That he was to join the Pretender's Party in that Cauſe; and that he would live and die in that Cauſe.

Sir John Strange. I beg the Witneſs may mention to your Lordſhips, whether the noble Lord at the Bar expreſſed his Opinion in relation to the good or ill Succeſs of it?

Chevis. He ſaid he thought Succeſs was morally ſure: As ſure as Light, as ſure as God was in Heaven, the Pretender would prevail.

Sir John Strange. I beg you'll recollect, and give my Lords the very Words. Did he ſay the Pretender?

Chevis. Not the Pretender; but his right Maſter.

Sir John Strange. What was the Expreſſion he made uſe of?

Chevis. As ſure as the Sun ſhined.

Sir John Strange. That who would prevail?

Chevis. That his Maſter (the Pretender) would prevail.

Sir John Strange. I beg you will inform their Lordſhips, whether any thing was offered to you upon that Occaſion?

Chevis. I was offered a Captain's Commiſſion.

Sir John Strange. By whom?---Chevis. By Lord Lovat, in that Service.

Sir John Strange. In what Service?

Chevis. In the Service of that Perſon, whom he called his lawful Prince.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, I beg he may inform your Lordſhips, whether my Lord Lovat ſaid any thing in relation to the Pretender, to recommend him to the Witneſs, at the Time he ſays Lord Lovat offered him a Commiſſion?

Chevis. I have often heard Lord Lovat ſay, That whoever looked the Pretender, his lawful King, in the Face, he would own he was his only rightful King, as he himſelf owned him to be.

Sir John Strange. I beg he may be aſked, whether he can recollect, during the Time of the late Rebellion, any Number of Frafers being aſſembled?

Chevis. I cannot ſay; for, after the Time of reading the Manifeſto, I did not viſit my Lord Lovat. I diſcontinued going to his Houſe.

Sir John Strange. For your own Sake, I deſire to aſk you, Did you accept of the Commiſſion offered you by Lord Lovat or not?

Chevis. I did not indeed; I refuſed it.

Sir John Strange. What Healths have you heard the Priſoner toaſt in your Company?

Chevis. Confuſion to the White Horſe, and all the Generation of them.

Sir John Strange. Are you certain you heard my Lord Lovat propoſe that Health?

Chevis. I have heard him propoſe it, and drink it.

Sir John Strange. What did you underſtand was the Meaning of that Expreſſion, Confuſion to the White Horſe?

Chevis. Confuſion to the preſent Royal Family: It could mean nothing elſe. It was in Alluſion to the Arms of the Family.

Sir John Strange. I ſhould be glad you would inform their Lordſhips, whether you know of any Meſſage ſent by my Lord Lovat, by Drummond of Bochaldie, beſides what he has mentioned; any Thing concerning the Reformation or Revolution?

Chevis. He was to execute the Meſſage, and that with reſpect to his Commiſſion and Patent.

Sir John Strange. With whom was he to execute that Commiſſion?

Chevis. With the Pretender, at Rome.

Sir John Strange. Did he, at that Time, ſay any Thing more to him; and what was it?

Chevis. He talked of the Aſſociation, and of the Invaſion.

Sir John Strange. Did my Lord Lovat ſay any Thing of Religion, at that Time?

Chevis. I heard him ſay frequently, he believed there was no true Religion in the World but one, which was the Church of Rome.

Sir John Strange. Was any Thing ſaid of the Revolution?

Chevis. He curſed the Reformation and the Revolution too.

Sir John Strange. What did he curſe the Reformation for?

Chevis. Becauſe, he ſaid, it brought a falſe Religion upon us; and the Revolution involved us in a Load of Debt.

Sir John Strange. Did he then propoſe any Scheme to get rid of this Grievance?

Chevis. The Scheme he propoſed was, by favouring the Invaſion, and by taking Part in it.

Sir John Strange. Did he ſay for what Purpoſe that Invaſion was to be?

Chevis. To reſtore the rightful King.

Sir John Strange. Did he name him?

Chevis. To reſtore his lawful Sovereign King James the Eighth.

Sir John Strange. I beg you'll give their Lordſhips an Account, whether you ever heard Lord Lovat ſay any Thing in relation to a Marriage contracted for his Daughter?

Chevis. I heard Lord Lovat ſay, that when his Daughter was married to M'Pherſon of Clunie, he took it to be an Acceſſion of Strength, by the adding one Highland Clan more to the Number.

Sir John Strange. Pleaſe to inform their Lordſhips, whether, through the Progreſs of the Rebellion, you heard the Lord Lovat ſay any Thing, as to what he would do with his Tenants that would not join?

Chevis. He ſaid, It was very eaſy for him to cut them off in a Moment, as he was in ſuch a Capacity now.

Sir John Strange. What did he mean by that?

Chevis. Any Tenant that ſhould oppoſe him, or any of the Clan, or Neighbours.

Sir John Strange. I beg you will inform their Lordſhips, what is the Power and Authority that Lord Lovat inſiſts to have over his own Clan? or whether they are under his Power and Command, or not?

Chevis. Lord Lovat certainly has the Power of an abſolute King over them.

Sir John Strange. Inform their Lordſhips, whether you apprehend the Command of the Clan is in my Lord Lovat, or his Son the Maſter?

Chevis. It is intirely in my Lord's own Hands.

Sir John Strange. Do you know what Age my Lord Lovat's eldeſt Son is?---Chevis. Much about Nineteen.

Sir John Strange. Was he at Home at the Beginning of the Rebellion? or was he then at any other Place, and where, for Education?

Chevis. He was at Saint Andrews, the Place of his Education; and was called Home about that Time.

Sir John Strange. How long was that before Lord Lovat made his Son read the Manifeſto which you have mentioned? How long was he at Home before that?---Chevis. Not very long before that.

Sir John Strange. You ſay the young Gentleman was at Saint Andrews, and was ſent for Home by his Father; and that his Father ſet him to read the Manifeſto: Pray how long had the young Gentleman been at Home, before he was ordered to read the Manifeſto?

Chevis. It might have been about two Months, to the beſt of my Memory.

Sir John Strange. Do you think it was ſo long?

Chevis. I believe it might have been about two Months.

Sir John Strange. When my Lord Lovat offered you a Captain's Commiſſion, did he acquaint you who was to be your Colonel?

Chevis. He did not acquaint me, at that Time, who was to be my Colonel; but he ſaid he was in that Service in that Cauſe himſelf; and I underſtood, that I was to ſerve under him.

Sir John Strange. My Lords, As the Witneſs has informed your Lordſhips, that he did not go to Lord Lovat's, after he told him it was High Treaſon to object to the reading of the Pretender's Manifeſto, I ſhall not examine him to any Thing ſubſequent in Point of Time to that; and therefore I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with aſking him any more Queſtions.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, I beg this Witneſs may inform your Lordſhips, whether he has heard any Thing of any Threats made Uſe of by the noble Lord at the Bar, to his Tenants, or Clan, to come down upon them, if they refuſed joining?

Chevis. I ſaw a Party of the M'Donalds in the Country; and I think they came to the Place where I lived; and I take the Deſign of them to have been, that they ſhould be there, to overawe the Country.

Mr. Attorney General. Who commanded that Party of the M'Donalds?

Chevis. M'Donald of Bariſdale.

Mr. At. Gen. Did you hear any Thing ſaid by my Lord Lova to M'Donald, concerning him or his Clan?

Chevis. He ſaid, in general, that, upon being inveſted with this Patent of Duke, he would be able not only to humble and keep in Awe hisown Clan, but his Neighbours.

Mr. At. Gen. I beg he may inform your Lordſhips, whether he knows any Thing of Bariſdale's going about to the Clans, to encourage them to join?

Chevis. I ſaw him at Lord Levat's Houſe the Day of the Rendezvous.

Mr. At. Gen. What did he do there?

Chevis. He ſpirited up the Country People, and carried them along to the Rendezvous.

Mr. At. Gen. Who was that?

Chevis. M'Donald of Bariſdale.

Mr. At. Gen. What do you know in relation to that Rendezvous?

Chevis.

Chevis. I saw the Rendezvous at a Distance, but I was not upon the Spot.

Mr. At. Gen. Who was at the Rendezvous?

Chevis. Four, or Five, or Six hundred Men.

Mr. At. Gen. Whose Men were they?

Chevis. The Frasers.

Mr. At. Gen. Under whose Command were they?

Chevis. I was told, they were under the Master's Command; but I was not personally present.

Lord High Steward. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, Have you done with this Witness?

Managers. My Lord, We have done with him.

Lord High Steward. My Lord Lovat, The Gentlemen of the House of Commons have gone through with their Examination of Mr. Chevis: Has your Lordship any Questions to ask him?

Lord Lovat. My Lords, He has said so many false and wicked Things, that I do not know what Questions to ask him, or where to begin.

Lord High Steward. Your Lordship will be pleased to propose the Questions; and then they will be asked of the Witness.

The Clerk repeated the Prisoner's Questions to the Witness.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I pray he may be asked, Whether or no, since my Arrival here, and being before the House of Lords, and that many Witnesses had been summoned to give Evidence against me, whether this Witness did not go about to sollicit Witnesses against me? and whether he did not examine Witnesses himself?

Chevis. I refuse it.

Manager. You mean, you deny it.

Chevis. I deny it.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I offer to prove it.

Lord High Steward. My Lord Lovat, Your Lordship must do that when you come to make your Defence: Your Lordship will then have an Opportunity, by Witnesses, to contradict or invalidate the Testimony of this, or any other Witness produced against you.

Lord Lovat. I beg this Witness may be asked, Whether he knows, or ever heard, that several People were threatened to be put in Prison, and were put in Prison, if they did not come up to be Evidence against me.

Chevis. I deny it.

Lord Lovat. I beg he may be asked, Whether he discovered to any Person belonging to the Government, the Declaration which he says he heard read at my House?

Chevis. In September 1745, I told it in common Conversation; but I never went to any of the Government, to inform them of it: The Rebellion broke out then immediately.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I beg this Witness may be asked, Whether he ever said himself, or has heard others say, that the late Plot by the Master of Lovat against me, was to hang the old Man, and save himself?

Chevis. I never heard of such a Plot; but have often heard of a Plot of my Lord Lovat's, to try to hang his Son the Master of Lovat, and save himself.

A Lord. My Lords, I don't doubt the Witness designs to pay the Money he owes to my Lord Lovat; but I pray he may be asked, whether he expects to be forgiven that Debt, if my Lord Lovat is convicted?

L. H. S. My Lords, While this Witness was examined upon a Voire dire, there was a Question proposed by my Lord Lovat, to be asked him, which was, Whether he owed my Lord Lovat any Money? That Question was objected to by the Gentlemen of the House of Commons, as not tending to discover any Thing material to the Point then in Question: And what is now proposed by the noble Lord, to be asked of the Witness, is, Whether this Gentleman owes my Lord Lovat any Money? and if he does, whether he expects to be forgiven that Debt, in case my Lord Lovat should be convicted?

Chevis. In regard of that Debt, it was condescended some Years ago, that my Lord Lovat should accept a Gentleman who was my Debtor, for the Payment of that Money.

L. H. S. Do you owe my Lord Lovat any Money?

Chevis. A mere Trifle: This which he speaks of was to be compensed another Way.

L. H. S. Whether the Debt be more or less, do you expect to save that Debt, or to be favoured in the Payment of it, if my Lord Lovat should be convicted?

Chevis. Not at all; I deny it.

A Lord. How long have you been in Town?

Chevis. Since Tuesday last about Noon.

A Lord. Whether have you lived at your own Expence since that Time; or who hath supported you?

Chevis. I did design to have lived at my own Expence; but I have been supported at the Expence of the Government.

[Then the Witness withdrew.

Mr. Sollicitor General (the Honourable William Murray, Esquire). My Lords, The next Witness we beg Leave to call, is Robert Fraser, late Secretary to my Lord Lovat.

Robert Fraser called in and sworn in Chief.

Proclamation made for Silence.

The Prisoner rising up, the Lord High Steward said, My Lord Lovat, Do you object to this Witness?---Lord Lovat. Yes.

L. H. S. What is your Objection?

Lord Lovat. He holds a Tack of Land of me.

L. H. S. Is it true? Do you hold a Tack of Land of his Lordship?

R. Fraser. No; I do not hold any Tack of Land of my Lord Lovat.

Lord Lovat. I am ready to prove it.

L. H. S. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, My Lord Lovat may have Liberty to examine a Witness, to prove that Fact. It has been frequently done after a Witness has been sworn in Chief. My Lords, at the Common Law, where a Witness is tendered by the Plaintiff to be sworn, the Oath to give Evidence in Chief is administered to him, unless the Defendant makes an Objection to his Competency, and then he may be examined touching that Objection, upon a Voire dire: But, after the Witness has been sworn in Chief, if any Objection is then made to him, he may be asked the same Question by virtue of his Oath in Chief, as he might have been asked upon a Voire dire. I have known it done both Ways. But, after the Witness has been examined by the Defendant to the Fact of the Objection, and has denied it upon his Oath, it is not usual to give the Defendant Liberty to call a Witness to prove it, in order to repel him from being a Witness, unless the other Side acquiesces in it.

Lord Lovat. I have sent for my Witness.

The House having waited some Time, my Lord High Steward asked the Prisoner, where his Witness was: Who said, he was at the Coffee-house; and a little Time afterwards said, My Lords, The Witnesses are all gone about an Hour ago, not expecting to be called.

Lord High Steward. How came your Witnesses to go away whilst your Trial is going on?

Lord Lovat. My Lords, They did not know they would be called To-day.

Mr. Sollicitor General. My Lords, The Objection made by the Noble Lord at the Bar having been positively denied by the Witness, and there being no Evidence here to contradict him, we hope we may proceed to examine him.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, We hope your Lordships will not permit the Prisoner at the Bar to suspend your Lordships Proceedings whenever he pleases: And we hope the Candour of the Managers, in not opposing his going into this Objection, after the Witness has denied it upon his Oath, shall not be extended to delay his Examination, under a Pretence of this Kind. The Witness produced denying the Objection upon his Oath, and there being no Evidence here to contradict it, we hope we shall be permitted to go on with the Witness. My Lords, The Managers were aware of this; nevertheless did not at first oppose any Indulgence to the Prisoner that might tend to Justice; but as it is now known what Point the Witness is called to, though I do not suppose the Witness capable of being influenced, yet if a bare Allegation of this Sort is sufficient to put off your Lordships Proceedings, I must submit it to your Lordships, whether it will not give an Opportunity of something to be done which ought not to be done.

Mr. Noel.

IT is with great Difficulty and Disinclination, that we can prevail upon ourselves to object to the utmost Candour that can be shewn to the Noble Lord at the Bar. My Lords, This is an Occurrence which, in my little Experience, I never knew to arise. My Lords, I apprehend the Way is, upon this Occasion, to ask the Questions of the Witnesses upon a Voire dire. The Noble Lord at the Bar made the Objection, and applied to the Witness for an Answer to that Question, who has positively denied it: If, after that, the Prisoner is to say, I can falsify what the Witness has now sworn; allow me Time for it; and your Lordships should indulge him with it in this Manner; there is Nobody but must be apprehensive of very dangerous Consequences attending it: For any Kind of Evidence may, by that Means, be prevented.

Lord High Steward. My Lords, The Gentlemen of the House of Commons may proceed in their Examination of this Witness; and my Lord Lovat will be at Liberty to ask what Questions he pleases, in his Cross-Examination; and will likewise be at Liberty to call Witnesses to prove this particular Fact in his Defence in another Shape; for he may prove this Fact, in order to impeach this Witness's Credit, and probably have as much Effect of it as if it had been properly taken Advantage of.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, I beg this Witness may be asked, when he first came to live in Lord Lovat's Family; and how long he lived with him?

L. H. S. Sir, you hear the Question.

R. Fraser. I entered into Lord Lovat's Service in October 1744.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long did you continue with him?

R. Fras. I continued in his Service till his Lordship and I were taken Prisoners, the 7th of June last.

Mr. Sol. Gen. I beg you may inform their Lordships, whether, in the Month of July 1745, you knew of any Information that was given to my Lord Lovat, of an Intention of an Insurrection and Invasion; and what Intimation was given of it?

R. Fras. Some time after the 25th July 1745, I heard a Gentleman came to my Lord Lovat's House, to tell him, That the Pretender's Son was landed somewhere about Lochaber. I heard my Lord Lovat say, He did not land like a Prince; that he had no Army with him, and only a few Servants.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did my Lord Lovat say upon that Occasion? Was his Son at Home?

R. Fras. He was at Home, or was then sent for.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Person that was sent by my Lord Lovat to see the Pretender at that Time?

R. Fras. Not at that Time; I can't say that I knew of any.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Endeavours that were then used to raise Men upon my Lord Lovat's Estate? And if you do, please to mention the Times.

R. Fras. I remember some time after he dictated a Letter to me, to be sent to Two of the Heads of the Tribes of the Frasers.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Name them.

R. Fras. James Fraser of Foyers, and John Fraser of Ferraline.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was that Letter for?

R. Fras. To get Men ready to join the Master of Lovat.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where were the Men to go with him?

R. Fras. The Letter does not particularize that.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any body that was sent to take Lists of the Men to be raised?

R. Fras. I took the Lists of the Names of the Men. My Lord Lovat's Chamberlain ordered me to make a List of the Names of all the Men capable of bearing Arms North of Loch Ness.

Mr. Sol. Gen. For what Purpose were those Lists made?

R. Fras. To the best of my Knowledge to join the Master of Lovat, with the Pretender.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were such Lists made out with my Lord Lovat's Privity, or by his Direction?

R. Fraser.

R. Fraſer. I am ſure he was acquainted with it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How are you ſure he was acquainted with it?

R. Fraſ. Becauſe I went into the Room, and told him what I was doing; and that I was writing the Liſt.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did he ſay to you upon that Occaſion?

R. Fraſ. I cannot remember now.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray, did my Lord Lovat ſee the Liſt after it was made out?

R. Fraſ. I can't tell; I returned it to John Fraſer, my Lord's Factor.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Meſſage that was ſent or paſſed between my Lord Lovat, and Lord Loudon, and Lord Preſident?

R. Fraſ. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was it about?

R. Fraſ. Several Letters were ſent by my Lord Loudon, and my Lord Preſident, to my Lord Lovat, to diſſuade him from entering into the Rebellion.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Anſwer did my Lord Lovat make to theſe Letters?

R. Fraſ. He ſaid his Son was ſo obſtinate as to enter into the Rebellion; but that he could not help it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was that Fact true? Was the Son ſo obſtinate?

R. Fraſ. No; I am ſure it was not true.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Why are you ſure it was not true?

R. Fraſ. Becauſe, whilſt I was preparing a Letter to the Lord Preſident, which my Lord Lovat dictated, wherein he acquainted them of his Son's Obſtinacy in going into the Rebellion (which Letter my Lord directed me not to let any body ſee), his Son the Maſter came in, and aſked me for the Letter; and I refuſing to give it him, the Son took the Letter out of my Hand.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who took it out of your Hand?

R. Fraſ. The Maſter of Lovat took it out of my Hand; and, after reading it, ſaid, Good God, how is this! Accuſe me behind my Back! To call me ſtiff-necked and diſobedient! I will ſet the Saddle upon the right Horſe.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray repeat the Anſwer you made laſt.

R. Fraſ. The Maſter of Lovat ſaid, If this Letter goes, I will go, and put the Saddle upon the right Horſe, and will go and diſcover all to my Lord Preſident.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did he mean by putting the Saddle upon the right Horſe?

R. Fraſ. That he would go and diſcover to my Lord Preſident, that his Father, my Lord Lovat, had forced him to do what he had done.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did the Son ſay any Thing to my Lord Lovat upon that Occaſion?——Fraſ. Not that I know of. The Words ſtiff-necked and diſobedient were left out of the Letter.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How came theſe Words to be left out?

R. Fraſ. It was done by the Maſter of Lovat's Order.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you hear any Thing that paſſed between Lord Lovat and his Son about his Backwardneſs in going into the Rebellion?

R. Fraſ. I heard him blame the Maſter of Lovat for being dilatory.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Dilatory in what?——R. Fraſ. In raiſing Men.

Mr. Sol. Gen. For what Purpoſe?

R. Fraſ. To join the Pretender's Son.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any Thing of Lord Lovat's ſending for People, as Painters, or of any Sort, to prepare his Tents?

R. Fraſ. Yes; I myſelf wrote a Letter to his Agent at Inverneſs, who was a Painter.

Mr. Sol. Gen. By whoſe Order did you write that Letter?

R. Fraſ. By my Lord Lovat's Order.

Mr. Sol. Gen. To what Purpoſe was the Letter wrote?—R. Fraſ. It was to order the Agent, or the Painter, to make ſome Bell-Tents.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did the Painter do in Conſequence of that Letter?

R. Fraſ. He made them.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did my Lord Lovat know of it?——R. Fraſ. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How do you know he did?——R. Fraſ. Becauſe I was with my Lord Lovat when the Man was making them.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What are Bell-Tents?

R. Fraſ. They are Lodges to keep Arms dry from the Rain.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you know of any Colours being made?

R. Fraſ. Yes; we had one Pair of new ones made, and another Pair mended.

Mr. Sol. Gen. About what Time was that? and what Month?

R. Fraſ. About the Month of September, I think.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was it before the firſt Rendezvous?

R. Fraſ. I think it was after the firſt Rendezvous.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Can you give an Account of the Men being rendezvouſed, and whether it was done by my Lord Lovat's Directions, or under his Authority?——R. Fraſ. They were rendezvouſed.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where were they rendezvouſed?

R. Fraſ. Upon that Part of Lord Lovat's Eſtate near Caſtle-Downey.

Mr. Sol. Gen. About what Time was this? in what Month?

R. Fraſ. In the Month of Auguſt.

Mr. Sol. Gen, What was the particular Purpoſe of their being reviewed then?

R. Fraſ. To ſee who was capable of bearing Arms, and who had any.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were the Officers appointed then?

R. Fraſ. No, I believe not.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How do you know that the Priſoner was made privy to this Rendezvous?

R. Fraſ. Becauſe they came back to my Lord's Houſe afterwards.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were they in Officers Dreſs?

R. Fraſ. They had white Cockades on.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How far was the Place of Rendezvous from Lord Lovat's Houſe?——R. Fraſ. About a Quarter of a Mile.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Were the Perſons there Tenants to my Lord Lovat?

R. Fraſ. They were his Tenants.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Arms had they?——R. Fraſ. I can't ſay: I had my Lord's Liberty to go there and ſee them; but I did not ſtay there.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any other Rendezvous?

R. Fraſer. About a Fortnight afterwards there was another Rendezvous.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Ammunition, Muſkets, or Arms, that were given to the Men?

R. Fraſ. I don't know of any Arms that were given them. There was a Barrel of Powder ſent from Inverneſs.

Mr. Sol. Gen. By whoſe Order was that done?

R. Fraſ. By my Lord Lovat's Order; I wrote the Letter.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was done with that Powder?

R. Fraſ. It was diſtributed among the Men.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How do you know that it was done by my Lord Lovat's Order?——R. Fraſ. Becauſe the Houſe-keeper being diſgraced, I got the Key of the Place where it was, and ſaw the Powder and Bullets there.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was the Key delivered you for that Uſe?

R. Fraſ. I told my Lord of my having the Key.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Bonnets being provided?

R. Fraſ. There were Bonnets provided for them.

Mr. Sol. Gen. By whoſe Order?

R. Fraſ. By my Lord Lovat's.

Mr. Sol. Gen. For what Purpoſe were they provided?

R. Fraſ. They were given to the Men.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know where the Officers went after the laſt Rendezvous?

R. Fraſ. The Officers came back that Night.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where did they come to?

R. Fraſ. They came to my Lord Lovat's Houſe.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Had they Cockades?

R. Fraſ. They had white Cockades in their Bonnets.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know for what Sign or Mark they wore white Cockades?

R. Fraſ. It was a Symptom of their being People to join the Pretender.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any thing that happened at my Lord Lovat's after the Battle of Preſton-Pans?

R. Fraſ. Fraſer of Dallcraige came to Caſtle-Downey with an Account of the Battle of Preſton-Pans.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What did my Lord Lovat ſay to him upon that Occaſion?

R. Fraſ. He ſaid, That his Men ſhould be ſoon ready to go South.

Mr. Sol. Gen. For what Purpoſe?

R. Fraſ. To join the Rebels, I underſtood.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Men paſſing by my Lord Lovat's Houſe?

R. Fraſ. My Lord Cromertie's Regiment paſſed by; and he and the M'Donalds, and ſeveral others, were entertained there that Night.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you hear any thing that paſſed upon that Occaſion? any thing that was ſaid by my Lord Lovat upon it.

R. Fraſ. Yes, that it was owing to the Maſter of Lovat's Diſobedience, that the Fraſers were not ready as ſoon as any other.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there any thing elſe that paſſed then, or any particular Healths drank?

R. Fraſ. Yes, the Health of the Pretender's Son was drank.

Mr. Sol. Gen. By what Name?

R. Fraſ. By the Name of Prince Charles.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray at what time did the Maſter of Lovat go and join the Rebels?

R. Fraſ. It was between the 10th and 20th of December that he went. My Lord Lovat was taken Priſoner on the 10th or 11th of December, and eſcaped about the 19th or 20th; and at the ſame time the Maſter marched with the Fraſers.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was my Lord Lovat extremely diſpleaſed at his Son's ſo marching? or did he diſapprove of it?

R. Fraſ. No.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he ſend Word for his Son to come back again?

R. Fraſ. He did afterwards ſend for him back, to raiſe more Men.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Perſon who was concerned in the Rebellion, that after the Battle of Falkirke, came to my Lord Lovat's Houſe? and whether any thing paſſed in Company then, and what it was?

R. Fraſ. Yes; there was a French Gentleman came, that was ſaid to be the French Embaſſador.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where did he come to?

F. Fraſ. To a Place belonging to my Lord Lovat.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When was that?

R. Fraſ. It was after their Retreat from Stirling.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know who was there beſides?

R. Fraſ. There were ſeveral others, particularly Lochiel, Keppoch, Cameron.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of my Lord Lovat's ſaying any thing to them about his aſſiſting them?

R. Fraſ. He told them, he hoped they would excuſe him, on account of his Age and Infirmities.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he ſay any thing to ſhew his Zeal for their Succeſs, as he did not go himſelf?

R. Fraſ. Yes; he ſaid, I cannot go myſelf; but I will ſend my only Son, the Darling of my Life.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any thing that paſſed between my Lord Lovat and his Son after that?

R. Fraſ. Yes; the Maſter came to Gortuleg; and my Lord had lately received a Letter from one Mr. Sheridan, who had ſome Office under the Pretender's Son, complaining of my Lord's not getting his Men ready.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any thing that paſſed between them in relation to the Men having Leave to go home?

R. Fraſ. Yes; my Lord was angry with the Maſter for giving them Leave.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray, how long was this before the Battle of Culloden?

R. Fraſ. This was in the Month of February.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any thing of the Pretender's Son's coming to my Lord's Houſe after the Battle of Culloden?

R. Fraſ. Yes; the very Night after the Battle, the Pretender's Son came to my Lord's.

Mr. Sol. Gen.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was my Lord Lovat there then?——R. Fraſ. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any thing of what paſſed between them; or what my Lord Lovat ſaid to him?

R. Fraſ. He made ſome Apology for not joining him in Perſon.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he mention any thing to ſhew his Zeal for him, tho' he did not join him in Perſon?

R. Fraſ. He ſaid he had ſent his Son to join him, whom he loved more than himſelf.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he mention his having ſent any more?

R. Fraſ. Yes; he mentioned his having ſent his Clan.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was the Excuſe accepted; or what did the Pretender's Son ſay to him?

R. Fraſ. I cannot tell particularly: I do not underſtand French, and they ſpoke in French

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did all the Converſation, which paſſed between them, paſs in French?

R. Fraſ. No; they ſpoke ſometimes Engliſh, and at other times they ſpoke French.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What Language was that Diſcourſe ſpoken in, which you have given an Account of as to Lord Lovat's Son and Clan?

R. Fraſ. It was in Engliſh.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You have ſaid you did not underſtand all their Diſcourſe: Pray did you perceive any other Demonſtrations of Friendſhip that paſſed between them?

R. Fraſ. Yes; they embraced one another.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Conſultation or Meeting of the General Officers of the Rebel Army, which my Lord Lovat had at that Time?——R. Fraſ. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Who were preſent?

R. Fraſ. There were ſeveral Gentlemen preſent.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Name them.

R. Fraſ. There was Cameron of Lochiel, John Murray of Broughton, Barriſdale, John Roy Stuart, Glenbucket, and others.

Mr. Sol Gen. How long was this after the Battle of Culloden?

R. Fraſ. It was not very long.

Mr. Sol. Gen. How long was it?

R. Fraſ. A matter of Ten or Twelve Days.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was there any body elſe there? Was the Young Pretender there?——R. Fraſ. No; he was not.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any thing of the Converſation that paſſed then, or the Reſult of the Conſultation?

R. Fraſ. No; I was turned out of the Room: I did not hear.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Money that was diſtributed? To whom was it diſtributed, by whom, and for what Purpoſe?

R. Fraſ. I ſaw the Pretender's Son's Treaſurer give Money.

Mr. Sol. Gen. For what Purpoſe was the Money given?

R. Fraſ. To raiſe Men.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know what kind of Money was ſo given?

R. Fraſ. It was French Louidors.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Was you with the Priſoner till the Time he was taken? If you was, give an Account of his Retreat.

R. Fraſ. We ſtaid in an Iſland for a Month; and when we eſcaped, we were obliged to take a Boat to come down a Loch.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was the Name of the Iſland?

R. Fraſ. The Iſland of Morer.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Had you been with Lord Lovat from the Time of the Battle of Culloden to that Time?

R. Fraſ. We were in the Iſland from the Beginning of May till the 7th of June.

Mr. Sol. Gen. With what View did my Lord Lovat come there?

R. Fraſ. To ſcreen him from the King's Troops, which were then in Purſuit of him, and ſeveral others of them.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any thing that paſſed between the Maſter of Lovat and him at that Time?

R. Fraſ. I remember the Maſter propoſed it to him to ſurrender himſelf to the Duke; but my Lord Lovat adviſed him againſt it, and ſaid he could not do it conſiſtently with his Honour; and he did not think he had been ſo mean-ſpirited as to offer it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any thing of any Advice that was given by my Lord Lovat about the Raiſing of Men?

R. Fraſ. Yes; my Lord Lovat was preſent at Morer, where they were ſpeaking of the Raiſing of Men.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Had the Priſoner any Guard that attended him whilſt he was in Morer?

R. Fraſ. Yes; he had a Guard of twenty Men to attend him.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did they reſiſt any of the King's Forces that might oppoſe them?

R. Fraſ. Not that I know of.

Mr. Sol. Gen. By whom were they paid?---R. Fraſ. I paid them.

Mr. Sol. Gen. By whoſe Directions did you pay them?

R. Fraſ. By my Lord Lovat's Directions.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you apprehend, that the Maſter of Lovat carried his Men into the Rebel Army without his Father's Permiſſion?

R. Fraſ. No; I am very ſure he could not.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Why are you ſure of it?

R. Fraſ. Becauſe my Lord Lovat is a very ſtrict Man; and none of his Children could have done it without his Conſent.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Had my Lord Lovat a Power over them?

R. Fraſ. Yes; he had a very great Power over them.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray, was the Guard my Lord Lovat had, armed?

R. Fraſ. Yes.

Mr. Sol. Gen. You ſay there was no Oppoſition given by them to any of the King's Forces?

R. Fraſ. No; I think there was two or three of them fired: But my Lord Lovat ſent me out to tell them not to fire.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any thing of my Lord Lovat's ſoliciting a Commiſſion from the Pretender, to be Lieutenant-General of the Highlands, or a Patent to be Duke?

R. Fraſ. I remember, ſome time after I went into my Lord Lovat's Service, which was the 18th of October 1744, I ſaw in the Deſk a Copy of an old Patent, which gave the Title of Duke to Lord Lovat only.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What other Papers did you ſee there?

R. Fraſ. Some time after I ſaw a new Patent, where the Title was to deſcend to the Heirs Male of the Family.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did you hear from my Lord Lovat how he obtained the Patent?

R. Fraſ. I have heard my Lord Lovat ſay, That his Patent lay in the Hands of one Drummond in France.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he ſay what Drummond?

R. Fraſ. To the beſt of my Knowledge, he ſaid it was Drummond of Bobaldie.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know any thing of any other Commiſſion which my Lord Lovat had?

R. Fraſ. Yes; I ſaw a Commiſſion for his being Lieutenant-General of the Highlands.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Where did you ſee that Commiſſion?

R. Fraſ. Lying upon a Table in my Lord's Room. I read it, and made a Copy of it by my Lord's Order.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Are you ſure whether he himſelf ordered you to copy it?

R. Fraſ. I am ſure he ordered me to make a Copy of it.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Had you any other Diſcourſe with him about it? Did you hear with what View he had got it?

R. Fraſ. No; I had no other than what I have now informed you of.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Do you know of any Complaint my Lord Lovat ever made about an Independent Company being taken from him?

R. Fraſ. I heard him complain, that the Court did not uſe him civilly in taking away his Company.

Mr. Sol. Gen. When did you hear him make that Complaint?

R. Fraſ. Frequently in Company, in ſpeaking upon the Subject.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray what did my Lord Lovat ſay upon that Occaſion?

R. Fraſ. I heard him ſay, That it was intirely owing to General Wade; and that he did not blame the Government.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Did he draw any Conſequences from that?

R. Fraſ. I have heard him ſpeak extraordinary well of his late Maſter King George.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What more did he ſay about this Treatment?

R. Fraſ. He ſaid, That the Court uſed him ſo ill, that he could not help doing what he was doing.

Mr. Sol. Gen. What was he then doing?

R. Fraſ. Raiſing Men to join in the Rebellion. He ſaid he had no Diſlike to his preſent Majeſty, but only to the Perſons who took away his Commiſſion.

Mr. Sol. Gen. Pray what do you apprehend was the Meaning of that Expreſſion of the Maſter of Lovat, that he would go to the Lord Preſident, and diſcover all?

R. Fraſer. I underſtood, that he meant, that he would go and join his Majeſty's Forces.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lords, We have done with the Examination of this Witneſs for the preſent. We ſhall have Occaſion, by-and-bye, to call him, to prove an Exhibit or Two.

Lord High Steward. My Lord Lovat, The Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons have gone thro' their Examination of this Witneſs: Would your Lordſhip aſk him any Queſtions?

Lord Lovat. I am not able to aſk him any Queſtions.

Then the Witneſs, by Order of the Lord High Steward, withdrew; and the Lord High Steward returning back to his Chair, the Houſe was moved to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament.

Lord High Steward. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure to adjourn to the Chamber of Parliament?——Lords. Ay, Ay.

The Houſe was accordingly adjourned to the Chamber of Parliament; and the Lords, and others, returned in the ſame Order, in which they came down: And the Houſe being there reſumed,

Ordered, That this Houſe will proceed further in the Tryal of Simon Lord Lovat in Weſtminſter-Hall, To-morrow, at Eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon: And

A Meſſage was ſent to the Houſe of Commons, by Mr. Eld and Mr. Thurſton, to acquaint them therewith.

Ordered, That the Lieutenant of the Tower of London, or his Deputy, do take back the ſaid Lord Lovat, and bring him again to the Bar of this Houſe in Weſtminſter-Hall To-morrow, at Eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon.

Tueſday the 10*th of* March, 1746.

The Second Day.

THE Lords, and others, came from the Chamber of Parliament into Weſtminſter-Hall, in the ſame Order as on Monday: Where the Commons, and their Managers, were in the Seats prepared for them reſpectively, as before: And the Lords took their Places in the Court; and the Lord High Steward in his Chair.

Lord High Steward. The Houſe is reſumed. Is it your Lordſhips Pleaſure, that the Judges have Leave to be covered?

Lords. Ay, ay.

Then the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamation for Silence; and afterwards the following Proclamation:

Serjeant at Arms. Oyes, Oyes, Oyes! Lieutenant of the Tower of London, Bring forth your Priſoner, Simon Lord Lovat, to the Bar, purſuant to the Order of the Houſe of Lords, to you directed.

The Deputy-Governor of the Tower brought the Priſoner to the Bar, in the like manner as before. And then he kneeled down.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhip may riſe.

Then the Lord High Steward aſked Leave to go down to the Table: Which was done.

L. H. S. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, You may proceed in your Evidence.

Mr. Noel. My Lords, The next Witneſs we beg Leave to call in Support of the Charge, is John Murray of Broughton.

John Murray of Broughton came into Court.

Mr. Noel. My Lords, We deſire that he may be ſworn.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I have Objections againſt this Witneſs. One or two I apprehend to be eſſential.

L. H. S. Make your Objections.

Lord Lovat. As I cannot read myſelf, I deſire your Lordſhips will give Leave to the Clerk to read them.

Clerk reads.

My Objection is, That he is attainted by an Act of Parliament made in the laſt Seſſion, Page 443; and that he did not ſurrender himſelf before the 12th of July laſt.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, I obſerve, that the noble Lord at the Bar ſaid, That he had ſeveral Objections to the examining this Witneſs; and that One or Two of them were eſſential; but the noble Lord has not mentioned more than one. I preſume, my Lords, it would be proper that he ſhould name all his Objections at once, that the Managers may have an Opportunity of anſwering them all, and receiving your Lordſhips Judgment upon the Whole: Therefore, if he has any other Objections to offer, it would be proper he ſhould mention them now to your Lordſhips.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, that That is a very odd Propoſition. I give your Lordſhips an eſſential one now; and when that is anſwered, I have another. I am not to be directed by thoſe who are my Perſecutors.

L. H. S. My Lord Lovat, You are not to be directed by your Accuſers, but by the Lords who are your Judges; and the Courſe of Proceeding in this, and all other Courts, is, That a Perſon who objects to any Witneſs, ſhould name all his Objections at the ſame time; and it is the more material in this Court, as it tends to prevent the Trouble of making ſeveral unneceſſary Adjournments.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, As this Objection is very eſſential, I pray that it may be anſwered before I make another.

Lord Talbot. My Lords, If this is a material Objection to the Witneſs, then there will be no Occaſion for any other; but if it is an immaterial one, then your Lordſhips may go into any other; but the Way propoſed by the Managers may be very detrimental to the unhappy Perſon at the Bar.

L. H. S. Your Lordſhips hear what is propoſed; and the Queſtion is, Whether the Noble Lord at the Bar ſhall name all his Objections now, or take them up by One?

Sir William Yonge. My Lords, I ſhould hope, that, in any Courſe of Proceeding, where Objections of this Kind are made, they ſhould be made all together; for if they are made ſeparate, we muſt conſequently make diſtinct Anſwers to them all; which may oblige your Lordſhips to adjourn often to the Chamber of Parliament; which will create a great and unneceſſary Delay of Time: And, my Lords, there can be no Objection to his naming the Whole at once, ſince they will all be diſtinctly conſidered by your Lordſhips, and undoubtedly receive diſtinct Anſwers. I therefore humbly inſiſt, That he may be obliged to name all his Objections at once.

Mr. Noel. My Lords, What we are now upon, is no Point of Law at all: It is ſingly, Whether the noble Lord at the Bar, as is uſual, ſhould not name all his Objections at once? When he does name them, then to ſuch as are clear Points of Law, he muſt be heard by his Counſel: But, at preſent, my Lords, we are upon a Queſtion concerning the Courſe of Proceeding, Whether he ſhall name them all at once? that they may be taken into Conſideration at the ſame Time.

My Lords, One Thing ſtruck me in a very extraordinary Manner: It was ſaid by the noble Lord at the Bar, That he was not to be directed by his Perſecutors. My Lords, We are no Perſecutors; we perſecute no Man; we are entruſted by the Commons, who carry on this Proſecution againſt the noble Lord at the Bar for Treaſon; and we proſecute for the Preſervation of the King's Government, and the Laws of the Land.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I ſaid I was not to be directed by thoſe who accuſed me. Your Lordſhips cannot expect, I can ſay what I have to offer in an eloquent Manner. My Lords, Should the Saving of a little Time be a Reaſon for taking away a Perſon's Life? I hope theſe will not act like the Parricides who took off the Head of both Kingdoms in a Day, by their Proſecution. I am a Peer of this Land; and I think no Excuſe of ſaving Time ſhould be allowed as a Reaſon to deſtroy me.

L. H. S. My Lord Lovat, The Lords will uſe all the Deliberation, and give you all the Time that is requiſite for your Defence; but I muſt beg your Lordſhip will have ſo much Conſideration as to keep your Temper, and not ſuffer yourſelf to be hurried into Paſſion; for that may greatly prejudice you in making your Defence. Your Lordſhip will find the Advantage in your Defence, by keeping your Temper.

Lord Lovat. I give your Lordſhip my humble Thanks: And, ſince your Lordſhips will not allow me Counſel, I have ſpoke the little Nonſenſe I had to ſay; but now your Lordſhips ſhall hear me ſay nothing out of Temper.

L. H. S. My Lord Lovat, The Queſtion now is, Whether you ſhall name all your Objections at once? I muſt acquaint your Lordſhip, That is the Rule in the Courts below, That if ſeveral Objections are made to a Witneſs, they are all named at once, in order to prevent unneceſſary Delays.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, To ſhew how much I deſire to ſave Time (tho', according to the Courſe of Nature, my Time can be but ſhort), I am ſo far from deſiring to give your Lordſhips Trouble, or to prolong Time, that I do inſiſt upon this Objection to the Witneſs, and rely upon it as the only material Objection.

Then the Lord High Steward directed the Act of the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, for the Attainder of ſeveral Perſons, and, amongſt others, of John Murray of Broughton, to be read: And the ſame was read accordingly by the Clerk at the Table.

L. H. S. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, You hear the Objection made by my Lord Lovat againſt this Witneſs: Which is, That he ſtands attainted by the Act of Parliament juſt now read; and that he did not ſurrender himſelf before the 12th of July, the Day preſcribed by the Act. And this being a Queſtion of Law, he deſires to be heard by his Counſel to it.

Mr. Attorney General. My Lords, We have that which will appear to your Lordſhips, to be a plain and a clear Anſwer to it. It appears, that this is an Act of Parliament for attainting ſeveral Perſons, upon a certain Condition; which is, That if thoſe Perſons do not, before the 12th of July 1746, ſurrender themſelves to One of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace, then every one, ſo not ſurrendering himſelf, ſhall be adjudged to be, and is thereby, attainted of High Treaſon. And our Anſwer to it is this, That the Condition has been complied with by Mr. Murray. I ſhall readily own, That, ſuppoſing the Condition had not been complied with, according to Law, in that Caſe Mr. Murray, being an attainted Perſon, could not be a Witneſs, unleſs he had been pardoned. But our Anſwer to that will be, That he hath ſurrendered himſelf; and the Surrender will appear upon Record; and the Manner of it is this: The laſt Term, Mr. Murray was brought by Habeas Corpus to the Bar of the Court of King's-Bench; and a Tranſcript of the Act of Parliament being by Mittimus and Certiorari brought into that Court; and Mr. Murray brought up, and perſonally appearing before the Juſtices of the Court of King's-Bench; and being aſked by them, What he had to ſay, why he ſhould not ſuffer Death, according to Law? upon a Suppoſition, that he was attainted upon that Act of Parliament; he pleaded in general, That he was one of the Perſons named in the Act; and that, long before the 12th of July 1746, to wit, on the 28th of June then laſt, he did, at Edinburgh, in due Manner, according to the Meaning of the Act, render himſelf to Andrew Fletcher, Lord Juſtice Clerk, and one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace: And he ſays, That the ſaid Andrew Fletcher had then Authority to admit him to make ſuch Surrender. He then ſtates, That on the ſaid 28th of June, in conſequence of this Surrender, he was committed by the Lord Juſtice Clerk to Priſon, according to the Directions of the Act of Parliament; and that he had ever ſince that Surrender remained in Cuſtody, and ſtill continues in Priſon, and is ready to take his Trial, and ſubmit himſelf to Juſtice. My Lords, He having pleaded this Plea, the Attorney General, by virtue of a Warrant from his Majeſty, confeſſed the Plea to be true: Upon which the Court of King's-Bench made a Record of it. He was remanded back to Priſon, and there remains to anſwer, according to Law, when he ſhall be called to an Account for this High Treaſon. My Lords, We have the Record, and beg it may be read.

Lord Lovat. My Lords, I object to the reading this Record, becauſe it is no Evidence againſt me; and I beg my Counſel may be heard to it. I am a Stranger to the Record, which is grounded only upon the Confeſſion of the Attorney General, unſupported by any Proof; and I deſire my Counſel may be now heard.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lords, As to the Objection againſt reading this Record, I apprehend there is no Foundation for it. It is a Record of the Court of King's-Bench, concerning the Perſon to whom the noble Lord at the Bar has objected, as being attainted; and, upon the Face of the Record, it will appear, that he is not a Perſon attainted. As to what the noble Lord ſays, That he is no Party to the Record, It is true he is not; but it is a Record notwithſtanding. It is a Record upon the Point in Queſtion, to ſhew whether or no the Perſon who is propoſed as a Witneſs, is attainted: And there is no other Way by which he can have an Opportunity, in a Court of Juſtice, to avoid that Attainder, but by being brought into that Court, and aſked, What he has to ſay why Execution ſhould not be awarded againſt him, upon the Foundation of his being attainted by the Act? The Law gives him a Right to make his Defence againſt that Demand of Execution. He has done it, by averring a Fact of a Surrender, purſuant to the Act; and the Attorney General having confeſſed that Fact, it appears, that the Witneſs is not attainted; and the whole is (as it ought to be) entered on Record, which is the proper Evidence of his not being attainted; and therefore muſt be proper to be read to your Lordſhips, to anſwer an Objection, founded on a Suppoſition, that he is, though the Priſoner is not, nor could poſſibly be, a Party to it.

L. H. S. My Lord Lovat, You have heard what the Managers ſay: Do you now inſiſt upon the Objection to the Reading of the Record? or will you reſerve your Objection to the Witneſs till after the Record has been read?

Lord Lovat. I deſire, that it ſhould not be read.

L. H. S. Do you deſire, that your Counſel may be heard to that Queſtion, as a Point of Law?

Lord Lovat. Yes, I do.

Mr. Att. Gen. To be ſure, my Lords, if it is any thing, it is a Point of Law; but your Lordſhips will judge whether it is a Point of Doubt; and therefore deſerves to have Counſel heard to it.

L. H. S. If my Lord Lovat inſiſts upon it, his Counſel muſt be heard to this Point.

Mr. Forrester.

My Lords,

I AM, by your Lordſhips Order, aſſigned Counſel to the noble Lord the Priſoner at the Bar, to adviſe and aſſiſt him in Matters of Law. The Objection that the noble Lord has made to the reading this Record, is, That it is grounded upon a Plea of Mr. Murray, confeſſed by his Majeſty's Attorney General, to which the noble Lord is no Party; that Nobody is bound by that Confeſſion but the Crown; and conſequently, that it cannot be read againſt the noble Lord at the Bar. And, my Lords, I apprehend, that a Plea reſting merely upon the Confeſſion of the King, and which, in Fact, may or may not be true, ought not, in point of Law or Juſtice, to conclude any Party but the Crown, in whom alone reſided the Power of confeſſing it.

My Lords, I am ready to acknowledge, that the Law of England gives the greateſt Credit to Proofs by Matter of Record; and that they are Proofs of the higheſt Nature: But, my Lords, there is a great Difference between Records grounded upon the Confeſſion of the Party, and Records upon Verdicts.

The Reaſon is, That in Records grounded upon Confeſſion, the Party may come in, and ſuggeſt a Thing that is true or falſe: And it would be extremely hard, in regard to Third Perſons, who may be injured by it; I ſay, it would be extremely injurious, if they had no Method to be let in, to falſify a Plea thus confeſſed. But where a Record is grounded upon a Verdict, and Judgment given thereupon, the Caſe is very different, becauſe there is always a full Hearing before a Court of Juſtice; the the Facts are proved by Teſtimony of the Witneſſes; and the Jury give their Verdict upon ſuch Proofs: So that both the Matters of Fact and Law, if any ariſe, being fully debated and determined, it is highly reaſonable ſuch Proceedings ſhould be concluſive, upon the Maxim, Expedit reipublicæ ut ſit finis litium; ſince, if it was not, every Fact might be called in queſtion over and over again; and ſo Courts of Juſtice would never come to an End of the Buſineſs before them. My Lords, The Diſtinction that I make is not purely of my own Imagination; your Lordſhips will find it in the beſt Writers on the Crown Law. My Lord Coke, in his Third Inſt. fol. 231. and Lord Chief Juſtice Hale, in the Firſt Volume of his Hiſtory of the Pleas of the Crown, fol. 361. tells us, That if a Tenant in Fee aliens his Lands, and then is attainted of Treaſon, by Verdict upon an Indictment, ſuppoſing the Offence committed before the Alienation, the Alienee cannot falſify the Attainder, upon a Suppoſition, that there was no Treaſon committed before the Alienation; but that, had the Attainder been by Confeſſion, the Alienee might falſify the Attainder in the very Point of the Treaſon, there being nothing concluſive done by the Alienor. This, my Lords, I apprehend is extremely ſtrong to the preſent Purpoſe: Your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to obſerve how far it goes; it reſpects the Crown in point of Intereſt, the Lands actually forfeited to and veſted in the Crown by the Attainder; which yet being grounded only on the Confeſſion of the Party, cannot operate to injure a Third Perſon, but he may ſet it aſide, and recover his Lands again, notwithſtanding the Record by which it appears, that the Alienor committed Treaſon, and ſold the Lands after the Treaſon actually committed. My Lords, I am aware of an Objection that may be made: It will perhaps be ſaid, That it was in the Power of the Crown to have fully eſtabliſhed Mr. Murray's Credit, by taking another Method, that of granting him a Pardon; which would have removed all Objection. My Lords, I grant it would; and had it been done, the noble Lord at the Bar, nor his Counſel, would not have troubled your Lordſhips with any Objections. But, my Lords, there is a very wide Difference between the two Methods: A Pardon takes away, as Lord Hobart expreſſes, both pœnam & reatum; it obliterates the Crime as much as if there had been no Crime at all; and when that has been once declared by the Crown, it is concluſive to all People: A Pardon removes all Objections to the Perſon, and to his Character. But the preſent Caſe is extremely different; for the Subſtance of Murray's Plea, tho' confeſſed by the Attorney General, ſtill remains a Matter of Doubt, and a Matter of Evidence. My Lords, That Mr. Murray appeared in the Court of King's-Bench, that he pleaded he was the Perſon named in the Act, ſo far is true, and ſo far I allow: But, my Lords, notwithſtanding he pleaded that he ſurrendered on the 28th June, and was then committed to Priſon, this may be falſe; Evidence might have been produced to the contrary; and, upon that Evidence, it might have appeared, that he did not ſurrender before the 12th of July.

My Lords, ſhould that happen to be the Caſe, in what Condition would a Third Perſon be, was this Proceeding to be concluſive againſt him? It is a Maxim in Law, that Actus legis nemini facit injuriam. The Maxim holds equally ſtrong as to the Acts of the Crown; and, if our Books are not ſo explicit on the latter as the former Head, their Silence proceeds from the great Modeſty of our Laws, which, as they repoſe the higheſt Truſt in the Honour and Juſtice of the Crown, won't ſuppoſe its Prerogative will ever be turned to the Subject's Detriment: And indeed right Reaſon tells us, that neither the Acts of the Crown, or of any Party whatſoever, ought to affect a Third Perſon, who was a Stranger to them, and who has had no Opportunity of controverting them.

My Lords, I would trouble your Lordſhips with a very ſhort Caſe to illuſtrate what I am contending for: A Copyholder is attainted, and flies, and the Land eſcheats to the Lord: Suppoſe that he is afterwards taken, and brought up into the Court of King's-Bench, and there pleads, that he is not the Man; and that Plea is confeſſed by the Attorney General; would this be Evidence againſt the Lord, who had acquired a Property in the Land by Eſcheat? Would he be concluded by that Proceeding? Would the Tenant, by ſaying, I have pleaded I am not the Man, and the Attorney General has confeſſed it, avail himſelf againſt the Lord? My Lords, here is to be an Intereſt diveſted out of a Perſon by a mere Confeſſion of the Parties, in a Proceeding to which he is a Stranger, and was never admitted to litigate: And as the Lord by Eſcheat would not be concluded in the Caſe I juſt now put, I do not ſee any Diſtinction can be made between that and the preſent.

The noble Lord at the Bar has a Right to object to every Perſon attainted; and that Right cannot be taken away by any Proceeding between other Perſons, to which he is no Party.

My Lords, the Caſe is rather ſtronger here; becauſe, by the ſame Reaſon that Mr. Murray is enabled to be a Witneſs, by having pleaded, that he ſurrendered within the Time limited by the Act, and that Plea confeſſed by the Attorney General, if a Perſon actually attainted by Verdict and Judgment (which is the higheſt Kind of Attainder) ſhould, upon any Occaſion, be brought up to the Court of King's-Bench, and aſked why Execution ſhould not be awarded againſt him, that he ſhould deny, as happened in Oxey's Caſe, his being the ſame Perſon, and that Denial be confeſſed by the Attorney General, this Man, whom the Law diſables by his Attainder for an Offence of the higheſt Kind, from giving Teſtimony in any Caſe, the Attorney General would, by his bare Confeſſion, reſtore to Credit, and enable to give Evidence in any Caſe.

This would be inveſting the Attorney General with a legiſlative Power; and that, I believe, your Lordſhips will ſcarcely think proper or reaſonable.

Mr. Ford.

My Lords,

I AM likewiſe aſſigned of Counſel for the Noble Lord at the Bar. And the Queſtion before your Lordſhips is, Whether the Record, now produced, can be received in Evidence to repel the Objection that ariſes from the late Act of Parliament to Mr. Murray's Evidence?

By that Statute, he is actually attainted, unleſs he ſurrendered before the 12th of July 1746; and, if attainted, it is admitted by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, that he is incapable of being a Witneſs.

My Lords, the great Conſequence of Queſtions of this Nature is obvious to every one, the Juſtice of all judicial Determinations depending intirely on the Veracity of Witneſſes, who are to prove the Facts, upon which ſuch Determinations are to be founded: And there can ſcarcely ariſe a Queſtion relating to Evidence of greater Importance to any Man, than the preſent to the noble Lord at the Bar, whoſe Eſtate, Life, and Honours, depend on the Evidence that may be received againſt him; and therefore your Lordſhips will be particularly cautious that he ſhall not be affected by any but legal, unexceptionable Witneſſes.

As to the Record now offered to be read, it conſiſts only of a Plea by Mr. Murray, that he ſurrendered in due time; which Mr. Attorney General has thought proper to confeſs. And it is argued, That this Plea and Confeſſion are proper Evidence, that ſuch Surrender was made, and the Proviſion of the Act, ſo far as concerns Mr. Murray, abſolutely defeated.

My Lords, how far ſuch a Proceeding may bind the Crown is not material in the preſent Queſtion; but whether it ſhall conclude the noble Priſoner, who is an abſolute Stranger to it, and who never had any Opportunity of conteſting the Truth of the Fact, is of the utmoſt Importance. The Attorney General, by his Office, proſecutes and defends the Cauſes of the Crown, and, as ſuch, may make many Admiſſions to bind the Crown; but it would be extremely inconvenient, if ſuch Admiſſions ſhould conclude any body elſe. In ſome Caſes they are totally diſregarded; and therefore, if things are confeſſed as Errors in a Record, which appear not to be Errors, the Court, where ſuch Record is depending, is bound to give Judgment againſt ſuch Confeſſion, and according to Law.

So, if a Matter of Fact is offered to be admitted, which the Court knows to be otherwiſe, it ſeems to be their Duty to reject ſuch Admiſſion; and therefore ſuppoſe, upon the Statute of Edw. VI. one outlawed for Treaſon ſhould be brought into the King's-Bench, in order to have Execution awarded upon the Outlawry, and ſhould plead what the Court knows to be falſe, That he ſurrendered himſelf within the Year to the Chief Juſtice, according to that Statute, and the Attorney General ſhould be diſpoſed to confeſs it, ought not the Court to reject ſuch an Admiſſion? Or muſt they be concluded by what is well known to be untrue? Certainly the Court would not ſuffer ſuch an Attempt to prevail.

In the preſent Caſe, there is nothing offered to your Lordſhips to prove Mr. Murray's Surrender, but the Record of what paſſed between him and the Attorney General in the King's Bench; and if this Record is permitted to be read, tho' the Contents of it ſhould be abſolutely untrue, yet, when once read, it will be concluſive Evidence of the Fact it imports, and no Proof can be admitted to contradict it; and, if it is Evidence to be received on this Occaſion, it muſt be Evidence in all Courts, and on all Occaſions, where a Queſtion may ariſe about Mr. Murray's Attainder.

My Lords, Mr. Murray may have Eſtates, which by the Cuſtom of the Manors where they lie, or by the Grant of the Crown, may belong to the Lords of thoſe Manors. If his Surrender was not made in proper Time, all ſuch Eſtates are forfeited to ſuch Lords; and yet, if this Record is to be admitted, it will be Evidence, that cannot be contradicted by them, and muſt diveſt thoſe Rights and Eſtates, which, by this Attainder, they were lawfully intitled to.

But the Miſchief of permitting ſuch a Record to be read will not ſtop here: For Purchaſers likewiſe muſt be concluded by it; and therefore, though Lands may have been long ſince ſold and enjoyed, under a Title ariſing from an Attainder of the ſame Nature with Mr. Murray's, yet, if this amicable Proceeding between the Attorney General and the Party attainted, is to prevail, no Purchaſer, even at any Diſtance of Time, can be ſecure.

In this Light, the Point ſeems of very extenſive Conſequence; For it is to give the King's Attorney Power to do more by the Admiſſion of a Fact, which perhaps may not be true, than the King, by a Pardon, can effect: For the King's Pardon cannot reſtore Lands forfeited to others; whereas, if the preſent Attempt ſhould ſucceed, the Rights and Titles of Strangers may be deſtroyed, though never ſo juſtly founded.

My Lords, whether Mr. Murray ſurrendered, or not, is a Matter of Fact capable of Proof, is a Fact of the utmoſt Importance to the Priſoner; and therefore, as the Rule of Law is general, That nothing done or tranſacted between Two Perſons ſhall prejudice a Third, who does not concur in the Act, nor has an Opportunity of contradicting it, the preſent Record, which, for any thing apparent, may be an entire Fiction, ought not to be received.

And, my Lords, ſuppoſing there was a Poſſibility of proving this Fact by Matter of Record, yet, by the conſtant Rule of Evidence, the Record produced ſeems improper to be read; becauſe it is not the beſt Evidence the Nature of the Thing will admit of, and, for that Reaſon, is not the proper Record to prove the Point in Queſtion.

That the Judge or Juſtice, to whom Mr. Murray ſurrendered himſelf, made a Record of ſuch Surrender, cannot be doubted. It was his Duty ſo to do, and muſt be preſumed to have been done; and therefore, if this Fact is proper to be proved by any Record, the Original made by ſuch Magiſtrate, who took the Surrender, ought to be produced.

My Lords, it may be ſaid, this Record in Queſtion imports an Admiſſion by the proper Officer of the Crown, of a Fact which he muſt be ſuppoſed to have inquired into, and has therefore admitted, becauſe he finds it to be true.

My Lords, this Anſwer might have been given, if Mr. Attorney had, at this Bar, offered originally to confeſs the ſame thing.—And ſuppoſe the Record, now attempted to be read, had never exiſted; and, upon an Objection to Mr. Murray's Teſtimony, the Attorney General had ſaid, Here, I have the King's Warrant to confeſs, that he ſurrendered before the 12th of July;—would your Lordſhips have received ſuch an Admiſſion?—Would you conclude yourſelves by the Confeſſion of a Fact, without knowing whether it was ſo, or not?—Would the Court have ſuffered the Force of an Act of Parliament to have been defeated by ſuch an Acknowledgment?---Or, would not clear and poſitive Proof have been required of an actual Surrender?

My Lords, if it could, upon what Reaſon can ſuch a Confeſſion in the King's-Bench, in an inferior Court, in the Abſence of the Priſoner, who who may be prejudiced by it, be received in Evidence againſt him?---If it is true that Mr. Murray ſurrendered in proper Time, it may be eaſily proved; if it is not, the preſent Method, by which it is attempted to be proved, is a certain one to draw the Court into an Error about it.---Your Lordſhips muſt perceive the Danger of allowing ſuch a Proceeding; how miſchievous it may be to the Priſoner, to Lords of Manors, to Purchaſers, to all Strangers, who never can have an Opportunity of diſputing the Truth of it:---And therefore, whatever Effect it may have between the Crown and Mr. Murray, it is humbly ſubmitted, that it ought not to be read againſt the Lord at the Bar.

Mr. HAMILTON GORDON.

My Lords,

I HAVE likewiſe the Honour to attend your Lordſhips, as one of the Counſel for the noble Lord at the Bar, whoſe Province it is to lay before your Lordſhips, and enforce, with all humble Submiſſion, what may occur to them in his favour in point of Law: But the Two learned Gentlemen, who have gone before me, have ſpoken ſo fully, and diſcharged their Duty ſo well, that I ſhould treſpaſs upon your Lordſhips Time, and alſo do them Injuſtice, if I conſumed much of it. Beſides, my Lords, I am too diffident of my own Abilities to ſpeak long upon a Queſtion, which is involved in the particlar Laws of this Country; and therefore I ſhall, with your Lordſhips Indulgence, confine my Endeavours to ſerve my Client, to a few general Obſervations, which, I humbly think, muſt naturally occur to every Man upon that Point, which the noble Lord at the Bar has taken the Liberty to propoſe to your Lordſhips by way of Objection.

The noble Priſoner at the Bar has objected, That Mr. Murray is not a competent Witneſs againſt him; or, in other Words, that, according to the Rules of Law, his Evidence ought not to be received. And, to maintain that Poſition, he has laid down another, namely, That the Record of the Court of King's-Bench, which proceeds ſingly upon the bare Admiſſion of his Majeſty's Attorney General, unſupported by any Proof, ought not to be read as Evidence of Mr. Murray's Surrender, ſo as to qualify him to give Evidence upon this Trial.

As to the Firſt, I humbly apprehend it to be wholly unneceſſary to uſe any Arguments to prove, that, if thoſe Proceedings in the King's-Bench did not ſtand in the Way of the noble Lord at the Bar, Mr. Murray muſt, of courſe, have been rejected as an incompetent Witneſs.

It remains therefore only to be conſidered, Whether ſuch Proceedings, tranſacted only between the Crown and Mr. Murray, can affect the Intereſt of a Third Perſon.

My Lords, the Conſequences of this Queſtion are of the greateſt Importance to the Subjects in general; and although the noble Lord is more immediately concerned in it, yet if it ſhould be determined, that this is proper Evidence to affect him, the like Evidence muſt be received againſt every other Subject of Great Britain; for the Law cannot diſtinguiſh between him and others: And I beg leave, my Lords, to ſay, that it appears from the Authorities, which have been cited by the other Gentlemen, and which have always been conſidered as of the greateſt Weight in this Country, that the Admiſſion of the Attorney General, or any other, cannot affect a Third Perſon; and I take it, my Lords, to be a general eſtabliſhed Rule, that the Intereſt of one cannot be affected by the Admiſſion of another.

My Lords, I apprehend, that my Lord Coke's Senſe of this Matter is ſo extremely clear and obvious, that it requires no Explanation; and ſo is the Opinion of another great Lawyer, my Lord Chief Juſtice Hale.

My Lords, the Law gives an Opportunity to falſify the Verdict of Twelve Men, where a Third Party, from the Want of it, may be injured only in a pecuniary Matter; how much more reaſonable is it therefore, that this kind of Agreement ſhould be ſet aſide, and held of no Conſequence, in a Caſe where the Life, Fortune, and Honour, of a noble Lord is concerned?

My Lords, I would humbly aſk, What Kind of Acquittal was this? Not an Acquittal by Verdict, the legal Acquittal in this Kingdom; but by a bare Conſent; a Conſent that ſurely has not Force enough to repeal an Act of Parliament.

My Lords, the only Way the Act of Parliament left for Mr. Murray to avoid the Conſequences of an Attainder, was the Performance of a Condition; that is, ſurrendering himſelf within a Time limited.

Now, I would ſuppoſe that this Act had been a Deed granting an Eſtate on a certain Condition, muſt not that Condition have been performed truly and effectually? Certainly it muſt, by the Rule laid down by Lord Coke. Shall not Acts of Parliament, therefore, be as ſtrictly complied with as common Deeds and Conveyances? Surely the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons will hardly deny it. Conſequently the Attorney General could not, by any Conſent of his, make this Record in the King's-Bench tantamount to an actual Surrender.

Suppoſe, my Lords, the Act had attainted Mr. Murray of Felony inſtead of Treaſon, could this Admiſſion of Mr. Attorney General have deprived the Lord of the Lands which would have eſcheated to him? No, my Lords, it could not, if any Regard is to be paid to the Rule laid down in 5 Coke 96. That the Eſtates of Third Perſons ſhall not be diveſted by colorable or covinous Payments, but by ſuch as are true and effectual. And what are Payments but Performances of Conditions? And the ſame Law that guides one, will the other.

The Fact is not as the Record ſtates it; the Attorney General's Conſent, which is the Fiat for this Record, was a Conſent after the Impeachment of the noble Lord. I wiſh it rather had preceded it.

My Lords, if Mr. Murray had held by Copyhold from the noble Lord at the Bar, and had been attainted, the noble Lord would have been intitled to the Eſcheat or Forfeiture of thoſe Lands; and no Admiſſion of the Attorney General's could defeat him of it, any more than it could in the Caſe of a Forfeiture of Lands in a County Palatine, where the Grantee of the Crown became intitled to the Benefit of it. Shall therefore, my Lords, ſuch Admiſſion be permitted to affect the Life, Honours, and Fortune of the noble Lord at the Bar? or, indeed, of any other in his unhappy Situation? No, ſurely; for it is againſt the common known Principles of Law, and of Reaſon too, that a Man ſhall be attainted as to ſome Circumſtances, and free from Attainder as to others; that he ſhall be incapable to hold his Lands or Chattels, and yet be reſtored in Credit, ſo as to affect the Life of an Innocent Man; for ſuch, till Conviction, every one is, by Law, preſumed to be: I ſay, my Lords, this is a Conſtruction ſo unprecedented and new, that, we hope, it will never receive the Sanction of your Lordſhips.

My Lords, I hope your Lordſhips will never countenance the Admiſſion of ſuch an Evidence, an Evidence who is ſo ſtrongly agitated by the Hope of Pardon, and Fear of Puniſhment, that, to procure the one, and avoid the other, he may give up all Senſe of Honour, Humanity, and Juſtice.

My Lords, as the learned Gentlemen, who ſpoke before me on the ſame Side, have made it unneceſſary for me to add any thing more, I ſhall not give your Lordſhips any further Trouble at preſent; and I beg your Lordſhips Pardon for that which I have already given you. But, if any Reply ſhould be neceſſary to what ſhall be offered by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, I hope we ſhall have your Lordſhips Indulgence.

Lord High Steward. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, You may proceed.

Mr. ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

My Lords,

THE Managers do not diſpute the Priſoner's Right to any good Objection againſt the Competency of the Witneſs, or inſiſt, that it is not equally proper before your Lordſhips on this Impeachment, as it would be on a Trial in the ordinary Courts of Juſtice. But they diſpute the Validity of the Objection, upon its own proper legal Foundation.

As the Objection is to the Reading this Record, the mere Stating of the Queſtion will be an Anſwer to it, and obviate or refute every Argument uſed in ſupport of it.

The original Objection was againſt Mr. Murray's being examined as a Witneſs, upon the Suppoſition of his ſtanding attainted of High-Treaſon by the late Act, in not ſurrendering within the Time preſcribed. The Managers allowed the Conſequence, if the Allegation of his Attainder were true, as that would render him infamous, not as it would prove him guilty of Treaſon; for the Guilt alone, without the Attainder, would not render him incompetent, it being a clear eſtabliſhed Point, that even a particeps criminis may be a Witneſs, to prove the Guilt of thoſe who joined with him in the ſame Crime: And your Lordſhips, in the late Trial of the Lord Balmerino, admitted that Sort of Evidence. But the Managers anſwered the Objection, by denying the Attainder; and produced this Record, to ſhew the Surrender purſuant to the Act, which attaints him only on Condition of his not ſurrendering within the Time limited. This Record is of a Proceeding commenced on the Part of the Crown, on the Foot of this very Act, in the proper Court of Juſtice, againſt the Witneſs, and defended, on the Part of the Witneſs, by this Surrender; and that Defence and Surrender confeſſed by the Attorney General, by Warrant from the Crown; and this allowed by the Court, who, inſtead of awarding Execution againſt him, remanded him to Priſon, where he now remains forthcoming to Juſtice, according to the Act.

Now, to ſay that ſuch a Record, relating to the preciſe Point in queſtion, cannot be read to diſprove the ſuppoſed Attainder, and ſupport the Competency of the Witneſs, would be to deny one of the firſt Principles of Evidence; and therefore the Counſel, aware of the Abſurdity, have not ventured in Terms to aſſert a Propoſition ſo contrary to the known Law of the Land, as that ſuch a Record is not proper to be read; but ſeem rather, in the Way of Argument, to deny the Conſequence of it when read, and have inſiſted on Reaſons that tend to ſhew that it is not concluſive Evidence; and therefore, that the Fact of the Surrender may be ſtill controverted by Evidence on the Side of the Priſoner, rather than that it is no Evidence at all.

Though this is more properly a ſubſequent Queſtion, and a very different one in its Nature, yet, in the preſent Caſe, it is really, and in Effect, the ſame, and the neceſſary Conſequence of the other: For to inſiſt, that this Record is not concluſive Proof of Mr. Murray's not being attainted by that Act, muſt proceed on this Suppoſition, that he may ſtill be held attainted under the Act, notwithſtanding this Record. But, I preſume, your Lordſhips will upon no Terms be induced to admit of that Suggeſtion, when it is conſidered, that the certain Effect of it muſt be, that he may be called up again for Execution, and put a Second Time on the Defence of his Life againſt the ſame Charge.

But to conſider the Grounds, on which the Objection has been attempted to be ſupported,

There are Two general Reaſons inſiſted on; one, That the Surrender inſiſted on in Behalf of the Witneſs, when he was brought before the Court of King's Bench, was neither proved to the Court, nor found by a Jury; but only confeſſed by the Attorney General: The other, that the noble Lord was himſelf no Party to the Record; and therefore not to be affected by it.

As to the Firſt, in order to ſupport that Reaſon, a Diſtinction is attempted to be ſet up between the Caſe of a Fact, on which a Judgment is grounded, appearing by a Verdict or Evidence, and where it appears only by the Confeſſion of the Party; and it is ſaid, That in the former Caſe it may, but in the latter, cannot be concluſive to any other Perſons but thoſe who were Parties.

And, for this Purpoſe, the Authorities of my Lord Chief Juſtice Coke and Lord Hale, and others, are cited, to ſhew the Difference, in point of Conſequence to Third Perſons, between an Attainder by Verdict, or by Confeſſion; that, in the one Caſe, the Crime may be diſputed by a Purchaſer under the attainted Perſon; but, in the other, it cannot, though the Time of the Commiſſion of it may.

It will be unneceſſary for me to enter minutely into the nice Diſquiſition, How far, and for what Purpoſes, the Crime appearing on an Attainder, may be controverted by Strangers, whoſe Intereſt is affected by it; becauſe I am ſatisfied your Lordſhips will ſee, that the Diſtinctions on that Head are totally foreign to the preſent Queſtion; and one ſingle Obſervation would be ſufficient to make that manifeſt; that is, that none of the Caſes cited, or that can be cited, prove, that any Stranger can controvert the Attainder itſelf, whether founded on a Verdict or Confeſſion, or or by Default; and it is the Attainder, and not the Crime, that is the only material Thing on the preſent Objection.

All that will be neceſſary, therefore, upon this Point, will be to ſhew, that the Confeſſion, in this Caſe, binds the Crown; and that, if it does, there is no Attainder. The Inference will then follow of Courſe, that the Record may be read, to prove Murray not attainted, as the preciſe Point to be proved in Anſwer to the Objection to his Competency.

The Authority of the Attorney General to confeſs the Truth of the Plea of Surrender, has not been directly denied by the Counſel; but as they have ſeemingly, in Conſequence, done it, and the clear Eſtabliſhment of that Right, in this Caſe, will, by certain Inferences, eſtabliſh the Right to read this Record, I ſhall ſtate a little to your Lordſhips how that Authority ſtands, upon the Nature and Reaſon of the Thing, and the known conſtant Practice.

The Law and Conſtitution has intruſted the Crown, as the executive Power, with the Proſecution of Crimes; and though oftentimes ſuch Proſecutions are carried on by private Perſons, even thoſe are, for the moſt part, in the Name of the Crown.

But thoſe, as well as Civil Suits, may be commenced ſometimes without a juſt Foundation, and the Party ſued may have a juſt Defence to the one as well as the other. Where that appears, it is equally juſt, in both Caſes, to put a Stop to them; and as a Subject-Plaintiff may confeſs the Defendant's Plea; ſo may the Crown, by the Attorney General, its proper Officer, confeſs the Priſoner's Defence; and ſuch Confeſſion, in both Caſes, is, and ought to be, both in Law and natural Juſtice, a Security againſt future Action or Proſecution for the ſame Cauſe. Nor is there any Reaſon that can be given for the Power in the Caſe of a Subject, but what will hold equally ſtrong, and ſtronger, in the Caſe of the Crown, as there could not be a greater Grievance to the Subjects in general, than to have it eſtabliſhed as a Rule, that, when once a criminal Proſecution is commenced, the Defendant, how innocent ſoever, or how willing ſoever to make Satisfaction, muſt be put to the Vexation of a Trial, or the Charge of a Pardon, which might, in many Caſes, be his Ruin. And how ſtrange would it appear to ſay, that the King might not do the ſame Juſtice to Innocence, that every honeſt Man would do? or that he might not, for ſuch wiſe and gracious Reaſons as would induce him to grant a Pardon after Sentence, ſtop the Proceedings in the ordinary Courſe of Law, before they come to Sentence?

To avoid theſe Abſurdities, the Law intruſts the proper Officer, the Attorney General, with the Power of confeſſing a Defendant's Plea, where it appears to be true, in Charges of a leſſer Nature, and, in the higher, by the immediate Warrant of the Crown; and ſuch Confeſſion has the Effect it ought to have of an abſolute Diſcharge; and, I ſhould imagine, Nobody, who thinks of it for a Moment, would, for the Sake of the Subject, wiſh it otherwiſe.

And, my Lords, this has been the conſtant Practice, not only in Criminal Proſecutions, properly ſo called, but in all Crown Cauſes even for Civil Rights: And whoever has had the Honour of ſerving the Crown in the Office of Attorney General muſt have eaſed the Subject on that Head, when, on Applications by the Parties ſued, and Attendances by the Officers of that Branch of the Revenue which is in queſtion, the Plea has appeared to be a juſt one, and both the Crown and the Subject find their Account in this Method of Proceeding, in the Expence and Delay that are ſaved by it; and ſuch Confeſſion, being recorded, has, to all Intents, the ſame Effect, as if, on Iſſue joined, a Jury had found the Fact to be what the Attorney General confeſſed.

The Practice is the ſame in criminal Caſes, where the Attorney General confeſſes the Plea, whether it be to the Merits of the Charge, or only in order to let the Defendant into an Opportunity of trying thoſe Merits.

There is one ſort of Caſe frequently happens, very parallel to the preſent, where a Perſon is outlawed for Treaſon or Felony, which amounts in Law to an Attainder for the Crime, and equally affects the Party, both as to his Life and Eſtate, as on a Verdict. The Party having no way of coming at the Trial, but by reverſing the Outlawry by Writ of Error, which cannot be allowed without his Majeſty's Conſent, it is a frequent Practice to apply for that Indulgence; and it is very eaſily granted, provided there has been no great Delay. If the Party aſſigns an Error in Fact, as he may, the Attorney General confeſſes it, if true; and the Outlawry is reverſed, and the Attainder avoided by it. And no one ever doubted, but the Record of that Reverſal is concluſive Proof of his not being attainted.

Nay, the Crown has ſometimes directed the Attorney General to confeſs Errors in Fact, as the Party's being beyond Sea at the time of the Outlawry, which have not been true; only that he may have an Opportunity of taking his Trial, and not ſuffer for a Default in not appearing only. And no Lawyer ever ſaid, that ſuch a Confeſſion was not as effectual to avoid the Outlawry, as the Verdict of a Jury impannelled to try it.
